The Central problem facing the Party in its struggle against the offensive of the trade union bureaucrats and in its efforts to increase its influence is the development of a broad Left Wing within the trade unions in which the Party must be driving and leading force for the revolutionizing of the American Labor movement. To refore the Party, in the opinion of the leading comrades of all groups, must support the Trade Union Educational League to a much greater extent than hitherto. The Party should do everything in its power to help build up the Trade Union Educational League its industrial and local sections, without delay under the most varied forms and methods.

The Party members in the Trade Union Educational League should support the idea that these organizations and contacts comprise all Left Wing and general progressive elements who struggle against the reactionary bureaucracy and who want to transform the trade unions into organs of struggle against the capitalists. In accordance with this line, they should favor the program of the Trade Union Educational League being on a broad basis, which will include the organization of the unorganized, the democratization of the trade unions, the amalgamation of the craft unions into powerful industrial unions, the formation of a Labor Party and an aggressive struggle against the capitalists. All organizations built on this basis should serve as a base for the development and organization of still larger opposition movements beyond the confines of the Trade Union Educational League. The Party must give the most active support to the organs of the Left Wing, "Labor Unity" and other Left Wing journals, help them to be placed on a broader basis, thus providing expression for all sections of the Left Wing and genuine progressive movements.

THE Party and the Left Wing must make contacts with all such progressive elements who are prepared to join in a united front with the Left Wing to fight against the policies of the reactionaries. Every opportunity should be taken advantage of in order to make agreements with these elements with a view toward conducting joint struggles for specific issues. Those united front movements in spite of differences and splits in the ranks of the trade union bureaucracy must be utilized in order to strengthen the basis for the left wing and the position of the Party.

The Party must combat every illusion about the truly independent role of the progressives and even when in joint action with them show up and criticize their weaknesses and vacillations, in order to advance and to develop the leading role of the Party and the left wing. The Party must struggle with special intensity against those black reactionaries who, for expediency, pose as progressives in certain situations and who, under their "support" of the left wing, only compromise the latter. Communists must participate actively in every struggle and take advantage of every opportunity to acquire leading offices in the trade unions. The struggle for these offices should never degenerate into an unprincipled scramble.

ALONG with the development of the left wing and closely related to this question, there is another problem facing the Party; the organization of the unorganized. This task is two-fold: (1) the strengthening of existing trade unions, and (2) the establishment of new organizations where no organizations of the American Federation of Labor exist or where the existing organizations stubbornly resist the organization of workers despite the fact that there is a possibility of conducting struggles against the employers.

The significance of the strengthening of the existing organizations of the American Federation of Labor consists especially in the fact that thru the streaming in of additional hundreds of thousands and millions of workers into these organizations the basis for the revolutionary work of the Party and of the left wing becomes extended, the struggle against the reactionary bureaucracy can be carried on with greater possibilities of success and the Party thru this work secures closer contact with the native sections of workers.

The Party members in the Trade Union Educational League should work for establishing any kind of rigid organizational forms and should help it adapt itself to the special conditions in the various trade unions and industries in order to prevent even in the most intense struggles against the trade union bureaucracy a split of the trade unions

THE Party should not limit itself only to the work in the existing trade unions. The reactionary policies of the bureaucracy who, in many instances refuse to organize workers, and the increasing will of the unorganized masses to struggle, demand that the Party, after examining all the circumstances, and exhausting all possibilities to force the American Federation of Labor to organize the unorganized, especially in connection with definite struggles against the employers, should pursue with the greatest energy the task of organizing the unorganized. In such cases when it is necessary to establish new organizations, every effort must be made to link these up with the existing trade unions and at the same time to insist on the rights of the workers themselves to administer the unions.

Wherever mass expulsions or expulsions of entire organizations by the trade union bureaucrats take place, the expelled workers or organizations must hold firmly together and continue to struggle for reinstatement and for the unity of the organization on the basis of the protection of the interests of the workers.

Wherever the formation of new organizations becomes necessary, they should be carefully planned and prepared and be determined by the concrete circumstances of each particular case. The struggle against the bureaucrats must never cease for fear of their splitting measures but the forms of the struggle must be adapted to the special conditions and designed to protect the unity of the organizations and to promote the interests of the workers and their fighting capacities.

IN order to carry on our work more successfully in the trade unions and to ensure the leading role of the Party in this work, the Party must give serious consideration to a number of deviations which have taken place recently. Leading comrades in the needle trades (Wagner, Zimmerman, etc.) have on a number of occasions made Right deviations, thus hampering the execution of the Party policies designed to strengthen the influence of the Party. This worked against the development of a sufficiently clear and decisive leadership in the mass struggles of these workers against the employers and their agents, the reactionary bureaucrats.

The campaign for amalgamating existing organizations was not sufficiently energetic, indicating a craft attitude on this important organizational question. They did not carry on a sufficiently sharp struggle, particularly during the strike, against the reactionary bureaucrats. In various instances they did not carry out Party decisions. The Party must struggle against such deviations still more intensely on the future and see to it that these comrades maintain correct Communist policy.

OTHER deviations manifested themselves in the case of Comrade W. F. Dunne, who sized up the possibility of the struggle of the workers in a pessimistic manner and through such estimations arrived at false conclusions. Among such deviations are proposals imposing limitations on the leading role of the Trade Union Educational League in certain cases and intending to take the initiative out of the hands of the Trade Union Educational League. Comrade Dunne has also in an article in the DAILY WORKER of March 24, 1927, made the impermissible attempt to differentiate between the reactionary Green and the reactionary Wall, both leaders of the American Federation of Labor, in favor of Green.

ON the other hand, Comrade J. Zack argues in the Magazine of The DAILY WORKER of May 28, 1927, that further work in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor signifies the abandonment of real struggle, the subjection of Communists to the bureaucrats and the American Federation of Labor the degeneration of the left wing "if not of our Party itself." This conception that activities of Communists in workers' organizations under reactionary leadership presupposes the abandonment of real militancy or, in other words, a move to the Right on the part of the Communists, must be rejected as completely false. Communists struggle against the attempts of the bureaucrats to split the union. Communist reject the splitting of the trade unions since this leads to the isolation of the Party from the masses and diminishes their capacity to fight. The Resolution however, records that generally the work of Comrade Zack within the left wing, and especially his criticism of Right deviations were correct. Furthermore, the Resolution points out that Comrade Foster and Weinstone fought these conceptions and that between them and the majority of the Polcom Committee no difference exists on these points.

FURTHER mistakes made in the Party were the original opinion of leading comrades in support of the election of Dennis Batt as president of the Detroit Federation of Labor as well as a proposal of the Political Committee to advocate the formation of a joint committee of the progressives of the Miners Union, of the Joint Boards of the Furriers and Cloakmakers' Unions and of the general minority committee to the workers of Passaic to carry on the struggle against the entire American Federation of Labor bureaucracy. This policy would, under the given conditions, have given the bureaucracy the pretext to split the trade unions and thus create the danger of isolation. The political committee recognized its errors and corrected them of its own accord. The Party must learn from these mistakes and errors, must struggle against them, overcome them and avoid their recurrence. Those comrades active and influential in the trade unions should learn more than anyone else the Party truth hitherto and especially into the work of the leading committees thus achieving simultaneously the unification of the leadership of the trade union work by the Party. The entire party membership must regard the work in the trade unions as the most important task of the Party.

4. The Inner Party Situation.

THE objective difficulties, the weakness of the Workers (Communist) Party and its inadequate contact with the masses of the native workers are factors complicating the inner situation of the Workers (Communist) Party. An insufficiently strong Party life, as the result of an insufficient mass basis, the inadequate contact of many members of the former language groups with the specific problems of the class struggle in the United States, favor the development of groups and factional struggles, the existence and intensity of which we seek in vain to explain through serious differences of principle.

The inner party situation, the great difficulties which the Workers (Communist) Party of America has to overcome, the great tasks which it has to solve, demand the greatest exertion of all sections of the Party, specially of its leading centre, for bringing about a concentration of the Party forces on the basis of the political policy of the Communist International and the liquidation of the still existing groups which are outlived now and block the further development of the Party.

The VI Enlarged Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International very emphatically declared: "That the Comintern does cede the complete and unreserved cessation of factional struggle."

IT must be placed on record that this demand was not carried out seriously enough and that an untenable position of faction formation within the Communist Party still exists, that alongside of the general party meetings each of the supporting factions hold special meetings only for its supporters arriving at binding group policies.

The majority of the Party executive (Polburo) did not sufficiently understand how to create such a condition of affairs as to bring about an amalgamation with the forces which are today in opposition. Within the ranks of the minority a branch with the Cannon group took place and the Weinstone group also split off from the majority. It is clear that the majority of the Political Committee followed a too narrow course within the Party themselves essentially contributed to the continued existence of faction walls. A struggle of the majority of the Political Committee elements against the group of present minority leaders (Weinstone, Cannon) would be justified if it were a question of anti-Communist elements who threaten the further development of the Party like Lovestone. This is not so in the case of Comrades Foster, Weinstone and Cannon. The decision of the VI Enlarged Executive of the Executive Committee Communist International said:

"The attempt at a struggle against Comrade Foster and those of his comrades supporting him who, on their part desist from the factional struggle, is under no circumstances permissible."

THIS decision was inspired by the endeavor to bring about the joint work of all comrades' forces and to gradually equalize the existing differences for the joint solution of all tasks. Today more than ever before after the death of Comrade Ruthenberg and in a much more complicated situation do these tasks stand. Therefore, the majority of the Political Committee must recognize the necessity to do their utmost to bring about the closest collaboration with the Forster group and with the Weinstone-Cannon group, in order to attain complete fusion of the groups of the Party convention. No recognition signifies the revival of the factional struggle and recognition signifies in the last analysis the degeneration of the faction into cliques and the creation of Party crisis.

The Opposition groups must cease their factional methods. They must endeavor by their attitude to facilitate unity with the majority of the Political Committee before and at the Party convention. All proposals, all criticism of the Party work and its leadership must be made in this spirit.

During the work of the American Commission it became clear that the differences regarding the important political questions have recently been much reduced. This provides today a basis for a number of decisions which derive from this welcome political fact certain organizational deductions aimed to impress the whole Party with the necessity of a broad collective leadership and collaboration as well as the complete liquidation of the factional struggle.

THE Presidium decides

1. The Party Convention should take place in the end of August 1927 in view of the delay caused by the work of the American Commission.

2. In order to make possible the convention preparations with the least friction there will be formed a "commission for the preparation of the Party Convention" consisting of 6 (six) members with voting rights and 2 candidates (5 of the majority and 3 of the opposition) under the chairmanship of a neutral comrade. As deputy chairman of the commission Comrades Lovestone and Foster will function. The commission has the right to arrive at binding decisions on all questions pertaining to the organizational and political preparation of the Party convention. The Commission will also have the right to grant decisions on questions of mandate disputes in connection with the delegates to the Party convention. The election of delegates for the Party convention is to be on the proportional representation system.

3. The normalization and democratization of the Party life demand that the Party convention adopt an objective consideration of all important questions cleft a broad Party opportunity into which a number of additional and proletarian elements should be drawn in. For the minority at the Party convention important representation must be secured both on the Central Committee and in the Political Committee

4. In order to demonstrate before the whole party the necessity of collaboration and merger of the existing groups Comrade Lovestone and Foster shall function as secretaries of the Party until the Party convention and Comrades Foster and Gitlow shall function as secretaries of the Trade Union Department until the Party convention. Further changes in the composition of the leading bodies of central Committee and Political Committee are rejected as unexpedient before the Party convention. For representatives of the Central Executive Committee is left to the decision of the Party convention. It is recommended to the party convention to make a decision that the newly elected central committee is to set up immediately a collective secretariat of three comrades, one of whom should be a representative of the Minority. It is recommended that only a part to elect Comrades Lovestone and Foster as secretaries.

5. The Presidium things it advisable that the Party convention discuss and decide the question of the expediency of transferring the seat of the Central Committee.

COOLIDGE DRIVEN OUT OF RACE FOR PRESIDENCY IN 1928 ON G.O.P. TICKET

imately twenty newspapermen were ushered into Mr. Coolidge's office. He of the wide open stares with a chair stood waiting beside his desk until longer in the person of Calvin Coolidge all were in and his secretary, Everett Sanders had closed and barred the outer door.

"Is everyone here?" he asked. As the replies were given in the affirmative, he said:

"I have here a little announcement. Will you gentlemen file past my desk in single file to receive it?"

News-hounds Stage Marathon.

As the full import of the announcement dawned on the first in line, H. O. P. general staff rushing four there was a dash for the door and the telegraph wires, but Sanders barred the way.

"Is there anything further you wish to say, Mr. President?" asked Sanders.

"No," replied the executive. The door was opened and the rush to the wires started.

His Wind Was Up.

President Coolidge was palpably nervous as the shortest paragraph in the statement which, after the next session of congress, will carry him definitely out of the White House.

His hand trembled perceptibly and his mouth twitched.

He was very serious in aspect as he passed out the little slips. As the last of the reporters ran furiously out of the door he sank back into his chair, sighed audibly and relaxed.

Among Those Present.

Present in the room with Mr. Coolidge renounced all claim to a candidature of his administration were Senators Norbeck, republican, of South Dakota, and Capper, republican, of Kansas. Both seemed as startled as the newspapermen.

Only Sanders and E. T. Clark, his personal secretary, apparently knew of the announcement which was forthcoming. It was they who took safeguards to see that no one "jumped the gun" with the story.

Why This Retreat?

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 2.—Political observers, as they are called, are busily engaged today in hazarding guesses as to why Calvin Coolidge decided to drop his sphinxlike silence on his third term ambitions and open his mind to the populace.

The most popular of the explanations for this unexpected action are: First: the dominant elements in the G. O. P. do not dare risk a minor real issue, ignoring the results of primaries and the guns trained at them, approached the men and politics a half an hour there was only one strike-bound issue left, and this one was so shot that he could hardly be of any use to the real company. It became known that the imported men were not told of the strike position prevailing in Avella.

The super-intendent became enraged and sent out a riot call to the state police headquarters. When the state police arrived they were disappointed to find they formed no scabs and no riot in sight.

The pimpers were then pulled out, leaving but one pimper on the job. This pimper presides the mine's homes with water.

Of course, the sheriff of Washington county was there, with his usual restricting the picket line as he has been doing in other places where the company brought in scabs.

The miners of this town are ready for a fight until victory is won and are ready to die fighting rather than to starve to death eating profits for the coal operators.

Fishwick Again Offers to Deal.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 2.—"We are willing to enter into a conference at any time, or any place, in an effort to bring to an end the present tie-up of the mining industry."

This was the statement of Harry Fishwick, president of the Illinois district, United Mine Workers of America when shown an International News Service dispatch from Columbus, O., today stating that Gov. Vic Donahey was planning to call a conference with the governors of Illinois and Indiana seeking to have union miners and operators resume negotiations for a settlement.

With Morris Sigman reigning a Ballyhoo Park in Iowa and Joseph Fish in the milk business, the sweating cloak makers, whose working conditions have been hammered down by the right wingers, may console themselves with the idea that perhaps sometimes in the distant future they may be able to go into a paying business even tho it may only be to the extent of investing in a shoe shine stand in Union Square.

Call Half Million Roumanian Troops; Fear of Civil War

BERLIN, Aug. 2.—The Roumanian government is calling up nearly 500,000 reserves as a precaution against [illegible] uprisings following recent statements made in Paris by Prince Carol, it was reported here today.

Border guards have been strengthened, the reports state.

Official reasons for the military movements are given as "maneuvers."

Premier Bratiano is reported to be prepared to keep Prince Carol out of Roumania at all costs even though the public is apathetic regarding the prince's return.

Prince Carol has many followers among the military clique, some of whom hope for promotions through his restoration. Reservists might be able to offset the pro-Carol influence in the regular army.

Many observers believe that Prince Carol might endanger his life by returning to Roumania, where he has some bitter enemies.

Chicago Gets Big Fight Says Park Board

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey will fight for the world's heavyweight title in Soldiers' Field, Chicago.

Official announcement to this effect was made yesterday by Tex Richard, New York promoter, after Edward J. Kelly, president of the South Park Board, governing body of Soldiers' Field, it was learned today.

Following a meeting of the South Park Board at noon today, the commissioners approved use of the field for the bout. Richard declared this decision removed the last obstacle to staging the title fight in Chicago.

Gangland War Kills Another.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—The guns of gangland, which have blazed death to seventeen victims within the last few weeks, probably will add another to the toll today as Joseph Harlin lay dying in a hospital with a dozen bullet slugs in his body.

CAPPER SEES CAL; TELLS HIM FAKE RELIEF BILL IS BAD

West Will Wreck Third Term Plan if Cheated

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 2.

President Coolidge celebrated his fourth year in the presidential chair today by conferring with Senator Capper, republican, of Kansas, president of leader of the senate farm bloc. Capper said that if the farmers' relief bill were not passed by the present session of congress there would be trouble.

Objects To Scheme.

Capper objected to the bill which has been put out here by administration leaders as the administration plan of relief, according to its sponsors, who say it will be introduced in the December session of congress and championed by regular republicans.

It provides for establishment of a $250,000,000 federal revolving fund to permit cooperative organizations to build warehouses and finance marketing of farmers' crops in a scientific manner.

More Middlemen.

The proposed bill would create an enormous machinery of "stabilizing corporations," to control the market in farm products, and to use the treasuries of the present cooperatives and more to be formed, as capital for the corporations. The cooperatives would be required to [illegible] thru deposition of their funds in favor of the new corporations, which would be under the control of the government and the banks. Nothing in the bill promises either lower prices on goods the farmers purchase, or higher prices on the products, for him.

The bill merely creates a new class of large scale middlemen, with enormous political and economic power.

Capper was a hostile critic of the Norris-Sinnott farm bill, which Coolidge vetoed this year. The vetoed bill is considered by real farmers to be ineffective.

Administration Bill Unpopular.

"The farmers I have talked to will never accept anything but the equalization fee system," said Capper. "If a better substitute is devised it probably will receive the support of the farmers but I do not consider the so called administration bill a sufficient substitute.

Worker Discontent In Vienna Greater; Rulers Quarreling

VIENNA, Aug. 1. Austria continues to be ruled by the League of Nations thru Mgr. Seipel, who has a working agreement with the fascists of the second international, and especially with the socialist mayor, Seitz, of Vienna.

But much bickering is going on between the various parties to the practical coalition. The socialists feel sat on with part of the armed forces of repression under their direct control, and the Vienna and provincial has just decided against the vigorous opposition of the non-socialist elements there, to continue the special "municipal police" organized during the general strike, in the form of a special police force of a thousand.

The fascists are continuing unchecked, the creation of reactionary armed bands thruout the smaller towns especially, and among the rich peasantry. They are said to have already equal to the "municipal police" and in the regular standing army. Standing army, fascists, and the "municipal police" are all opposed to the establishment of a workers' and peasants' state, but may also fight each other for hegemony.

Great discontent is prevalent among the workers, and talk of revolt increases.

MOSCOW, August 2.—In order that the youth of Russia which was too young at the time of the revolution ten years ago to understand the development of the struggle may realize the enormity of the struggle the papers throughout the territory of the Soviet Union are publishing daily chronicles of events of a decade ago and reprinting leading articles from then written by Lenin and other leaders of the Bolsheviks.

This is in preparation for the gigantic celebration on November 7 of the Tenth Anniversary of the establishment of the rule of the workers and peasants in Russia.

Manila Police Get Nerves; Atmosphere Of Dissatisfaction

MANILA, P. I. (By Mail).—Following Admiral Kittelle's grand-stand play about "a plot to blow up Cavite arsenal" he caused to be assembled in the baseball grounds a thousand civilian employes of the arsenal, and administered to them, under pain of dismissal and propable imprisonment, the oath of allegiance to the United States.

The next step was to institute a "red raid." Major J. K. Boles and Lieutenant J. L. Bilo of the army, met with Colonel L. R. Sweet and Colonel Aurelio Ramos of the constabulary. With them sat Chief John Nevins of the secret service, and they discussed the best methods of deporting labor leaders, especially Chinese "agitators."

Extreme dissatisfaction among the Filipino workmen, admiration for the struggle of Chinese Nationalists in China, and a threatened strike at the Cavite navy yard are the causes for all this campaign of deportations and false propaganda.

Lowman, Dry Chief, Attacks All Those Who Criticise Him

WASHINGTON, August 2.—Former Lieutenant Governor Seymour Lowman of New York was yesterday sworn in as assistant secretary of the treasury and prohibition director to succeed Lincoln C. Andrews.

Lowman began his career in office by announcing, "Temperance and sobriety are commendable virtues" and "We want a sober America." After this he delivered a lecture against the "radical wets," whom he defined as those who break the laws against liquor, and the "radical drys," by which he said he meant "those well-meaning but ill-advised people who are criticizing the efforts of public officials who are trying honestly to carry out the laws of congress. Constructive criticism is always helpful but fault-finding by overzealous advocates of prohibition is very harmful to the cause of temperance."

MENSHEVIKS IN PAY OF POLAND FOUND GUILTY

Admit Crimes and Receive Sentences

MOSCOW, August 2.—The trial of the Georgian mensheviks before the Ukrainian high court has ended after twelve days examination. The chief of the accused conspirators was sentenced to eight years imprisonment, while seven others were given different terms and three of them were discharged.

The Polish spy, Penkow Pobjony, was sentenced to death because of his activities against the workers and peasants government.

Mensheviks Are Polish Agents.

The court established beyond doubt the criminal activity of the Georgian menshevist party leaders and their close connection with the Polish general staff and white-guard emigrants for the purpose of subversive work in the Soviet Union and espionage in behalf of the Polish and French "intelligence" (spy) departments. They were also found guilty of meeting in Kiev illegal secret organizations for the purpose of trying to pave the way for a counter-revolution so that the imperialist powers could invade Russia and destroy the workers and peasants government.

All of the accused pleaded guilty before the court.

Refugees Sent Back To Imprisonment by U. S. Deportations

According to New York reports, 10,904 persons were deported from the U. S. A. in 1926 for alleged illegal entry to the U. S. A. In addition, 20,000 people, who arrived on Ellis Island with American visas, did not receive permission to enter the country, and had to return to Europe.

The persons who "entered the U. S. A. illegally" included thousands of political emigrants who simply were unable to obtain passports from the countries from which they fled. In 1927 these emigrations of political refugees have greatly increased especially fugitives from fascist Italy. For instance, Ewa Sormenti, an American anti-fascist Jewess, to be deported from the United States although he has been sentenced to death in Italy. The International Labor Defence has provided the necessary legal assistance to fight the case.

Oakland I. L. D. Head Tells of Sufferings In American Prisons

OAKLAND, Calif., August 2.—On his return from the Pacific northwest and Southern Canada where he was occupied with the interests of the International Labor Defense, Comrade Tobey, executive secretary of the Alameda county I. L. D. was given a surprise party by his comrades. Comrade Tobey, one of the Jimmy Higgins of the labor movement, described his trip contrasting the beauty of the country that which he passed with the sufferings of the men behind the bars. He emphasized the importance of working constantly for the release of these imprisoned comrades.

Nominee Fans Race Feud Flames When Regular Lies Flag

DAYTON, Ohio, August 2.—Alleging that Negroes were gradually but surely ousting the whites from the West Side and lowering real estate values, and that Negro men were meeting white women on the hills around this city, Dr. Nixon, candidate for city commissioner, injected race hatred into his campaign in a meeting in the C. E. Church at 3rd and Kilbert, while excited whites gave vent to their outrage with cries of "Tar them, feather them!" Unable to arouse interest in the usual election issues, Dr. Nixon had taken this step, although the Negroes of Dayton are among the whites to a pitch where a race war is a possibility.

U. S. Budget To Be Over Three Billion

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—With preparations to be recommended to congress in the 1929 budget, Regent Director H. M. Lord today set machinery in motion to allocate the huge sum to the various departments.

GARVEY, JAILED FOR IGNORANCE OF AMERICAN LEGAL TECHNICALITIES, SHOULD NOW GO FREE

By WM. PICKENS.

Why keep Marcus Garvey in prison? No purpose of any sort is to be served by his continued incarceration; therefore, there is no real justice in holding him. In fact, if Garvey had been sentenced for five months, instead of for five years, and then deported, or if it had been legally possible simply to deport him, without any prison term, the ends of useful justice would have been as well met. Marcus Garvey was not more of a criminal than a half dozen or more of those who were associated with him in the Black Star Line business project. His worst enemies, if they are honest, must admit that.

But we can say even more than that; Garvey was not at heart a criminal. He did not set out to steal or cheat, as is our belief. But, knowingly or unknowingly, he ran afoul of technical legal selling, or permitting to be sold, stock in a concern that was bankrupt. Who? Not because he expected to cheat anybody out of just a penny's money, but because Garvey, as a visionary, a bold dreamer, who thought he could realize a cherished project in which was dead, put his bold confidence not quite dead but just "dormant" for the time being. He might have no doubt that [illegible] publicity, of course, that by taking in more money he would rescue the enterprise and save everything. But that is a crime; like accepting deposits in a bank when you know that the institution is already insolvent.

And altho it may seem to be a charge against the intelligence of the rather brainful Garvey, still it is likely true that, as a man from the West Indies, he understood very little about the technicalities of American law on that subject. Suppose we should get an honest answer to the following question,—how many supposedly intelligent Americans could answer "yes," if we asked them:

"Did you know that just what Garvey did was a penitentiary offense before you learned that he was being prosecuted for it?"—There are some native-born Americans who could not answer in the affirmative.

Now, some of the sharks working for Garvey's organization and giving Garvey "advise," knew that it was a violation of law to sell more stock under the condition,—and those fellows are all out of jail and have not even been put in.

Garvey who helped to jail himself by being braver than the others, not less shrewd than the others, during the trial, can now be released not only without any social hurt but even with social justice.

Haitian Leader to Suffer for Saving Union's Treasury

ROME, Aug. 2.—The former Secretary of the Italian Seamen's Federation, G. Giulietti, a former M. P., was arrested some time ago on a charge of embezzling 11,000,000 lire. The real reason for the charge is that he did not wish to hand over the Federations funds to the Fascist Seamen's Corporation, but disposed of them according to instructions he received at a regular meeting of members.

After being in prison for several months, he was provisionally set at liberty, but was soon re-arrested.

Negroes Segregated by Government Bureau, Coolidge Will Not Act

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 2.—Charging that Jim Crow tactics and segregation of Negroes in the government employ is being speeded up in the temporary absence of Secretary Work, Negro leaders point to the recent discharge of four Negroes as evidence.

The four colored men were removed from the floor of the pension bureau of the department of the interior where they had contacts with whites. They were the last of twenty-five Negroes to go. During the Harding and Coolidge administrations segregation has rapidly increased. Many complaints have been made to President Coolidge, the Negroes say, but he has consistently refused to do anything about the situation.

AIR VIEW OF HAWAIIAN VOLCANO IN ACTION

BALDWIN PLEADS FOR A CANADIAN TRADE REVIVAL

Dominions to Salvage Decaying British Trade

MONTREAL, Aug. 2. — While American and British naval competition is splitting the Geneva conference, the rivalry of the two imperialist powers on the economic field was proclaimed here yesterday when Stanley Baldwin, prime minister of Great Britain, and England's business man par excellence, opened his campaign of propaganda against American influence in Canada with a speech to 500 business men of the Canadian Club at the Hotel Windsor.

Baldwin—Super-Salesman.

With 21 per cent of Canadian industries in actual American possession and only 50 percent in the hands of the English, "rich American interests and Canadian experts to the United States flying yearly while England daily loses ground, with American economic penetration more and more surely creating a state of affairs suitable for Canadian secession from the decaying empire and alliance or union with her economically dominant neighbor, the British are making frantic efforts to stay the inevitable and to "sell" the Canadians the idea of empire. And Stanley Baldwin has been sent as the super-salesman.

Talking on the Canadian business men only British goods, the speaker emphasized the importance of the newly created Empire Marketing Board, for whose services the empire pays $5,000,000 a year.

The prime minister pointed out the co-operate need which had led to the creation of this board whose purpose he characterized frankly as "publicity."

Organize Propaganda Forces.

"We have enlisted the services of a band of writers and artists," he declared in explanation of the propaganda work of this body, "to aid us in that work. They are trying to create the consciousness of empire among the people of Great Britain and they want to carry with that consciousness the sense of obligation [illegible] all to Great Britain. This is the [illegible] vision to create an atmosphere [illegible] Empire Consciousness."

Again and again the prime minister turned to the idea of the necessity of "empire consciousness and of buying only British goods. He was extremely careful to stress those instances in which the United States is in a position to be of best value to Canadian trade than to England. Rolls or tea and sugar, he pointed out, are products of the tropical parts of the British empire which Canada need not send for which she must give the British empire first choice in supplying her markets.

In reference to the British import trade which has not progressed at the old rate since the war, the speaker said: "Remember we are a nation of 45,000,000 consumers," and he went on to describe England's struggle to regain the old economic mastery which has fallen out of her hands not those of the United States.

Denies British Decadence.

That England was not decadent Baldwin declared was shown by the struggle which she is today making to recover her position in world trade after the interference of the war.

Despite the fact that a generation had perished for British business in Flanders fields, the premier emphasized the fact that it was there that the younger men had learned the fellowship of man which would yet save the empire and colonial trade.

The Prince of Wales and his younger brother, who is being trained on this trip for the usual royal propaganda of colonial visits, went then their paces here. As the day was very hot the Prince of Wales and Premier Baldwin both made a democratic gesture and appeared in their coat sleeves to the horror of the Canadians who took several minutes to rise to the occasion and take off their own coats.

Wrangel's Troops Conspired Even In Turkey; Deported

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 2.—Continuous plotting in the interests of imperialist powers of Western Europe, and a determination to live without working which seemed to pervade all ranks of the Russian emigrees here, caused Kemal Pasha to sign the edict for the deportation of 2,200 of them, it was discovered today.

A bitter war has gone up from the white guard Russians, many of them former soldiers of Denekin and of Wrangel. They claim that they can not get ready to go in the two days' notice given. And they do not want to go anyway, because their leader, Baron Wrangel, has recently sent them a circular calling on them to be ready for action, whether as part of a united capitalist invasion of the Soviet Union, or as an expeditionary force to attack nationalist China, no one says, is not definitely known are an indispensable part of the Daily Worker Army.

We have many, operating daily in the trenches outposts of the class war.

Who are these crack shots? They are the comrades who know how to hit the mark every time.

They are the trained fighters who, in their task of winning new readers for the Daily Worker, carry conviction. They know just how to approach the timid, the idealistic, the fighter, the hundred percent American, the foreign born worker, the trade unionist, the unorganized, and all the various shades and categories found among the workers of this country.

The sharpshooters know just what argument to use, just what method of approach is most effective.

Daily these trained marksmen pick off the enemies' best troops, and win for the Daily Worker Army the best ifghters and the leading spirits of the working class.

Upon these crack shots depends the success of the drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker.

Our army must develop thousands of these crack shots, trained by a wealth of experience contact with the workers.

Be a Daily Worker crack shot.

Start your training now.

An Example of Ford Benevolence.

After a long shut-down the Ford slave pen at Detroit is soon to resume operations and already the forces of men whom the Ford system has turned into human automatons are drifting back.

It is estimated that Ford has spent millions of dollars on his new model that he hopes will enable him to meet the competition of the powerful General Motors combine. But reports from Detroit reveal the fact that much of the money expended by Ford was stolen from his former slaves in spite of the fact that they were idle.

For years the Ford "social welfare" department, or whatever they call the thing, has been inducing the workers to purchase real estate from concerns controlled by Ford. This real estate—workers' homes—is paid for on the installment plan. During the slack period thousands of Ford workers were unable to meet payments, so they had to leave town and lose all they had invested. A Detroit press dispatch to the New York World of Tuesday declares:

"Thousands of men have left the city and others are existing as best they can until the big whistle blows. Many Ford workers have lost their homes on account of being unable to keep up payments because of enforced idleness."

Benevolence pays the Ford concern very well! These houses, for which are almost paid for, will now be resold to the next set of slaves that comes into the Ford plants. Of the million dollars a day spent by Ford at least some of it still comes out of the hides of his former faithful workers, many of whom resented the suggestion of unionism on the ground that it would interfere with their rights as American citizens to work for whom they chose.

The opening of the Ford plant should be the signal for an intensive organizational drive so that the workers will not remain the abject slaves they have thus far been.

Pan-Americanism as an Imperialist Slogan.

Professor William R. Shepherd of Columbia University, speaking at the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass., told participants in the round table discussion that "Pan-Americanism has failed to establish a genuine bond of fellowship between the United States and Latin America." He declared further:

"As an agency of political cooperation, Pan-Americanism has proved incapable of realization as the Latin-American nations are in fearful lest joins action with the colossus of the north might establish a precedent for intervention whereby the colossus would do all the intervening."

States in this apologetic form the real nature of the imperialist slogan of "Pan-Americanism" is partially obscured. But it is not at all misunderstood as far as the intelligent inhabitants of Latin America are concerned. They are aware of the malevolent aims of the government of Wall Street. Haiti and Santo Domingo, ravaged by American marines, are living examples of what other nations may expect in the way of "cooperation" from the imperialist giant of the north. The piles of corpses, furnishing banquets for buzzards in Nicaragua, testify to the murderous designs of the United States government against the republics to the south.

The hope for the Latin American republics is not a Pan-American union with the United States as the dominant figure, but an anti-imperialist union against yankee imperialism.

If the leaders of the Pan-American Federation of Labor were representatives of labor instead of flunkeys of the capitalist class they would use that organization for the purpose of creating a powerful anti-imperialist movement between the workers of the United States and the victims of American imperialism in the Latin American countries. Since the reactionaries cannot be expected to fulfill their obligations to the working class it is essential that the class-conscious workers take the lead in anti-imperialist agitation and create a formidable organization over the heads of and against labor lieutenants of capitalism, whose role is to aid the imperialists enslave the workers of all countries upon which they can get their bloody clutches.

Letters From Our Readers

Dear Worker: Yours received. Have been short of cash or would have sent sooner.

Four years ago I was up for publishing a little jack. But I did not have sense enough to know that this is a money world if, you do not know the score. Now I am just waiting for the yellow sucker who wants to learn. And I sure can learn down here how to get the blinders off his eyes.

So I am sending you a check for the Daily Worker. I sure will give you fellows credit for the guts you've got. And it sure hurts that I can't give more as I know you have the only thing worth a damn to the worker who wants light.

Give her hell, brother, for things are moving.—Wm. Bernstorf, Vineland, Florida.

Y. W. L. and I. L. D. Protest.

ONNEAUT, July 27.—On Tuesday, July 19, the Young Workers League Training School in Conneaut, in cooperation with Local Conneaut of the International Labor Defense, held a successful out-door meeting to protest against the threatened execution of our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti. Three speakers dealt with various phases of this famous labor frame-up. Comrades H. Mallman of Chicago, Ill., Amter of Cleveland, and Comrade Farley, instructor of the school, were the speakers pointed out how Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested at the height of the post-war hysteria, how every effort was made to force through the capitalist courts a verdict of guilty, and how the conviction of the real criminal, Madeiros, was pushed aside, in order that the capitalists could accomplish their purpose and get rid of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The audience of 100, which was large for Conneaut, was enthusiastic, and the local of the I. L. D. will be strengthened as a result of the meeting.

Dempsey Fights Sept. 22.

The Dempsey-Tunney heavyweight championship fight to be held in Chicago next month has been postponed definitely from Sept. 15 to Sept. 22, it was stated today by Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, who said he had just been notified of the delay by Tex Rickard on the long distance telephone. The postponement was asked by Dempsey because of the illness of his wife, the former Estelle Taylor, movie star.

Forces and Issues in the Coming Conference of the Kuomintang

By William F. Dunne

THE Communist Party of China, according to the Moscow Pravda of July 26th has started propaganda for Soviets "in order if the struggle for the Kuomintang fails" to prepare the masses for the organization of Soviets to further the development of the revolution, opposing the Soviets as toilers' instruments to capitalist organizations."

It is stated further that the "paramount task" of the Chinese Communist Party is "to resist energetically the reactionaries within the Kuomintang." All Kuomintang units where "Communists wield influence" are to be organized for resistance to the counter-revolutionary central committee of the Kuomintang.

A DISPATCH to the New York Times from Hankow dated July 26th gives some concrete information relative to recent alignments which have been taking place under the pressure of the struggle and which substantiate the conception of the Communist International, expressed in Pravda, that the "paramount task" of the Communist Party is to resist energetically the reactionaries within the Kuomintang.

Withdrawal from the Wuhan government and struggle against it do not imply abandonment of the immediate struggle inside the Kuomintang nor the retreat of the reactionaries and the establishment of an honest leadership responsible to the workers and peasant masses in the struggle against imperialism and for national liberation.

RECENT developments in the Kuomintang show that not only are workers and peasant members of the Kuomintang unshakably committed to anti-compromising warfare upon imperialism and its agents within the Kuomintang but that a whole section of the leadership of Kuomintang is still loyal to the mass liberation movement and in open opposition to Chiang Kai-shek and his capitalist, landlord and imperialist allies.

Certain elements, the most prominent of whom are the widow of Sun Yat Sen, Madame Sun, the veteran minister of the Wuhan government and Tan Yen Fa, a commander of the trade union battalion which was the core of the armed proletarian liberation for three months while Hankow, have in open conference with the labor and peasant organizations and the Communists.

MADAME Sun has issued a statement which expresses clearly the irreconcilable division between the reactionary elements of the nationalist movement, the so-called "moderates" who are actively engaged in suppressing labor unions and peasant organizations and the Communists, who are uniting with the northern minorities of the Kuomintang and the left generals.

CHIANG Kai-shek, the leader of the section of the nationalists whose ties to the capitalist and landlord class are so strong, as to appear as a defender of the doctrines of Dr. Sun Yat Sen. Nationalist generals, under his direction or in agreement with him on policy, have taken over the Wuhan government by military force and have shifted the main issue of the movement from struggle against imperialism and militarism to struggle against the Communists and the masses whose economic and political demands aroused the enmity of the Chinese capitalist and landlord class.

THE main burden of the treacherous song of the right wing of the nationalists is that the liberation movement must be carried on without developing the class angle—that is, the workers and peasants must not try to better their conditions but simply support the general struggle for a "free China."

Since the great majority of the population—some 350,000,000—are workers and peasants, the policy of the right wing means nothing else but the domination of Chinese capitalists and landlords without guarantees that they will not surrender to imperialism in return for concessions for their class—as they have done a number of times.

MADAME Sun has challenged this whole theory, and branded it as a perversion of the principles of Sun Yat Sen, in a public statement. The major premise of her statement is that the workers and peasants are the base of the national liberation movement. She says:

"In the last analysis all revolution must be social revolution, based on fundamental changes in society. Otherwise it is not revolution but merely a change of government."

TAKING open issue with the "moderates" on the question of immediate improvement of the status of the masses Madame Sun declares that "Today the lot of the Chinese peasants is even more wretched than in the days when Dr. Sun was driven by his great sense of human wrongs into a life of revolution. And today, you who profess to follow his banner, talk of classes and think in term of 'revolution' that unjustly disregard the sufferings of those millions of peasants."

MADAME Sun rejects the theory that the Communists should be driven from the Kuomintang, removed from advisory and executive positions, be deported or murdered, and that aid from the Soviet Union should be shunned in order to please the imperialists. Obviously referring to the campaign against the Communists and the Soviet Union inspired by the imperialist powers and taken up by Chiang Kai-shek, Madame Sun says:

"Today we hear condemnation of the movement as a recent alien movement. This is false. Twenty or thirty years ago Dr. Sun was thinking and speaking in terms of a revolution that would change the status of the Chinese peasants. It is only in the past few years, after four decades of struggle, that his plans for a revolution of the peoples begun to bear fruit."

MADAME Sun refers to the Kwangtung Peasants Conference in 1924—coincident with the speeding up of Communist activity among the masses—as "the first time we saw the people of China coming to participate in the revolution."

"Dr. Sun's policies are clear," says Madame Sun. "If certain leaders do not carry them out consistently, then they are no longer Dr. Sun's true followers and the party (Kuomintang) is no longer the revolutionary party but merely a tool in the hands of this or that militarist—Revolution in China is inevitable."

KALEIDOSCOPIC as developments in China are, ensted by the tremendous sweep of the national liberation movement and the entry of millions of workers and peasants into it, in turn causing the rapid cleavage between classes, it is now clear that the treachery of Chiang Kai-shek and other generals, backed by the exploiting groups and the imperialists, has not been able to stampede the honest mass leaders who were closest to Sun Yat Sen.

Neither has the open war waged on the Communists by the militarist elements been able to drive away from the Communists the leaders and members of the Kuomintang who are loyal to the workers and peasants.

THE Kuomintang, in spite of the efforts of the capitalists, landlords, militarists and imperialists to turn it into an instrument of reaction, still holds the possibility of leading the Chinese masses in the struggle for national liberation.

But to do this it will have to defeat and expel the betrayers of the national liberation movement, make war upon them and prove to the Chinese masses that it is the party of the national revolution and not as Madame Sun puts it, "a war in the family" as this or that militarist.

THE Communists will fight to remain in the Kuomintang and they will have powerful allies in the honest followers of Sun Yat Sen typified by Madame Sun and also in the labor union and peasant organizations in which the Communists take a leading part.

The Kuomintang holds a conference sometime this month and at this conference there will take place a struggle whose outcome will have a great influence in determining the immediate course of the struggle for national liberation. This conference will be watched closely by the imperialists. It must also be watched closely by the workers and by every honest and possible the struggle of the Chinese revolutionists who have remained loyal to the Chinese masses must be supported against the united front of Chinese and imperialist reaction.

FOR the American Communist party the importance of this conference cannot be overestimated since it will furnish a living example of the policies and methods of work of a Communist party in the greatest national liberation movement of history. Its lessons will have to be applied in the struggle against American imperialism which now oppresses some 115,000,000 colonial and semi-colonial peoples.

Hands Off China Parley In Los Angeles Aug. 18

The Chinese Nationalist Movement has the support of the masses of people of China. All the different groups within China, the peasants, the working people organized in their unions and the small merchants, all under the leadership of the Nationalist movement are in the process of forming a stable nation. The old forms of feudal and militarist government are disappearing.

The great danger at present is in the interference by foreign powers and the presence of foreign troops and gun-boats in China. That is not only endangering the welfare of the Chinese people as a nation but also has in it the grave possibility of war in the Pacific.

To help China develop her own free and independent nation and to remove the possible danger of war in the Pacific are two questions that must be brought before the American people. We are therefore inviting all organizations that are in general sympathy with these broad principles to send delegates to a conference at which prominent speakers and members of organizations will discuss these matters and devise ways and means of bringing these problems before the American people.

We you kindly elect two delegates to represent you at this preliminary conference which will take place Thursday, August 18th, 1927, at 8 p. m. in Metal Hall, 242 South Hill St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Hands Off China Committee, Kuo Min Tang (Chinese Nationalist Party), Anti-Imperialist League of Los Angeles.

PAID POSITIONS IN UNION CAUSE OF INNER STRIFE

Mourn Passing of "The Good Old Days"

How the right wing camp followers in the furriers' union are fighting among themselves to get the paid jobs and positions of power is exposed in a letter that The DAILY WORKER is able to present to its readers today.

After reading this document there is no doubt left as to the real purpose back of the right wing fight against the membership of the furriers and other needle trades unions in this city.

Their only desire is to get paid jobs, and when they cannot agree among themselves who shall get the jobs, they select a secret committee of twenty from among their midst which determines the distribution of the gravy. This court includes some of the leading right wing spokesmen in America.

They are Morris Feinstone of the United Hebrew Trades, A. I. Shipiacoff, of the Pocketbook Makers' Union; Roberts of the Capmakers' Union, L. Fuchs of the Neckwear Makers' Union and J. Bearack, socialist attorney of Boston.

The right wing court in its report to the committee of twenty refers mournfully to "the good old days." The readers can use their own judgment as to what they are thinking about.

Further comment is unnecessary. After reading the following document, which was delivered to the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union at 22 East 22nd St., by mistake, after it was addressed to the right wing office, speaks for itself. It tells plainly why the right wingers have continued to postpone their elections. Those who complain of domination from Moscow when attacking the left wing, are now exposed red-handed as taking orders from socialist leaders.

The letter in full reads as follows:

Contents of Letter.

"To The Com. Of Twenty Of The Fur Workers' Union:

"We, the undersigned, the man whom you have invited to take council with you in your present difficulties, after listening to a number of speakers of your committee and after studying the entire situation carefully, have come to the conclusion that the present problem is the result of the development of factions among the active workers of your organization.

"Factional spirit may be chronic in your opinion, but the factions themselves are not deeply rooted; in fact they are superficial and of a shifting nature.

"The Communists have strengthened their faction. They are injecting a foreign issue into the union. The issues of organization siproper are such that their very nature makes it possible for a man to belong to Group A today and Group B tomorrow.

Found Elsewhere.

"In a small scale, factions of this kind are found in almost every organization and they cannot become harmful first because they are petty and second because they are not given sufficient recognition to dare come into the open where they are given countenance and even semi-official recognition. There is but one result and this is ruin.

"When critical moments such as you are facing now arise in any community that must have government, one of the two methods can save the dictator who manages to get the confidence of the people and has the capacity to rule with an iron hand, or the people in the good old democratic way choose their ruler. The people may make mistakes but democratic mistakes are better than autocratic rule.

"We therefore recommend that meetings of the members be called for the purpose of nominating all paid and unpaid offices and in order to avoid the possibility of undesirables getting on the ballot, an impartial committee consisting of responsible and well known men in the labor movement should be chosen to act as an objection and election committee. This is by the way nothing new. The labor movement practiced such methods even in the good old days.

"This procedure will not only solve the immediate problem of your elections but will give the first knockout blow to groups, blocks, and cabals. We further recommend that conferences and identification with groups and blocks be outlawed.

A. I. Shiplacoff, M. Feinstone,
Roberts, L. Fuchs,
J. Bearak."

GRAND JAMBOREE FOR DAILY WORKER, FREIHEIT, AND NEEDLE TRADES DEFENSE ON AUGUST 28TH

The DAILY WORKER, Joint Defense Committee of Furriers and Cloakmakers and the Freiheit are running collectively a Grand Jamboree in Starlight Park, 177th St., on Sunday, August 28th.

Something unusual—different—is being staged this time. This wonderful amusement park will be overrun with workers and their children on city.

this memorable Sunday.

A Jamboree. What does that bring to one's mind? All the fun of the fair, ponies, swings, seesaws and rides for the children and well all should help to reduce the temperatures. Won't it be fun to make a round of the rides and then dive into the reading waters of the pool.

Many workers who were making arrangements to leave town that week and are going to have a real holiday with their fellow fighters at the Grand Jamboree.

The real explanation of a Jamboree will remain a secret until after this affair when it is expected to become the most popular kind of affair in the music.

BOND BARONS IN ON CONTRACTING GRAFT WITH CITY

State Architect Scores Methods of Companies

The whitewashing of the surety companies which bond city building contracting jobs has started. Sullivan W. Jones, state architects in a statement issued Monday said that agents and brokers for the companies are responsible for the grafting practices of the surety companies rather than the companies themselves.

Jones said that the city and state has lost enormous sums of money thru the operations of the bonding companies.

Commenting on the methods used by surety companies and their agents Jones said, "the division of architecture require contractors, in making an application for their first payment on their contract, to attach a receipt of bill showing the payment of the premium of the bond. These receipts were issued presumably by agents of surety companies and in some instances by the surety company itself, when no payment at all has been made."

Methods Are Illegal.

In view of the fact that practically all of the surety companies have been defeating directorate control of the granting of state and city building and construction contracts has practically in the hands of the surety companies.

Speaking of the illegal methods of securing business for the surety companies Jones concluded, "those and similar means unscrupulous men in this business have in some cases practically controlled the bidding on state work, which has resulted in losses of hundreds of thousands of dollars to taxpayers of the state."

Charges have been made that these surety companies use every form of inducement to obtain business. The granting of a bonus or present under the Insurance Law is illegal.

The two most prominent surety companies operating in this city are the National Surety Company and the United States Fidelity and Guarantee.

Penitent Building Bosses Waiters at Picnic to Workers

Anti-Union Contractors Serve Union Guests.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., (FP) Aug. 2.—Former strident, bitterly anti-union building contractors in Youngstown will pass the latter's waiters and cooks at the banquet for the guests, the building trade unionists, on the 6th of August 27th.

The contractors were passionately in favor of the open shop between 1921 and 1924. Now the building trades are working solidly under closed shop conditions.

To suggest to a Youngstown contractor today that "what we need in this country is a return to individual freedom and the abolition of a union monopoly of labor" brings forth a vociferous blah.

Failed to Squash Unions.

They listened to such slogans in 1921, raised a war chest of $50,000 and threw all union men off their jobs.

They hired the usual crew of strike-breakers, swore in a gunmen, put up a rampart fore fortress and a camp kitchen to provide a place in which the scabs could sleep and eat, and set out to grab off the juicy contracts.

But the unions did not respond. While the rest of the country was entering the biggest building boom in history Youngstown built little or nothing. Contractors themselves were forced to go out of town to get work and when they secured it they found that their costs ran away above their union-employing competitors.

Receivership Contractors "Victory."

Aside from the general fund expended, and the business lost or killed off by the open-shop fight, the individual costs and losses of the contractors made such a dent in the individual pocketbooks that a few contractors to sign up with the unions in 1924.

For one of these firms, Parrish & Bloor, it was too late. The receiver could not be stalled off. Others pulled out with the aid of the union men they had been "through with" in 1921.

Closed Shop Won.

In 1924 the open shop was officially abandoned by the Builder's Exchange and union shop agreements signed with all the crafts. Building was resumed and harmony has prevailed amongst contractors and building craftsmen ever since.

Thus the joint picnic sponsored by the Builder's Exchange is looked upon as a public acknowledgement by Youngstown contractors that they made a mistake once and they have no intention of being foolish the same way again.

Worker Demands Damages.

NEW ORLEANS, La., (FP) August 2.—James Dawson, laborer, injured while working near a pile driver at the purification plant of the sewerage and water board, Carrollton last August, has filed suit in the civil district court for $25,000.

Dawson is seeking to recover damages under the workmen's compensation statute.

Survey Commission Backs Builders In War For Open Shop

The N. Y. State Industrial Survey Commission, in its examination of the conditions in the building trades, is bringing to light some of the methods used by the employers against the unions.

The commission, headed by Hugo Sayer, its executive secretary, is making a study of the building industry in order to make recommendations to the state legislature, which will be supposed to make an impartial survey of the industry.

Recently the commission heard Fred Ann Associate James Gerard, a millionaire. Mr. Sayer, ex-executive director of a plan for running the building industry under the auspices of Wolff Industrial Service. Such members on an impartial commission should disillusion the workers of any dream that they have had regarding the friendly interest of the state authorities in their affairs.

Employed Scabs.

The commission, investigating relations between employers and employees, examined Charles H. Parsons, a marble contractor, who asserted he has been hounded by the union on many occasions. David Lyons, business agent of the Marble Helpers' Union, in testifying to the trouble caused the union by Parsons, stated that the difficulties were caused by the employment by Parsons of non-union men side by side with union men.

"Don't you think it unfair to train Mr. Parson's business just because he employ non-union men occasionally?" asked Meyer S. Hart, representing the employers on the commission.

"Parsons knows the union rules," answered Mr. Dansky.

Supporting Mr. Hart's theory, that the restrictive practices of the building trade unions have led to high costs of construction, Mr. Parsons said that [illegible] which he had installed in a house in New York had been torn out and thrown on the street by order of the Marble Helpers' Union, and that such practices coupled with rules on the part of the unions increased the cost of building construction from 10 to 15 per cent. Mr. Dansky denied that he unions had ordered any such action.

"I went to the general contractor and told him that Parsons employed non-union men. That was all."

The power basis of the strong organization of the workers employed in the building trades has taught the employers what it means to hire non-union employes.

Electrical Open Shoppers.

The cross-examination of electrical contractors by members of the commission was conducted similarly to that of Mr. Parsons, in that attempts were made to show that the unions' demands that the restrictive practices of the union be used to increased expenses and profits by the unions [illegible] certain employers of firms at the expense of others. Zalman Hartman, a "one-stone" contractor, objecting to the imposition by unions on gates of electrical work in new buildings in addition to such inspection by city

BIG AIR PORT PROPOSED FOR NEW YORK AREA

Secret Sessions of Militarists

WASHINGTON, August 2.—New York City is to have a consolidated air force according to plans drawn up by the department of commerce. Plans for its development will be launched at the Biltmore Hotel in New York Thursday by a committee of industrialists, militarists and other money-mongers appointed by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, it was announced here.

More War Plans.

This is a movement in part of the ambitious program of the government and the capitalist plunderer, whom it serves to increase by every means its military power in contemplation of carrying into still other parts of the world the might of Yankee imperialism.

Will Have "Public Meetings."

Trying to conceal their real purposes under the hoax of holding public meetings, Lieut. Col. Mac Cracken, secretary of the air department of the commerce department, announced that the committee would meet in executive session, after which a public meeting would be held. The executive sessions will, of course, be closed to the public and only the most carefully prepared material on real designs will be revealed to the public.

Hoover's Military Gang.

Hoover's committee was announced as follows:

Wm. M. Mac Cracken, Jr., Gen. Wm. C. Heppenheimer, representing the governor of New Jersey, Rodman Wanmaker, L. D. Seymour, of the National Air Transport Co., John D. O'Ryan, of the Colonial Air Transport Co., W. L. Lepage, of the Pitcairn Aviation, Co., Richard F. Hoyt, of the New York Merchants' Association, Harvey F. Guggenheim, of the Guggenheim Foundation, W. L. Glover, representing the postmaster general, John E. Ramsey, representing the Port of New York, Arthur S. Somers, of the Long Island Chamber of Commerce, James H. Sullivan, of the American Legion, and Robt. F. Gaston, of the New York Union Board of Trade and Transportation.

examiners, asserted that this is one of the reasons for the termination of the contract between the Electrical Board of Trade and the Electrical Workers' Union No. 3.

Fight Union Inspection.

Alleging nullification of the foreman's work by the introduction of a shop steward on the job, James R. Strong, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Electrical Contractors' Association said, "The employers oppose the presence of a shop steward paid by the union to see that the union rules are carried out, when the foreman is there for that purpose. The shop steward does practically no work, and we want someone in the shop who represents us and is paid by us. The men should apply to the foreman who represents the employers and will see that union conditions are lived up to."

The right of the union to call a strike at any time as stated in the recently published by-laws of the union is strongly opposed by the employers as a violation of the agreement between the union shop section of the Board of Trade and the union. That the unions are preparing to smash the building trade unions can be foreseen by the attitude of the majority of the members of the Industrial Survey Commission, who in evasioning David Dubinsky, of the Marble Helpers' Union, took every opportunity to twist his words and make it appear that the union was the leech fattening on the pocketbook of the defenseless employer

Fine Workers Who Demonstrated For Sacco and Vanzetti

Four workers were fined, one held on $500 bail for Special Sessions and a fourth dismissed for participating in the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration Sunday afternoon which marched to City Hall, demanding the release of the framed-up workers.

Arthur Madrigon, of 1672 83rd St., Brooklyn, was fined $10 on a charge of "disorderly conduct." Madrigan was leading the parade from Union Square to City Hall when a policeman ordered him to stop the parade. Madrigan marched on. He was arrested.

Vasily Smirnoff, of 506 East 81st street, was held for Special Sessions on $500 bail. He was charged with having a razor in his pocket during the Sacco Vanzetti demonstration.

Harry Kuddis, one of the leaders of the demonstration at City Hall, was fined $5, while Joseph Horowitz, 15, who was brutally beaten by policemen on the way to night court Sunday, was dismissed after a little lecture on "patriotism."

Explorer Johnston Dies

LONDON, August 2.—Sir Harry Johnston, South African pioneer, explorer, author and painter, is dead at his home near Worksop. His writings run the gamut from scholarly treatises to novels.

'Co-op.' Convention to Meet in Minneapolis Outlines Activity

Fifty-five regular delegates and a large number of fraternal delegates from local unions, producers', cooperatives, etc. attended the 6th Annual Convention of the Northern States Cooperative League in the beautiful Franklin Cooperative Creamery auditorium in Minneapolis. Delegates came mostly from the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and South Dakota, twenty-seven representing the eighty odd stores of the Cooperative Central Exchange, seventeen from the Franklin Creamery and five from the New Era Cooperative Life Insurance Association.

The chair was occupied by H. L. Nordby. After necessary committees and functionaries were elected, a lengthy report of the activities of the League was given and an ambitious program was presented for future activity.

Women Important.

The report showed that women held an important position in the cooperative movement and it was therefore urged that women's auxiliaries be encouraged, and to follow along the lines set by the Finnish Women's Clubs. Delegates also spoke on the need for closer contact with the labor movement, since the cooperative movement is a part of the working class

Southern Mill Wage Under British

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (FP). — Southern textile wage levels are sinking beneath the "pauper" standards of England, according to an amazing admission just made by the British Fine Cotton Spinners' and Doublers' Association. Yarns from southern mills are actually being sold in England, under-cutting British mills, whose home conditions have hitherto been held up as a horrible example of what would happen to American workers if they were not sheltered behind a high tariff wall.

Beat British.

Southern textile goods are also being sold on the world markets, displacing the Lanca-shire products, throwing thousands of English textile workers out of jobs. Thus has the menace of the south's low wage and wretched labor conditions not only brought depression and widespread unemployment to New England but reached across the sea to displace foreign labor which American workers have been assured time and again by Republican politicians would lower American wages were it not for high tariffs.

Envies U. S. Slavery.

The big English textile firm not only owns mills in England and Egypt but cotton plantations in the United States. This corporation confesses to its stockholders that it could be more money if it were not for shorter working in England and relatively high wages and social service. It has to render its English workers. These handicaps, it is explained, make it hard to compete with the Southern mills of the United States, which on account of long hours and low wages are able not only to take part of our trade in neutral markets, but even to export yarn into our home markets."

An offensive against the British textile union and social legislation exists analogous to the New England mill owners' drive on the Textile Workers' Union and on Massachusetts' 48-hour law for women may be expected as a result of southern labor policy. In Alabama they say about half the New England scale while in the Carolinas wages are about two-thirds the northern level. With the 10-hour day silent and protective legislation non-existent, the cotton mills of Dixie can find their labor costs lower even than England's.

British Move Mills.

One step taken by the overseas industry to meet southern competition while maintaining profits is to build mills in the south. Work is proceeding now on a big Alabama mill to be operated by a British company which will import yarn at lower production costs than its own mills at home can attain.

The only comfort for workers in New and Old England is the expectation that the vast reservoir of unused southern labor may soon be exhausted within 10 years or so. This possibility is foreseen by a speaker at a recent convention of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, a southern mill federation. If the south keeps on expanding at its present phenomenal pace, the labor reserve will be exhausted in less than a generation, he warned, and the south will be faced with the same labor problems as New England. Unless, therefore, it accepts normal manufacturing as being encouraged by the exploitation of cheap labor and hydro-electric power.

New England Suffers.

In any event the unmanufactured coarse textiles seems doomed in New England. Mill owners there, particularly in the New Bedford-Fall River section, are devoting more effort to the manufacture of cotton-and-rayon and cotton-and-silk cloths. With the aid of expert designers, these mills are turning out "style" fabrics which have gained wide popularity among American consumers. More complex machinery and more skilled labor workers are required in these lines than in the south-now possesses. New England is confident that it can maintain superiority in this class of textiles, if manufacturers can be licked into concentration on better marketing methods.

If New England, with the Great Lakes and grain regions, can influence congress to approve of the St. Lawrence waterway and power development, another big advantage of the south in cheap power will be neutralized. The New England Council believes the finer textiles, aided by cheap power and better distribution, can be kept in its mills against southern competition.

pounds. (This) spending their wages, will in turn employ more men, and so in turn on indefinitely." Now, these capitalists, acute sensible people that they would never law men off but would keep them constantly at work at high wages and instead of permitting business to reach thrifty and encourage saving, the government would employ idol hinders to lecture the workers on the virtue of thriftlessness. As in all prosperous times employers will continue to take the lion's share of the profits, leaving the workers' savings for a few cents on the dollar instead of urging the workers to spend it, thus giving employment to more garment workers, shoemakers, and brewery workers. John is like a voice crying in the wilderness.

THE Coast Invasion and Industrial Review has an article on "Why Russia Fails and Can Succeeds." We are told that "sovietism is being forced on the people in Russia by the rifle and the hangman's noose, that a premium is placed on illiteracy and that the government is run of the lowest order of people by the lowest order of people, that in America capitalism is socialism and that here the only handicap is to be born into wealth. The rag that published this drivel hails from San Francisco.

A passenger air line from San Francisco to Japan will soon be a reality, according to Ercell Hinton, Aviator, formerly of the Royal Air Force, returned from the Orient. He's interested in establishing the line and is backed by a syndicate of British capitalists.

FEW of our readers need to be told that this official organ of financial swindlers is lying like a drunken Kiwanian, but it gives us a good excuse to write a few words about the Soviet Union. When the brute capitalist scribbler says that the Soviet Union puts a premium on illiteracy he is lying stupidly. Such comment as this is one big school-room. During the Czarist regime only the children of the proletariat had the multitude of classes were in attendance. Now the children of the workers and peasants have that privilege. Socialism is being built up gradually and there is less wholesale used in this mighty task than there is in the United States in the effort to enforce prohibition.

THE contemptuous sneer at the workers and peasants classes that rule one-sixth of the earth's surface is one what should be expected from a representative of a class that doomed to mass out of history, pelled by the tip of the proletarian boot. We cannot blame the capitalists for being sore. It is not a pleasant thing for them to contemplate the loss of their graft and power. They are entitled to as much sympathy as the confidence man who swindles a man out of his money when the swindled takes it out of his hide.

RUSSIA is not faring. Her productive plant is gaining rapidly in power. Her oil production is away beyond the pre-war figure. The standard of living of the workers and peasants is on the upgrade. Illiteracy will soon be only a dream of the past. Russia is succeeding for ninety-five per cent of the population as the United States is for the exploiting minority. That is the difference. It all depends from what angle you look at the question. From the capitalist point of view the system of the California parasites is right. From our view point it is working.

WHILE covering California we want specifically call your attention to the sweet exhibition of cunning given by Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of the famous female Elmer Gantry, in the controversy now taking place between these two religious frauds. The twin servants of the lord are now quarrelling over the profits and we are using the kind of language that would sound better in a barroom than in a church. They are talking cold turkey. "When we started in business," said Mrs. Kennedy, "it was understood Aimee was to do all the preaching and I was to do the work and would share profits on a 50-50 basis" Now when the business amounts to over a million dollars Aimee becomes afflicted with a poor memory and leaves us reported to be about to demand an audit of his business. Still, the Los Angeles sucker is a hardy specimen and he will keep coming.

"Sacco, Vanzetti Must Die!"

—Decree of Governor Alvin T. Fuller, of Massachusetts.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE popularity of Benito Mussolini among the people of Italy is attested to by the precautions taken to prevent them from killing the beloved dictator. Even the cow that supplies the duce with his milk is under suspicion. Mussolini is suffering from a stomach ailment which compels him to live on a milk diet. So it is vital to his welfare that his personal cow should be on the level. Lest the cow might be inclined to risk suicide by eating poisoned fodder in her desire to get the dictator out of the way, the bovine is kept under constant watch, her guards being ordered to shoot should she attempt to eat newspapers containing anti-fascist propaganda.

A TRUSTED fascist has the task of milking the cow, but even a trusted fascist needs watching, so another watcher watches the milker. After the cow is milked a whole flock of detectives watch the process of getting the milk bottled and the state militia is called out to protect the lacteal fluid on its way to the duce's ice chest. Love greater than this no people could have for a ruler, tho frankly, were it showered on us we would feel like stealing away sometimes to a bomb factory where the employes are in the habit of smoking while at work.

WHEN Mussolini goes to the chamber of deputies he is preceded by, and surrounded by enough armed forces to wage a respectable war. The happy populace is driven indoors by bayonets and the statuary in the public building thru which the duce passes is searched for arms. The members of the chamber of deputies are ordered to keep their hands pointed to the ceiling while the duce is speaking. News paper correspondents, telegraphing their copies from Rome attribute the hands up procedure to admiration of Benito. When they get to Paris and get a couple of gins under the belt they tell the truth.

YOU can see from the foregoing that Mussolini is quite safe in the arms of the masses. He has won their confidence. And why not? A man who is willing to suffer all this torture for his country is worthy of esteem. During those hot days, when Benito rides thru the streets he refuses to open the windows of his automobile and the panes in those windows are made of bullet-proof glass. So are the windows in his Chigi palace office. The poor fellow's job is almost as hazardous as that of a Chicago alcohol salesman. But to be so well beloved it compensation sufficient for the little inconveniences he must suffer for his popularity.

PADEREWSKI, well-known piano tickler and former premier of Poland is reported to have praised Mussolini highly after his return to the United States from a tour during which he visited Italy. The musician's opinion about Italy is featured in an editorial in Hearst's New York American. Mussolini, we are told, has cleared Italy's streets of beggars. Paderewski calls him the greatest statesman of the day and Hearst's sheet agrees. Neither Hearst nor any other of his outstanding scribblers misses an opportunity to praise the executioner of the workingclass movement. Anti-Fascist workers, who purchase Hearst's rags should protest publicly against the propaganda being consistently carried on by this notorious charlatan in favor of Mussolini.

PREMIER Baldwin took off his coat and vest and rolled up his sleeves.

GENERAL MEMBERSHIP MEETING FOR PARTY CONVENTION DISCUSSION TOMORROW NIGHT

The Bureau Executive Committee of the Workers Party under the direction of the National Convention Arrangements Committee, has arranged a general membership meeting for discussion of the decision of the Communist International to be held Friday, 7 p. m., at Central Opera House.

The meeting will be in charge of a sub committee of the District Committee, of equal numbers from both sides. Members to be admitted must bring their membership books. Young Workers League members are invited to attend.

The question decided by the Communist International is of the utmost importance for the Party and all members are urged to set aside all other matters to attend this meeting.

Mine Policeman After Shooting Two Children Abducts 13-Year Girl

BELLE VERNON, Pa., Aug. 3.—R. F. Gannon, a coal and iron policeman at Priedale, Pa., who recently shot two small boys, children of strikers at Granville, was held for court without bail at a hearing before Justice of the Peace Joseph Miller of Belle Vernon, Pa., on serious charges preferred by Michael Jupin, also of Priedale, for the alleged abduction of his thirteen year old daughter, Mary. It was brought out at the hearing that Gannon is accused of taking the girl from her home about two weeks ago and keeping her at various mining camps in the Priedale section, where he was patrolling.

Miners Angry.

A coroon was formed at officers headquarters following the hearing to get Gannon through a crowd of miners to a waiting automobile in which he was rushed to the Westmoreland county jail at Greensburg.

Save Lives of Sacco, Vanzetti! Boycott Massachusetts Products

Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die!

This is the vow the workingclass of America takes as the press wires carry to a waiting world the murderous purpose of American capitalism whose spokesman in this case is Governor Fuller of Massachusetts.

There is one reply the masses of America can make:

Boycott the products of Massachusetts industries!

Decadent and cruel, the capitalists of Massachusetts have defied the liberty-loving masses of the world.

There is but one way to touch their sensibilities—thru the pocketbook nerve!

The workers of the United States who purchase textiles, shoes and sea food that are produced in Massachusetts must make of Massachusetts an economic desert.

Refuse to buy or use anything that is produced in Massachusetts!

Make the Massachusetts murderers realize that the workers of the United States will not forget or forgive.

Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die!

Force the Massachusetts capitalists to give up their prey.

Free the two innocent workers whose lives are to be taken to glut the bloodlust of a class which hates and fears the workingclass to whom Sacco and Vanzetti belong!

The full power of the American workingclass must be thrown against the state of Massachusetts.

Boycott the state which murders two innocent workers!

Buy nothing which comes from Massachusetts!

Save Sacco and Vanzetti!

THIRTEEN years ago today the class conscious workers of the world were awaiting the signal from the Reichstag members of the German social-democracy that would pave the way for arousing the masses against the European war that in the closing days of July had burst upon the world. For days the press had announced that the Kaiser was to appear in person and ask for a favorable vote upon the war credits. There was no question regarding the subserviency to the government of the capitalist parties, but it was expected that the parliamentary representatives of the foremost socialist party of the world, the leading party of the second international would carry out in deeds the principles they had so long proclaimed.

Finally the news came from Berlin that the war credits had been asked. The reasons given by the government were flashed upon the bulletins. The vote would soon be taken—then pandemonium would break loose. At last the vote was taken. It was

MASSACHUSETTS MURDERERS DECREE IS DEATH, AUG. 10, FOR TWO INNOCENT WORKERS; CLASS LOYALTY IS CRIME

Fuller Calls Frame-Up Trial of the Two Workers "Flawless" Case

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 3.—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti must burn to death in the electric chair on Wednesday, August 10, the victim of the frame-up of organized greed in the great industries of New England.

This was the decision of Governor Alvin T. Fuller, the Massachusetts executive of the state's shoe, textile and railroad industries, that keep the workers in a state of semi-serfdom.

Governor Fuller in his decision says he will not intervene. He supports the higher courts of the state, that have refused to overturn the "fixed" verdict of the prejudiced lower court proceedings manipulated under the direction of Judge Webster Thayer at Dedham, the small Boston suburb.

The New England anti-labor murder clique, that has its ramifications from the New Englander, strike-breaker president, Cal. Coolidge, down thru Attorney General Sargent, senators, the governor and mayors, again shows its determination to have the lives of our comrades.

FULLER, PARROT OF THE EXPLOITERS.

Governor Fuller parrotted the words of the industrial autocracy of Massachusetts that has continually, during the last seven years, demanded the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, when he said in his decision:

"As a result of my investigation I find no sufficient justification for executive intervention. I believe with the jury that these men, Sacco and Vanzetti, were guilty and had a fair trial. "Furthermore, I believe that there was no justifiable reason for giving them a new trial."

PUTS STAMP OF "FAKE" ON HIS INVESTIGATION.

This decision puts the stamp of "fake" on the so-called investigation that Governor Fuller has been conducting behind a mask of "fairness" for the past few weeks.

As word of the decision was flashed from the State House to police headquarters every available reserve in the city was rushed to stations at various public buildings. The governor was enroute to his home when the decision was made public.

SACCO AND VANZETTI ASLEEP.

The doomed prisoners, asleep in the death cells at Charlestown state prison were not notified of the decision. They will be told by Warden Hendry tomorrow that they must die.

The governor divides the case into two parts, the first, their trial and appeals before Judge Thayer, those proceedings were attacked, and the jury trial which was attacked as not having sufficient evidence to convict.

The inquiry was into the following questions: Was the jury trial fair? Were the Accused entitled to a new trial? Are they guilty or not guilty?

Brushing aside all contrary testimony, Fuller said: "I have consulted with every member of the jury now alive, eleven in number. They considered the judge fair; that he gave them no indication of his own opinion of the case. Affidavits have been presented claiming that the jury was prejudiced. I see no evidence of prejudice in his conduct of the trial."

Scores of witnesses showed otherwise.

Calls Inquisition "Flawless."

The governor supports the capitalist inquisition as being without legal flaw. He says he examined the case from a layman's standpoint and found the trial was fair.

"I give no weight to Madeiros' confession. It is popularly supposed he confessed to committing this crime.

BARBER STRIKE TODAY IN SACCO-VANZETTI FIGHT

The Journeyman Barbers' International Union, Local 913, will strike for one hour today in protest to demand the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti by the courts of Massachusetts.

A mass meeting will be held at 3 o'clock this morning at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby Ave., Brooklyn.

After the meeting a parade will march thru the working class districts of Williamsburg and Green Point, winding up at McCarren Park, where prominent speakers will address the gathering.

The speakers will include Norman Thomas, Bishop Montgomery Brown, Arturo Giovanitti, Abraham Isaksowitz, L. Sraina and G. Catani.

Workers of Brooklyn and New York and all sympathizers will rally to this monster mass meeting to take part in the protest.

KRUPSKAYA SAYS OPPOSITION IS BLIND TO FACTS

Old Bolsheviks Appeal for Unity

MOSCOW, August 3.—Krupskaya, the widow of Lenin, in a speech to the United Plenum of the Central Committee and Central Control Commission of the All-Union Communist Party now in session declared that the menace of war is lowering over the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and that at this moment it is imperative that the maximum unity of the Party and the wide masses around the Party be achieved.

Opposition Condemned.

The disputes taking place at the plenum testify to the fact that the opposition does not realize the gravity of the war danger. In face of the impending war its accusations directed against organizational unity of the Party and the masses must cease. The opposition is devoid of realistic foundation and it wrongly generalizes about separate, negative facts. It is purposely wearing blinkers not to perceive all the construction, the industrial achievements, taking place in the U. S. S. R.

Masses Are Revolutionary.

Illustrating the growth of the conscious desire for organization on the part of the masses and their unquestioned revolutionary elation by numerous recent instances, Comrade Krupskaya emphasizes the fact that the opposition does not see real life, it has no roots in the ranks of the masses and the masses will not follow it.

Discusses Defense.

Referring to the question of the defense of the country against imperialist agression Krupskaya emphasizes the fact that it is utterly impossible to discuss this question in an anarchistic way. The Party cannot be a discussion club; there are moments when it is necessary to act—not to deliberate.

Indulging in lying gossip against the Trotsky-Kruptskaya declared that he more than anyone else knows what would have happened to the Red Army if, at the moment of attack, each soldier would deliberate as to whether he was going in the right direction and would himself decide where to go. The same maximum unity is required in the present situation.

Defends Chinese Policy.

Answering even to the question of what the Chinese events, Krupskaya emphasizes the correctness of the Executive's policy in connection with Kuomintang. According to her opposition, such a policy would mean the surrender of the revolution. Speaking of the Kuomintang, she said that it would be criminal to push the masses into a premature struggle against the Kuomintang, which would mean the destruction of the Communist Party. Only the Kuomintang is capable of leading the struggle against imperialism. The Communist Party must remain in the Kuomintang, maintaining the independence of the proletariat.

Secondly, abandoning from which now and then the opposition gesticulates, the question of the Kuomintang is not a question of carrying out leading comrades into the ranks of the opposition, because it can create organic decomposition in the Communist Party, and the events of the opposition could not frighten the Central control commission, conduct a treacherous policy, if the Party is degenerating, then such a policy as that our leading comrades must cede their places to the opposition men. Narrowness, self-satisfaction, stupidity, lack of understanding the full confidence expressed by our leading organs in the opposition constantly testify that Party. For the reason we consider their arguments unfounded from the documents.

Party Foes Rejoice.

What results can flow from this kind of opposition? Firstly, unsatisfying and unstable elements in the party, also all open and secret foes of our party up to sworn counter revolutionaries will form support to the opposition and sustain it with the aim of the situation. And construction the opposition will rush into breach opened by the party opposition, plus the inherent in the masses the mass moving force and the enormous authority of the party on the basis of support of the Central Committee is impossible.

Opposition Incites Anarchists.

In an atmosphere of confusion in the All-Union Communist Party forces of the opposition, because it can Pravda emphasizes, lose confidence in final outcome, not hope for the elimination of the opposition of the Central Committee, Central control commission, conduct a treacherous policy, if the Party is degenerating, the opposition's policy is that our leading comrades must cede their places to the opposition men. Narrowness, self-satisfaction, stupidity, lack of understanding the full confidence expressed by our leading organs in the opposition constantly testify that Party. For the reason we consider their arguments unfounded from the documents.

Society Does Not Jump.

Conneaut School to Give Sinclair Play at Dance; Successful Year Closing

CONNEAUT, Ohio, Aug. 3. — The Young Workers League Training School at Conneaut will hold an entertainment and dance at the Workers Hall, 943 Broad Street, on Saturday night, August 6.

The program will consist of a short play by Upton Sinclair, "The Second Story Man," songs and recitations, in Finnish and English, and some speeches. The Conneaut Group at Conneaut will give some cheers. The program will close with dancing until 11.30 p. m.

The Conneaut League Training School is extending an invitation to the League and Party units in Ohio and in near-by cities to come to this affair and help make a spectacular ending to a highly successful venture.

Admission will be 35 cents.

PENNSYLVANIA GUNMEN ATTACK MINE STRIKERS

Arrest Organizer and Assault Women

By POWERS HAPGOOD.
(Federated Press)

(Avella is the center of a rich coal valley 30 miles east of Pittsburgh near the West Virginia border.—Ed.)

AVELLA, Pa., August 3.—Miners of Avella, on in last resort in protecting themselves and their families against the violence of the coal and iron police have petitioned the Governor of Pennsylvania and the Sheriff of Washington county to remove "about 18 disorderly uniform commissioned as coal and iron police."

The thugs were imported into the valley by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corp. and the Duquesne Coal & Coke Co., and they are "masquerading falsely in the uniform of peace officers," the miners tell Governor Fisher and the sheriff.

Thugs Threaten Miners.

Several days ago a plum seed dropped by a girl who was eating fruit on the high porch of a cooperative store fell on the fender of a passing automobile in which two coal and iron police were riding. They immediately turned their car about, drive back n quarter of a mile to where a group of striking miners were peacefully playing cards under a tree, drew their revolvers, and threatened to kill the miners. Later one of these company gounds was arrested and held over for court on a charge of disorderly conduct and pointing firearms.

Assault Women and Girls.

This afternoon another scene of violence disturbed the peace of this mining community. Some strikebreakers were being imported into Pittsburgh Terminal mine, and three women, three miners and District Organizer Wolcott of the United Mine Workers saw a truck pulling them there was a strike and asking them not to go to work. Immediately a gang of coal and iron police tried to break up the picket line, even though it was on a public highway. They knocked down and severely bruised Mrs. Mary Bintz who was carrying a little child. Then her eldest daughter stepped to the aid of her mother both were arrested.

Arrest Union Organizer.

Other coal and iron police rushed organizer Wolcott onto company property, and then arrested him, for trespass. Wolcott, three women, and two young boys were driven in the custody of four armed guards in two automobiles to Washington, where they were arraigned before Justice of Peace Hazel, a former attorney to enter the office of the company-controlled local of Magnire. The Justice immediately hailed out by the union's attorney, and the waiting trial next week. The workers' petition has put these facts before the prosecutor and the court.

Gas Bombs and Machine Guns.

The coal operators are resolving to operate at the strikers' success. A recordly pro-company paper in the strikebreakers out to work. A fact says ago the Pittsburgh Coal and Iron Co. unloaded 12 strikebreakers from a special car at the company's coal barracks accompanied by 8 coal and iron police, armed them with gas bombs and machine guns. Eight injured, led by Dagnon, resident Fred Sellers, principal leader, informed the men as they passed that there was a strike on, and that they would be arrested if they went to work. They went back to Pittsburgh in the truck.

Sidery, Wolcott and the others were then arrested for trespassing, though they had not left the public road. The miners of Avella are standing solidly for strike. "We will die fighting," they say, "rather than be starving to death in the mines."

Infantile Paralysis In Martins Ferry; Health Commissioner Politician

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—There are 24 cases diagnosed positively as infantile paralysis, and more than two score of suspected cases in three Ohio communities.

According to reports in the state health department, twenty cases, diagnosed positively as the dreaded childhood scourge, have been found in Martin's Ferry, O., and one death has already occurred. In Uhrichsville, and Dennison, O., four cases have been isolated, and twenty other suspected cases are under observation. Both Martin's Ferry and Uhrichsville employ health commissioners who are not physicians.

Soviet Industrial Development Rapid Says Expert Here

Professor I. G. Alexandrov, the originator of the Dnieper River power project, which will be the largest hydro-electric development in Europe, has arrived in this country from the Soviet Union to study large scale hydro-electric power plants and equipment factories. Professor Alexandrov will negotiate purchases of structural machinery, equipment, including excavating machinery, and will examine 50,000 horsepower generators, of which seven will be installed in the Dnieper plant in its early stages. Professor Alexandrov intends to remain here about three months.

"Preliminary work on the big project is now well under way," said Professor Alexandrov at his headquarters at the Amtorg Trading Corporation, 165 Broadway, "and a force of 2,500 workers is operating. Excavation work for the lock system has already been and work on the dam will start in August. A temporary power house of 6,000 kw. capacity has been erected for the work, along with two portable power plants and other necessary buildings. Branch lines from the main trunk line of the railroad have been built on either side of the river.

"German construction equipment has arrived and a shipment of American equipment is en route. Other shipments made by the Amtorg will start in August and September.

"Col. Hugh L. Cooper, chief consulting engineer, has a staff of five American engineers on the job.

"A good beginning has been made, and there is every reason to believe that we can keep within the estimated expenditure of $70,000,000 and will finish the work in five years.

"Soviet industry has now entered on a new phase with a rapid factory development in progress and a large percentage of the notable achievements in electrical power expansion. I anticipate that American machinery will play a large part in the newly constructed industrial plants."

Die-Hards Try to Balk Move to Probe Vare Election Mess

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Orders to seize and impound the ballots cast in the Pennsylvania senatorial election last year were issued today by Senator Watson of Indiana, acting chairman of the senate privileges and elections committee to David S. Barry, sergeant-at-arms of the senate.

There is considerable doubt about the outcome of this latest development of the now celebrated case of Senator-elect William S. Vare, whose election is contested by his democratic opponent, William B. Wilson, secretary of labor in the Wilson administration.

The doubt hinges upon the question of funds to carry out Watson's instructions, issued after all but two members of the committee had approved the procedure in order to prevent the ballots from being destroyed on September 20, as provided under Pennsylvania law.

The committee has no fund of its own and Charles F. Pace, disbursing officer of the senate, is undecided as to his authority to honor Senator's order drawing the expense of impounding the ballots. Pace has taken up the matter with Senator Keyes, chairman of the contingent expenses committee, who is now at his home in New Hampshire. Barry is marking time pending Keyes' decision.

Try to Balk Probe.

The decision of Keyes will be interesting in view of the fact that he refused to countersign vouchers for the Reed slush fund committee last spring. That committee had several thousand dollars at its disposal, but it required action definitely extending the life of the committee having been defeated by a filibuster, Keyes ruled the committee was dead and could not spend the money.

After the most eminent constitutional authorities in the senate, including Senators Borah, Goff, Norris and Walsh, had held that the slush fund committee was a "continuing body," Senator Reed of Missouri, the chairman, put up $1,000 out of his own pocket to cover the expense of impounding the ballots. Barry declined to use the private funds and Reed appointed Jerry South, an attorney, to act for the committee.

Try Court Action.

When South went to impound the ballots he was met with court action. The court finally decided that the senate itself must pass on the question of whether the funds might be available under a general resolution allowing the committee to sit during recesses and send for witnesses.

AUGUST 4, 1914

UNANIMOUS for the Kaiser and the war credits!

The workers were stunned! It seemed incredible! Perhaps the socialists were arrested; perhaps they were barred from the reichstag; perhaps it was a ruse of the Imperial general staff, a forgery. But soon the damning facts had to be faced. The social-democrats had voted as a unit for the war credits.

That day, August 4, 1914, was indelibly burned into the mind of every revolutionist as marking the greatest betrayal in all the history of the world. The socialist leaders of the greatest party of the international had gone over to the side of the kaiser and his warmongers and had justified in the most loathsome manner the imperialist slaughter of peoples.

WHAT excuse could these renegades of who had covered themselves with infamy dare give for their betrayal? A few days brought the speech of Scheidemann, vice-president of the socialist delegation in the reichstag, wherein he proclaimed that the socialists were supporting the German government because it was waging "a defensive war against the black reaction of Russian czarism," and argued that socialists everywhere must defend their country against attack by foreign powers. The official organ of the party, the "Vorwaerts," and many other party papers declared that the war was being waged against "the blood czar, against Russian barbarism." Their most learned theoreticians cited Karl Marx, who in 1848 had urged a war of Europe against Russia. In the most shameless manner they perverted the opinions of Marx. They ignored the historical conditions under which Marx urged war against Russia. They did not explain that at that time Russia was the seat of feudal militaristic reaction and that it had helped crush the revolutionary risings that swept Central Europe. They overlooked the fact that the statement of Marx applied only to that specific and historically limited situation, to a condition that had long since passed and that it is a complete and shameless distortion of Marxism to try to apply it to struggle between nations in the era of imperialism the slogans of the middle of the past century.

When, at socialist congresses the socialists had discussed the impending European war, the war that had threatened for years and that every one knew must inevitably be launched there was never any attempt to apply the observations of Marx on Russia as they do in the resolutions of 1910-12. This was only a studied device by apostates to conceal their perfidy and their utter depravity as they grovelingly flunkied at imperialism.

CONTEMPLATING precisely the war that has come both in 1914, the international socialist congress at Basle on November 24-25, 1912, had drawn the correct revolutionary lessons from the Balkan crisis. It had recognized it as a powder magazine whose slightest spark threatened to inflame all Europe and the whole world and their manifesto issued on that occasion declared:

"If war threatens it is the duty of the working class and its parliamentary representatives in the countries affected bind themselves . . . with the assistance of the International Socialist Bureau, whose activity should be directed . . . to do all they can to prevent the outbreak of war, by the use of such means as they find most effective; these means, naturally, will differ in accordance with the acuteness of the class struggle and of the general political situation.

"Should war nevertheless break out, it is the duty of Socialists to intervene with the object of putting a speedy end to it, and to do their utmost to make use of the economic and political crisis in the fullest possible measure to rouse the common people and thus accelerate the downfall of capitalism."

Continuing, the manifesto declares that events in Europe then imposed upon the proletariat "most sacred" the duty to pursue its activity directed according to a general plan, with a maximum of force and energy . . . by proletarians of the working classes of the capitalist countries, particularly France and Germany, cannot recognize the existence of any obligation which would force you in the Balkan conflict, and that "the proletarians regard as a crime shooting at one another for the sake of increasing the profits of the capitalists, gratifying the ambitions of dynasties, or duties it for the glory of the secret treaties of diplomacy."

Two months before the Basle congress the German social democracy itself at its Chemnitz conference had adopted a resolution declaring as criminal the imperialist conspiracies of the German government. That resolution affirmed that:

"All bourgeois parties have entered upon the path of imperialism; they agreed unanimously to satisfy all demands of the army and navy. Social Democracy alone has carried on persistently against all imperialist and jingoistic aspirations wherever they made their appearance, and, on the other hand, unflinchingly creates the international solidarity of the proletariat which nowhere cherishes hostile feelings for other nations."

Even as late as July 25, 1914, the executive committee of the German Social Democracy met to discuss the war menace and on that date they issued the last anti-war proclamation that was ever to come from their pens. That manifesto in full is as follows:

"The fields of the Balkans are not yet dry from the blood of those who have been massacred by thousands; the ruins of the devastated town are still smoking; unemployed hungry men, widowed women and orphaned children still cover the face of the country. Yet once more the war-fury, unchained by Austrian imperialism, is setting out to bring death and destruction over the whole of Europe.

"Though we also condemn the behavior of the Great Servia nationalist, the frivolous war-provocation of the Austro-Hungarian government calls for the sharpest protest. For the demands of this government are more brutal than have ever been put to an independent state in the world's history, and can only be intended deliberately to provoke war.

"In the name of humanity and civilization the class-conscious proletariat of Germany raises a flaming protest against this criminal behavior of the war provokers. It imperiously demands of the German government that it use its influence with the Austrian government for the preservation of peace, and, if the shameful war cannot be prevented, to abstain from any armed interference. Not one drop of a German soldier's blood shall be sacrificed for the lust of power of the Austrian rulers and to the imperialist profit-interests.

"Comrades, we appeal to you to express at mass meetings without delay the German proletariat's firm determination to maintain peace. A solemn hour has come, more serious than any during the last few decades. Danger is approaching! The world-war is threatening! The ruling classes who in time of peace sow you, despise you and exploit you, would misuse you as food for cannon. Everywhere must sound in the ears of those in power: 'We will have no war! Down with war! Long live the international brotherhood of peoples.'"

TEN days after these lines were written the great betrayal took place. The identical war they condemned and declared was not worth the shedding of a single drop of proletarian blood was defended by every socialist member of the German parliament, bound by party discipline to the decision of the majority members.

Whatever we may thing of the theoretical insufficiency of the proclamation of the executive its inability properly to estimate the magnitude of the great imperialist forces then moving toward war there can be no question that even at that late date there was no thought of a "defensive war against czarism." That was the cloak with which the traitors concealed their policy of August 4th, went over completely into the camp of the imperialists. The final anti-war proclamation shows one thing at least that whatever may have been the nationalist jingoistic tendencies of certain leaders, they did not dare openly to scorn all the proletariat of Germany until the war was at hand and they had the aid of the kaiser's censorship to aid them against the membership they had so monstrously betrayed into the imperialist slaughter-house. August 4th marked the definite break with the past, the going over into the camp of the enemy, not only of the leading social democrats of Germany, but of the great majority of the leaders of the other belligerent countries as well to rally to the blood-drenched standards of their own governments. (Of the French and Belgian socialists we will speak tomorrow and pillory them along with Scheidemann & Co.)

NO departure from an accepted historical line, however great, occurs without certain indications that herald its approach. Within the international socialist movement there were small groups in every country that were sceptical of the calibre of the leadership of the much-vaunted German social democracy. There had been straws to indicate the direction the gathering storm would hurl the international and most of these straws blew from the camp of the German social democracy which exercised theoretical hegemony over the second international.

As early as 1906 August Bebel, the parliamentary leader of the German social democracy, in a debate defending the socialists against hostility to Germany, had said in contemplation of a war with Russia:

"You will find that in case of a war with Russia, the Social Democratic element, which you designate as unpatriotic and hostile to the Fatherland, will perform its full duty. Indeed, if we were attacked by Russia, whom we regard as an arch-enemy to all Europe and to Germany especially, since it is upon Russia that the German reaction rests, I myself, old as I am, would be ready to shoulder a gun against her."

This speech aroused a furore in the international and as late as the Essen congress of the German social democracy in 1907, Bebel defended it declaring that he spoke only in case of a defensive war. When asked by Kautsky—himself one of the most loathsome renegades and who during the world war covered his infamy with most vile perversions of Marxism—how we could determine whether a war was defensive or not Bebel replied:

"Well, it would be sad if today, when larger and larger circles of people are interested in politics from day to day, we could not judge in each particular case whether it was an aggressive war or not. A deception in such a matter might have been possible in the seventies, but it is no longer possible today."

Thus August Bebel, the battle-scarred veteran of the second international turned his back on his own past, when, in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71, he and Wilhelm Liebknecht, abstained from voting the war credits and went to prison for the working class.

The low political trickster and mountebank, Phillip Scheidemann, and his associate, Suedekum, Richard Fischer and Albert Suedekum, the unspeakable infamy had indicated on other occasions the fact that they placed the "Fatherland" above the interests of the proletariat.

TODAY, thirteen years after, when new wars are being waged by the imperialists—none of the last war and more gigantic wars threatened there are still valuable lessons that we must learn from August 4th. In fact we can never exhaust the lessons to be derived therefrom.

No one expects the impossible and no one today embraces the illusion that a revolutionary situation is likely to develop simultaneously with the outbreak of war, any more than it existed in Germany or other countries at the outbreak of the last war. But that is no reason why the fight against war must be abandoned and the shabby fiction of national defense embraced. The imperialism of enemy countries is not overcome by the workers supporting their own imperialist governments, but by the workers of each country waging the revolutionary struggle against their own master class. The socialists of Germany, had they followed the path of the revolution, instead of becoming renegades and servants of his majesty, Kaiser Wilhelm, would have voted against and denounced the war credits. That act alone would have given tremendous impetus to the development of a revolutionary situation.

Comprehension of the betrayal of August 4th is all the more evident when we recall that every advanced European country was faced with an objective revolutionary situation before the war was two years old.

UNDER the pitiful and lying pretext that governments are struggling for the very existence of war the workers were betrayed by the heroes of the second International. This fiction must be exploded because as other wars approach we will hear the same treacherous arguments. The facts are that at the outbreak of war after four days' grace Kautsky & Co. the government is weak. The slightest defection endangers it. It must have absolute unity of action on the part of the upper classes and subservience of the exploited classes. Governments at the outbreak of war only appear stronger, because in their desperation they strive to create all semblance of opposition. This is not a sign of strength, but of weakness and he who does not perceive that fact is no Marxist and has no place at such a time in the leadership of the proletarian movement. To argue otherwise, to proclaim the strength of the nation on the eva of war is not only false, but it paves the way for the most vicious wartime opportunism and treachery against the workers.

Haitian Workers Jailed by Order Of U. S. Invaders

WASHINGTON, (FP) August 3.—Their president and many of their leaders in jail, the Haitian Federation of Labor has smuggled a letter out of Haiti to the Pan American Federation of Labor, explaining the plight of their delegates who were to have attended the recent Pan-American labor congress in Washington.

"Our delegates to your congress have been arrested and put in prison by order of President Borno at the time they were ready to leave," writes A. Paul, acting president. President Perceval Thoby is among those thrown into prison.

"By cable of the 16th we sent you a message to let you know what occurred. But the All America Cables, by order of the government, held up our message with a note telling us that the government had established a censorship. We beg you to protest with us against the confiscation of the liberty of our comrades."

Want Congress to Act.

The cablegram which was refused transmission reads:

"Haitian association delegates to congress, ready to leave have been arrested with seven editors under pretext of offense to president of Haiti in dailies. Workers' daily salary 30 cents. Freedom of press and courts destroyed virtually by projected modification of constitution. Beg congress to raise protest against dictatorship in Haiti under which journallists are kept in jail for months without ever being tried, and all that under the American flag. Help Haitian workers by helping freedom of the press."

Machine Gun Nests

Open air meetings are veritable machine gun nests of propaganda in our campaign against the capitalist enemy.

From these proletarian strongholds, the machine guns of propaganda must pour forth a continuous rain of the deadly bullets of working class logic and argument, to batter down the walls of the present system of exploitation.

From these redoubtable fortresses erected at the most strategic points on the fighting front of the class war, before factory gates, in proletarian residential sections, in squares and public centers, the Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker will be recruited.

It will be the steady fire of the machine gunners which will break the enemy's lines and bring daily conquests for our army.

Forward to the attack.

Mr. Coolidge Doesn't "Desire" Another Term.

For a long time it has been difficult for the imperialist newspapers to maintain the Coolidge illusion—the idea that he was a thoughtful, silent, profound individual. The accident of Harding's death placed Coolidge in the White House. The myth-makers got on the job and began a campaign to convince the voters that the Down East pee-wee was a superman. The idea that presidents must, of necessity, be great men, contributes to the prevailing myth that the government at Washington is the real government and not merely the executive committee of the imperialists. The real government is not the president and his cabinet, or congress, and the senate—the real government is on Wall Street and directs the bureaucratic machine at Washington composed of governmental functionaries who carry on their work regardless of who comes and goes through the portals of the executive mansion.

An imperialist ruling clique, a class that must exert its energy to stem the tide of human progress, that exists as a parasitic growth upon society, does not and cannot develop heroic figures.

That quality is reserved exclusively for those whom history places in the forefront of great social upheavals, or who appear in periods of reconstruction after social crises. Imperialism demands not leaders, but mere glorified puppets. When they can no longer serve its purposes they are cast aside. That is what happened to Coolidge.

On every political question Coolidge has failed. His "limitation of naval arms conference" at Geneva turns out to be the signal for naval competition in such armaments. His grotesque antics in South Dakota proved to be no substitute for the deep-going farm crisis. The cynical contempt with which he treated the victims of the flood makes his name despised in the South. He and his secretary of state, Kellogg, have carried the policy of halting the Soviet Union so far that they cannot be used to reverse that policy at a time when the great oil combines have been convinced of the impossibility of the old policy of waiting for the fall of the revolution and have realized that in order effectively to compete with their great British rival, the Royal Dutch Shell, they must endeavor to get in on the ground floor on Russian oil. Coolidge's announcement that he will not again run for office has far deeper significance than appears on the surface. It indicates that the dominant forces in the republican party are preparing for a change in policy. One of the dominant forces is Standard Oil, which is already carrying on a thriving trade with the Soviet oil concern. New policies will be carried out with new tools. The Coolidge illusion is exhausted; the game is up. New actors must appear on the stage. Therefore the republican party will have to obtain another marionette who can be adorned with the trappings of a strong man for Wall Street's puppet show at Washington. Just as the "liberal" Wilson followed the conservative Taft, so the republican candidate of 1928 will have to be one who pretends to speak in behalf of the impoverished farmers of the middle-west and who in words at least has some consideration for the cotton growers of the devasted flood regions and who also follows a more "liberal" policy in foreign affairs.

But in the final analysis the successor of Coolidge, whoever he may be, will do just as Coolidge has done—jump whenever Wall Street pulls the strings.

Baldwin's Trip to Canada.

Stanley Baldwin, head of the British tory government of assassination, provocation and forgery, is "mid-summering" in Canada. Not for his health, but in the hope of reviving the waning influence of the "mother country." His speech Monday before 800 of the leading business men was an almost pathetic plea to Canadian industrialists and business men generally to abandon Wall Street and return to Lombard street. He faces a task that is Herculean. His platitudes about the integrity of the empire sound hollow and unconvincing in the face of economic facts. Of total investments in Canadian heavy industry just ten per cent is held by British capital, while Wall Street holds outright more than 31 per cent. Canadians hold 58 per cent, but more than two thirds of the Canadian investors obtain their short-time capital and most of their long-time loans from Wall Street, which makes Canada economically an American and not a British dominion.

Baldwin talked the other day about the "invisible boundary" that needs no armaments, etc., but he must have known that there is only the imaginary geographical boundary line, and that the invisible financial chains that bind Canada to the United States Imperialist chariot are too powerful to be broken by mere rhetoric, no matter how exalted are the sentiments in which it is couched.

Faced with the decline of the British empire before the ascendency of the colossus of American imperialism, Baldwin must endeavor to stem the tide, but his gestures will be futile—as futile as his attempt to outlaw the revolution in England by anti-strike legislation. The grim, inexorable economic movement that alienates Canada, and incidentally Australia, also paves the way for increasing discontent in the home country and eventually the triumphant revolt of the workers.

As for the working class of the United States, the spectacle of a British pigmy prime minister vainly trying to arrest the inroads of American imperialism should impress upon us the tremendous task that is before us in fighting our own insatiable master class. More than ever must the realization of the power of Wall Street impel us toward a determined fight against yankee imperialism.

Many trade unions, the miners, the printers, the building trades, the railroad organizations, are international and embrace Canadian workers as well as workers of the United States. Organizationally bound together in some of their biggest trade unions the workers of the United States and Canada, by repudiating their reactionary leadership which plays the imperialist game of Wall Street, strengthening their organizations through drives to enlist masses of workers in the labor movement and breaking away from the influence of the reactionary political

American Imperialism Finds Coolidge Incompetent

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

CAL, the one time cautious one, has quit.

Forgetting that his only hope was to continue the role of the "strong and silent man," Cal essayed to play the cowboy clown before the astonished gaze of the whole world in order to appeal to farmers, wiped out the memory of his veto of farm relief and convince the agricultural population that he was one of them.

A SPECTACLE which has exposed the small soul of a Coolidge and given concrete proof of his belief that farmers are persons of microscopic mentality, cannot be called pitiful since it has made anti-Coolidge vote grow where only one grew before, but it is certainly no compliment to millions of Americans, many workers and farmers among them, that Coolidge has been able to get by as long as he has.

But the glamor wore thin when it encountered the cold facts of imperialist politics—foreign and domestic.

IN the field of international politics the collapse of the Geneva conference has dealt a severe blow to Coolidge prestige. The failure of the conference to reach an agreement with Great Britain tagreement with Japan was of secondary importance in and of itself the most damaging aspect of this maneuver. The blow to Coolidge prestige is in the fact that American diplomacy at the conference was made definitely to place the blame on Great Britain for the inability to agree.

AMERICAN imperialism appeared in the role of aggressor at Geneva and this has served to disillusion thousands of persons who hitherto had fallen for the bunk relative to the "peaceful intentions of America."

The hostile reception which the fake farmer relief bill, made public by ex-Governor McKelvie of Nebraska in the name of the Coolidge administration, met with in the agricultural districts, and which Coolidge was forced to repudiate publicly, but keep on other blow from which the Coolidge doom was too feeble to recover.

These two major defeats in two important phases of government policy have been of such a disastrous nature that even administration henchmen could no longer "keep cool with Coolidge."

THERE is in addition to these two recent developments the incontestible fact that American imperialism, now concluding openly for world domination, and quite likely in the next five years to be engaged in a world war, dares not trust the public leadership of its government in the hands of a mediocrity who appeals as little to the imagination of the American masses.

Coolidge may have been cast-iron but he has also been clumsy. The imperialistic adventures of the Coolidge administration have been preceded to the American people in too raw a manner. There must be more finesse in entrusted with the honor and of Chinese and the bombing of Nicaraguans.

AMERICA, like Great Britain in the height of its imperial glories, must have a mission. "The cross, the cannon and the cash register" must be combined more skillfully than the cold Coolidge and the quivering Kellogg are able to. The crash of shells exploding among the huts of colonial peoples must be made to sound more like a hymn. America must be always doing good. Coolidge methods are too harsh, they lack the fine and feminine touch which impels the youth of the land to deeds of daring-do in behalf of empire.

STILL further, and connected directly with the orgy of militarism, especially in naval armament preparations, has been Coolidge's failure to give expression to the struggle for world power, is the reluctance shown by Coolidge to sacrifice his economy campaign, designed to appeal to the farmers, middle class and lower sections of the capitalist class, in the interests of an "adequate navy."

Coolidge is provincial in that he sees American imperialism principally in its relation to the Western Hemisphere. In Latin America he grasps quite readily the fact that Wall Street has the sacred duty of rescuing the populace from themselves, but he has but scant ability to visualize and popularize the wider world interests of American finance capitalism.

WHO will be the choice of Wall Street to give official governmental sanction to its domestic and foreign policies in this period of wars and revolutions?

Herbert Hoover?

Both have qualifications which our imperialism can use in a president. One has appeared as an opponent of imperialistic tactics, but only of policies—and even this opposition has never yet allayed into serious action. The other is advertised as a man of many-sided brain, tender heart and tremendous practicality.

OR will the choice fall upon Lowden or Dawes? time is in farmer-banker and the other is a banker-farmer.

Whatever choice is made by the oligarchs and their under-cover men, we can be certain of two things: first, that the candidate will be selected for the task of imagined ability to satisfy agrarian unrest, and second for his understanding of an agreement with the imperialist program of the general staff of the American ruling class and ability to present it in sugar-coated form to the American masses.

THE next five years probably will witness the construction of the Nicaraguan canal—the waterway which will double the mobility of the American war fleet. The struggle for control of the Pacific area will become more intense, the hostility of world capitalism toward the Soviet Union may well break into an open armed offensive as any time, the liberation movements of the colonial peoples will grow in power and the Philippines, under the influence of the Chinese revolution and the pressure of American imperialism may launch a real struggle for freedom, the hostility of Latin America to the encroachments of the "Colossus of the north" will express itself in more determined action, competition between American and European industry will develop into unprecedented antagonism—the class struggle in America will be acknowledged by ever wider masses of working class, the agrarian crisis will become more acute.

FOR such tremendous problems, upon partial and temporary solutions of which the life of imperialism depends, a Coolidge is obviously incompetent even when surrounded by skilled advisers.

In the expressive popular language of the United States, "he cannot put it across."

American imperialism, for the standard bearer of its principal political party, needs some one who can render better service.

NOR will this fact be altered if the Coolidge machine is able to arouse a "popular" clamor for its chief in the ranks of the republican party and pick enough delegates to railroad him the nomination in spite of his declination—a nomination which could be interpreted as an irresistible "call to service."

Will Stuart will choose then between an Al Smith, the second entry in the imperialist stakes, and a Coolidge which it is unable to rid itself of [illegible] restrictions placed upon [illegible] by law, custom and procedure.

Who Am I?

I am the guy that wore the finest specimen of chin shrubbery that ever provided cover for political bugs.

I almost got elected president.

I am so dignified that I have my pajamas creased nightly.

While secretary of state, Compers and I had a lot of fun making war on the Soviet Union, but when Sam died physically and I passed out politically I took a job as paid adviser of the Standard Oil company and the first advice I gave for my salary was to buy all the Soviet oil in sight even tho the workers and peasants of Russia recovered it from the imperialists.

The Strikebreaking Plans of the Coal Barons Must Be Met and Defeated By a United Labor Movement

The interference of government agencies in the coal strike up to the present time of a concealed character, is becoming open with the increase of sharp struggles in the coal fields—struggle which rank and file of the strikers are initiating in spite of the do-nothing attitude of the union leadership.

Altho there has not been much publicity relative to the activities of the coal operators, scattered news stories indicate that there is under way a concerted movement to replace the strikers with scabs and open up a number of mines in defiance of the union.

These attempts of the operators have been answered by the miners with picketing and the gunmen hired by the operators have attacked these pickets as in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Governor Donahey of the latter state proposes a conference of governors, operators and union officials of Indiana, Ohio and Illinois. His proposal follows the sharpening of the strike struggle in the Hocking Valley district. There is talk of the militia being called out and there is little doubt but that the conference, if held, will deliver some sort of an ultimatum to the union.

The Ohio operators nevertheless, thru the spokesman of their association, have refused to enter into any conference with the representatives of the union—an indication that the coal barons feel that as long as President Lewis and his official family do not declare a national strike, place the organization of the non-union fields first on the order of business and outline a militant strike policy, they, the coal barons, have little to worry about.

It is certain that the striking miners will not stand on one foot and twiddle their thumbs while the coal barons bring in scabs to take their places. They will fight back and sooner or later, as the actions of Governor Donahey indicate, there will be martial law in important sections of the coal-fields.

Now more than ever is there needed a clear policy for the conduct of the strike. The striking coal miners will respond practically to a man to a fighting program. Their previous record of struggle and the recent sharp conflicts with the operators show this conclusively.

To leave such a splendid body of working class fighters to fritter away their energy in sporadic local struggles when these struggles should be linked up into a national drive for the unionization of the decisive non-union districts is a crime against the whole labor movement.

The progressive elements in the United Mine Workers have issued a Strike Bulletin which should be circulated in large numbers in every coal camp and which contains a program which if applied will win the strike.

Meetings should be called by every local union and a demand made upon the officials that the whole union be placed on a fighting basis immediately.

Playing at conducting a strike as the officials of the United Mine Workers have been doing since April 1 is simply playing into the hands of the coal barons as recent developments prove beyond a doubt.

The United Mine Workers, the backbone of the American labor movement, can be saved from destruction only by open struggle against the coal barons, struggle which must be backed by the entire strength of the labor movement with financial relief and pressure upon local, state and the national government.

DRAMA

"Dracula" and Musical Version of "Firebraod" on Liveright List

Horace Liveright has assigned Oscar Hammerstein, 2nd, and Irabel Leighton to write the book and lyrics of the musical version of Edwin Justus Mayer's "The Firebrand," and Sigmund Romberg to compose the musical score for the opus which will be titled "The Dagger and The Rose."

Besides "The Dagger and The Rose," which will be a late fall production Mr. Liveright will send the New York company of the "American Tragedy" to Chicago, opening there in September. In September he will also present here the "Dracula," which is an adaptation for the stage of the Bram Stoker thriller published a decade ago. Hamilton Deane was responsible for the writing of the London version of the book, which is enjoying a run at the Little theatre there. "Dracula" has been Americanized by John Balderston, author of "Berkley Square." Bernard Dukes will come here from London to play his original role of Renfield.

Among the other productions planned for this season will be "Cover Charge," a play by Samuel Shipman based on the novel by Cornell Woolrich, who recently won the prize of $10,000 for a book of humor, "Hearts and Flowers," the Ben Hecht-Rogers-Wolfe Kahn musical revue; in association with Al Woods, there will be the production of the "Fanatic," a London success; a new play by Edwin Justus Mayer, and another new play by Patrick Kearney, adapter of Dreiser's "An American Tragedy."

"Half A Widow," the musical play following its try-out in New Haven August 8th, will go to Boston for three weeks and then try its luck on Broadway.

"The Kite Man," a comedy by Barbara Bird and Sheldon Mackaye, has been placed in rehearsal by Ben A. Boyer for presentation at New London with Stamford and New York to follow. The cast includes James Spottswood, Grace Valentine, Arthur Aylesworth, Clara Blandick, Sedan Jaap, Nadea Hall and A. J. Edwards.

The new Ziegfeld "Follies" began a fortnight's engagement at the Colonial Theatre in Boston on August 1st, prior to opening here at the New Amsterdam theatre.

HYLAN DENOUNCES BUS DEAL; FARE BOOST SEEN SOON

Replying to Comptroller Berry's charges that the traction tangle in Staten Island originated during Mayor Hylan's administration, the former mayor yesterday charged that the power cut-off was deliberately engineered by the Walker administration in order to pave the way for a ten-cent fare in all boros. Hylan's reply to Berry follows:

"The riding public in New York City will soon become aware of the fact that Comptroller Berry's action in refusing to O K the $175,000 power bill due to the Edison Company was a deliberate act calculated to put the Staten Island trolley lines out of commission and to prepare the bus riders in other boroughs for an increased carfare.

Ten Cent Fare Feared.

"Today the bus riders in Staten Island are paying the ten-cent fare. Tomorrow the travelling public in all parts of the city will be paying the same rate unless a mighty voice of protest on the part of the public is lifted against the brigand tactics of the traction barons who are working with the full approval of the Smith-Walker Tammanyites.

"Comptroller Berry knows that in 1921 when the traction interests in Staten Island quit because I refused to let them have an increased carfare that the city's action in providing travelling facilities on the island was an act of public welfare.

300 Workers Fired.

"Comptroller Berry knows that my action in 1921 increased the value of Staten Island property by millions of dollars and that the increased realty taxation has paid for our Staten Island action over and over again.

"This latest act of Mr. Berry's which threw 300 traction workers out of employment without a minute's notice, with its attendant hardships imposed on their wives and children, is an act of unprecedented callousness.

"Now as ever, Comptroller Berry is simply doing the bidding of the Smith-Walker administration which was committed to the ten cent fare. The Staten Island move is a forerunner of what the riding public in New York will be subjected to within the next two years.

Interview Silent.

Hissing that Miller must have been caught off the Hylan letter contingent, "Samuel Untermyer, the so-called pro bono publico gentleman, could, as pro bono publico investigation to ascertain what politicians and what officials, if any, are the real owners of the so-called Equitable company; have the company to be split up and who is in on the deal. Mr. Untermyer, will however, not begin such investigation as it is not in the cards to do so."

A meeting of the workers who were summarily thrown out of work when Comptroller Berry's refusal to pay the power bill was held yesterday, they charged that the city owes them three week's pay for vacations which they did not receive.

"Promised" Jobs.

A delegation was appointed to call upon State Senator Thomas Walsh asking him to urge their claims in this respect and to see if employment for them could be found in some other city department.

Wicks Talks to Newark Open Air Meeting; Cop Wants Permit; Gets It

The open air meetings of the Newark section are held every Friday evening at the Market Plaza, Newark, N. J. are very interesting and successful.

So far we have attended [illegible] anyone in the audience. At the last meeting July 29th, 1927, at which Comrade Wicks spoke, he mentioned the word "Revolution" just as a sound of seven policemen passed and the second stopped his speech and asked for the permit. One of our comrades showed the permit and the cops after seeing that the permit was all right, drew aside and held a short conference after which the speakers was allowed to go on.

After Comrade Wicks had finished speaking numerous foreign questions were asked him by a group in the crowd. One of the group asked this question. "If you don't like this country, why don't you get out?"

German Prince Won't Wed.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—Reports were current today that Prince Louis Ferdinand, second son of the former crown prince, is about to become engaged to Infanta Beatrix of Spain.

To Broadcast Speeches at the Sacco-Vanzetti Meeting This Evening

A meeting to demand the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti will be held this evening at the New School for Social Research, 465 West 23rd St. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Student Sacco and Vanzetti Committee and will be broadcast by station WPCH.

Arthur Garfield Hays, of the American Civil Liberties Union, Leonard D. Abbott, former editor of Current Opinion, Celia Polisuk, of the Student Sacco and Vanzetti Committee, Rose Pesoppa, Charles W. Irwin, of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee will be among the speakers. Prof. Paul F. Brissenden, of Columbia University, and Sascha Kropotkin, daughter of Peter Kropotkin, have also been invited to address the meeting.

HOLD ANTI-WAR RALLY IN UNION SQUARE TONIGHT

All New York workers are urged to attend the monster anti-war meeting to be held at Union Square at 4:30 p. m. today. It has been arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party.

With American marines in Nicaragua, with American warships in Chinese waters, with American marines at the Geneva "disarmament" Conference, with plans being hatched for a bigger navy, it is evident that the war to end wars which began on Aug. 4, 1914, was but a prelude to an even greater war.

Since August 4, 1914, exactly 13 years have elapsed and in that time greater autocracy has resulted, unemployment has become more widespread, attacks on labor unions and living conditions have been instituted and the danger of war has increased. The only beacon light in the period has been the growth of Soviet Russia, truly the workers' and peasants' republic of the Soviet Union has shown a real desire for peace and has resisted the efforts of the imperialist powers to provoke it into a war.

Among the speakers will be Moissaye Olgin, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Alex. Trachtenberg, J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne, H. M. Wicks, Bert Miller, Earl Browder, W. W. Weinstone, Charles Krumbein, Bertram D. Wolfe, Ph. Frankfeld, D. Benjamin and Rebecca Grecht.

Gross and Weisbord to Speak at Fur Workers Meeting This Evening

Aaron Gross and Albert Weisbord will speak at tonight's membership meeting of the fur workers at Cooper Union, right after work. All members of the union should be present as important trade questions will be acted upon. Workers registered with the International are urged to be present.

Charge Rabbi-Promoter With Perjury by Gov't

Samuel Buchler, rabbi, lawyer, former state and city office holder and rabbi promoter, yesterday pleaded not guilty to a federal indictment charging him with perjury.

Federal Judge Anderson fixed bail at $1,000 and promised an early trial.

Dr. Buchler's indictment followed statements made before the federal grand jury in the government's investigation concerning certain financial operations which involved Buchler and his church organizations.

"Dr. Buchler has been acting for twenty years," former Congressman Perlman, his counsel, said today. "His first public office was that of chaplain in Sing Sing prison."

Saenz, Obregon Mgr. Gov. of Nueva Leon

MONTERREY, Mexico, Aug. 4.—What may be the results of the coming Mexican election were foreshadowed here today when Aaron Saenz, former secretary of state in the Calles cabinet, and campaign manager for Alvaro Obregon, presidential candidate, was elected governor of the state of Nueva Leon by an overwhelming vote. He succeeds Geronimo Siller.

Arm To Fight Portuguese Govt.

LISBON, August 4.—Force made a raid today on a residence here and seized thirty-three powerful bombs. The bombmakers fought the police with revolvers and made their escape. The present government of Portugal gained power by a coup d'etat and holds it precariously.

Make This Anti-War Preparedness Week—August 1 to 6

Major General Charles P. Summerall, Chief of Staff calls upon the people of the United States to prepare for the next war. He says "In peace prepare for war." He calls for "an adequate defense policy." He makes ready for the harvest of dead men and wounded which the coming war will bring, by calling attention to the fact that "in the past, war has brought forth the most sublime examples of fortitude, self-sacrifice and service to mankind."

We, the workers, must prepare for the struggle which is thus plainly forecast. The attack on The DAILY WORKER, the coming prosecution by the Federal Grand Jury, must, under no circumstances be successful. To insure the defeat of the forces of reaction, of the forces which are working feverishly toward a new World War, we must prepare our Defense Fund, prepare it now, while there is still time.

Therefore we ask all workers to set aside this week, the week of August 4th, as Anti-War Week, during which to demonstrate their readiness to combat the efforts of the warmongers. We ask that you demonstrate this readiness to fight the new War Danger by your help to the GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND. You have your certificates. Use them. Build the Defense Fund that will defeat the Dollar Patriots.

Boss Builders May Not Run Both Open And Closed Shops

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 3.—According to a decision of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, contractors throughout the country will no longer be permitted to operate closed shops in one locality and open shops in another.

The decision states that the policy would be put into effect gradually, so as not to interfere with work now under way. The plan will be to call a strike in a closed shop if the concern refuses to give up its open shop.

The declaration was adopted at a meeting of union presidents of building trades international unions, presided over by William J. McSorley of Washington, president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, in the Thalfonte Hotel.

Woll Proposes A.F.L. and Amsterdam Divide the Spoils; End Fight

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (FP).—Strained relations between the Pan-American Federation of Labor and the International Federation of Trade Unions is seen in an A. F. of L. press report, just received in Washington, which reads:

A letter sent by the Argentine Labor Socialist Party to the A. F. of L. gave additional reasons for the refusal of the Argentine comrades to attend the Pan-American congress; it was explained that Iglesias, the secretary of the A. F. of L. demands use of the Argentina ambassador in Washington as an intermediary between the P. A. F. of L. and the Argentine Federation of Labor. "We see," they wrote, "that it was a mistake on our part to accept your invitation, because we are not accustomed to participating in labor conventions organized with the help of foreign ministers and ambassadors."

Matthew Woll, who holds high posts in the A. F. of L. and is [illegible] of Latin American affairs for the A. F. of L. and is spokesman for the Labor Monroe Doctrine that European labor organizations should keep out of America, is trying to compose the international misunderstanding, although it is not promising. He proposes that the A. F. of L. again join the I. F. T. U., if the latter organization will agree to cease its activities on American soil.

The recent Pan-American labor congress sent greetings to the I. F. T. U. and a Mexican delegate departed directly for Paris to attend the I. F. T. U. congress there. The Mexican Federation of Labor is negotiating with the I. F. T. U. preparatory to affiliating an Amsterdam delegation visited Mexico City recently to urge that step.

Millionaire Falls Out; Boat Runs Just as Well

CAHHEAD, Mass., Aug. 3.—The mystery of motorboat C-68, a modern "Flying Dutchman," remained unexplained today and there is no trace of John Reardon, the owner, who plunged out of Newport, R. I., harbor for the sword fishing grounds off Cape Cod.

Coast guardsmen in the local station would hardly believe their eyes when the ghostly craft, without a soul aboard, swung sharply across Dog Fish bar and beached herself near the coast guard station below the red and white clay cliffs here.

Worker Is Killed When Toiling Inside Chimney

Losing his balance as he worked inside of a chimney of the Van Norden Corporation plant at 2 Burling Slip, Paul Berlanger fell 180 feet to instant death yesterday.

Berlanger was working on a scaffold slung inside the chimney. Another man was with him. Suddenly Berlanger lost his balance, clutched wildly in an attempt to save himself and plunged down through the chimney to the basement.

Giant Jamboree at Starlight Park to Draw Record Crowd

Brooklyn is talking about it, Coney Island is still talking about it, Bronx is agog with enthusiasm about it, Manhattan is preparing to send the strongest delegation ever, to take part in it.

What 50,000 workers can do in the line of enjoyment will be demonstrated at the grand jamboree in the Starlight Park, 177th street on Sunday, August 28th.

This affair is going to be reminiscent of the European anti-fascism workers came to a Daily Worker Carnival, 15,000 to a Freiheit picnic, 20,000 to a Joint Defense Bazaar. The three most prominent arms of the militant working class are sure to combine all their genius and originality in making this the most spectacular affair ever held in the city.

Religion Head Smirched Name of Woman to Stop Credence in Evidence

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Aug. 3.—Reverend Ben Parfet's theme of David cult put through a fraudulent divorce decree here in 1920 to besmirch the name of Mrs. Esther Hansel, wife of Detroit with a false adultery charge, in order to evidence introduced by the state today in the dissolution suit against the cult.

Mrs. Hansel, Ben's former private secretary and now star witness for the state, was divorced by her husband on the charge of deserting it was disclosed today by special prosecutor George E. Nichols in cross-examining Hannaford.

Two days after Ben erected Mrs. Hansel and members of the John Hansel family from the cult after immortalizing them with fake warrants, according to Mrs. Hansel, Hannaford was called out of a vaudeville box with the cult band and filed the amended divorce bill with the adultery charge. Hannaford admitted this on cross-examination today. Soon after Mrs. Hansel received a copy of the decree in a House of David envelope.

Paper Box Makers Form Union; Friedman, Hurt By Cop, Not Well Yet

The Paper Box Makers' Union of Greater New York, which conducted the four and one-half months' strike of last winter, is now Local 17962 of the American Federation of Labor and is duly received as a federal union.

With the reorganization of the union the following officers have been elected: George Bridgeman, president; Jacob Merritt, treasurer; B. Friedman, manager, Cleofina Michelson, secretary.

An organization campaign is under way in the trade. Workers have turned out well at two recent mass meetings. Unions in other trades using paper boxes are giving active support and have formed a committee that is broadcasting a letter of support to the new A. F. of L. local.

The bosses' association, which broke the 12 weeks' strike, has been weakened by the competition of outside employers in the industry. Only a collective agreement with the union can reestablish the industry.

Friedman Still Recuperating.

B. Friedman, manager of the paper box makers' union, who was kicked and trampled upon by a mounted cop during the long strike of last winter, is still suffering from the effects, seven months after the attack. His spinal cord was injured by the kick.

Well, the guilty cop, rode over the sidewalk and kicked Friedman in the back. His only punishment was a change of beat, but he was soon sent back on the old round.

Philadelphia Workers Strike and Hold Meet For Sacco and Vanzetti

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—One thousand workers quit work this afternoon out of sympathy for Sacco and Vanzetti. Two hours later they gathered in an open space at 11th and Bigler streets to attend a mass meeting in behalf of the prisoners and listened to addresses by three New York speakers.

Shortly before 5 p. m. the meeting adjourned without demonstration and is now waiting for Governor Fuller's decision.

British Iron Workers On Strike to Enforce Fair Day's Work From Bosses

ASTON, England, Aug. 3.—At the factory of John Wright & Co., Aston, England, 450 ironmolders have declared a strike to enforce limitation of output. It was decided by the men that no one should produce above the amount that would earn a certain wage. One man, however, refused to conform to the rule, so a strike was called forthwith.

While the chairman of the management board of the Engineering Employers' Assn. asserts the strike is unjustified and that the trade union do not seek to limit output, the men claim that it is part of the rules of the union, the Confederated Engineering Workers' Assn., that the men should determine what is a fair day's work.

The Miners Are Demanding a National Strike

By J. S. (A Striking Miner)

IT is an undisputable fact that the United Mine Workers of America is the backbone of the American Federation of Labor; but if a member of the American labor movement would look up to the so-called official "leaders" of the American labor movement to keep the backbone of the movement from being broken then we the rank and file would soon find ourselves without any movement to talk about as far as the American Federation of Labor is concerned. I am not making this statement to disrupt the present labor movement but on the contrary to lend my voice in making it stronger.

AS we look over the American labor movement we see only one organization with a significant membership in the American Federation which is organized on an industrial basis, which is the only basis on which a union can prosper to day, that is the organization is the United Mine Workers of America. We can plainly see that craft unions were beneficial in the past, but it is just as plain to see that they have outlived their usefulness. But the so-called leadership of the American Federation of Labor, who are current, do not want the rank and file to see that industrial unions are the only unions which are any benefit to the workers. Green, Lewis, Woll etc. want to destroy the usefulness of unions for the workers.

WE can plainly see that their scheme is to turn all unions into efficiency organizations to insure the profits for the bosses. In order to make efficiency unions out of the present unions of the American Federation of Labor they must destroy all correct ideas of industrial unionism, if they are to succeed in their program, they will have to drive all the progressives out of the American Federation of Labor—which is absolutely impossible. Then in order to keep the workers under their control the henchmen of capitalism such as Green, Woll, Lewis, etc., will try to force the workers back home and many years by forcing the acceptance of efficiency unionism.

WE see that the leadership of the United Mine Workers of America has a good weapon in its hands but they do not want to use it? We have seen that the English trade union leadership lost the necessary weapon from the workers' strike but they refused to use it. Because in using the strike the rank and file get their hands they would not stop at that strike but would go on and the rank and file took the initiative. The so-called labor leaders saw a proper way to force a more militant trade union movement upon the capitalists in the form of a general strike. The strong trade unionism and militancy of the rank and file of the labor movement in England frightened the leaders of the British labor movement. The same fear of the rank and file of the labor lieutenants at the head of the American labor movement.

WE see even today the rank and file of officials of the miners' union are afraid of a national strike for the miners. This sentiment is everywhere in the union. Where there is no strike on, miners are working, and in the non-union fields. Everywhere the sentiment is militant and strike for a national agreement, local names, and no particular districts or locals. But a contract can be signed at one time for the mines. We see this sentiment manifesting itself through different ways. I will enumerate a few so as to show to what I base my argument.

In 1925 the United Mine Workers decided if a national strike for a national agreement would be better than the present policy of our union, the rank and file of the rank and file say YES!

This sentiment is expressed through the referendum. Locals are presented to the [illegible] of local unions, of which are suppressed by officials in the [illegible] bureaucracy. Many Mine Workers of America [illegible] them manage to remove the International Executive Board of [illegible] 22nd of July a resolution was passed by the seven miners' local unions demanding a resolution unanimously [illegible] the International Executive Board [illegible] U. M. W. of A. to call a national strike for a national agreement. No district or individual strikes in any district.

[illegible] obstacles to overcome with great [illegible] of the men. [illegible] and on strike [illegible] of their working con[illegible] the conditions they [illegible] are very bad. [illegible] would not shun the [illegible] national strike for a national agreement. [illegible] the coke region, but [illegible] next to the coke region [illegible] opportunity to talk to a [illegible] of men who work the

EVERY one I spoke to is of the opinion that if John Brophy was allowed to take the office to which he was rightfully elected that he would have called a national strike for a national settlement and all of the non-union miners would have responded; they have faith and confidence that they would not have been left out in the cold as they were left in 1922.

Today Lewis and his henchmen have not the faith and confidence of the rank and file because the miners feel that Lewis and his henchmen are not capable of leading the miners any longer, the miners sentiment towards them is that they have misled them long enough, they now want true leaders.

THIS fact has manifested itself in the last election of the miners' union when the miners who did go to vote, voted for Brophy and those who did not vote, because they saw Lewis steal elections felt it was no use to vote, then the Lewis machine voted them anyway also adding for themselves so many votes that they could not show where the number of members existed. More information about the miners' election can be had in John Brophy's circular of May 28th, 1927 to the International Executive Board of the U. M. W. of A. and to the membership, and in the tabulated report of the election in the union.

THE non-union miners are working under such conditions that I have my doubts as to whether the public would believe that human beings can live under such conditions.

For instance a man got a job in one of the mines of the coke region under the following conditions: If he would work in a place to put it in working condition; then he would be allowed to work in that particular place to earn his living. There was practically three weeks of hard labor in this place which this unfortunate miner had to agree to do with NO PAY. He knowing that this was the general conditions in the non-union mines, got down to work and completed it in two weeks time, then the boss told him to get to hell out of the place which he soon was forced to do without any appeal, and the boss put his brother-in-law in the place which was promised to this man if he worked for nothing the whole time required. Conditions like these are very common in the non-union fields.

JUST a short time ago, within the last three weeks, there have been several spontaneous strikes in the coke region. At Allison mine over three hundred non-union miners came out on strike, at Mt. Braddock over two hundred non-union miners, also and at other places there were spontaneous strikes, but still we see the officials of the miners' union pay no attention to all of this.

THE officials are not even trying to offer any help to the unfortunate non-union miners, but they are spreading this poison among the rank and file of the union. "We do not want the non-union miners to come on strike, because if the non-union miners come out on strike then they will come to the Pittsburgh Coal Co. and other coal companies' mines who are trying to break them, who trying to their mines on union have [illegible] Brothers can you imagine such low down rot, such illogical argumentation? Are we going to sit and allow the tools of capitalism to sell us like this? If the officials of the miners' union are not tools of capitalism cause, why then they are tools of capitalism unconsciously.

LET us all get busy and raise the following [illegible] Organize the unorganized. A special strike for a national settlement. Democratization of the miners' union. Organize a Labor Party. Get behind the "Save the Union Conference" of Western Pennsylvania. No efficiency union out of the present union of the miners, but on the contrary, to make the union a more militant union out of the present union. Force the officials to take up the interests of the workers, by bringing pressure upon them from the rank and file with the above slogans, by letting the whole world know what we the rank and file desire.

U. S. Operation of Muscle Shoals Nearer

WASHINGTON. (FP) August 3.—Reluctant as he is to "get into a place where folks can accuse me of being for government ownership and operation," nevertheless Chairman James of the house military affairs committee, in charge of Muscle Shoals, may have to report a federal operation bill to congress this winter. If a "satisfactory bid" is not submitted by December 1st, James says he will introduce legislation for "temporary" operation of the huge southern power and fertilizer project by the government.

Bidders, James says, are trying to get the power plant for a song because they will have to turn out fertilizers. The department of agriculture fears that the nitrogen-fixing machinery for producing fertilizer has become so antiquated that federal operation of the plant will give the department a black eye. Newer forms of nitrogen fixation are far cheaper, asserts Secretary Jardine.

Czarism Combatted Every Effort of Railroad Laber To Unite in Old Russia

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

IT is one of the largest buildings in Moscow—the home of the Russian trade unions and of the Profintern (The Red International of Labor Unions).

Here are the headquarters of the great trade unions that have been built up in the Soviet Republic since the 1917 Revolution.

One of the proudest achievements as quickly discovered in an interview with Alexis Amassow, the General Secretary of the Railroad Workers' Union, that numbered 1,067,200 members on Jan. 1, 1927, this year, compared with 891,600 members on Jan. 1, 1926, a gain of 164 per cent.

There are many reasons why this Railroad Workers' Union of the Soviet Republic today is considered the best [illegible] anywhere in the world. One of the most important of these is, of course, the fact that the railroad workers have a daily paper of their own, the Gudok, (Whistle) with a circulation of [illegible] per day.

[illegible] editor of the Gudok, [illegible] of "The Whistle" to the Profintern and The Red International of Labor Unions, in this same building that is now the headquarters of the Russian Communist Party and the Kremlin not far away. Young, vigorous, enthusiastic, and there were [illegible] other Soviet [illegible] and others he had small [illegible] and there were [illegible] a duplicate of an [illegible] World Congress of [illegible] walls of this beautiful [illegible] with much that Amassow [illegible] character.

Amassow had joined [illegible] to organize a little Railroad Workers' Club for several purposes only, in 1913. Amassow was steadily [illegible] and rallied to the office of the police who told that he would be arrested if he did not dissolve the club immediately. He lost his position and had to seek work elsewhere, which ended the [illegible] organization [illegible]. Amassow continued his [illegible] activities, however, with the result that he was arrested in 1916 and sentenced to two years and eight months' imprisonment.

The Railroad Workers took advantage of the revolutionary wave of 1905 and sought to develop an organization at that time. From a small nucleus of about 30 men, the members grew to about 50,000 but with the failure of the Revolution, the organization was subjected to the [illegible] terrorism of those years. It was forbidden and its members quickly melted away.

There was a different story to tell following the successful Bolshevik Revolution in November, 1917. In fact, with the overthrow of Czarism in March, 1917, the eager desire of the workers for organization began to manifest itself, once their chains had been broken. Just what happened will be told in another article.

Amassow gave me written answers to several questions, one of which will be published each day. The answer today covers the part the union is taking in the management of the railways. It follows:

QUESTION.—What part is being taken by the Railway Workers' Union in the management of the railways of the Union of Soviet Republics, and in what way is such participation expressed?

ANSWER.—The general relations between the managing organs and the trade unions in the Union of Soviet Republics are regulated by the Code of Labor Laws, as well as by the general and local collective agreements signed between the union and the managing organs, and at the place of work, by the internal rules and regulations drawn up by the administration and subject to approval by the union.

The leading staffs of the managing organs are selected and appointed with the direct participation of the trade unions concerned. The trade unions take part in working out the economic and financial plans of the managing organs in order to possess the fullest information on the economic state of such enterprises, so as to be able to give the best protection to the interests of the members of the union.

There can be no trade secrets kept by the managing organs from the representatives of the union, and whenever required they must furnish to the union organs exhaustive data on income, expenditure, profits, productivity of labor, and so on, and so forth.

The Collegium of the People's Commissariat of Ways and Communications is constituted with the participation of the central committee of the Railwaymen's Union. All appointments to administrative positions on the railways of the Union of Soviet Republics are subject to approval either by the central committee of the Union or by its local organs.

In the event of a controversy between the union and the managing organs on questions of wages and material conditions of the workers, such questions are either referred to a Court of Arbitration in the People's Commissariat of Labor composed of referees appointed by both sides, or they are merely submitted to the Collegium of the People's Commissariat of Labor.

The union and its local organs have the right, either regularly or when required, to summon the leading officials of the People's Commissariat of Ways and Communications, or the heads of the various departments of the service, such as chiefs of works, inspectors, etc., to furnish reports on their work.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKER

STUDENT MOVEMENTS IN THE U. S. A.

A. GUSAKOFF.

The movement of the American students is not quite as revolutionary as the students movements in Europe or in Soviet Russia, or even in Germany, in fact the students movement in the United States is not an organized movement, and has no definite political nature, and as far, as revolutionary character is concerned it could not be blamed for too much radicalism. We must understand that it is only a beginning of a movement which will no doubt in the near future crystalize itself, and take a definite form, a definite program and a definite aim, as well as a more definite organizational basis. We must therefore greet this still spontaneous movement of the American students, which expresses itself in various [illegible] of discontent among the students of one or another college, on specific issues which arise now and then, as the real beginning of a better organized movement in the future. At present we see only review the activities of the American students, which are of some revolutionary nature, and could be used as an indication of the awakening of the American students.

Military Training.

The first attempt to organize a strong opposition in colleges and universities has been centered around the compulsory military training to be introduced in the American schools. This was the first move towards a certain degree of independence of the American students. It created a furore, the deans and the members of the board of education were shocked, and immediately put the accusation on the Young Communist League of America. The supporters of this militarization idea, claimed that this is another trick of Soviet Russia, and many articles appeared in the capitalist press, in which the blame was put on every body, but the American students themselves. That has shown [illegible] things, which are of great importance and should be remembered by all of us especially the American students. One, the officials who have been confronted with this organized opposition, tried to make the impression that the entire opposition was an [illegible] foreign invasion, or internal disorder, but being swallowed up by foreign influence. Also that the students were afraid to go to [illegible] recognition to the awakening of American students.

Delegation to Soviet-Russia.

The next important factor, in the movement of American students was the formation of delegations of students to go to Russia and learn about conditions there. It is important to that such trips have been organized on the initiative of the students, and [illegible] or teachers or boards of education. Of course it was met with the disapproval of the officials. Such trips would result in two ways: first: It will destroy this anti-Soviet propaganda, the "red scare" [illegible] Russia has been created so artistically in the minds of the American student, as the minds of the workers, thru the special efforts of the schools, colleges, press and radio as other means of organization, and secondly: It might result in a campaign for recognition of Soviet Russia by the [illegible] which has been [illegible] and supported by [illegible] and also in a political awakening of the American youth.

Organization of Circles Among Students in Student Sciences.

[illegible] is also one of the important [illegible] of new ways [illegible] to the beginning of a [illegible] among the American students.

[illegible] brief review of the latest [illegible] among the American students, [illegible] opponents which [illegible] organized and supported [illegible] and should be considered as the beginning of a [illegible] better organized and more powerful movement in the future. [illegible] of the students [illegible] wave of protests, [illegible] the [illegible] Vanzetti [illegible] beliefs [illegible] a [illegible] justice and democracy, and a [illegible] movement [illegible] chains.

YOUNG WORKER STUDENTS PROTEST THE IMPRISONMENT OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

Box 43
Winfield, Wash.

Honorable Alvan T. Fuller
Governor of Massachusetts

We, the students of the Young Workers' Summer School of Winfield, Washington, unite with thousands of other students and citizens of America and foreign countries in protesting against the execution or further imprisonment of Sacco and Vanzetti. We believe that the following statements are more than sufficient to warrant and demand their immediate release.

First, the indefensibly long period of seven years in which they have been in jeopardy.

Second, the impression [illegible] of officialism that has been launched against the conduct of the trial by recognized members of the legal profession and by laymen of [illegible] repute.

Third, the accumulative evidence that show the conviction to [illegible] fair. It is evidenced beyond reasonable doubt that the strong radical opinions of Sacco and Vanzetti because of their nationality and because of their activities in the labor movement made a fair trial impossible.

Four, new evidence [illegible] brought forward by the defense upon the conviction, such as the Madeiros confession and other testimony [illegible] affidavits showing to the [illegible] on the part of the judge are enough in themselves to show the [illegible] of the two men, and the [illegible] of the judge.

For the above reasons and [illegible]

GOLD TELLS SHOP CHAIRMEN ABOUT UNION CONDITIONS

"Many workers who have registered with the International and are working in Associated shops are returning to the Joint Board," declared Ben Gold Tuesday addressing a meeting of the Shop Chairmen's Council of the Furriers' Union at Stuyvesant Casino, Second Ave. and Ninth St.

"The workers in the Associated shops are not getting the July raises and realize that only the Joint Board will sincerely fight for it. We have organized a propaganda committee to get the workers of the Associated shops back into the Joint Board folds."

Collecting Tax By Force.

"The scab union is collecting a 2% International tax and $1 for the local scab union. The workers are not willing to pay, so the bosses are deducting the tax from the workers' weekly pay envelope.

"At the present time the Joint Board has control of more than 8,000 workers of which about 1,500 are unemployed.

"The scab union is demoralized. They are divided into three groups who are fighting for the control of the jobs the same way as the Knickerbocker machine and the reactionaries did in 1924.

"Our fighting slogan now will be back to the union and against the contracting system and the other evils of the industry."

Dry Heads Admit Many Unfit Agents; One of Them Kills His Chief

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Aug. 3.—Reginald E. Walters, a prohibition agent, recently broke down and confessed under questioning by the state attorney, that he shot and killed his superior, Hunter R. Stotler, in anger at Stotler's winning his wife. He said he had contemplated killing for some time, and finally got Stotler out alone in a car and murdered him.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Honest cleaning in the federal prohibition service will be completed before October 1, it was announced at the treasury.

The weeding out process will eliminate many agents and others from the prohibition machine and probably bring about a considerable reduction of the force. Civil service declares that a large number of unfit agents are in the service.

Tides Disturb Coney Radio.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Station WGBC, Coney Island, New York, today blamed its failure to keep on its assigned wave length to the rise and fall of the tide within 100 feet of the station.

The ebb and flow of the tide disturbed the salt in aquariums, engineers, the Federal Radio Commission which has threatened revocation of license. The commission suggested methods by which the trouble could be eliminated.

Stanton Wells, also cited for deviation, announced it will remove to New Jersey and build a plant capable of operating on the length assigned to WGBC.

Butler Snyder Loathes.

Miss. Ruth Snyder, on the death house at Sing Sing prison, has been sentenced to be executed despite her pleas of insanity and pregnancy. Lorraine, it was learned today, has refused to permit the child to be brought to visit her in the prison because she does not want her husband's relatives to be able to charge that Lorraine had been humiliated, and so gain custody of the child.

Negro Labor Tells of U. S. Conquest of State of Haiti

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 3.—The American Negro Labor Congress, in conference here, Sunday, July 31, has passed resolutions condemning the U. S. government's atrocities in Haiti and demanding liberty for Sacco and Vanzetti. The resolutions follow:

Resolution on Haitian Occupation.

Whereas, the Negro people of Haiti under their great and true leader, Toussaint L'Ouverture accomplished the first successful slave rebellion in history and established on the destruction of the Slave Empire one of the first republics on the American continent, thereby showing to the oppressed millions of the world that with the proper organization and leadership all peoples can be free, and

Whereas, the government of the United States has made of this sovereign republic a government by marines under which freedom is lost, native women and girls are raped and murder is the order of the day, and

Whereas, our brothers and sisters are groaning under ruthless, heartless, and merciless taskmasters, be it

Resolved that we in Negro Conference at the Wigan's Christian Alliance Hall under the auspices of the Philadelphia Council, American Negro Labor Congress, Sunday, July 31st, 1927 demand that the government of the United States immediately withdraw all armed forces from Haiti and permit the Haitians to govern themselves as they wish; and be it further

Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Secretary Kellogg, Senator Borah, Senator King and the press.

Sacco-Vanzetti Resolution

Whereas, all the evidence in the Sacco-Vanzetti trial point to a frame up against Sacco and Vanzetti, two class conscious workingclass leaders, and

Whereas, the whole atmosphere surrounding their trial reflected against the operation of justice in their case, and

Whereas, it is evident that these men were convicted because of their service to the workers rather than for the alleged crime of which they were accused; and

Whereas, Judge Thayer, who marked prejudice against the defendants which made his trial a mockery, is the judge in the case; and

Whereas, the governor's committee, justice revealed in this case is causing a large number of people to lose confidence and respect in the capitalist system of Massachusetts thereby increasing disrespect for law and respect for it

Resolved that we in Joint Conference in the Women's Christian Alliance Hall under the auspices of the Philadelphia Council, American Negro Labor Congress, Sunday, July 31, 1927 demand the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti, the two workers of class consciousness, and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Governor Fuller and the press.

Dirigible Is King of Air, States Amundsen Who Is Now in Moscow

MOSCOW, Aug. 3.—Roald Amundsen, the Arctic explorer, is in Moscow and announces by radio from Leningrad:

"At the present time the dirigible is far superior and is capable of long flights than the airplane which is liable to crash at the slightest imperfection," said Amundsen.

"I doubt if a transatlantic airplane service would pay, nor recover the limited passenger and freight capacity of airplanes and because of confidence dirigibles are safer.

"Lord Amundsen says that he personally he is through with flying. He believes that a transpolar dirigible service line is possible and that from England to Japan by way of the Arctic Circle and Alaska are practical."

Giant Jamboree at Coney Island Will Draw Record Crowd

Brooklyn is talking about it. Coney Island is wild about it. Bronx is agog with enthusiasm about it. Manhattan is preparing to send the strongest delegation ever, to take part in it.

What August workers can do in the line of enjoyment will be demonstrated at the grand jamboree in the Starlight Park, 175th street on Sunday, August 28th.

This affair is going to be tremendous. Five European march groups, 20,000 to a Freiheit parade, 20,000 to a Daily Worker parade, the three most prominent arms of the militant working class are sure to combine all their genius and originality in making this the most spectacular affair ever held in the city.

Two Witnesses.

Two witnesses were called by the bosses association. Morris Rothman, a clerk of the association and Benjamin Goldberg of the Hogo Dress Co. who claimed that the union had picketed the shop and used violence against scabs. Their evidence was so unconvincing that Philip Wattenberg, attorney for the union did not even cross examine them.

The hearing was adjourned until August 9, at 2 p. m.

Cases Dismissed.

The tattered and fourteen pockets appeared before Magistrate Brodsky in Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning. Half of them charged that the police suspended sentence. They had been arrested several weeks ago and had their cases postponed until yesterday.

Five of the seven right wing gangsters who brutally beat up four strikers over a month ago will have a hearing in Jefferson Market Court this morning.

The union strikers who attacked Aaron Gross will appear in the same court tomorrow.

Big Chicago Meeting

CHICAGO, August 2.—Over the head of the Chicago Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union the Zeigman-Fitzpatrick clique called a meeting last night at Schoenhofen Hall to which it invited all members of the union.

The joint board urged all union members to attend and what was planned as a right wing rally was turned into a demonstration against the policy of the militant leadership of the organization.

The well attended meeting was opened by Vice-President Salvatore Ninfo who acted as temporary chairman. Disappointed at the large attendance of progressive workers he speedily made a few opening remarks. He devoted his short speech to finding excuses for the right wing disgraceful policy.

John Fitzpatrick, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, was then introduced as permanent chairman of the gathering. A variety of suggestions were submitted for the solution of the crisis in the needle trades.

The chief suggestions were to the effect that the whole and dressmakers do not want any unprincipled Progressives and McGrathys to interfere with their work up to date.

Levine and Sigman, board leaders, had to appear to the mongrel workers to give the union Fitzpatrick line.

The only sensible motion put by the right wing was by David Dubinsky, manager of the cutters local of New York. When Dubinsky was asked to explain the working System, manager of the Chicago edition of the Daily Forward appeared as the platform. The usual two speech fest another round of [illegible] and kisses.

Dubinsky spoke against the lockout of the Chicago Joint Board and said that the trial committee would shortly pass out its decision thru the press. Also that those workers who would refuse to sign the "new agreement" of support for Sigman would be barred from the ballot in the coming election. He intimated that only those who support the right wing machine would be allowed to run, altho the overwhelming majority of the membership are supporters of the left wing, are opposed to the policy of Sigman.

Manager Levine was the next speaker. When he was introduced the assembled workers cheered for over ten minutes. He told of the accomplishments of the union under the leadership of the present progressive joint board and asked the right wing why they omit mentioning the achievements of the joint board when they were attacking the left wing.

"If any one is guilty," he continued, "It is Sigman and those of you who support him. You have broken up the New York union and now you are trying to do the same thing here, but ou will not succeed."

Coler To Be Ousted Under Tammany Plan

Commissioner Bird S. Coler is being groomed for the political chute, Mayor Walker is the author of a scheme that will certainly oust the municipal czar of Poverty Welfare. We are announced on Friday that he has authorized Commissioner of Accounts Hagedorn to conduct a searching inquiry into all city hospitals. This is an outgrowth of the Walker hearing charges of unsanitary conditions in the Kings County Hospital.

The report on conditions at the Kings County Hospital is completed but will not be made public until all the data is in from other city hospitals.

CONTEMPT CASE AGAINST DRESS UNION IS WEAK

The attempt of the Dress Manufacturers Association to send the leaders of the Cloak and Dressmakers Joint Board to jail for violating an injunction prohibiting picketing did not gain very much strength at the first day of the hearing.

Appearing before Murray Hulbert, referee, appointed by Judge Erlanger, the bosses attempted to prove that the union had picketed the Hogo Dress Shop in violation of the injunction issued by Judge John H. Tierney on April 28th.

Two Witnesses.

The Miners Are Demanding a National Strike

By J. S. (A Striking Miner)

It is an undispensable fact that the United Mine Workers of America is the backbone of the American Federation of Labor, but it a member of the American labor movement would look up to the shameful official "leaders" of the American labor movement to keep the backbone of the movement from being broken then we the rank and file would soon find ourselves without any movement to talk about as far as the American Federation of Labor is concerned. I am not making this statement to disrupt the present labor movement but on the contrary to lend my voice in making it stronger.

As we look over the American labor movement we see only one organization with a significant membership in the American Federation which is organized on an industrial basis, which is the only basis on which a union can prosper today, that one organization is the United Mine Workers of America. We can clearly see that craft unions were beneficial in the past, but it is just as plain to see that they have outlived their usefulness but the so called leadership of the American Federation of Labor, who are autocratic in that they want the rank and file to do as that industrial unions are the only unions which are any benefit to the workers. Green, Lewis, Woll and Co. very well know the usefulness of unions for the workers.

We can plainly see that their scheme is to turn all unions into effete organizations such as unite the present for the bosses. In order to make their scheme a success out of the present unions of the American Federation of Labor, who are autocratic in that they want the rank and file to do as that all correct ideas of industrial unionism if they are to succeed in their program, they will have to drive all the progressives out of the American Federation of Labor—which as already impossible. Then in order to keep the workers under control the here heads of capitalism such as Green, Woll, Lewis, etc., will try to force the workers back into, and many years by forcing the autocratic efficiency methods.

We see that the leaders of the United Mine Workers of America is a good weapon in the hands but they do not want to use it. We have in that the English trade union leadership had the necessary weapon to win the miners strike but they refused to use it. Because in using the power which the rank and file put into their hands they would have to the world that the strike in hand, the rank and file took the initiative, and the so-called labor leaders followed. There is no other way to fight. The fighting, militant trade unionism is an old and proved method and as we saw the capitalists form the weapon of Employers' Associations for enforcements, when the capitalists in this country or the world to destroy all militant trade unionism and they have the full support of the whole head of the American labor movement, the same as the British capitalists have the labor lieutenants of the head of the English labor movement.

We see again today the rank and file urging the officials of the miners' union to call a national strike for a national agreement but the movement is practically stalled where the mines, unorganized mines where there is a strike, where the union mines are working, in the anthracite, and in the non-union areas. Everywhere the sentiment is for a national strike for a national settlement for all miners, and for a separate agreement with districts or individuals. The miners want a national strike to expire at one time for all the miners. We see this sentiment manifesting itself through different ways. I will enumerate a few so as to show on what I base my argument.

1.—If a member of the United Mine Workers is picked of a national strike for a national settlement would be better than to have the action of our union, the great majority of the rank and file would say YES.

2.—The sentiment as expressed through resolutions which are presented to the meetings of local unions, of which most are suppressed by officials who are paid by the bureaucracy of the United Mine Workers of America, but we can plainly manage to reach the International Executive Board of the miners' union. I say this because only by the good of July 4 greeting held in the seven miners' local unions passed a resolution unanimously requesting the International Executive Board of the U. M. W. of A. to call a national strike for a national settlement. No district or individual settlement.

3.—Through spontaneous strikes which are attended by thousands of miners, who are brought to practically a standstill in the Connellsville Coke Region which is a non-union district.

I WISH enumerate a few instances to show the willingness of the non-union miners to join in a strike or a letter-in other words existing conditions, because the conditions they have at the present time are very bad, but state the miners are not for the sentiment of a national strike for a national settlement in the coke region, but as I have just said the coke region I have the opportunity to talk to a great number of men who work there.

EVERY one unionist that I spoke to is of the opinion that if John Brophy was allowed to take the office to which he was rightfully elected that he would have called a national strike for a national settlement and all of the non-union miners would have responded; they have faith and confidence that they would not have been left out in the cold as they were left in 1922.

Today Lewis and his henchmen have not the faith and confidence of the rank and file because the miners feel that Lewis and his henchmen are not capable of leading the miners any longer, the miners' sentiment towards them is that they have misled them long enough, they now want true leaders.

THIS fact has manifested itself in the last election of the miners' union when the miners who did put the vote, voted for Brophy and the ones who did not vote, because they saw Lewis steal elections felt it was no use to vote; then the Lewis machine voted them anyway also stealing for themselves six times votes that they could not show where the number of members existed. More information about the honest election can be had in John Brophy's circular of May 28th, 1927 to the International Executive Board of the U. M. W. of A. and to the membership, and in the tabulated report of the election in the union.

THE nonunion miners are working under such conditions that I have my doubts as to whether the public would believe that human beings can live under such conditions.

For instance a man got a job in one of the mines of the coke region under the following conditions. If he would work in a place 32 inches of coking coal then he would be able to work in that particular place to earn his wages. The work is practically three weeks of hard labor in the place which the unfortunate miner had to agree to do with NO PAY. He knowing that this was the general conditions in the non-union mines went down to work and completed it in two weeks time, then the boss took him to get to haul out of the place which the man was forced to do without any appeal, and the boss put his brother-in-law in the place which was necessary to this man if he worked. For nothing the whole time remained. Conditions like these are very common in the non-union fields.

JUST a short time ago, within the last three weeks, there have been several spontaneous strikes in the coke region. At the Allison mine over three hundred nonunion miners came out on strike, at Mt. Braddock over two hundred nonunion miners came out and at other places there are spontaneous strikes. But when we see the officials of the miners' union paying no attention to all of this.

THE officials are not even trying to offer any help to these nonunion miners, but they are secretly using this unrest among the rank and file of the union. "We do not want the non-union miners to come out on strike, because if the non-union miners come out on strike then they will come to the Pittsburgh Coal Co. and other coal companies' mines who are trying to break the union when their mines, on union places before Brothers can you help us, we are shut down out, such illogical arguments. Are we going to sit and allow the tools of capitalism to sell us like this. If the officials of the miners' union are not tools of capitalism consciously then they are tools of capitalism unconsciously.

LET us all get busy and raise the following issues. Organize the unorganized. A call for a strike for a national settlement. Democratization of the miners' union. Organize a Labor Party. Get behind the Miners' Relief Conference of Western Pennsylvania. No efficiency union out of the present union of the miners, but on the contrary, to make the union a more militant union. Out of the Green union. Force the officials to look to the interests of the workers, by bringing pressure upon them from the rank and file with the above slogans by letting the whole world know what we the rank and file desire.

U. S. Operation of Muscle Shoals Nearer

WASHINGTON, (FP) August 3. Reluctant as he is to "get into a place where folks can accuse one of being for government ownership and operation," nevertheless Chairman James of the house military affairs committee, in charge of Muscle Shoals, may have to report a federal operation bill to congress this winter if a "satisfactory bid" is not submitted by December 1st, James says he will introduce legislation for "temporary" operation of the huge southern power and fertilizer project by the government.

Bidders, James says, are trying to get the power plant for a song because they will have to turn out fertilizers. The department of agriculture fears that the nitrogen-fixing machinery for producing fertilizer has become outmoded that federal operation of the plant will give the department a black eye. Newer forms of nitrogen fixation are for cheaper, asserts Secretary Jardine.

Czarism Combatted Every Effort of Railroad Labor To Unite in Old Russia

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

In one of the largest buildings in Moscow—the home of the Russian trade unions and of the Profintern (The Red International of Labor Unions)

Here are the headquarters of the great trade unions that have been built up in the Soviet Republic since the 1917 Revolution.

One of the proudest achievements is quickly discovered in an interview with Alexis Amassow, the General Secretary of the Railroad Workers' Union, that numbered 1,087,200 members on Jan. 1, 1927, this year, compared with 981,300 members on Jan. 1, 1926, a gain of 104 thousand.

There are many reasons why the Railroad Workers' Union of the Soviet Republic may be considered the best economic organization of workers anywhere in the world. One of the most important of these is, of course, the fact that the railroad workers have a daily paper of their own, the Gudok (Whistle) with a circulation of 400,000 copies daily.

It was Victor Eln, the foreign editor of the Gudok, who conducted me from the offices of "The Whistle" to the headquarters of "The Union," in this same building that fronts on the Moscow River, with the Kremlin not far away. Here I met Amassow, young, vigorous, enthusiastic. In this he was much like most other Soviet trade union officials. Like all others he had small statues of Marx and Lenin on his desk, and there were large pictures of them on the walls. I noticed especially that contrasted with the room much that Amassow's office has nothing at all in common.

For instance in July, 1914, the year of the opening of the world war, there was no union at all of the railroad workers in all Russia. Unions were forbidden under the czarism. In that year there was not even an illegal organization. Every effort to build an organization was followed by the government.

Amassow had joined in an attempt to organize a little Railroad Workers' Club for social purposes only, in 1913. Amassow was quickly singled out and called to the office of the police and told that he would be arrested if he did not discontinue the club immediately. He lost his job and had to get work elsewhere, which ended the life of the organization effort. Amassow continued his organizing activities, however, with the result that he was arrested in 1916 and sentenced to two years and eight months' imprisonment.

The Railroad Workers' Union, to advantage of the revolutionary wave of 1905 and sought to develop an organization at that time. From a small nucleus of about 20 unions it quickly grew to about 50,000 but with the failure of the Revolution the organization was subjected to the brutal terrorism of the czarist secret police. It was forbidden and its members quickly melted away.

There was a different story to tell following the successful Bolshevik Revolution in November, 1917. In fact, with the overthrow of czarism in March, 1917, the eager desire of the workers for organization began to manifest itself, once their chains had been broken. Just what happened will be told in another article.

Amassow gave me written answers to several questions, one of which will be published each day. The answer below covers the part the union is taking in the management of the railways. It follows:

QUESTION.—What part is being taken by the Railway Workers' Union in the management of the railways of the Union of Soviet Republics, and in what way is such participation expressed?

ANSWER.—The general relations between the managing organs and the trade unions in the Union of Soviet Republics are regulated by the Code of Labor Laws, as well as by the general and local collective agreements signed between the union and the managing organs, and at the places of work, by the internal rules and regulations drawn up by the administration and subject to approval by the union.

The leading staffs of the managing organs are selected and appointed with the direct participation of the trade unions concerned. The trade unions take part in working out the economic and financial plans of the managing organs, in order to possess the fullest information on the economic state of such enterprises, so as to be able to give the best protection to the interests of the members of the union.

There can be no trade secrets kept by the managing organs from the representatives of the union, and whenever required they must furnish to the union organs exhaustive data on income, expenditure, profits, productivity of labor, and so on, and so forth.

The Collegium of the People's Commissariat of Ways and Communications is constituted with the participation of the central committee of the Railwaymen's Union. All appointments to administrative positions on the railways of the Union of Soviet Republics are subject to approval either by the central committee of the union or by its local organs.

In the event of a controversy between the union and the managing organs on questions of wages and industrial conditions of the workers, such questions are either referred to a Court of Arbitration at the People's Commissariat of Labor composed of representatives approved by both sides, or they are directly submitted to the Collegium of the People's Commissariat of Labor.

The union and its local organs have the right, either regularly or when required, to summons the leading officials of the People's Commissariat of Ways and Communications, or the heads of the various departments of the service, such as chiefs of work, inspectors, etc., to furnish reports on their work.

Tomorrow's question and answer will take up the part of the railroad workers in winning new economic achievements for the Union.

STUDENT MOVEMENTS IN THE U. S. A.

A. GUSKOFF.

The movement of the student is not quite as great as the students movement in Soviet Russia, or even in Germany, in fact the students as a body in the United States have no organized movement, and has no clear political nature, and as far as a revolutionary character is concerned it could not be blamed for too much radicalism. We must understand that it is only a beginning of a movement which will no doubt in the near future crystalize itself and take on a definite form, it definite program and a definite aim, as well as a more definite organizational basis. We must therefore greet this still embryonic movement of the American students, which expresses itself in such spontaneous outbursts as protest meetings the students have had, other outbursts of spirit in which are now and then seen, and the beginning of better organization in the future. At present we only receive the news of the American student, which are of some revolutionary nature, and accept it as such as an indication of the awakening of the American youth.

Military Training.

The first attempt to organize strong opposition in colleges and universities has been introduced against compulsory military training, which has been introduced in the majority of schools. This was the case in Minnesota, where the governor introduced the compulsory military training, despite the protest of the students, parents, the members of the board of education were shocked, and immediately put the declaration of the Legion of Loyal League of America. The supporters of this militarization idea claimed that this is an effort to counteract the influence of Soviet Russia, and many articles appeared in the capitalist press in which the illuminating put on every body but the American student themselves. That fascism is in all things, which are of great importance and should be remembered by all of us especially the American student is clear, the officials who have been confronted with this organized opposition, tried to make the impression, that the entire opposition was an artificial opposition, some sort of a foreign innovation, which is of no serious character, and of course, that students of the students will not be lead away by it, and second that they were afraid to admit the opposition is real American and proved by its fact that the bulk of being lead to defend the country in case of foreign invasion, or internal disorder, is not being swallowed are likely to say that they were afraid of such recognition to the awakening of American students.

Reforms in Soviet-Russia.

The next important factor is the movement of American students was the formation of delegations of students to go to Russia and learn about [illegible]

NATIONAL STRIKE TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI!

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE two labor organizers Sacco and Vanzetti must die, says Governor Alvin Fuller of Massachusetts speaking in particular for the capitalists of Massachusetts and in general for the entire capitalist class of the United States. Those who expected that Fuller and his labor committee would go into the facts in the case which prove the innocence of our two fellow workers beyond the shadow of a doubt, have an understanding of the class character of the society in which we are living and the perpetual war that exists between those who live by exploitation and those who exist by being exploited.

SACCO and Vanzetti are innocent of the crime charged against them as two union babes. Then, why this judicial murder? We might as well asked why is Tom Mooney still in San Quentin prison for a crime that even the judge who presided at his trial, the prosecutor the members of the jury and the perjured government witnesses, now admit he is innocent of? Tom Mooney is in jail because the open shop capitalists of California wanted to make an example of him for his activity in organizing the workers into trade unions. They almost succeeded in burning him in the electric chair. He was saved by the protests of world labor.

FOR those who may be deluded into believing that Fuller and his commission of New England aristocrats would not permit two innocent workers to go to the electric chair provided they were convinced of their innocence, it is well to recollect that the investigator sent by President Wilson to California to study the Mooney case reported that in his opinion Mooney was innocent, yet the lawless-bribed capitalists of California paid no more heed to his report than they would to the babbling of a half-wit.

WHEN the capitalist hangmen make up their minds to glut their vengeance on the workingclass and select one or more victims for the sacrifice, they cling to their prey like bulldogs. The evidence against Sacco and Vanzetti was the flimsiest that could possibly have been made the excuse for a prosecution. The trial was a farce. The judge delivered partizle speeches and denounced the defendants as slackers. The prosecuting attorney succeeded in poisoning the minds of a jury against them because they were foreigners and radicals. They were condemned to death, not on the basis of evidence of connection with the payroll robbery

Coal Company Chief In War With Union; Dead

NELSONVILLE, Ohio, August 4.—P. J. Merz, president of the Lick Run Coal Co., here, not content with stationing 2 gangsters armed with machine guns on his mining property, personally picked a fight with James McManaway, president of McManaway local of the United Mine Workers of America, and got killed.

McManway immediately surrendered to the authorities and pleaded self defense. He encountered Merz on the railroad track near the mine about eight o'clock in the morning as the coal company president was strolling home after spending a night in personal charge of his gunmen and artillery at the tipple. Merz was in an evil mood, and when he saw McManway, made uncomplimentary remarks about the latter's family, and

N. Y. MEMBERSHIP MEETING FOR CONVENTION DISCUSSION TONIGHT

THE District Executive Committee of the Workers Party under the direction of the National Convention Arrangements Committee, has arranged a general membership meeting for discussion of the decision of the Communist International to be held Friday, 7 p. m., at Central Opera House.

The meeting will be in charge of a sub-committee of the District Committee, of equal numbers from both sides. The speakers will be: For the Political Committee, Lovestone; opposition, Foster and Weinstone. Members to be admitted must bring their membership books. Members are invited to attend.

Call for New York Strike Tuesday

The following telegram was sent yesterday to all Sacco-Vanzetti defense organizations in New York City. They are the International Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the Sacco-Vanzetti Students Committee and the International Labor Defense and the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee.

"The freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti now rests in the hands of labor. Only overwhelming mass demonstrations throughout the country can save these victims of capitalist justice.

"We take the liberty of proposing to you and to all Sacco-Vanzetti Committees in New York and vicinity the issuance of a call immediately for a one-half day's strike on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 9, to be followed by a mass demonstration at a centrally located place in New York City, preferably Union Square. We are arranging to issue these proposals ourselves but, in the interest of united action, we propose that this demonstration and strike be conducted jointly.

"Fraternally yours,

"SACCO AND VANZETTI EMERGENCY COMMITTEE."

Free Sacco and Vanzetti

Declaration of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party

The decision of Governor Fuller is the final act in the series begun by a farcical trial and continued by the repeated denial of a fair trial in spite of accumulated evidence of frame-up. With the decision of Gov. Fuller no one can any longer doubt the fact that the workers can secure no justice from capitalist courts. Now only the united might of the labor movement can save its two valiant champions.

The demand for the blood of these two innocent workers is an unprecedented challenge to and attack upon the American labor movement. Workers have not been executed for labor activities in America since the Haymarket executions in 1886. The fact that the courts and those who control them are determined to murder Sacco and Vanzetti is evidence of the extent to which reaction is going in our country. The Sacco-Vanzetti decision is not an isolated incident. It is part of the entire campaign of the master class and its government against the workers and part of the general effort of the reaction to destroy our labor organizations and break all possibl eresistance to the world war which is being prepared and the reaction which is raging in our country.

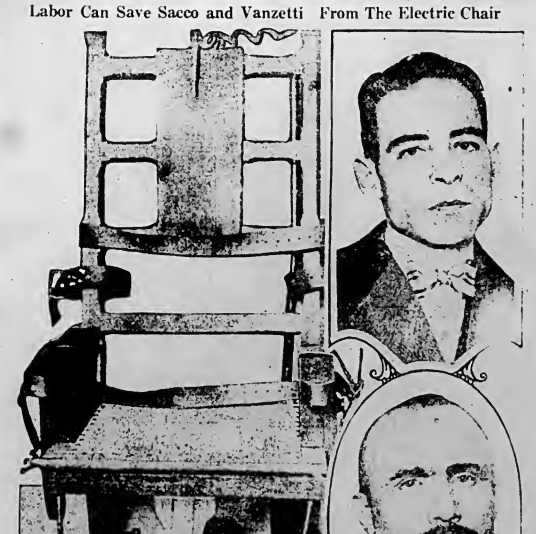
10,000 Workers Cheer United Action Plea

Ten thousand demonstrating workers in Union Square thundered "Yes," when they were asked if they would strike on August 9 in protest of the murderous decision of Governor Fuller who refused to free Sacco and Vanzetti. Militant banners flashed above the heads of the workers as they were addressed by determined labor speakers and wave upon wave of cheers greeted the demand to strike in a last minute effort to free the condemned workers.



At 4.30 yesterday thousands of workers began to pour into Union Square to protest against the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti as ordered by Fuller. The workers gathered about the four speaking platforms which were set up to accommodate the many speakers who were scheduled to talk. The meeting was arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party, the I. W. W., the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee and the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee participated in the demonstration.

Labor Can Save Sacco and Vanzetti From The Electric Chair

Demand for New Trial for Sacco, Vanzetti Starts

Habeus Corpus Will Be Applied For Today

BY ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press).

BOSTON, Aug. 4. Governor Fuller's violation of due process of law in that he held secret hearings of new evidence without the presence of the defense counsel is to be made the basis for a new appeal of a habeus corpus writ in the Massachusetts Superior Court here tomorrow for a stay of execution.

Entirely new witnesses were called at the secret hearings and the defense counsel were denied the right to hear the new testimony. Notably in this respect were Lottie Packard, the "Hat-rack" of South Braintree, and others who submitted testimony favorable to the condemned workers. At the time that the habeus corpus writ is applied for tomorrow a move will be made to the Justices Superior Court for a new trial based upon the existance of new evidence which Fuller heard during his secluded investigation.

The former police chief of South Braintree has also decided to testify favorably for Sacco and Vanzetti.

15,000 TAMPA CIGARMAKERS GO ON STRIKE AS DEMAND FOR ACTION TO SAVE FRAMED-UP VICTIMS SPREADS

Declare General Strike In Rosario, Argentina, In World Move to Free Two Workers

BULLETIN.

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 1.—Approximately 15,000 Tampa cigar factory employes walked out on a general strike here this afternoon as a protest against Governor Fuller's decision to send Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to the electric chair.

A meeting attended by more than 8,000 workers to determine the length of the strike was in progress here this afternoon. The same cigar makers walked out for a one day strike last month as a protest against the threat to electrocute the framed-up workers.

"Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die." That is the cry that is being raised by labor thruout the world.

Outraged by the vicious class decision of Governor Alvin T. Fuller which threatens to send Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to the electric chair on August 10th, workers thruout the world are organizing strike and huge mass protests to prevent the legalized murder of the two framed-up workers.

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 4.—A general strike was declared today in Rosario as a protest against the decision denying a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti.

Guards were placed today on duty at the American embassy and consulate here, as well as at the American club and American banks, to guard against anti-American demonstrations.

Sacco, Vanzetti Expected Decision.

BOSTON, Aug. 4.—Steeling herself to the task, Mrs. Nicola Sacco today in the death house at state's prison told her husband and Bartolomeo Vanzetti of Fuller's vicious decision.

Those who witnessed the dramatic event state that apparently the two prisoners had expected Fuller's action and that the tidings did not cause a great deal of surprise.

Three Prison Bars.

Defense Attorney William G. Thompson was with Mrs. Sacco when she told the framed-up workers about Fuller's decision thru the prison bars.

A conference in the death house followed, the lawyer going to the cell of Celestinos Madeiros at one time to talk with him.

What Mrs. Sacco said to her husband was known only to the attorney and prison guards and her words were kept from the world.

Leaving the prison, Attorney Thompson in no uncertain terms refused point-blank to reveal what took place inside, the condition of the prisoners, or definite plans for a new legal move.

Mrs. Sacco, dry-eyed, rushed to a waiting automobile, shielding her face from photographers with her hat. The party drove away. They were in the death house more than an hour and a half.

Sacco Grows Weaker.

Dr. Joseph McLaughlin, prison physician, reported Sacco growing slowly weaker as the result of eighteen days of hunger strike.

The Hand Raised Against Sacco and Vanzetti Is the Hand Raised Against the Daily Worker

American capitalism has condemned Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair. Their crime has been none other than that of fighting in the interests of working class, of seeking to organize them into trade unions to protect their interests, and of bringing enlightenment and understanding to the workers of Massachusetts. In the code of capitalist law this crime is unforgivable. Death is its punishment.

The DAILY WORKER, too, has dared to raise its voice against the open shop against the new War Danger, against the present social order, and for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. This is its crime. For this it is being prosecuted by the Federal Grand Jury. For this, the capitalist class seeks to destroy The DAILY WORKER.

But the workers of America will never permit their champions to be destroyed. They will keep up the fight until Sacco and Vanzetti are finally freed. They will keep up the fight to GUARD THE DAILY WORKER from the enemies of the working class, until the day, when the capitalist judges and capitalist governors no longer rule, and the working class is finally enthroned to manage its own destinies. On with the fight for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. On with the fight to GUARD THE DAILY WORKER.

Fuller's decision was "unbelievably brutal in its partisanship and even more brutal in the suppression of facts," statement made public today by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee said.

"The days separating Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair are few, but this Defense Committee will continue to fight for justice for these two men. Our faith in their innocence is undaunted. We call upon the millions of people throut the world, who have supported them, to come forward and help us in the desperate fight against the hand of the judicial hangman."

The committee in seven years has spent $300,000 for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, who were railroaded because of their radical beliefs.

Mrs. Sacco is reported in a state of collapse as a result of Fuller's decision to be railroaded her husband and Vanzetti to the electric chair.

General Strike Tuesday Says Union Sq. Crowd

Bright in the sunlight gleamed the revolutionary banners of New York's militant labor vanguard. Some of the banners read:

"Only a Protest Strike Can Save our Martyrs."

"Shall Capitalism Murder Our Fighters?"

"Sacco and Vanzetti We Need You."

"Governor Fuller, You've Had Your Word From Wall Street."

"Only a protest strike can Save Us!"

One enormous banner carried by four workers had inscribed on it, Read the DAILY WORKER. The Voice of Freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti!"

Call For Strike.

The speeches were short in length but to the point and in most cases clarion calls demanding a general protest strike. Some of the speakers were William F. Dunne, J. Louis Engdahl, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, John J. Ballam, Pat Devine, Bert Miller, William Patterson, B. Benjamin, Rose Pastesta, Bertram D. Wolfe, William W. Weinstone, H. M. Wicks, Roger Franczon, Sam Bon, Richard B. Moore, Chas. Krumbein, Philip Frankfeld, Al Schupp, and others.

A resolution calling for a united front on the part of all labor for the purpose of calling a national general strike was thunderously applauded. The resolution read as follows:

Text of Resolution.

"Whereas the farcical trial of Sacco and Vanzetti followed by the repeated denial of a new trial in spite of accumulated evidence of frame-up, and the crowning act of criminal injustice, the declaration of Governor Fuller, demonstrate that the workers can secure no justice from capitalist courts, and

"Whereas only the united protest of labor can now save these two class champions,

Call for Unity

"1. We call upon the entire labor movement to unite, regardless of differences, in a common struggle to rescue Sacco and Vanzetti.

"2. We call upon the entire labor movement to unite in a half-day joint protest strike at 12 o'clock on Tuesday, August 9th.

"3. We demand the immediate and unconditional release of these two innocent men.

"4. We call upon the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor now in session to issue a call for such a strike.

"5. We call upon the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to issue a call to all of their affiliated organizations for a strike at the same time.

"6. We call upon all labor organizations, regardless of differences, to endorse and participate in this strike.

"7. We call upon all workers to unite their forces to end the system of capitalist injustice and oppression and the capitalist control of government and to build a workers' government in the United States.

"Unite All Labor's Forces!"
"Free Sacco and Vanzetti!"
Workers (Communist) Party, District 2.

Weinstone Speaks.

In his ringing address to the workers at the meeting, William W. Weinstone, secretary of District 2, Worker's Party, said, "We will do everything within our power so that Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die. The labor movement, despite the Wells and Green's, has great power. It can stop the wheels of industry. Sacco and Vanzetti must not die.

Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers' School declared that the general strike is labor's last court of appeal. He said, "Five days from now every worker should stop working at the stroke of noon.

"Underworld Dicks."

BELLAIRE, Ohio, August 4.—Subdistrict 5 of District 6, the largest coal district in the United Mine Workers of America, has issued a statement to the public in answer to false leading propaganda put out by the operators. The companies have been charging the Ohio miners with violence, while at the same time deliberately going about to raise private troops, and to plant them in neighborhood where miners live, with instructions to so conduct themselves towards the striking miners that violence is bound to result. The officers of the subdistrict say:

"From April 1911 to May 1915 the Eastern Ohio mines were closed not a single act of violence was committed. History of coal strikes reveal that riots in coal mining communities are incited by the importation of thugs and steel pigeons by coal operators to intimidate the resident miners. If trouble occurs in the present suspension the responsibility will rest upon the operators, who have already made arrangements for the employment of a group of 'employment agency dicks,' according to the word being passed along the line in Cleveland's underworld, for the express purpose of starting trouble in Ohio coal fields."

Noted Scab-Herder.

We Do Not Surrender Sacco and Vanzetti to Massachusetts Murderers! They Shall Be Freed!

The Massachusetts murderers have unmasked.

Governor Fuller, brutally, coldly and contemptuously, has said that Sacco and Vanzetti must die.

The spokesman of the capitalist conspirators rejects all the evidence which has convinced millions of people all over the world that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent—and sends them to their death.

In a death cell close to those in which Sacco and Vanzetti are confined sits Madeiros, a convicted criminal who has confessed to the Braintree murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti were tried and found guilty.

Governor Fuller simply says that he does not believe the Madeiros confession.

Fourteen witnesses who swore that they saw Sacco and Vanzetti elsewhere than Braintree at the time the crime was committed, and that these two workers could not possibly have been in Braintree for criminal or any other purpose, have demanded that they be prosecuted for perjury if Sacco and Vanzetti are to be electrocuted.

Governor Fuller makes no reply except to say that two innocent working men must die.

Massachusetts capitalism, backed by the full weight of imperialist reaction, takes two human sacrifices. Plucked by powerful fingers from the ranks of the working class, Sacco and Vanzetti have been tortured for seven years—tortured as no workers in the history of the American labor movement have been tortured.

They were leaders of their fellows in the cause of labor.

They were arrested and tried as representatives of the working class.

They were convicted by class justice and they are to die because of class vengeance.

American capitalism says to the American workers:

"Two at least of your number we have and we will not let them go till they are dead by our hands.

"When we have burned the lives from these two workers who dared to challenge the domination of our class in Massachusetts, we will give you their charred bodies to remind you of our power.

"Our feudal forebears hung the bodies of rebels in chains on gibbets to terrorize the countryside.

"We, the rulers of the greatest industrial nation kill by more modern methods. We are able to murder Sacco and Vanzetti with the same current that sends the news of their deaths as a warning to millions of their class."

But to us the death sentence for our comrades will not be a signal for submission but a stern symbol of the need for solidarity and action.

We do not surrender Sacco and Vanzetti to the Massachusetts executioners. We do not bow to the mandate of Fuller, the ruthless pro-consul of American capitalism.

We say to the Massachusetts murderers that they shall never close the switch which will send the deadly current thru the bodies of two innocent workers.

Sacco and Vanzetti must be Freed!

We will show the ruling class of America that Fuller's death decree has united the whole labor movement into one compact army with no other purpose now but to strike the shackles from Sacco and Vanzetti!

We will show to the rulers that we know that Sacco and Vanzetti are chosen for the first victims in the onslaught on the whole labor movement which now impends and which is a preliminary to imperialist war.

We say that this blow shall not fall.

In every industrial center, from now until August 10, there must be continual mass protest—strikes, demonstrations, mass meetings.

The Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, now meeting in convention in Fall River, should take the lead in calling for action. It should call upon President Green of the American Federation of Labor to recommend a nationwide protest strike. Every mass meeting should make this same demand.

Every organization, unions, fraternal societies, cooperatives must be brought into the struggle.

The time is short but the issue is clear—the working class must tear Sacco and Vanzetti from the hands of their class enemies.

It can be done. To fail is to confess that American labor cannot protect its militants.

Thru Sacco and Vanzetti the Massachusetts murderers and American imperialism are striking a blow at the whole labor movement.

This blow can be warded off and turned into a mighty offensive against labor's enemies by the united and ceaseless effort of the working class.

Not Defense but Offense is the weapon which the American labor movement must wield.

Sacco and Vanzetti shall be freed!

LETTER OF WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY, DISTRICT 2, TO THE SOCIALIST PARTY ON SACCO AND VANZETTI

The Workers (Communist) Party yesterday issued an invitation to the Socialist Party to join with it in common action on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti for a local strike and united demonstration of all sections of the labor movement on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 9.

In its letter the Workers Party calls upon the Socialist Party to forget their differences sufficiently to unite in common action on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. The letter reads:

August 4, 1927

August Claessens, Secretary,
Socialist Party of Greater New York,
7 E. 15th Street,
New York City.

Dear Comrades:

Capitalist justice has struck its final blow against Sacco and Vanzetti. With cynical disregard of the world-wide protest of the working class and all progressive-minded people, the Governor of Massachusetts bucked by the rapacious capitalist class has doomed Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair.

By taking this action against Sacco and Vanzetti, despite the overwhelming weight of evidence proving them innocent, the capitalist class is striking a blow at the entire working class of America. The execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, if carried out, will be the starting point of a series of repressive measures throughout the country against American labor and particularly against the millions of foreign-born workers. The capitalist class will not stop with murdering Sacco and Vanzetti. It will continue its brutality and violence against any section of the working class that struggles for improvement of the conditions of labor and for a vigorous fight against capitalist injustice.

In this critical hour, labor is called upon to employ all the power at its command in one last effort for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. Through united action in common local and national demonstrations and strikes, the working class can still free Sacco and Vanzetti. However fundamental our differences are, at such a time these differences must not be permitted to stand in the way of common action on behalf of these two men.

In the interests of these two victims and in the interests of the entire working class of America, we propose to you that we take steps for the immediate organization of united demonstrations calling for the immediate liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti. We concretely propose the issuance of a joint declaration calling upon all labor organizations of New York City to stop work on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 9, and to participate in one mighty demonstration calling for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

We feel sure that if such a demonstration of united action is made, that it will go a long way to halting the execution of these workers. Quick and decisive action is necessary. For that reason we request your immediate answer to our proposal.

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) W. W. WEINSTONE,
General Secretary,
District 2.

3,000 Barbers Strike To Free Sacco, Vanzetti

in part: "The final verdict has not been rendered; the workingclass humanity and internationalism can yet save these victims of the capitalist class vengeance, whose only crime was that they were radical fighters in the ranks of labor."

Wilcks commended the barbers for striking and for sending a resolution to the executive council of the A. F. of L. requesting them to enforce action by organized labor.

Demand National Strike.

The text of the resolution which was unanimously passed by the strikers and forwarded by telegram to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, read as follows:

"Brothers: We, members of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, Local 913, having declared a two-day general strike on August 4, 1927 protesting against the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti, feel that the decision of Governor Fuller affirming the sentence of death to those two workers is an insult and a challenge to the civilized world and the American workingclass in particular.

Labor Can Free Them.

"We feel that organized labor has not done its best to free those two fellow workers.

"In many cases the united action of labor in other countries has saved members of the workingclass from a similar fate.

"We appeal to you as president of the American Federation of Labor to call a general strike throughout the United States and demonstrate the will of labor for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti."

The resolution was signed by Peter Midola, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of the barbers' union.

"We Must Fight," Says Fresca.

Norman Thomas, a functionary in the socialist party also spoke. Thomas declared that the day of the execution should be set aside as a day of "mourning and fasting."

Fresca, internationally-known radical visitor, said that "instead of preparing to fast and mourn we must prepare to fight." Fresca made fiery addresses in both Italian and English.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the assembled striking barbers:

"We, 3,000 journeymen barbers of Local 913, assembled in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum on August 4th, taking into consideration the unexpected and drastic decision of Governor Fuller affirming the death sentence against Sacco and Vanzetti decide to start today the agitation for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Insult to Labor.

"We are confident that the civilized world and the international workingclass will respond to the insult and challenge of the Massachusetts capitalists through its agent, Governor Fuller.

"We pledge ourselves to work and support with all our might for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti and to keep ourselves ready for another general strike."

Following the reading of the resolution the local's band played "The Internationale." Enthusiasm and militant determination marked the meeting throuout.

Police Are Vicious.

After the meeting the thousands of strikers swelled their ranks with friends and sympathizers and pro-

October 23, 1926—Following hearing of lengthy arguments Judge Thayer in a viciously biased statement denies new trial based on Madeiros confession and sixty-three supporting affidavits.

May 5, 1927—Governor Fuller begins his "investigation" of the case.

August 3, 1927—Governor Fuller denies Sacco and Vanzetti's death in the electric chair.

Thayer Refused to Act.

Governor Fuller refused to march to McCurren Park in Greenpoint. The line of march was down Myrtle Ave. to Bushwick, then on to Grand St. over to 58th Fourth St. and into the park. At the entrance to the park they were greeted by 50 uniformed cops who viciously broke up the parade.

The names of Fuller and Thayer were hissed thruout all the proceedings.

The arrangements committee consisted of John Tartanella, manager of Local 913; Peter Midolla, recording secretary of the union; and Samuel Levy, president.

The Pan-American Federation of Labor as a Tool of Workers Betrayal in Latin America

By J. NEVAREZ.

Workers Eager To Organize.

In Porto Rico we have the first instance in the history of Wall Street's crusade for colonies, where following on the heels of the Yankee military forces of conquest, and the military or colonial regimes imposed upon the victims of the coming of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy to the assistance of the Wall Street-Washington imperialist policy in its efforts to crush out every spirce of resistance manifested by the conquered colonials, and to consolidate the imperialist political regime. Taking advantage of the growing revolt among the island's laboring masses from the oppressive semi-feudal conditions remaining after the Spanish regime, and which are, under the new Yankee regime becoming more unbearable, due to the introduction of semi-feudalism, and modern methods of intensified industrial exploitation, the Gompers' outfit, with promises of salvation, succeeded in betraying the feelings of revolt among the Porto Rican workers, into channels suiting the aims of the Washington colonial policy. Having corrupted, with their bourgeois democratic phraseology, and won over the leader of the Porto Rican labor movement, (Santiago Iglesias), the workers were encouraged to organize into the A. F. of L.-directed Federacion Libre, by the promise of leadership in their struggles to sweep away semi-feudal discriminations, and to gain better conditions from their new Yankee capitalist exploiters.

The workers of Porto Rico, from the handi-craftsmen in the cigar factories to the unskilled laborers on the sugar and tobacco plantations, took advantage of the opportunities offered them for organization, and joined the ranks of the Federacion Libre, till it numbered more than 80,000 strong, and at the beginning of the war years, beginning in 1915, the entire working class of Porto Rico, under the lead of their well-known leader, became involved in a long series of strikes, extending into the year 1920.

Workers Raised Red Flag.

The workers of Porto Rico fought their exploiters heroically. They demonstrated great militancy, even to the extent of raising the red flag on the sugar plantations, as at Fajardo San Juan, Bayamon, etc. But the Iglesias leadership, devoted to the strike-breaking methods of the Gompers outfit, did not give the militant movement the militant leadership it needed. It did not voice the anti-imperialist character of the strike struggles, and thus permitted the heroic efforts of the Porto Rican proletarist to be crushed in blood by the strike-breaking insular police, judges, seabs and jails. They culminated in the tragic defeat of the tobacco workers' strike in 1920, in which the most militant and class-conscious forces were crushed.

Today the Federacion Libre counts at the very most not more than 4,000 members; the workers of Porto Rico are completely disorganized and at the mercy of the exploiters. The Iglesias bureaucracy sit comfortably in their swivel chairs, in the office of the Federacion Libre, holding down their jobs with an air of security. So long as they are loyal to the executive council their salaries are secure. They need not worry if the Federacion Libre has a small membership, or about the will of the rank and file. They hold their jobs from above, from the executive council in Washington.

Militancy Revives.

In recent months, we witnessed in Porto Rico a revival of the militant labor movement among the cigar makers of the labor-hating American Porto Rican Tobacco Co. Due to unbearable open shop conditions imposed upon them, these workers, rank and file members of the cigar-makers' union, forced a strike which lasted more that six months, and was settled favorably for the workers. Thanks to their militancy in leading out the strike, they forced support from the bureaucracy. I say forced because on his return last March to Porto Rico, Iglesias expressed himself as not being in favor of the strike method in that situation. This outburst of Iglesias' was reported to the writer, with tears in his eyes, by the old working class fighter, Comrade Eduardo Conde, the only leader who has remained loyal to the Porto Rican workers, who fights against the Iglesias traitors and is brutally mistreated by Iglesias and his underling, Rafael Alonso.

In addition to the capture of the trade union movement and placing it in control of American imperialism, Iglesias proceeded with the organization of the Socialist Party in opposition to the liberal bourgeois, anti-American political parties. This party, even tho it was affiliated with the American socialist party, was sponsored by Gompers and Co. Using militant and even revolutionary phrases, this socialist party won to its support the great masses of the Porto Rican workers and agricultural laborers, but by its policies only misled and betrayed the masses of Porto Rico into the net of American imperialist domination.

A. F. of L. Backed Yellow Socialists.

While the A. F. of L. disdained the socialist party in the United States it, at the same time, sponsored the socialist party in the colony of Porto Rico. Why? The following excerpt from the program of the socialist party of Porto Rico will explain:

"The Socialist Party of Porto Rico declares that the continued influence of the people of the United States upon the destinies of the people of Porto Rico has been, and is, a civilizing one. That the freedom of the constitution of the United States of America to Porto Rico represents a positive guarantee of the public and political rights of laboring and men protecting the rights of the individual, and therefore we favor the permanent and inseparable union of the people of Porto Rico with the people of the United States."

Here we have a socialist party in which Sam Gompers and Matthew Woll could be proud of membership.

Socialists U. S. Lackeys.

The following recent incident in the Porto Rican senate chamber is quite characteristic of an official, the Secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, and can well indict the Pan A. F. of L. in its attitude toward American imperialist aggression.

It was during the session of the Porto Rican senate held March 22-27. The Senate President and leader of the bourgeois Unionist Party, in outlining his intended discourse between the visiting Secretary of War Davis at the official banquet, suggested that he intended in addition to saying pleasant the problems of Porto Rico, to condemn the Latin American policies of the United States initiated by Roosevelt with the case of Colombia, and paraded at present in relation to Nicaragua.

Trembled for Their Jobs.

Our Secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, the honorable Santiago Iglesias, hastily intervened and warned Barcelo:

"You would assume a serious responsibility in confronting the secretary of war regarding the policies which his government may pursue in its relations with Mexico and Nicaragua. You should confine yourself exclusively to the problems concerning Porto Rico and not meddle in international affairs. Such an act would be interpreted badly for those in whose hands the fate of our aspirations lie." Which means the fate of their political ambitions, whose further development can be realized with the granting of political autonomy (but not independence) to the Island and which would give either of these politicians the opportunity to become governor.

Barcelo with much humility bowed before the "labor" senator Iglesias, adding "True, very true, as colonials we have not our right to vent our feelings and sentiments. I will confine myself as Senator Iglesias suggested."

In this every act then the Socialist Party is demonstrating that it is the tool and standard-bearer of American imperialist rule in Porto Rico. The relations and complicityness with which the labor branch of American imperialism has succeeded in obstructing the development of a labor movement expressive of the real interests of the workers, and bringing it under control in Porto Rico, has created a desire in the American labor bureaucracy to extend its complicity to the labor movements in the other Latin American countries. First subjugated by the military forces of the United States this becomes an easy matter. The instrument created for this purpose is the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor organized in 1918.

And that the Pan A. F. of L. with the temporarily conquered labor movement of Porto Rico as its corner stone, and the tested Porto Rican Flunkey as its Spanish secretary, is on the road to betray the labor movement in other conquered countries, may be demonstrated by the existing situation in Cuba.

Cuban Workers Betrayed by Socialists.

In Cuba prior to the reign of the tyrant Machado, we find a labor movement that strode rapidly toward militancy. The workers organized in the tobacco industry were the backbone of this militant anti-imperialist labor movement, and with the support of the masses of "Colonos," gave birth to a Communist Party orientating towards the leadership of the Communist International. Then followed the Machado reign of terror against the Cuban labor movement. Under the secret guidance of the ambassador of the American Sugar Trust, General Crowder, he instituted a systematic and most ruthless campaign of terror, to break the militant spirit of labor in Cuba. Labor leaders like Enrique Varona, Thomas Grant and 200 outstanding militants were assassinated. The prisons were filled and thousands forced to leave the Island. The Communist Party was dealt a severe blow and forced underground.

And in this tragic moment in the labor movement of Cuba, with the soil of Cuba soaked red with workers' blood, the yellow socialist sheet the "Accion Socialista" of Habana, spokesman for the Pan-American Federation of Labor, whose editor and administrator, Juan Arevalo, is its delegate to the convention held in Washington, makes this statement of gratification in an editorial of July 12, 1927:

"There are distinct roads that a labor movement may take. There is the road toward the Communist International which guides the Communist Parties and the Red Trade Unions. And then if the labor movement does not turn toward Russia it has the alternative of Amsterdam, Zurich or Washington."

Cuban Fakers Favor PAFL

After pointing out the indecision in the labor movement as to which road to take, it goes on to say:

"If the Cuban delegation to the Pan A. F. of L. goes to signify the road which our labor movement may take it is already determined twofold in aid of the Machado-Crowder tyrant [illegible] A. N. which disturbed our labor movement, will disappear forever."

"It is true that there are yet some labor organizations that are not in agreement with the tendencies of the Pan-American Federation of Labor. But, we assert, if the labor movement of Cuba wants to progress, if it does not wish to remain inactive, or in the chaotic state in which it found itself for some years, it will be necessary to incorporate itself with the tendencies of the Pan-American Federation fo Labor."

The DAILY WORKER Army Never Sleeps

Like a faithful sentry at his post of duty, the Daily Worker trooper is always awake to his responsibilities.

He knows that the army of the capitalist enemy is constantly at work, enslaving and ensnaring the mind of the wage slaves with its pernicious propaganda.

The capitalist press, movies, radio, the church, the schools these are the varied and powerful agencies which are constantly doing their devilish work.

The Daily Worker Army cannot let up its efforts or its vigilance for a single moment.

The drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker will succeed only if our army is always on the job working steadily at its revolutionary task.

Our indefatigable persistence and iron determination will break the enemy's ranks and win for us new reinforcements of Five Thousand New Readers for the coming struggle.

Fuller's Prejudiced Decision

The same cynicism, the brutality and prejudice that have characterized the whole procedure of the state of Massachusetts in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti since its very inception, was jaringly set forth in the decision of Governor Alvan T. Fuller, multi-millionaire owner of the scab Packard Motor Car Company of Boston. Its flippant and careless tone confirms our conviction that the hearings conducted by the governor and by his committee of three who are characterized in his decision as "men whose reputation for intelligence, open-mindedness, intellectual honesty and good judgment were above reproach," were farcical in the extreme; that the fate of the men had been decided before the investigations started and that the "hearings" were staged solely for the purpose of trying to conceal the crime contemplated by the state.

The utter dishonesty of Fuller, his fear of a real investigation indicated by the very calibre of the creatures he appointed on the committee, President Abbot Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University heads one of the most poisonous institutions of so-called higher learning in the whole world, maintained for the exclusive purpose of teaching the sons of the predatory capitalists how best to fleece the workers. Harvard is supported by such capitalist monsters as J. P. Morgan & Co., and is called a "bulwark of conservatism." Judge Robert Grant and President Samuel W. Stratton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology had expressed views hostile to Sacco and Vanzetti before their appointments on the committee, and both of them are servile tools of the labor-hating mill owners, that mass of foul pollution that calls itself the Back Bay aristocracy of Boston.

So fearful was Fuller that the known facts regarding the vindictive attitude of Judge Thayer, the vicious disregard of the prosecution for the so-called rights of the accused, the ignorance and the corruption of the jury, the refusal to admit newly discovered evidence as a basis for a new trial, would force official recognition, that he selected men whom he knew to be enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti, and who would sink low enough to become parties to the last murderous act in the conspiracy.

If Fuller had been impelled by even the slightest degree of honesty he would have appointed at least one labor representative on the committee and given the greatest possible publicity to the proceedings by holding open hearings. Instead of this the whole thing was veiled in secrecy. Witnesses for the defense were so intimidated and generally browbeaten that they were on the verge of collapse as they left the room where the eminences of educational and judicial Massachusetts were conducting their farce-play designed to whitewash the would-be murderers.

Instead of an honest investigation, one that would endeavor to ascertain the facts in the case, the Fuller decision reveals the fact that loathsome efforts to conceal the facts. For instance, Fuller considers at the claim of the defense, that the reason the men refused to tell the police, who arrested them a month after the crime for which they finally charged was committed, the truth about their movements at the time of their arrest was because they wanted to shield their radical friends from arrest.

He seems to see something particularly criminal in the fact that they were about to start out at ten o'clock at night to distribute radical literature. Every radical and revolutionist in the labor movement knows it is not at all uncommon to do this sort of work, not merely at ten o'clock, but at twelve midnight, at two or four o'clock in the morning and at all other so-called unreasonable hours when the smug bourgeois exploiters of labor are peacefully sleeping and dreaming of greater profits to be wrung out of labor, or revelling in cabarets with their kept ladies.

Fuller also says he found that the "jurors were thoroly honest men." No reason for this belief is given. I presume the fact that they brought in verdicts of guilty against two radical workmen is sufficient to prove their honesty in Fuller's eyes. Fuller also proclaims his belief in the words of the witnesses for the prosecution. This is only another way of stating his belief that the alibi witnesses for the defense were, without exception, liars.

The fact that they were working men and women would tend strengthen that view on the part of the labor-hating buzzard who is governor of the state of Massachusetts.

The Fuller decision is a class document designed to vindicate perjurers who testified for the open-shoppers of the state and belittle everyone connected with the defense.

Its sins of ommission are as glaring as its sins of commission. Fuller does not even mention the role of the agents of the United States Department of Justice. He entirely overlooks the fact that Vanzett was in New York trying to protect his fellow-worker, Salsedo, from the foul clutches of A. Mitchell Palmer's gunmen and gangsters and that he knew the circumstances surrounding the manner in which Salsedo met his death at the hands of the department of justice on May 3, 1920, when his body was found crushed almost beyond recognition on Park Row from whence it had fallen from the fourteenth story of a building in which the government maintained secret torture chambers. This fact of the on the part of the government to discredit Vanzetti is entirely ignored by Fuller.

But this decision of Fuller should not stand as the final decision. It is still possible for effective action on the part of the workers of this and other countries. Too long have the workers depended upon the impartiality of the capitalist courts and judges, institutions of capitalist class dictatorship, which exist only to impose by force the will of a minority of the population upon the vast majority. Instead of workers standing before the courts of the Fullers and Thayers the time will come when the Fullers and Thayers and other enemies of the working class will stand before the revolutionary tribunals of the workers.

Fuller's decision should do much to dispel any faith intelligent workers may have in the courts and government of capitalism and help immensely to generate that concentration of power that will sweep these institutions into the scrap heap of history.

The Convention Preparations

To all District Organizers:

DEAR Comrades:—The Committee for the Preparation of the Party Convention has unanimously agreed to the following decisions regarding the Party discussion in the press and the holding of general Party membership meetings.

1. Rules Regarding Party Discussion.

1. The discussion in The DAILY WORKER and the Party press shall begin immediately and continue till August 31st, the day of the opening of the Convention, unless mutually agreed upon in the Committee for the Preparation of the Convention to close earlier.

The New Pacific Cable

Another Step in the Drive for Power in the Pacific.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

STRIKING proof of the deadly seriousness with which the American ruling class is carrying on its drive for domination of the Pacific area is contained in a news story in the New York Times of August 2nd.

The Western Union Telegraph Company is completing plans for laying a new cable to China and the Far East. We quote from the Times story:

"While the Western Union has had the Pacific cable under contemplation for some time, it was said that the recent crisis in Shanghai might have served to hasten the work of the engineers on the new project.

"At the time when American and European soldiers were landing in China there were three wire systems available for Governmental and press use between the Far East and London, compared with the single cable system between China and the United States. This discrepancy was said to have caused embarrassment to officials at Washington anxious to keep in touch with the Chinese Situation."

THE theory that the American government was blissfully content to follow in the wake of British imperialism in China seems to be demolished by the above statements whose authenticity is proved by the fact that the Western Union, undoubtedly in agreement with the state and war departments, is rushing work on the new line of communication.

The announcement of this new venture whose completion will make America entirely independent of British sources for information comes immediately after the intense rivalry between Britain and America has prevented even formal agreement at Geneva.

PREPARATIONS for imperialist war consist not only in the building of huge navies and the organization of armies but also in the adaptation of the industrial enterprises of a nation to imperialist purposes.

The ships and their crews, the engineers and scientific experts, the divers and electricians who will lay, connect and put in perfect working order the new cable with a capacity of 2,500 letters per minute which will tie the Orient to America, will be part of the war machinery of American imperialism just as are the more deadly and impressive war vessels which the collapse of the Geneva conference and the struggle for domination of the Pacific area by the great powers, will give the American plunderband an excuse to build.

AMERICAN imperialism will fight its rivals for the power to rule and rob the workers and peasants of the Far East,—the scene now of a great movement for liberation.

American business and American government are part of the same imperialist machine which threatens to drown the revolting masses in their own blood. As the New York Times says; referring to the Western Union:

"The decision of the company to investigate the possibility of entering the Pacific field was based on the belief held in many quarters that future American trade would expand toward the East rather than toward the West."

SOME day the new cable will carry the message of bloody struggles waged by American imperialism against its rivals but before that it will carry the news of its onslaughts upon the workers and peasants whose interests are in contradiction to those of the imperialist exploiters—unless the American working class develops its consciousness, its power and its will to fight as a class faster than American imperialism develops its war machinery.

murder but on the ground that they were radicals.

THERE still exists in this country among the workers a belief that justice is blind and on the level: that there is not one law for the rich and another for the poor. This belief is invaluable and to the capitalists of Massachusetts in getting away with the trick that was pulled off when the governor appointed his commission. While those representatives of the flower of New England's bourgeoisie were making a bluff at investigating the case, the liberals and pacifists connected with the Sacco-Vanzetti defense practically stopped appealing to mass opinion, and placed all confidence in the sense of justice of the governor or and his fellow puppets. They had a naive faith that the millionaire governor would examine the case of those two workers with the same benevolent impartiality that he would bring to bear on a consideration of the cases of two textile manufacturers convicted of killing a labor leader.

THIS illusion was not shared by other. Sacco or Vanzetti. For a long time the former has expressed his conviction that there was no hope for them from the executive or judicial arms of the capitalist state in Massachusetts. Demonstrations on the part of the workers only, would halt the hangmen. This was the position of the Communists and the left wing in the labor movement. It was the position of the International Labor Defense.

THE radical elements also insisted that the workers of all shades of opinion should unite around the slogan: "Save Sacco and Vanzetti" and present a united front to the enemy. This policy was sabotaged by the socialists who were more concerned with making war on the left wing and on the Communists than fighting the capitalists who wanted to put Sacco and Vanzetti to death. There would have been no Sacco-Vanzetti protest movement but for the rallying cry. The officialdom of the American Federation of Labor did nothing except give lip service to their indignation thru resolutions. The bureaucrats will do nothing now. What is to be done and done quickly must be done by the masses.

IT has been said time and time again since our comrade were first framed up by the capitalists of Massachusetts that "Massachusetts is on trial." This is the bunk. Massachusetts today, means those who own the industries of the state and control it politically. They are not on trial. They will not be on trial until the workers secure political power and turn the industries over to the masses that created them. Sacco and Vanzetti are in their death cells within a few yards of the death chair. One week only stands between them and the date set for their execution. Every ounce of energy in the organized labor movement must be exerted to free them. And every section of the working-class movement must unite in one last effort to snatch those victims of capitalist injustice from the doom that faces them.

DRAMA

MARIA CORDA

The talented Hungarian artist will play the leading role in "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," which is now being filmed.

"Speakeasy" Opens Monday--"Abie" Breaks World's Run Record

George M. Cohan will have two new plays opening in Boston on Labor Day, "The Merry Malones" at the Colonial theatre and "The Baby Cyclone" at the Hollis Street. Following a short run "The Merry Malones" will come from Boston to open the new Erlanger's theatre in West 44th Street in this city.

William E. Lawrence has been engaged for James La Penna's "White Lights"—to play the leading juvenile role in Paul Gerard Smith's play.

Hold August 28th open. Save that day for the big Jamboree at Starlight Park, where the Joint Defense Committee will stage its big benefit.

"Speakeasy," the Edward Knoblock—George Rosener melodrama will be offered by William R. Friedlander in Asbury Park on Monday night. The cast is headed by Jose Ruben, Anne Shoemaker, Dorothy Hall, Arthur Vinton, Paul Gilfoyle, Marie Pettes, John Crone, Beatrice Lee, Adelaide Rondelle, Ruthelma Stevens and Kate-Pier Roemer.

Anne Nichols local production of her famous comedy, "Abie's Irish Rose" will pass the world's long run record on Monday, when the 2222nd performance will be given. This breaks the record established by the London production of "Cha Chin Chow" which ran for 2238 consecutive performances. Miss Nichols is now in France completing her newest play, a sequel to "Abie's Irish Rose" to be called "Abie's Children," and arranging for the production of "Abie" in Central Europe.

Daily Worker Builders Are Active at Oakland, Calif.; Hold Meetings

OAKLAND, Calif. The Daily Workers Builders Club of Alameda County is slowly but surely putting itself on the map in Oakland, Cal. Tonight a street meeting was held under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party of America and some forty copies of The DAILY WORKER were sold.

At 10th street and Broadway, Oakland, Cal., one may always find gathered a group of workers. One finds all sorts of religious meetings going on there as well as debates among individual freaks. Along come the Workers (Communist) Party speakers and Comrade Fleming and they sweep the religionists and other freaks out of the limelight.

Instead of handing out religious dope and a lot of solemn Gospel to these down trodden workers, who have very little time to read or listen to lectures, ideas of organization. These ideas are illustrated with word pictures and examples of workers in other parts of the world such as Russia and China.

While the speakers talk girls and boys go thru the crowd and sell The DAILY WORKER, hand out literature, and hold private discussions with strange workers and invite them to the hall.

Our militant little worker, Rosa B. Paul, taught a Jesus shouter a lesson. He fought a fair fight and went to a glorious defeat. When the fair Rosa was through with him he knew more about Communism than he thought he did about the Holy Bible.

Rattler Strikes.

BATH, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Serum was being rushed here from Ithaca today to combat the venom of an enormous rattlesnake which bit Mrs. Walter Thompson, 50, when she was picking berries in the woods near her home on Cameron. The snake did not rattle a warning before biting her hand.

MASSACHUSETTS' LABOR REFUSES TO OUST CONROY

Declares for Right of Political Opinion

(Special To The DAILY WORKER)

FALL RIVER, Mass., August 4.—The right of an official of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, now in session here, to advocate independent political action for labor was openly upheld here when Conroy of the machinists' union of Worcester was reinstated for vice-president of the federation at the convention now in session.

The delegates rallied to his support when a vitriolic attack was leveled on him by reactionaries in the convention, who claimed he was not a good member of the American Federation of Labor because he did not follow the hopeless policy of the president and executive board of the A. F. of L. and "steward friends" and party enemies."

For Labor Party.

Conroy was active for a labor party in 1924, and succeeded in preventing endorsement by the Workers' Party of Walsh, the representative of the Boston and Albany railroad.

Conroy's defense at the convention was handled by a special delegate of the Worcester Central Labor Union. The convention decided that no man should be victimized for his political views, and defeated a resolution that required endorsement by the Executive Council before any member could run for political office.

The convention also declared by large majorities for endorsement of the unemployment bill, and for a public inquiry into the state labor commission, which has disgraced itself lately by its unusual unfairness to words organized labor.

Thayer Example.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case has not come up yet, but the delegates in voting to endorse introduction of a bill in the next legislature to require the election instead of the nomination of judges, cited Judge Thayer, trial judge in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, as an example of the injustice possible thru the system of appointed judges.

The convention also wants a bill introduced limiting the injunction powers of judges.

Had To Break In.

At yesterday's morning session the entire business was taken up with the report of the committee on resolutions. Much time was taken up with the various resolutions dealing with the use of the union label as a means of organizing the unorganized and maintaining union conditions.

Mary Thompson of the Women's Trade Union League spoke on the manner in which union conditions had been established in the neckwear shops of Boston pointed out that the neckwear workers had secured recognition of the union only after a short but active strike, and only after the workers had forced the employers to sign an agreement with the union before able to secure the use of the union label in their shops.

Public Ownership.

The Conroy matter was not reported as stating a bill to be introduced in the next legislature calling for the public ownership of natural resources for the people of electrical power in this state and nationally.

Federation of Churches.

It was pointed out that the Churches Federation had been markedly partial in its allocation of speakers in the various churches to the Chambers of Commerce and the Employers Organizations generally. A resolution was passed calling upon the Federation to make a clearcut statement on its policy to labor before the State Federation could resume relations with the body.

Needle Trades Meeting

A general membership meeting of the needle trades section of the Trade Union Educational League will be held at Manhattan Lyceum, Monday, 7 p. m.

A block meeting of all cloak and dressmakers working on 22nd Street will be held Tuesday, right after work, at Local 22. Registered and unregistered workers should attend.

A general membership meeting of Local 2, H&MWU will be held Wednesday, right after work at Irving Plaza, 15th St. and Irving Place.

Boston Papers Prepare Public for Murder of Sacco and Vanzetti

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 4.—Boston capitalist papers are doing their utmost to prepare public opinion against the two men. The story of the case is trented in such a manner as to picture the convicted workers and their friends as dangerous men.

Boundlessly staging are featured, terms as "Reds" and "the friends of the defense" are being used and the words evidence or lawyers of the defense is put in quotation marks.

The placing of extra police guards is also creating the desired atmosphere, the working men of Boston, however, are just as firm in their belief of innocence as before.

DEMAND FOR NEW TRIAL FOR SACCO VANZETTI STARTS

The hunt of the legal work in the impending six days will be borne by Arthur D. Hill, a leading Boston lawyer and formerly city attorney. William G. Thompson will actively assist in an advisory capacity as the strain of the case has weakened him considerably.

Felix Frankfurter, professor of the Harvard Law School and author of the enormously known book "The Case of Sacco and Vanzetti," will appeal to Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the U. S. supreme court to save the condemned workers from death in the electric chair next Wednesday, it was learned yesterday.

Frankfurter will request a stay of execution pending an appeal in the supreme court. He will base his request upon the fact that the constitutional rights of the two workers have been violated seriously as evidence was offered against them during secret hearings at which they and they counsel were barred.

International Labor Defense Urges Sacco Vanzetti Strike Move

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 4.—The International Labor Defense is urging nationwide demonstrations to prevent the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti on August 10th, and is also urging protest general strike on that day.

It further urges sending protest telegrams to Fuller and Coolidge demanding intervention in the case.

The I. L. D. has cablegrams to France, Germany, England, Belgium, Russia, China and Canada for demonstrations, especially in front of embassies and consulates.

Chicago labor leaders are meeting on the question of a protest general strike here. The I. L. D. slogans are that Fuller's decision is a challenge to entire working class.

Sacco-Vanzetti Meeting At Elizabeth Tomorrow

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 4.—A Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting will be held here Saturday, 8 p. m. at Union Square. Auspices of the International Labor Defense.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., August 3.—Mabel Normand, film star, who is seriously ill of influenza and pleurisy, showed slight improvement today after a bad night's rest, attendants at Santa Monica hospital reported. Miss Normand, who is the wife of Lew Cody in private life, was near death from pleuro-pneumonia recently.

FURRIERS WILL REBUILD UNION FOR MEMBERSHIP

Adopt Sacco-Vanzetti Protest Resolution

Meeting to protest the breaking down of union conditions in the furriers' industry and the continued selling out of hard won gains by the American Federation of Labor officials, 3,000 furriers pledged their loyalty to the Joint Board in its fight to rebuild the furriers' Union in a crowded meeting at Cooper Union last night.

"Nothing but the united fighting ranks of the fur workers can save the union from utter destruction," said Ben Gold, Joint Board manager. "At present there is no union left, either in the right wing or in the left wing. The reactionary forces of the American Federation of Labor has broken the union and there is danger that if the fight continues it can never be rebuilt."

Worse Than 1924.

Gold declared that conditions in the Furriers' Union were "worse than in 1924." "There is absolute chaos in the trade. Manufacturing is being done under non-union conditions, and any worker who fails to realize this is blind," he said.

The fight to rebuild the union to its former power as an instrument for the workers has received great impetus in the last few days, from requests of many workers who deserted the Joint Board to be reinstated, Gold said. "The Joint Board is receiving letters every day from workers who now find themselves compelled to come back and help to rebuild the real union," he said. "If anybody thinks that the Joint Board is no longer fighting, Manufacturing is being done under non-union conditions, and the daily shop meetings to which workers come with the greatest enthusiasm.

Hopeless Out of Town.

In reviewing the out of town situation, Gold saw great reason for hopefulness. "Almost every local outside of New York has elected a left wing administration, and even where the reactionary administrations have not been dislodged, the rank and file is progressive," he pointed out. "The rights can no longer do that they have sold out to the bosses, and they cannot longer conceal the fights for the spoils that are going on within their ranks. In spite of the feel our difficulties, I am confident that we can retrieve all that has been lost. The Joint Board is reorganizing its machinery and beginning the active work of rebuilding. I am ready to step aside if this leads to peace, but as I insisted at the peace conference, the union must be returned to the workers and their officials brought back to the shops. The Joint Board extends its hands in welcome to all, accepts and urges them to join in a united front of furriers."

Weisbord Speaks.

Albert Weisbord, leader of the Passaic strike, spoke to the furriers for the first time since the victory meeting after the 1926 strike. He took occasion to point out the relation of the furriers, whom he termed "the needle point in the side of the American Bosses," to Sacco and Vanzetti, "who now symbolize the fighting proletariat."

"The forces that are about to murder Sacco and Vanzetti are the same enemies that you are fighting," he declared. "They are the same forces that are working to destroy the unions, to set up the open shop, to defeat, child labor legislation—they are the labor haters of America."

Same Enemies.

"They are the same forces that are attempting to destroy your union, by forcing upon you a Wall-Mcgrady union. McGrady is the bridge to lead the workers to worse conditions.

"The gains that you won by the heroic struggle of 1926 are being lost to you by the treachery of these labor fakers. The forty hour week and the increases that you won are being taken from you, the speed up system and the contract system that you thought you had abolished are being used to the hosiery."

Weisbord emphasized the sharpening of the campaign against militant labor forces, of which the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti are a part. "The bosses are faced with the possibility of war," he declared. "The collapse of the Geneva naval conference can mean only one thing that the capitalists are getting ready for another imperialist war. They understand that they can only continue their plans if they smash the unions. They cannot smash the unions of militant sections, militant workers, so they hope to substitute 'Red' wings unionism, company unionism, company unionism, in order to attain their end.

Greet Gross.

The furriers gave a hearty welcome to Aaron Gross, chief business manager of the Joint Board, who appeared on the platform for the first time since the brutal attack of gangsters on June 9 which nearly cost his life. Although the workers clamored for a speech, Gross was not strong enough to address them.

Other speakers at the meeting were Max Gitlow of the United Council of Workingclass Housewives, and S. Lipzin of the Joint Defense Committee.

Adopt Resolutions.

Resolutions adopted at the meeting condemned the "union-breaking policies of the International and A. F. of L. officials and accuse them of openly selling out the fur workers to the fur manufacturers." They call upon "all fur workers to support the Joint Board morally and financially to re-establish the gains of the 1926 general strike, and re-build a strong, united Furriers' Union."

A resolution on the face of Sacco and Vanzetti was adopted as follows:

Sacco-Vanzetti Resolution.

"Whereas the facts have shown beyond a shadow of a doubt that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent of the crime of which they are accused, and whereas the outrageous decision of Governor Fuller to murder Sacco and Vanzetti shows the determination on the part of the anti-labor forces to carry out the criminal frame-up of these two workers, because of their fidelity to the working class.

"Therefore be it resolved, that we, thousands of fur workers gathered in Cooper Union, denounce the attempt of the reactionaries to railroad Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair, and we join with the forces of labor the world over in the demand upon the governmental authorities to release these two innocent victims."

T.U.E.L. Calls For World Labor War On Frame-Up Of Sacco and Vanzetti

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 4.—The following cable was sent to the world labor movement by the Trade Union Educational League:

"Governor Fuller has affirmed the death sentence on Sacco and Vanzetti. The Trade Union Educational League calls upon the world's labor movement to join in emphatic protest against this legal murder which is a blow at the workingclass."

GANGSTER CASES ARE POSTPONED IN POLICE COURT

Three Thugs Are Held For Grand Jury

The two right wing killers, Benjamin Cohen and Meyer Friedman, who murderously attacked Aaron Gross on June 9th, had their cases postponed until August 6th when they appeared before Magistrate Brodsky in Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning.

Three of the seven thugs who cut up four fur pickers June 24 were held for the grand jury yesterday morning by Magistrate Brodsky. Two others had their cases postponed until next Thursday.

During the proceedings ex-Judge Smitkins, who appeared for the gangsters, was continually in conference with three of the right wing legal economists and Samuel Markewich, right wing counsellor.

Joseph Winarowsky, who was arrested transferred to the 57th St. yesterday by Magistrate Brodsky who was sitting in Jefferson Market Court. He heard part of the evidence Wednesday and will continue with the case August 22 in the 57th St. court.

The workers are accused of attacking two gangsters, Jerry Larson, alias Samuel Greenberg and Harry Rifer. The actual situation was just the reverse, but to save themselves the thugs claimed that the workers had attacked them. Larson, it has been proved, is a well known gangster.

Held For Special Sessions.

Max Levine, who together with Solomon Walger and Vincent Leaden were arrested at the Union Square Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration July 7th, was held for Special Sessions yesterday by Magistrate Steers in the 57th St. police court. Levine was discharged yesterday while Leaden was released Wednesday at the beginning of the trial. Edward Levinson, associate editor, the New Leader, appeared as witness against the workers.

Call Fake Elections.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—The eight week trial committee of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union has called fake elections in all locals for Friday.

All progressive delegates who intend to open a rank and file campaign report to Labor Lyceum headquarters the night before the election. A special meeting of the Joint Board will be held in the afternoon to discuss the elections. All progressives are urged to attend this meeting and take part in the fake election.

The Joint Board also declared that regular elections of all unions which had not held elections in the past year are to be held at once, and will open a campaign against anybody. Special local meetings will be called for next week to act on the question. The day of the fake elections will be made as impressive as possible.

The Joint Board has issued an official statement protesting against the subjection of the convention by the present executive board. It appeals to the membership to stand behind the present administration that has "shown progressive policies."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Examiners of the Interstate Commerce Commission recommended today that the application of the Pere Marquette, one of the roads involved in the Van Sweringen Railroad merger, for authority to issue $4,000,000 of common stock and to distribute it as a 50 per cent stock dividend, be denied.

Trying Year of 1919 Marks Real Beginning of Soviet Railroad Workers Union

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE foundation of the powerful Railway Workers' Union, that now numbers more than 1,000,000 members in the Soviet Union, was laid in the trying year of 1919. This was not achieved without struggle. In fact, the greatest efforts had to be exerted to put down the correct basis on which to build the superstructure of the organization.

The March, 1917, revolution that destroyed czarism, caused a new era of organizational growth for the Russian working class. But a conscious effort along correct organizational lines seems to have been lacking at first among the great masses of the workers. Instead of immediately building an all-inclusive organization for the whole transportation industry, there sprang up a mushroom growth of craft unions in the shops and in the operating departments.

The Communist Party alone launched a campaign for the organization of shop unions in an effort to break down craft lines.

Alexis Amassow, the present general secretary of the Railroad Workers' Union, with two other comrades, headed the drive for the organization of the shop workers. Amassow is himself a metal worker. The movement met with considerable success. Between 1st March and the November Revolutions, in 1917, the number of organized railroad workers grew from 5,000 to 22,000. It was a very loose form of organization, however. There were no dues books. The payment of dues was entirely voluntary. The craft unions that were organized were very conservative in their outlook. This condition prevailed from the Nov. 7th (1917) Revolution until the year 1919. During this period 14 different craft organizations maintained a mere or less, separate existence on the railroads.

In 1919, however, there was an all-inclusive congress that laid the basis for the organization of one union for the entire transportation industry. It was upon the sound basis created in 1919, during the trying months of the imperialist attack against the Soviet Union in aid of the civil wars and intervention, that the present powerful organization was built.

The union today, with its 1,087,200 members (Jan.-1, 1927) includes all but 2½ or 3 per cent of the workers employed in the industry. This small percentage of non-union membership takes in workers temporarily employed, most of them peasants who intend to return shortly to the land.

"There is no skilled worker at present unemployed on the railroads of the Soviet Union," said Secretary Amassow, in discussing the unemployed situation in the industry. (Moscow, May, 1927.)

"We are always exerting ourselves to increase the efficiency of our working force," continued Amassow. "Inefficient help is always displaced with efficient workers wherever possible. The wages of the railroad workers are divided into 24 categories of wages. General, or unskilled workers, are included in the first nine categories. The best qualified workers are included in the categories, from nine to 18, including such workers as machinists, engineers and the lower categories of administrative workers. The categories from 19 to 24 include the higher administrative workers.

"There is small difference in the wages of the lowest and the highest categories, in comparison to czarist days when administrative officials received from 50 to 100 times as much as the wage workers.

"An effort is made each year to augment the wages of the railroad workers," said Amassow. "The increases first to the lowest paid categories."

Eight hours is our basic workday. Double time for all overtime after eight hours is paid."

Comrade Amassow gave the answers to a list of questions concerning the railroad workers. Two of these are published today as follows:

Economic Progress in the U. S. S. R.

QUESTION.—Can you give some data on economic achievements in the Union of Soviet Republics and the part played by the railroads?

ANSWER.—The aggregate agricultural output has increased from 66.8% of the pre-war level in 1922-23 to 112% of that level in 1925-26. The aggregate industrial output has grown from 34.7% in 1922-23 to 95% of the pre-war level in 1925-26. Taken in absolute figures, the aggregate agricultural output has increased from 7.8 billion pre-war roubles in 1922-23 to 10.3 billion pre-war roubles in 1925-26, showing an increase of 32% during this period. In regard to the aggregate industrial output we find the following absolute figures: 1,949,000,000 pre-war roubles in 1922-23, and 5,215,000,000 in 1925-26, or an increase of 274%.

The average figure of the number of people employed in 1921-22 was 1,243,000 workers; that figure was increased to 1,560,000 in June 1926 (the reference is to the large industrial establishments alone), and to 1,898,000 in June 1926, i. e. during the twelve-month from June 1925 to June 1926 we have seen an increase of more than 200,000 people in the foremost ranks of the industrial proletariat.

The total wages, the income of the proletariat in 1922-23, constituted 20 per cent of the national income. In 1924-25 it rose already to 28.1 per cent of the national income in USSR i. e., during such a brief period it increased from 20 per cent to 28.1 per cent or nearly one and a half times.

Financial Results of the Working of the USSR Railways from 1923-24 in 1926-27.

Income of railways	Statement for 1923-24	Statement for 1924-25	Preliminary statement for 1925-26	Estimates for 1926-27

Per cent of increase	100.0	137.0	195.3	233.3
Expenditures of railways, general	720.2	876.4	1,360.1	1,511.8
Per cent of increase	100.0	121.7	188.8	209.9
Expenditure on wages	298.1	393.4	603.0	728.5
tion of railways	668.3	805.3	1,177.1	1,319.6
Per cent of increase	100.0	120.5	176.1	197.4
Expenditure on wages	298.1	394.4	603.0	728.5
Per cent of increase	100.0	132.0	202.3	244.4

Why Rates Were Increased.

QUESTION.—What accounts for the increase in railway tariffs in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics?

ANSWER.—The increase in railway tariffs in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is to be explained by the fact that the Russian railway tariffs constituted only 75-80 per cent of the pre-war rates, whereas the prices on other industrial products are somewhat above the pre-war rates. In order to eliminate this inconsistency as between the transport rates and industrial prices, a slight increase in railway tariffs has been introduced.

The Greatest Failure in Labor History

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

(This is the third of a series of articles analyzing the Pan-American Federation of Labor and its recent convention at Washington.)

"Gompers Said That Pan-American Federation of Labor Might Have Life."

"SAMUEL GOMPERS," said President Green three or four times during the Washington convention, "gave his life for the Pan-American Federation of Labor." While this statement must be considered a little high-pitched to say the least, it is nevertheless true that Gompers did lavish much loving care upon it—not to say money—and that he looked upon it as one of his favorite investments. His expensive attentions were rewarded by success. Thus far, almost 900 may you look at it, the Pan-American Federation of Labor is one of the greatest failures in labor history.

THAT it is a failure from an organizational standpoint was the contention presented in the preceding article. In the present article I shall try to show that it is a failure from the standpoint of the everyday needs of the workers. The events of my argument at the fact that almost at none year since its official convention at Laredo, Texas, the Pan-American Federation of Labor has not grappled seriously with a single practical problem of international trade-union cooperation in the interests of the workers of the Americas.

U. S. and S. A. Workers Must Unite.

WITH American capital absorbing what it has swallowed up in Latin-America and with Wall Street's drive to plunge the workers of the two continents against the workers in Latin America and vice versa, energetic cooperation among the various movements of the western hemisphere is a vital necessity. In my particular struggle in the marine transport industry, for the oil industry, or the metal industry, or the textile industry, it is plain that organized labor must be prepared to take up the fight, on all fronts.

JOINT strike action, international agreements, agreed-upon demands, international trade-union registration of immigration—these are only a few of the measures that any all-American federation of labor worthy of the name should be expected to establish as a primary duty.

WHAT about the "Pan-American Federation of Labor?"

IT has never considered international agreements of any kind, let alone international strike action. The boycott, which has been used effectively in a number of Latin American countries in the past, and which would be a powerful weapon against U. S. capitalist exploitation in Latin America, has also failed to find favor with the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

Lake Frey Defeats Union Card Measure.

ONCE in a convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, (1924), the Mexican delegation introduced a resolution calling for the exchange of union cards between members of the American Federation of Labor and the Mexican Confederation of Labor, but John R. Frey, then head of the resolution committee, promptly slipped in the following substitute.

"RESOLVED, That the Mexican Confederation of Labor and the American Federation of Labor communicate with their affiliated national and international unions with the object of establishing understandings and agreements which will bring about the interchange of membership cards between the unions affiliated with the Mexican Confederation of Labor and the American Federation of Labor."

THE substitute was adopted, and that is all that has been heard of the matter from that day to this.

Green Admits Delegates Represent Nothing.

AT the Washington convention just passed, six of the three and one Latin-Americans were represented some sort of legitimate labor organization introduced a resolution dealing with trade-union committees to regulate immigration. This too was immediately side-tracked by the American Federation of Labor leaders.

THERE was a great deal of wordy debate at Washington, but very little to indicate that the delegates were participating in what claimed to be an international labor convention. Sometimes the thing became almost farcical. I remember that there was much excited discussion over a resolution approving the idea of continued Pan-American Federation of Labor conventions in the future. This was because one of the handpicked Latin-American "delegates" who represented nothing, except perhaps his government, saw a chance to get a permanent place on the Green-Wall payroll by attaching a rider to the effect that "in each country the organization affiliated to the Pan-American Federation of Labor be recognized as the bona fide labor movement of that country." The idea of the rider (which of course had nothing to do with the original resolution) struck many receptive cords in the convention you may be sure. Enthusiasm reached such a high point that Green was enlized to issue a statement explaining that "in many Latin-American countries the labor movement is only in its infancy and sometimes delegates come here from organizations having only a doubtful existence."

Discuss Erecting Lighthouse in Columbus.

EXCEPT for the usual meaningless resolution about sending out organizers, the only "constructive labor proposals" adopted were those recommending that some Latin-American governments the establishment of a department of Labor and the one suggesting that all governments send labor attaches to their diplomatic and consular staffs abroad. Discussion on the department of Labor proposition proved a contentious one. It seemed that some "delegates" thought that Santo Domingo, for instance, should not have a Department of Labor, but a Department of Labor and Immigration! Discussion on this matter raged so hot as to equal almost the passage of a proposal to collect funds for a lighthouse and monument to be erected somewhere in Latin America in memory of Columbus.

Leadership Betrays Workers.

IN the face of actual trade-union struggle the Pan-American Federation of Labor evinces the same attitude of quiet sabotage as displayed in its convention resolutions. During the past three years there have been important strikes in many countries of North, South and Central America, but the Pan-American Federation of Labor has turned its back on them. The executive committee cannot point to a single struggle of the workers which it has assisted in any way throughout the period of its existence.

THE "Pan-American Federation of Labor," as at present controlled, can never accomplish anything in the interests of the workers of the Americas.

READING thru any one of the four reports of the executive committee of the "Pan-American Federation of Labor" you get the impression that the conception of international labor action is for Mr. William Green to write polite letters to the President of the United States or some other government official and receive polite answers in return.

Latin Workers Smell Rat in P. A. of L.—a Skunk.

IS it any wonder then that neither William Green, nor Samuel Gompers before him, has been able to allay the suspicions of the great mass of organized workers of Latin America as to the fact that the purpose of the Pan-American Federation of Labor really is? Is it any wonder that, except for the Mexican Confederation of Labor, which has been kept effectively in a number of Latin American countries in the past, and which would be a powerful weapon against U. S. capitalist exploitation in Latin America, has also failed to find favor with the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

Romance in the Soviet Union

By SHIRLEY REEVE.

WHILE exchanging English for Russian lessons with a student of the Military Political Academy, who is also a Military Commissar in the Red Army, we came to talk of our better halves. He of his wife and I of my husband. But it is the story of his wife that I am going to write about. And if with the cold keys of my typewriter I can convey to you a tenth of the real life and romance of this courageous young "Kommunistka" (Communist woman), who, the still in her twenties, has already been decorated with the order of the Red Banner for her services in the Red Army during the civil war, you will be filled with enthusiasm and admiration for her. But what is more you will get a glimpse of the "stuff" that made the workers of the Soviet Union win out against an enemy a million times stronger than the hundred-headed dragon of our fairy tale days, in spite of all their handicaps.

Born on the Ukraine in the year 1902, she was barely 15 when the first sparks of the October Revolution took fire. Already then she was supplementing the meagre income of her working class parents by working in a tobacco factory. Her father was a member of the "S. R.'s" (Social Revolutionary Party) but she, hot-blooded girl, was impatient with the slow and compromising gait of the party of her father and became an energetic, fighting member of the anarchists in Russia, she did not waver long before throwing in her lot with the workers and peasants. With a nature like hers this meant stepping at nothing to defend the interests of her class. And 1919 found her fighting on one of the most dangerous fronts against the counter revolution. Not as a Red Cross Sister or clerical help, but right out on the front line with the men, as a machine gun operator.

One day, her husband told me, Gafa (her name) was at her machine gun facing an attack of the Poles on the Warsaw front. The battalion had been ordered to retreat but Gafa, seeing the commander of her Polk (regiment) wounded and thrown off his horse immediately after leaving the command, she, with her wits sharper than ever, at once realized the great danger of allowing him, with all his papers, plans and orders to be captured by the enemy. This hardly five feet five inches tall and a mere wisp of a girl, she instructed the driver of her machine gun to lift the commander up onto his box—and to drive off with him. She meanwhile trained her gun here and there, keeping off several fast advancing Poles. Only after the other two were well on their way did she make her own escape. It was for this wonderfully courageous act that she was awarded the order of the Red Banner.

The highest title given the Red Army which is awarded for the most courageous action during a time of war only.

Her husband, who was at this time her Polk Commissar, greatly admired his girl as did all the soldiers who came in contact with her, and loved her. But that was not a time to think of love. The hard won proletarian revolution was in danger and no Red Soldier, not to speak of those who were at the same time Bolsheviks had any thought of himself or of his personal feelings.

Immediately after the retreat of the Polk, the Commissar was sighted to be under distant fire and was taken to the hospital with a wound in the arm and it was not until three years later that they met again while leisurely strolling down Tverskaya Boulevard in Moskow.

This was in 1923, the period when he had long ago become convinced that they were wasting their money in finnancing the attacks on the counter-revolutionary generals on the Soviet Union. The wheels of industry and agriculture were now being put into the mighty millions of the Soviet Union in the peaceful the energetic task of building Socialism. This was a time when a man and a woman could turn to thoughts of love without neglecting their self-imposed duty to society as Communists. The process of building socialism, on the contrary, provides the facilities for marriage without a woman's sacrificing all her other interests in order to realize those that are hers as a woman.

"This morning, Gafa and I celebrate our third wedding anniversary," he joyously told me, "and the second birthday of our son."

To the question did not your wife find it difficult to be only one woman in a battalion of men. Did they not annoy her a lot of lovemaking, did they not in fact think that that was her reason for coming into the Army? "Yes," he answered, "her father thought so when he first saw her, but soon changed his opinion of our men. We always saw her in action and could do nothing but admire and respect her. Some of us loved her, myself for example. But not one of us ever thought of annoying her with unwanted attentions. God help the man who would have tried to do so. But then our soldiers are taught to have the highest respect for women."

NATIONAL STRIKE TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI!

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE two labor organizers Sacco and Vanzetti must die, says Governor Alvin Fuller of Massachusetts speaking in particular for the capitalists of Massachusetts and in general for the entire capitalist class of the United States. Those who expected that Fuller and his fake committee would go into the facts in the case which prove the innocense of our two fellow workers beyond the shadow of a doubt, have no understanding of the class character of the society in which we are living and the perpetual war that exists between those who live by exploitation and those who exist by being exploited.

SACCO and Vanzetti are innocent of the crime charged against them as two unborn babes. Then, why this judicial murder? We might as well asked why is Tom Mooney still in San Quentin prison for a crime that even the judge who presided at his trial, the prosecutor the members of the jury and the perjured government witnesses, now admit he is innocent off. Tom Mooney is in jail because the open shop capitalists of California wanted to make an example of him for his activity in organizing the workers into trade unions. They almost succeeded in burning him in the electric chair. He was saved by the protests of world labor.

FOR those who may be deluded into believing that Fuller and his commission of New England aristocrats would not permit two innocent workers to go to the electric chair provided they were convinced of their innocence, it is well to recollect that its investigator sent by President Wilson to California to study the Mooney case reported that in his opinion Mooney was innocent, yet the hard-boiled capitalists of California paid no more heed to his report than they would to the babbling of a half-wit.

WHEN the capitalist hangmen make up their minds to glut their vengeance on the workingclass and select one or more victims for the sacrifice, they cling to their prey like bulldogs. The evidence against Sacco and Vanzetti was the flimsiest that could possibly have been made the excuse for a prosecution. The trial was a farce. The judge delivered patriotic speeches and denounced the defendants as shickers. The prosecuting attorney succeeded in poisoning thy minds of a hick jury against them because they were foreigners and radicals. They were condemned to death, not on the basis of evidence of connection with the payroll robbery

The following telegram was sent today to all Sacco-Vanzetti defense organizations in New York City. They are the International Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the Sacco-Vanzetti Students Committee and the International Labor Defense and the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee.

"The freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti now rests in the hands of labor. Only overwhelming mass demonstrations throughout the country can save these victims of capitalist justice.

"We take the liberty of proposing to you and to all Sacco-Vanzetti Committees in New York and vicinity the issuing of a call immediately for a one-half day's strike on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 9, to be followed by a mass demonstration at a centrally located place in New York City, preferably Union Square. We are arranging to issue these proposals ourselves but, in the interest of united action, we propose that this demonstration and strike be conducted jointly.

"Fraternally yours,

"SACCO AND VANZETTI EMERGENCY COMMITTEE."
Rose Baron, Acting Secretary.

Declaration of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party

The decision of Governor Fuller is the final act in the series begun by a farcical trial and continued by the repeated denial of a fair trial in spite of accumulated evidence of frame-up. With the decision of Gov. Fuller no one can any longer doubt the fact that the workers can secure no justice from capitalist courts. Now only the united might of the labor movement can save its two valiant champions.

The demand for the blood of these two innocent workers is an unprecedented challenge to and attack upon the American labor movement. Workers have not been executed for labor activities in America since the Haymarket executions in 1886. The fact that the courts and those who control them are determined to murder Sacco and Vanzetti is evidence of the extent to which reaction is going in our country. The Sacco-Vanzetti decision is not an isolated incident. It is part of the entire campaign of the master class and its government against the workers and part of the general effort of the reaction to destroy our labor organizations and break all possible resistance to the world war which is being prepared and the reaction which is raging in our country.

Self Defense.

McManaway immediately surrendered to the authorities and pleaded self defense. He encountered Merz on the railroad track near the mine, about eight o'clock in the morning as the coal company president was strolling home after spending a night in personal charge of his gunmen and artillery at the tipple. Merz was in an evil mood, and when he saw McManaway, made uncomplimentary remarks about the latter's family, and

10,000 Workers Gathered In Union Square Favor Monster Walkout

Ten thousand demonstrating workers in Union Square thundered, "Yes," when they were asked if they would strike on August 9 in protest of the murderous decision of Governor Fuller who refused to free Sacco and Vanzetti. Militant banners flashed above the heads of the workers as they were addressed by determined labor speakers and wave upon wave of cheers greeted the demand to strike in a last minute effort to free the condemned workers.

At 4.30 yesterday thousands of workers began to pour into Union Square to protest against the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti as ordered by Fuller. The workers gathered about the four speaking platforms which were set up to accommodate the many speakers who were scheduled to talk. The meeting was arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party. The I. W. W., the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee and the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee participated in the demonstration.

Declare General Strike In Rosario, Argentina, In World Move to Free Two Workers

BULLETIN.

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 4.—Approximately 15,000 Tampa cigar factory employes walked out on a general strike here this afternoon as a protest against Governor Fuller's decision to send Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to the electric chair.

A meeting attended by more than 8,000 workers to determine the length of the strike was in progress here this afternoon. The same cigar makers walked out for a one day strike last month as a protest against the threat to electrocute the framed-up workers.

Sacco, Vanzetti Expected Decision.

BOSTON, Aug. 1. Steeling herself to the task, Mrs. Nicola Sacco today in the death house at state's prison told her husband and Bartolomeo Vanzetti of Fuller's vicious decision.

Those who witnessed the dramatic event, state that apparently the two prisoners had expected Fuller's action and that the tidings did not cause a great deal of surprise.

Three Prison Bars.

Defense Attorney William G. Thompson who with Mrs. Sacco when she told the framed-up workers about Fuller's decision then the prison bars.

A conference in the death house followed, the lawyer going to the cell of Celestinos Madeiros at one time to talk with him.

What Mrs. Sacco said, to her husband was known only to the attorneys and prison guards and her words were kept from the world.

Leaving the prison, Attorney Thompson in the uncertain terms refused point-blank to reveal what took place inside, the condition of the prisoners, or defiant plans for a new legal move.

Mrs. Sacco, dry-eyed, rushed to a waiting automobile, shielding her face from photographers with her hat. The party drove away. They were in the death house more than an hour and a half.

Sacco Grows Weaker

Dr. Joseph McLaughlin, prison physician, reported Sacco growing slowly weaker as the result of eight-teen days of hunger strike.

A veritable cordon of uniformed policemen, brought from all echons of the city, were stationed around the prison wall and in the adjoining fenced yards. Tonight this force will be reinforced by a squadron of police in automobile and on cycles.

The office of Governor Fuller was flooded with telegrams and letters today from all parts of the country protesting against his decision to send Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair.

3,000 BARBERS STRIKE TO FREE SACCO, VANZETTI

Three thousand [illegible] Barbers yesterday demanded that the American Federation of Labor call a general strike in a last minute effort to save Sacco and Vanzetti. The demand was sent by telegram and called for immediate action to demonstrate the will of for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

When the 3,000 striking barbers marched up Metropolitan Park, Brooklyn, they were greeted by 30 uniformed cops, acting under the orders of Police Commissioner Warren, who violently smashed the demonstration.

Big Demonstration

Meeting of Local 91 of the Journeymen Barber Union ordered early yesterday all shops out on strike at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum on Willoughby Ave., and a demonstration before the parade and demonstration by paper-capped striking barbers.

Yesterday was made by a one-hour protest strike by the barbers' union, acting under the order of Police Commissioner Warren, who violently smashed the demonstration.

The Hand Raised Against Sacco and Vanzetti Is the Hand Raised Against the Daily Worker

American capitalism has condemned Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair. Their crime has been none other than that of fighting in the interests of working class, of seeking to organize them into trade unions to protect their interests, and of bringing enlightenment and understanding to the workers of Massachusetts. In the code of capitalist law this crime is unforgivable. Death is its punishment.

The DAILY WORKER, too, has dared to raise its voice against the open shop, against the new War Danger, against the present social order, and for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. This is its crime. For this it is being prosecuted by the Federal Grand Jury. For this, the capitalist class seeks to destroy The DAILY WORKER.

But the workers of America will never permit their champions to be destroyed. They will keep up the fight until Sacco and Vanzetti are finally freed. They will keep up the fight to GUARD THE DAILY WORKER from the enemies of the working class, until the day, when the capitalist judges and capitalist governors no longer rule, and the working class is finally enthroned to manage its own destinies. On with the fight for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. On with the fight to GUARD THE DAILY WORKER.

SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI SAYS WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY IN STATEMENT OF CENTRAL COMMITTEE

munist) Party calls upon its members and those who sympathize with it to devote all their energy in these next few days to this cause. It has arranged that at general membership meetings, to be called in every city on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the first order of business shall be the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The decision gives Sacco and Vanzetti only 5 more days to live. Only the united might of the labor movement can save them. In this hour, whatever our differences, all forces must unite on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. It calls upon all labor organizations to unite for this common action. We propose that the workers everywhere picket all federal and state government offices beginning at once. We call upon the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, now in session, and upon the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, and upon all labor organizations to call and participate in protest strikes on August 9, and calls for demonstrations on August 9 under the auspices of all labor organizations. It pledges itself to support and take part in any demonstrations so called.

The entire party will close its ranks and fight as one to mobilize the widest possible masses to stop the execution of this criminal decision and to secure the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

BERLIN, August 4.—Regular telephone service between Berlin and Buenos Ayres is expected within a year as the result of successful tests held last night.

The voices from Germany were transmitted through regular telephone wires to the radio station in Nomen and thence on short wave lengths to a radio station at Villa Zeltra and thence by telephone wires to Buenos Ayres.

No sending apparatus has been established in Buenos Ayres, but the one-sided telephone conversation was heard clearly, cable advices stated.

Nation-Wide Strike to Free Sacco and Vanzetti

Fuller's decision was "unbelievably brutal in its partisanship and even more brutal in the omission of facts," a statement issued today by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee said:

"The days separating Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chairs are few, but this Defense Committee will continue to fight for justice for these two men. Our faith in their innocence is unshaken. We call upon the millions of people throughout the world, who have supported them, to come forward and join us in this last desperate effort to stay the hand of the judicial hangman."

The committee in seven years has spent $25,000 for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, who were railroaded because of their radical beliefs.

Mrs. Sacco is reported in a state of collapse as a result of Fuller's decision to railroad her husband and Vanzetti to the electric chair.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—American government officials were today ordered placed under heavy guard with a view to demonstrations by Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers outraged by the decision of Governor Fuller of Massachusetts.

As soon as the decision of the Massachusetts executive was made public the state department cabled all consulates, legations and consular offices as well as missions and officials who are traveling abroad.

Plan Legal Defense

Immediately after the issuance of the retirement statement the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee announced that Attorney Arthur D. Hill, prominent Boston member of the bar had been retained to determine what, if any future legal steps should be taken in behalf of the condemned men.

Troops Guard Thayer

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 4. Extra precautions were taken today to guard Governor Alvan T. Fuller as he closed his summer home in Rye Beach every evening and over the week-end, while Sacco and Vanzetti are in their death cell.

In addition to a Massachusetts state police body guard, a detail of three New Hampshire state troopers stationed there.

Governor Fuller was offered any protection desired by Governor H. N. Spaulding and it was thought likely that a detail will be assigned from the 197th Regiment, Coast Artillery, National Guard, in camp at Rye, near the Fuller estate.

Plans Golf.

Two state troopers were sent to Ogunquit Beach, Maine, today to guard Judge Webster Thayer. Judge Thayer was on the golf links.

Police for Paris Protest.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—Special police precautions were taken today to guard the United States embassy and the consulate buildings as a result of Governor Fuller's decision that Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti must die.

Bicycle policemen, prepared to rush for reinforcements upon a moment's notice, took up their duties at the embassy and consulate in addition to a dozen uniformed gendarmes at each building.

Plainclothes detectives were stationed on the public stairway leading to the consular offices.

General Strike Tuesday Says Union Sq. Crowd

Bright in the sunlight gleamed the revolutionary banners of New York's militant labor vanguard. Some of the banners read:

"Only a Protest Strike Can Save our Martyrs."

"Shall Capitalism Murder Our Fighters?"

"Sacco and Vanzetti We Need You."

"Governor Fuller, You've Had Your Word From Wall Street."

"Only a protest strike can Save Us."

One enormous banner carried by four workers had inscribed on it, Read the DAILY WORKER, The voice of Freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti!"

Call For Strike.

The speeches were short in length but to the point and in most cases clarion calls demanding a general protest strike. Some of the speakers were William F. Dunne, J. Louis Engdahl, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, John J. Ballam, Pat Devine, Bert Miller, William Patterson, B. Benjamin, Rose Pastesta, Bertram D. Wolfe, William W. Weinstone, H. M. Wicks, Roger Francizon, Sam Don, Richard B. Moore, Chas. Krumbein, Philip Frankfeld, Al Schaap, and others.

A resolution calling for a united front on the part of all labor for the purpose of calling a national general strike was thunderously applauded. The resolution read as follows:

Text of Resolution.

"Whereas the farcical trial of Sacco and Vanzetti followed by the repeated denial of a new trial in spite of accumulated evidence of frame-up, and the crowning act of criminal injustice, the declaration of Governor Fuller, demonstrate that the workers can secure no justice from capitalist courts, and

"Whereas only the united protest of labor can now save these two workers' champions,

"Therefore be it resolved by this meeting called by the Worker's Party in Union Square:

Call for Unity.

"1. We call upon the entire labor movement to unite, regardless of differences, in a common struggle to release Sacco and Vanzetti.

"2. We call upon the entire labor movement to unite in a half-day Joint protest strike at 12 o'clock on Tuesday, August 9th.

"3. We demand the immediate and unconditional release of these two innocent men.

"4. We call upon the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor now in session to issue a call for such a strike.

"5. We call upon the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to issue a call to all of their affiliated organizations for a strike at the same time.

"6. We call upon all labor organizations, regardless of differences, to declare and participate in this strike.

"7. We call upon all workers to unite their forces to end the system of capitalist injustice and oppression and the capitalist control of government and to build a workers' government in the United States.

"Unite All Labor's Forces!"
"Free Sacco and Vanzetti!"
Workers (Communist) Party, District 2.

Weinstone Speaks.

In his ringing address to the workers at the meeting, William W. Weinstone, secretary of District 2, Workers' Party, said, "We will do everything within our power so that Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die. The labor movement, despite the Wolfe and Stevens, has great power, it can stop the wheels of industry. Sacco and Vanzetti must not die."

Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers' School declared that the general strike is labor's last court of appeal. He said, "Five days from now every worker should stop working at the stroke of noon.

then drew his gun. McManaway fought with Merz and killed him.

"Underworld Dicks."

BELLAIRE, Ohio, August 4.—Subdistrict 5 of District 6, the largest sub-district in the United Mine Workers of America, has issued a statement to the public in answer to unleashing propaganda put out by the operators. The companies have been charging the Ohio miners with violence, while at the same time deliberately going out to raise private troops, and to place them in neighborhoods where miners have to live, with instructions to so conduct themselves towards the striking miners that violence is bound to result. The officers of the sub-district say:

"From April 1914 to May 1915 the Eastern Ohio mines were closed not a single act of violence was committed. History of coal strikes reveals that riots in coal mining communities are incited by the importation of thugs and stool-pigeons by coal operators to intimidate the resident miners. If trouble occurs in the present suspension the responsibility will rest upon the operators, who have already made arrangements for the employment of a group of 'employment agency dicks,' according to the word being passed along the line in Cleveland's underworld, for the express purpose of starting trouble in Ohio while in reality it pillage the so-called coal fields."

Noted Scab-Herder.

The miners particularly point to the slanders against the union put out by certain Doctor John H. Meagher, a steel company employe.

Says Sub-district 5:

"And to top it all, he and Leader Ohio operators have crossed the river and secured the counsel of one, Doctor John H. Mengher, professional strike breaker and open shop advocate, who is head of the Industrial Relations Association of the Wheeling District, which is financed by the steel interests. On April 2nd Meagher scooped down into the mire of slander and abuse and tested a statement. In part his statement read.

Incoherent Lying.

"Past history shows the United Mine Workers of America to be the following:

"'A Maffia of shotguns, daggers and bombs. A warring machine that winks at patriotism, applauds treason and keeps society in nerves. A hangman minority that makes politicians quail and newspapers tremble. A class thuggery to blackjack the wealth" of alleged Coal Barons. 1927

We Do Not Surrender Sacco and Vanzetti to Massachusetts Murderers! They Shall Be Freed!

The Massachusetts murderers have unmasked.

Governor Fuller, brutally, coldly and contemptuously; has said that Sacco and Vanzetti must die.

The spokesman of the capitalist conspirators rejects all the evidence which has convinced millions of people all over the world that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent—and sends them to their death.

In a death cell close to those in which Sacco and Vanzetti are confined sits Madeiros, a convicted criminal who has confessed to the Braintree murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti were tried and found guilty.

Governor Fuller simply says that he does not believe the Madeiros confession.

Fourteen witnesses who swore that they saw Sacco and Vanzetti elsewhere than Braintree at the time the crime was committed, and that these two workers could not possibly have been in Braintree for criminal or any other purpose, have demanded that they be prosecuted for perjury if Sacco and Vanzetti are to be electrocuted.

Governor Fuller makes no reply except to say that two innocent working men must die.

Massachusetts capitalism, backed by the full weight of imperialist reaction, takes two human sacrifices. Plucked by powerful fingers from the ranks of the working class, Sacco and Vanzetti have been tortured for seven years—tortured as no workers in the history of the American labor movement have been tortured.

They were leaders of their fellows in the cause of labor. They were arrested and tried as representatives of the working class.

They were convicted by class justice and they are to die because of class vengeance.

American capitalism says to the American workers:

"Two at least of your number we have and we will not let them go till they are dead by our hands.

"When we have burned the lives from these two workers who dared to challenge the domination of our class in Massachusetts, we will give you their charred bodies to remind you of our power.

"Our feudal forebears hung the bodies of rebels in chains on gibbets to terrorize the countryside.

"We, the rulers of the greatest industrial nation, kill by more modern methods. We are able to murder Sacco and Vanzetti with the same current that sends the news of their deaths as a warning to millions of their class."

But to us the death sentence for our comrades will not be a signal for submission but a stern symbol of the need for solidarity and action.

We do not surrender Sacco and Vanzetti to the Massachusetts executioners. We do not bow to the mandate of Fuller, the callous pro-consul of American capitalism.

We say to the Massachusetts murderers that they shall never close the switch which will send the deadly current thru the bodies of two innocent workers.

Sacco and Vanzetti must be Freed!

We will show the ruling class of America that Fuller's death decree has united the whole labor movement into one compact army with no other purpose now but to strike the shackles from Sacco and Vanzetti!

We will show to the rulers that we know that Sacco and Vanzetti are chosen for the first victims in the onslaught on the whole labor movement which now impends and which is a preliminary to imperialist war.

We say that this blow shall not fall.

In every industrial center, from now until August 10, there must be continual mass protest—strikes, demonstrations, mass meetings.

The Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, now meeting in convention in Fall River, should take the lead in calling for action. It should call upon President Green of the American Federation of Labor to recommend a nationwide protest strike. Every mass meeting should make this same demand.

Every organization, unions, fraternal societies, cooperatives must be brought into the struggle.

The time is short but the issue is clear—the working class must tear Sacco and Vanzetti from the hands of their class enemies.

It can be done. To fail is to confess that American labor cannot protect its militants.

Thru Sacco and Vanzetti the Massachusetts murderers and American imperialism are striking a blow at the whole labor movement.

This blow can be warded off and turned into a mighty offensive against labor's enemies by the united and ceaseless effort of the working class.

Not Defense but Offense is the weapon which the American labor movement must wield.

Sacco and Vanzetti shall be freed!

LETTER OF WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY, DISTRICT 2, TO THE SOCIALIST PARTY ON SACCO AND VANZETTI

The Workers (Communist) Party yesterday issued an invitation to the Socialist Party to join with it in common action on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti for a local strike and united demonstration of all sections of the labor movement on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 9.

In its letter the Workers Party calls upon the Socialist Party to forget their differences sufficiently to unite in common action on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. The letter reads:

August 4, 1927.

August Claessens, Secretary,
Socialist Party of Greater New York,
7 E. 15th Street,
New York City.

Dear Comrades:

Capitalist justice has struck its final blow against Sacco and Vanzetti. With cynical disregard of the world-wide protest of the working class and all progressive-minded people, the Governor of Massachusetts backed by the rapacious capitalist class has doomed Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair.

By taking this action against Sacco and Vanzetti, despite the overwhelming weight of evidence proving their innocence, the capitalist class is striking a blow at the entire working class of America. The execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, if carried out, will be the starting point of a series of repressive measures throughout the country against American labor and particularly against the millions of foreign-born workers. The capitalist class will not stop with murdering Sacco and Vanzetti. It will continue its brutality and violence against any section of the working class that struggles for improvement of the conditions of labor and for a vigorous fight against capitalist injustice.

In this critical hour, labor is called upon to employ all the power at its command in one last effort for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. Through united action in common local and national demonstrations and strikes, the working class can still free Sacco and Vanzetti. However fundamental our differences are, at such a time as this, differences must not be permitted to stand in the way of common action on behalf of these two men.

In the interests of these two victims and in the interests of the entire working class of America, we propose to you that we take steps for the immediate organization of united demonstrations calling for the immediate liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti. We concretely propose the issuance of a joint declaration calling upon all labor organizations of New York City to stop work on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 9, and to participate in one mighty demonstration calling for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

We feel sure that if such a demonstration of united action is made, that it will go a long way to halting the execution of these workers. Quick and decisive action is necessary. For that reason we request you immediate answer to our proposal.

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) W. W. WEINSTONE,
General Secretary,
District 2.

3,000 Barbers Strike To Free Sacco, Vanzetti

in part: "The final verdict has not been rendered; the workingclass nationality and internationality can yet save these victims of the capitalist class vengeance, whose only crime was that they were radical fighters in the ranks of labor."

Wicks commended the barbers for striking and for sending a resolution to the executive council of the A. F. of L. requesting them to endorse action by organized labor.

Demand National Strike.

The text of the resolution which was unanimously passed by the strikers and forwarded by telegram to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor read as follows:

"Brothers: We, members of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, Local 913, having declared a one-day general strike on August 4, 1927 protesting against the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti, feel that the decision of Governor Fuller affirming the sentence of death to those two workers is an insult and a challenge to the civilized world and the American workingclass in particular.

Labor Can Free Them.

"We feel that organized labor has not done its best to free these two fellow workers.

"In many cases the united action of labor in other countries has saved members of the workingclass from a similar fate.

"We appeal to you as president of the American Federation of Labor to call a general strike throughout the United States and demonstrate the will of labor for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti."

The resolution was signed be Peter Midola, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of the barbers' union.

"We Must Fight," Says Tresca.

Norman Thomas, a functionary in the socialist party also spoke. Thomas declared that the day of the execution should be set aside as a day of "mourning and fasting."

Carlo Tresca, internationally-known radical editor, said that "instead of preparing to fast and mourn we must prepare to fight." Tresca made fiery addresses in both Italian and English.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the assembled striking barbers:

"We, 3,000 journeymen barbers of Local 913, assembled in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum on August 4th, taking into consideration the unexpected and drastic decision of Governor Fuller affirming the death sentence against Sacco and Vanzetti decide to start today the agitation for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Insult to Labor.

"We are confident that the civilized world and the international workingclass will respond to the insult and challenge of the Massachusetts capitalists through its agent, Governor Fuller.

"We pledge ourselves to work and support with all our might for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti and to keep ourselves ready for another general strike."

Following the reading of the resolution the locals band played "The Internationale." Enthusiasm and militant determination marked the meeting throuout.

Police Are Vicious.

After the meeting the thousands of strikers swelled their ranks with friends and sympathizers and pro-

October 23, 1926—Following hearing of lengthy arguments Judge Thayer in a viciously biased statement denies new trial based on Madeiros confession and sixty-three supporting affidavits.

May 5, 1927 Governor Fuller begins his "investigation" of the case.

August 3, 1927 Governor Fuller decides Sacco and Vanzetti to death in the electric chair.

rceded to march to McLaren Park in Greenpoint. The line of march was down Myrtle Ave. to Bushwick, then on to Grand St., over to Metropolitan Ave. and into the park. At the entrance to the park they were greeted by 50 uniformed cops who viciously broke up the parade.

The names of Fuller and Thayer were hissed thruout all the proceedings.

The arrangements committee consisted of John Tartanella, manager of Local 913; Peter Midolla, recording secretary of the union; and Samuel Levy, president.

The Pan-American Federation of Labor as a Tool of Workers Betrayal in Latin America

By J. NEVAREZ.

Workers Eager To Organize.

In Porto Rico we have the first instance in the history of Wall Street's crusade for colonies, where following on the heels of the Yankee military forces of conquest, and the military or colonial regimes imposed upon the victims of the coming of the A. F. of L. bureaucrats in the accordance of the Wall Street-Washington imperialist policy in its efforts to crush out every ounce of resistance manifested by the conquered colonials, and to consolidate the imperialist political regime. Taking advantage of the growing revolt among the island's laboring masses from the oppressive semi-feudal conditions remaining after the Spanish regime, and which are, under the new Yankee regime becoming more unbearable, due to the introduction of semi-feudalism, and modern methods of intensified industrial exploitation, the Gompers outfit, with promises of salvation, succeeded in betraying the feelings of revolt among the Porto Rican workers, into channels suiting the aims of the Washington colonial policy. Having corrupted, with their bourgeois democratic phrasiology, and won over the leader of the Porto Rican labor movement, (Santiago Iglesias), the workers were encouraged to organize into the A. F. of L.-directed Federacion Libre, by the promise of leadership in their struggles to sweep away semi-feudal discriminations, and to gain better conditions from their new Yankee capitalist exploiters.

The workers of Porto Rico, from the hardi-craftsmen in the cigar factories to the unskilled laborers on the sugar and tobacco plantations, took advantage of the opportunities offered them for organization, and joined the ranks of the Federacion Libre till it numbered more than 80,000 strong, and at the beginning of the war years, beginning in 1915, the entire working class of Porto Rico, under the lead of these 80,000 organized, became involved in a long series of strikes, extending into the year 1920.

Workers Raised Red Flag.

The workers of Porto Rico fought their exploiters heroically. They demonstrated great militancy, even to the extent of raising the red flag on the sugar plantations, as at Fajardo, San Juan, Bayamon, etc. But the Iglesias leadership, devoted to the strike-breaking methods of the Gompers outfit, did not give the strike movement the militant leadership needed. It did not voice the anti-imperialist character of the strike movement, and thus permitted the hostile efforts of the Porto Rican bourgeoisie to be crushed in blood by the strike-breaking insular police, judges, seals and jailors. They culminated in the tragic defeat of the tobacco workers' strike in 1920, in which the most militant and class-conscious forces were crushed.

Today the Federacion Libre counts at the very most not more than 1,000 members; the workers of Porto Rico are completely disorganized and at the mercy of the exploiters. The Iglesias bureaucracy sit comfortably in their swivel chairs, in the office of the Federacion Libre, holding down their jobs with an air of security. So long as they are loyal to the executive council their salaries are secure. They need not worry if the Federacion Libre has a small membership, or about the fall of the rank and file. They hold their jobs from above, from the executive council in Washington.

Militancy Revives.

In recent months, we witnessed in Porto Rico a revival of the militant labor movement among the cigar makers of the labor-hating American Porto Rican Tobacco Co. Due to unbearable open shop conditions imposed upon them, these workers, rank and file members of the cigar makers' union, forced a strike which lasted more than six months, and was settled favorably for the workers. Thanks to their stubbornness in holding out the strike, they forced support from the bureaucracy. I say forced because on his return last March to Porto Rico, Iglesias expressed himself as not being in favor of the strike method in that situation. This outburst of Iglesias' was reported to the writer, with tears in his eyes, by the old working class fighter, Comrade Eduardo Conde, the only leader who has remained loyal to the Porto Rican workers, who fights against the Iglesias traitors and is brutally mistreated by Iglesias and his underling, Rafael Alonso.

In addition to the capture of the trade union movement and placing it in control of American imperialism, Iglesias proceeded with the organization of the Socialist Party in opposition to the liberal bourgeois, anti-American political parties. This party, even tho it was affiliated with the American socialist party, was sponsored by Gompers and Co. Using militant and even revolutionary phrases, this socialist party won to its support the great masses of the Porto Rican workers and agricultural laborers, but by its politics only misled and betrayed the masses of Porto Rico into the net of American imperialist domination.

A. F. of L. Backed Yellow Socialists.

While the A. F. of L. disdained the socialist party in the United States it, at the same time, sponsored the socialist party in the colony of Porto Rico. Why? The following excerpt from the program of the socialist party of Porto Rico will explain:

"The Socialist Party of Porto Rico declares that the continued influence of the people of the United States upon the destinies of the people of Porto Rico has been, and is, a civilizing one. That the extension of the constitution of the United States of America to Porto Rico represents a positive guarantee of the public and political liberties, of favoring and protecting the rights of the individual, and therefore we favor the permanent and inseparable union of the people of Porto Rico with the people of the United States."

Here we have a socialist party in which Sam Gompers and Matthew Woll could be proud of membership.

Socialists U. S. Lackeys.

The following recent incident in the Porto Rican senate held March 22-27. The Senate President and leader of the bourgeois Unionist Party, in outlining his intended discourse between the visiting Secretary of War Davis at the official banquet, suggested that he intended in addition to laying bare the problems of Porto Rico, to condemn the Latin American policies of the United States initiated by Roosevelt with the rape of Colombia, and pursued at present in relation to Nicaragua.

Trembled for Their Jobs.

Our Secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, the honorable Santiago Iglesias, hastily intervened and warned Baeedo:

"You would assume a serious responsability in confronting the secretary of war regarding the policies which his government may pursue in its relations with Mexico and Nicaragua. You should confine yourself exclusively to the problems concerning Porto Rico and not meddle in international affairs. Such an act would be interpreted badly by those in whose hands the fate of our aspirations lie." Which makes clear fate of their political ambitions, whose further development can be realized with the granting of political autonomy (but not independence) to the Island and which would give either of these politicians the opportunity to become governor.

Bowed down with such humility bowed before the "labor" senator Iglesias, adding "True, very true, as colonials it is not our right to vent our feelings or sentiments. I will confine myself as Senator Iglesias suggested."

In its every act then the Socialist Party is demonstrating that it is the tool and standard-bearer of American imperialist rule in Porto Rico.

The relative ease and completeness with which the labor branch of American imperialism has succeeded in destructing the development of a labor movement expressive of the real interests of the workers, and bringing it under control in Porto Rico, has created a desire in the American labor bureaucracy to extend its conquest to the labor movements in the other Latin American countries. First subjugated by the military forces of the United States this becomes an easy matter. The instrument created for this purpose is the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor organized in 1918.

And that the Pan A. F. of L. with its temporarily conquered labor movement of Porto Rico as its corner stone, and the tested Porto Rican flunkey as its Spanish secretary, is on the road to betray the labor movement in other conquered countries, may be demonstrated by the existing situation in Cuba.

Cuban Workers Betrayed by Socialists.

In Cuba prior to the reign of the tyrant Machado, we had a labor movement that strode rapidly toward militancy. The workers organized in the tobacco industry were the backbone of this militant anti-imperialist labor movement, and with the support of the masses of "Colonos," gave birth to a Communist Party orientating towards the leadership of the Communist International. Then followed the Machado reign of terror against the Cuban labor movement. Under the secret guidance of the ambassador of the American Sugar Trust, General Crowder, he instituted a systematic and most ruthless campaign of terror, to break the militant spirit of labor in Cuba. Labor leaders like Enriqua Varona, Thomas Grant and 200 outstanding militants were assassinated. The prisons were filled and thousands forced to leave the Island. The Communist Party was dealt a severe blow and forced underground.

And in this tragic moment in the labor movement of Cuba, with the soil of Cuba soaked red with workers' blood, the yellow socialist sheet "the "Accion Socialista" of Habana, spokesman for the Pan-American Federation of Labor, whose editor and administrator, Juan Arevalo, is its delegate to the convention held in Washington, makes this statement of gratification in an editorial of July 12, 1927:

"There are distinct roads that a labor movement may take. There is the road toward the Communist International which guides the Communist Parties and the Red Trade Unions. And then if the labor movement does not turn toward Russia it has the alternative of Amsterdam, Zurich or Washington."

Cuban Fakers Favor PAFL

After pointing out the indecision in the labor movement as to which road to take, it goes on to say:

"It (the Cuban delegation to the Pan A. F. of L.) goes to signify the road which our labor movement travels is already determined (with the aid of the Machado-Crowder terror J. N.). In the near future, the confusion (read militancy J. N.) which destroyed our labor movement, will all-appear forever.

"It is true that there are yet some labor organizations that are not in agreement with the tendencies of the Pan-American Federation of Labor. But, we assert, if the labor movement of Cuba wants to progress, if it does not wish to remain inactive, or in the chaotic state in which it found itself for some years, it will be necessary to incorporate itself with the tendencies of the Pan-American Federation of Labor."

Robert Minor to Speak At Cleveland Picnic on Aug. 7; New Vass Farm

Cleveland District, International Labor Defense, will hold its annual outing and picnic on Sunday, August 7th at the New Vass Farm, stop 24½ Kinsman Rd.

Arrangements are being made by the committee which is drawing up a program of entertainment and sports which is sure to interest everyone and also in which everyone present will be able to participate.

An analysis of the decision in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti will be made by a nationally known cartoonist and newspaper writer, Bob Minor, who has spent the past eight months in Soviet Russia and other parts of Europe. Comrade Minor will tell us of the International Protest Movement for Sacco and Vanzetti that has swept Europe.

Dancing from 7 to 7 o'clock. Speaking at 2 p. m. To reach picnic ground take Kinsman Rd. car to end of line. There take I. L. D. bus which goes direct to grounds.

Come early. There will be plenty of refreshments and eats.

Adjourn Theater Meet Without Planning For Central Ticket Bureau

The absence of Lee Shubert led to the adjournment of a meeting of representatives from New York theatres without agreement on a plan for a central ticket agency.

Among those who attended the meeting were Arthur Hopkins, Sam Harris, Arthur Hammerstein, Joe Leblang and Thomas Brandhurst. The chief interests not represented were those of Florenz Ziegfeld, Charles Dillingham and George White.

The DAILY WORKER Army Never Sleeps

Like a faithful sentry at his post of duty, the Daily Worker trooper is always awake to his responsibilities.

He knows that the army of the capitalist enemy is constantly at work, enslaving and ensnaring the mind of the wage slaves with its pernicious propaganda.

The capitalist press, movies, radio, the church, the schools—these are the varied and powerful agencies which are constantly doing their devilish work.

The Daily Worker Army cannot let up its efforts up its vigilance for a single moment.

The drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker will succeed only if our army is always on the job, working steadily at its revolutionary task.

Our indefatigable persistence and iron determination will break the enemy's ranks and win for us new reinforcements of Five Thousand New Readers for the coming struggle.

Fuller's Prejudiced Decision

The same cynicism, the brutality and prejudice that have characterized the whole procedure of the state of Massachusetts in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti since its very inception, was glaringly set forth in the decision of Governor Alvan T. Fuller, multi-millionaire owner of the scab Packard Motor Car Company of Boston. Its flippant and careless tone confirms our conviction that the hearings conducted by the governor and by his committee of three who are characterized in his decision as "men whose reputation for intelligence, open-mindedness, intellectual honesty and good judgment were above reproach," were farcical in the extreme; that the fate of the men had been decided before the investigations started and that the "hearings" were staged solely for the purpose of trying to conceal the crime contemplated by the state.

The utter dishonesty of Fuller, his fear of a real investigation is indicated by the very calibre of the creatures he appointed on his committee. President Abbot Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University heads one of the most poisonous institutions of so-called higher learning in the whole world, maintained for the exclusive purpose of teaching the sons of the predatory capitalists how best to fleece the workers. Harvard is supported by such imperialist monsters as J. P. Morgan & Co., and is called a "bulwark of conservatism." Judge Robert Grant and President Samuel W. Stratton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology had both expressed views hostile to Sacco and Vanzetti before their appointments on the committee, and both of them are servile agents of the labor-hating mill owners, that mass of foul pollution that calls itself the Back Bay aristocracy of Boston.

So fearful was Fuller that the known facts regarding the vindictive attitude of Judge Thayer, the vicious disregard of the prosecution for the so-called rights of the accused, the ignorance of not the corruption of the jury, the refusal to admit newly discovered evidence as a basis for a new trial, would force official recognition, that he selected men whom he knew to be enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti, and who would sink low enough to become parties to the last murderous act in the conspiracy.

If Fuller had been impelled by even the slightest degree of honesty he would have appointed at least one labor representative on the committee and given the greatest possible publicity to the proceedings by holding open hearings. Instead of this the whole thing was veiled in secrecy. Witnesses for the defense were so intimidated and generally browbeaten that they were on the verge of collapse as they left the room where the eminences of educational and judicial Massachusetts were conducting their stage-play designed to whitewash the would-be murderers.

Instead of an honest investigation, one that would endeavor to ascertain the facts in the case, the Fuller decision reveals the most loathsome efforts to conceal the facts. For instance, Fuller sneers at the claim of the defense, that the reason the men refused to tell the police, who arrested them a month after the crime for which they finally charged was committed, the truth about their movements at the time of their arrest was because they wanted to shield their radical friends from arrest.

He seems to see something particularly criminal in the fact that they were about to start out at ten o'clock at night to distribute radical literature. Every radical and revolutionist in the labor movement knows it is not at all uncommon to do this sort of work, not merely at ten o'clock, but at twelve midnight, at two or four o'clock in the morning and at all other so-called unreasonable hours when the smug bourgeois exploiters of labor are peacefully sleeping and dreaming of greater profits to be wrung out of labor, or revelling in cabarets with their kept ladies.

Fuller also says he found that the "jurors were thoroly honest men." No reason for this belief is given. I presume the fact that they brought in verdicts of guilty against two radical workmen is sufficient to prove their honesty in Fuller's eyes. Fuller also proclaims his belief in the words of the witnesses for the prosecution. This is only another way of stating his belief that the alibi witnesses for the defense were, without exception, liars.

The fact that they were working men and women would tend to strengthen that view on the part of the labor-hating buzzard who is governor of the state of Massachusetts.

The Fuller decision is a class document designed to vindicate the perjurers who testified for the open-shoppers of the state and belittle everyone connected with the defense.

Its sins of ommission are as glaring as its sins of commission. Fuller does not even mention the role of the agents of the United States Department of Justice. He entirely overlooks the fact that Vanzetti was in New York trying to protect his fellow-worker, Salsedo, from the foul clutches of A. Mitchell Palmer's gunmen and gangsters and that he knew the circumstances surrounding the manner in which Salsedo met his death at the hands of the department of justice on May 3, 1920, when his body was found crushed almost beyond recognition on Park Row from thence it had fallen from the fourteenth story of a building in which the government maintained secret torture chambers. This incentive on the part of the government to discredit Vanzetti is entirely ignored by Fuller.

But this decision of Fuller should not stand as the final decision. It is still possible for effective action on the part of the workers of this and other countries. Too long have the workers depended upon the impartibility of the capitalist courts and judges, institutions of capitalist class dictatorship, which exist only to impose by force the will of a minority of the population upon the vast majority. Instead of workers standing before the courts of the Fullers and Thayers the time will come when the Fullers and lawyers and other enemies of the working class will stand before revolutionary tribunals of the workers.

Fuller's decision should do much to dispel any faith intelligent workers may have in the courts and government of capitalism and help immensely to generate that concentration of power that will sweep these institutions into the scrap heap of history.

The Convention Preparations

To all District Organizers:.

DEAR Comrades:—The Committee on the Preparation of the Party Convention has unanimously agreed to the following decisions regarding the Party discussion in the press and the holding of general Party membership meetings.

1. Rules Regarding Party Discussion.

1. The discussion in The DAILY WORKER and the Party press shall begin, immediately and continue till August 31st, the day of the opening of the Convention, unless mutually agreed upon in the Comittee for the Preparation of the Convention to close earlier.

2. All articles submitted for printing in the Party discussion column shall be subject to the approval of the Committee for the Preparation of the Party Convention. The deputy chairmen of the Committee for the Preparation of the Convention shall serve as editors for the Party Discussion.

3. The DAILY WORKER and all daily Party organs in the various languages shall set aside sufficient space in the section for Party news as follows: One thousand words for the Majority of the Polcom and one thousand words for the Opposition.

4. The two editors of the Party discussion shall decide upon the material to be published in the Party language organs which are not dailies.

Rules For Membership meetings

1. The District Organizer shall preside at the ten principal membership meetings in the following cities: New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, New Haven, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, and the Twin Cities (Minneapolis and St. Paul.)

2. In the organization of the mass membership meetings in the above named cities there shall be selected a special membership meeting arrangement committee on party basis with each side having full power to chose its own personnel. Three members from each side are recommended to constitute the personnel of this Committee. This committee shall take care of all arrangements, admission of members, tellers, etc. The District Organizers are to serve as chairmen of these arrangement committees.

3. The rules of procedure for the membership meetings are as follows:

(a.) Speaker for Majority of the Polcom; One hour presentation.

(b.) Speaker for Opposition; one hour presentation.

(c.) Reading of resolutions.

(d.) Collection to help defray the expenses of the meeting and to enable each district to meet the quota which will be assigned to it as its share of expense for the organization of the ten principal meetings.

(e.) Discussion from the floor divided as follows: Three speakers for the majority of the Polcom, three for the Opposition, seven minutes for each speaker and the speakers of each side alternating.

(f.) Changes in the arrangement of speakers or the above specified time alloted to speakers from the floor can be arrived at only by unanimous agreement in the membership meeting arrangement committee.

(g.) Rebuttal by representative of Opposition; 15 minutes.

(h.) Closing by representative of Polcom majority.

(i.) Voting pro and con on the Polcom Resolution.

(j.) Voting pro and con on the Opposition Resolution.

4. Participation and voting at the membership meetings in the ten principal cities above mentioned shall be limited to members in good standing of the respective city organizations with the exception of the case of New York, in which meeting any good standing member of the district organization shall be entitled to participate in the meeting and vote.

5. The mass membership meetings in the ten principal cities shall be held as follows: August 5th—New York; Chicago, August 6th— Pittsburgh, Detroit, Philadelphia, New Haven; August 7th—Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, and the Twin Cities (Minneapolis and St. Paul).

6. Membership meetings shall be arranged wherever possible by the respective city committees in the various cities on any one of the three specified dates (August 5th, 6th or 7th). These meetings must be arranged within this period.

7. All membership meetings shall be concluded not later than the night of the 7th, and as far as practical the rules of procedure and organization laid down for the ten principal meetings shall also apply in the other membership meetings.

8. Elections in the nuclei shall take place at the first regular or special nucleus meeting following the membership meetings in the respective cities where these membership meetings are held.

9. Any election in any shop or street nucleus which has not been held within these time provisions shall be declared invalid.

10. In every district there shall be elected a district convention arrangements committee in which the majority of the District Executive Committee shall have a majority and the minority of the District Committee shall have an adequately representative minority. The personnel of the minority representation shall be selected by the minority itself.

11. In these district convention arrangements committees appeals may be made from decisions arrived at. Whether these appeals shall be laid before the Committee for the preparation of the Party Convention or whether parts of the disputed arrangements in the various districts shall be held in abeyance, will depend upon the endorsement of the appeal in question by any one of the two deputy chairmen.

Fraternally,—Jay Lovestone, Wm. Z. Foster, Deputy Chairmen, Committee for the Preparation of the Party Convention.

The New Pacific Cable

Another Step in the Drive for Power in the Pacific

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

STRIKING proof of the deadly seriousness with which the American ruling class is carrying on its drive for domination of the Pacific area is contained in a news story in the New York Times of August 2nd. It says:

The Western Union Telegraph Company is completing plans for laying a new cable to China and the Far East. We quote from the Times story:

"While the Western Union has had the Pacific cable under contemplation for some time, it was said that the recent crisis in Shanghai might have served to hasten the work of the engineers on the new project.

"At the time when American and European soldiers were landing in China there were three wire systems available for Governmental and press use between the Far East and London, compared with the single cable system between China and the United States. This discrepancy was said to have caused embarrassment to officials at Washington anxious to keep in touch with the Chinese Situation."

THE theory that the American government was perfectly content to follow in the wake of British imperialism in China seems to be demolished by the above statements whose authenticity is proved by the fact that the Western Union, undoubtedly in agreement with the state and war departments, is rushing work on the new line of communication.

The announcement of this new venture whose completion will make America entirely independent of British sources for information comes immediately after the intense rivalry between Britain and America has prevented even formal agreement at Geneva.

PREPARATIONS for imperialist war consist not only in the building of huge navies and the organization of armies but also in the adaptation of the industrial enterprises of a nation to imperialist purposes.

The ships and their crews, the engineers and scientific experts, the divers and electricians who will lay, connect and put in perfect working order the new cable with a capacity of 2,500 letters per minute which will tie the Orient to America, will be part of the war machinery of American imperialism just as are the more deadly and impressive war vessels which the collapse of the Geneva conference and the struggle for domination of the Pacific area by the great powers, will give the American plunderhund an excuse to build.

AMERICAN imperialism will fight its rivals for the power to rule and rob the workers and peasants of the Far East,—the scene now of a great movement for liberation.

American business and American government are part of the same imperialist machine which threatens to drown the revolting masses in their own blood. As the New York Times says; referring to the Western Union:

"The decision of the company to investigate the possibility of entering the Pacific field was based on the belief held in many quarters that future American trade would expand toward the East rather than toward the West."

SOME day the new cable will carry the message of bloody struggle waged by American imperialism against its rivals but before that it will carry the news of its onslaughts upon the workers and peasants whose interests are in contradiction to those of the imperialist exploiters—unless the American working class develops its consciousness, its power and its will to fight as a class faster than American imperialism develops its war machinery.

Current Events

murder but on the ground that they were radicals.

THERE still exists in this country among the workers a belief that justice is blind and on the level; that there is not one law for the rich and another for the poor. This belief is a valuable aid to the capitalists of Massachusetts in getting away with the trick that was pulled off when the governor appointed his commission. While those representatives of the flower of New England's bourgeoisie were making a bluff at investigating the case, the liberals and pacifists connected with the Sacco-Vanzetti defense practically stopped appealing to mass opinion, and placed all confidence in the sense of justice of the governor or and his fellow puppets. They had a naive faith that the millionaire governor would examine the case of those two workers with the same benevolent impartiality that he would bring to bear on a consideration of the cases of two textile manufacturers convicted of killing a labor leader.

THIS illusion was not shared by either Sacco or Vanzetti. For a long time the former has expressed his conviction that there was no hope for them from the executive or judicial arms of the capitalist state in Massachusetts. Demonstrations on the part of the workers only, would halt the hangmen. This was the position of the Communists and the left wing in the labor movement. It was the position of the International Labor Defense.

THE radical elements also insisted that the workers of all shades of opinion should unite around the slogan: "Save Sacco and Vanzetti" and present a united front to the enemy. This policy was sabotaged by the socialists who were more concerned with making war on the left wing and on the Communists than fighting the capitalists who wanted to put Sacco and Vanzetti to death. There would have been no Sacco-Vanzetti protest movement but for the radicals. The officialdom of the American Federation of Labor did nothing except give lip service to their indifference thru resolutions. The bureaucrats will do nothing now. What is to be done and done quickly must be done by the masses.

IT has been said time and time again since our comrade were first framed by the capitalists of Massachusetts that "Massachusetts is on trial." This is the bunk. Massachusetts today, means those who own the industries of the state and control it politically. They are not on trial. They will not be on trial until the workers secure political power and turn the industries over to the masses that created them. Sacco and Vanzetti are in their death cells within a few yards of the electric chair. One week only stands between them and the date set for their execution. Every ounce of energy in the organized labor movement must be exerted to free them. And every section of the workingclass movement must unite in one last effort to snatch those victims of capitalist justice from the doom that faces them.

DRAMA

"Speakeasy" Opens Monday—"Abie" Breaks World's Run Record

George M. Cohan will have two new plays opening in Boston on Labor Day, "The Merry Malones" at the Colonial theatre and "The Baby Cyclone" at the Hollis Street. Following a short run "The Merry Malone" will come from Boston to open the new Erlanger's theatre in West 44th Street in this city.

William E. Lawrence has been engaged for James La Penna's "White Lights"—to play the leading juvenile role in Paul Gerard Smith's play.

Hold August 28th open. Save that day for the big Jamboree at Starlight Park, where the Joint Defense Committee will stage its big benefit.

"Speakeasy," the Edward Knoblock—George Rosener melodrama will be offered by William B. Friedlander in Asbury Park on Monday night. The cast is headed by Jose Ruben, Anne Shoemaker, Dorothy Hall, Arthur Vinton, Paul Gilfoyle, Marie Peters, John Tyrone, Beatrice Lee, Adelaide Rondelle, Ruthelma Stevens and Kate-Pier Roemer.

Anne Nichols local production of her famous comedy, "Abie's Irish Rose," will pass the world's long run record on Monday, when the 2220th performance will be given. This breaks the record established by the London production of "Chu Chin Chow" which ran for 2238 consecutive performances. Miss Nichols is now in France completing her newest play, a sequel to "Abie's Irish Rose" to be called "Abie's Children," and arranging for the production of "Abie" in Central Europe.

Daily Worker Builders Are Active at Oakland, Calif.; Hold Meetings

OAKLAND, Calif. The Daily Workers Builders Club of Alameda County is slowly but surely putting itself on the map in Oakland, Cal. Tonight a street meeting was held under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party of American and some forty copies of The DAILY WORKER were sold.

At 10th street and Broadway, Oakland, Cal., one may always find gathered a group of workers. On Friday all sorts of religious meetings going on there as well as debates among individual freaks. Along come the Workers (Communist) Party speakers by Flemming and they sweep the religionists and other freaks out of the limelight.

Instead of handing out religious dope and a lot of sokum they bring to these down trodden workers, who have very little time to read or listen to lectures, ideas of organization. These ideas are illustrated with word pictures and examples of workers in other parts of the world such as Russia and China.

While the speakers talk girls and boys go thru the crowd and sell The DAILY WORKER, hand out literature, and hold private discussions with strange workers and invite them to the hall.

Our militant little worker, Rose R. Paul, taught a Jesus shouter a lesson. He fought a fair fight and went to a glorious defeat. When the fair Rose was through with him he knew more about Communism than he thought he did about the Holy Bible.

HYLAN DENOUNCES BUS DEAL; FARE BOOST SEEN SOON

Replying to Comptroller Berry's charges that the traction tangle in Staten Island originated during Mayor Hylan's administration, the Mayor or mayor's secretary charged that the power to sell was deliberately engineered by the Walker administration in order to pave the way for a ten cent fare in all boroughs, Hylan's reply to Berry follows:

"The riding public in New York City will soon become aware of the fact that Comptroller Berry's action in refusing to O K the $175,000 power bill due to the Edison Company was a deliberate act calculated to put the Staten Island trolley lines out of commission, and to prepare the bus riders in other boroughs for an increased carfare.

Ten Cent Fare Feared.

"Today the bus riders in Staten Island are paying the ten-cent fare. "Comptroller Berry knows that in 1923 when the traction interests on Staten Island were losing heavily, to let them have an increased carfare that they could get the money for renewing traveling facilities, which was up out of public use.

Boss Builders May Not Run Both Open And Closed Shops

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 4.—According to a decision of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, contractors throughout the country will no longer be permitted to operate closed shops in one locality and open shops in another.

The decision states that the policy will be put into effect gradually, so as not to interfere with work now under way. The plan will be to call a strike on any closed shop if the owners refuse to give up its open shop.

The declaration was adopted at a meeting of sixteen presidents of building trades international unions, presided over by William J. McSorley of Washington, president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, in the Chalfont Hotel.

Trying Year of 1919 Marks Real Beginning of Soviet Railroad Workers Union

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE foundation of the powerful Railway Workers' Union, that now numbers more than 1,000,000 members in the Soviet Union, was laid in the trying year of 1919. This was not achieved without struggle. In fact, the greatest efforts had to be exerted to put down the correct basis on which to build the superstructure of the organization.

The March, 1917, revolution that destroyed czarism, released a new era of organizational growth for the Russian working class. But a conscious effort along correct organizational lines seems to have been lacking at first among the great masses of the workers. Instead of immediately building an all-inclusive organization for the whole transportation industry, there sprang up a mushroom growth of craft unions in the shops and in the operating departments.

The Communist Party alone launched a campaign for the organization of shop unions in an effort to break down craft lines.

Alexis Anfassow, the present general secretary of the Railroad Workers' Union, with two other comrades, headed the drive for the organization of the shop workers. Amassow is himself a metal worker. The movement met with considerable success. Between the March and the November Revloutions, in 1917, the number of organized railroad workers grew from 5,000 to 22,000.

It was a very loose form of organization, however. There were no dues books. The payment of dues was entirely voluntary. The craft unions that were organized were very conservative in their outlook. This condition prevailed from the Nov. 7th (1917) Revolution until the year 1919. During this period 14 different craft organizations maintained a more or less separate existence on the railroads.

In 1919, however, there was an all-inclusive congress that laid the basis for the organization of one union for the entire transportation industry. It was upon the sound basis created in 1919, during the trying months of the imperialist attack against the Soviet Union in aid of the civil wars and intervention, that the present powerful organization was built.

The union today, with its 1,087,200 members (Jan. 1, 1927) includes all but 2½ or 3 per cent of the workers employed in the industry. This small percentage of non-union membership takes in workers temporarily employed, most of them peasants who intend to return shortly to the land.

"There is no skilled worker at present unemployed on the railroads of the Soviet Union," said Secretary Amassow, in discussing the unemployed situation in the industry. (Moscow, May, 1927.)

"We are always exerting ourselves to increase the efficiency of our working force," continued Amassow. "Inefficient help is always displaced with efficient workers wherever possible. The wages of the railroad workers are divided into 18 categories of wages. General or unskilled workers are included in the first nine categories. The best qualified workers are included in the categories, from nine to 18, including such workers as machinists, engineers and the lower categories of administrative workers. The categories from 19 to 24 include the higher administrative workers.

There is small difference in the wages of the lowest and the highest categories, in comparison to czarist days when administrative officials received from 50 to 60 times as much as the wage workers.

"An effort is made each year to augment the wages of the railroad workers," said Amassow. "The increases go first to the lowest paid categories."

"Eight hours is our basic working. Double time for all overtime after eight hours is paid."

Comrade Amassow gave me the answers to a list of questions concerning the railroad workers. Two of these are published today as follows:

Economic Progress in the U. S. S. R.

QUESTION.—Can you give some data on economic achievements in the Union of Soviet Republics and the part played by the railroads?

ANSWER. The aggregate agricultural output has increased from 66.8% of the pre-war level in 1922-23 to 88.1% of that level in 1925-26. The aggregate industrial output has grown from 34.7% in 1922-23 to 93% of the pre-war level in 1925-26. Taken in absolute figures, the aggregate agricultural output has increased from 7.8 billion pre-war roubles in 1922-23 to 10.3 billion pre-war roubles in 1925-26, showing an increase of 32% during this period. In regard to the aggregate industrial output we find the following absolute figures: 1,940,000,000 pre-war roubles in 1922-23, and 5,215,000,000 in 1925-26, or an increase of 274%.

The average figure of the number of people employed in 1921-22 was 1,243,000 workers; that figure was increased to 1,550,000 in June 1925 (the reference is to the large industrial establishments alone), and to 1,898,000 in June 1926, i. e. during the twelve-month from June 1925 to June 1926 we have seen an increase of more than 300,000 people in the foremost ranks of the industrial proletariat.

The total wages, the income of the proletariat in 1922-23, constituted 20 per cent of the national income. In 1924-25 it rose already to 28.1 per cent of the national income in USSR, i. e., during such a brief period it increased from 20 per cent to 28.1 per cent or nearly one and a half times.

Why Rates Were Increased.

QUESTION.—What accounts for the increase in railway tariffs in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics?

ANSWER.—The increase in railway tariffs in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is to be explained by the fact that the Russian railway tariffs constituted only 75-80 per cent of the pre-war rates, whereas the prices on other industrial products are somewhat above the pre-war rates. In order to eliminate this inconsistency as between the transport rates and industrial prices, a slight increase in railway tariffs has been introduced.

The Greatest Failure in Labor History

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

(This is the third of a series of articles analyzing the Pan-American Federation of Labor and its recent convention at Washington.)

"Gompers Said That Pan-American Federation of Labor Might Have Life."

"SAMUEL GOMPERS," said President Green three or four times during the Washington convention, "gave his life for the Pan-American Federation of Labor." While this statement must be considered a little high-pitched to say the least, it is nevertheless true that Gompers did lavish much loving care upon it—not to say money—and that he looked upon it as one of his favorite investments. His expensive attentions were outwarded by success. Thus far, almost any way you look at it, the Pan-American Federation of Labor is one of the greatest failures in labor history.

THAT it is a failure from an organizational standpoint was demonstrated adequately in the preceding article. In the present article I shall try to show that it is a failure from the standpoint of the everyday needs of the workers. The basis of my argument is the fact that through nine years since its first official convention at Laredo, Texas, the Pan-American Federation of Labor has not grappled seriously with a single practical problem of international trade-union solidarity in the interests of the workers of the Americas.

U. S. and S. A. Workers Must Unite.

WITH American capital extending its sway over all the Americas, and with Wall Street interests playing off the workers in this country against the workers in Latin America and vice versa, energetic cooperation between the various labor movements of the western hemisphere is a vital necessity. Every important struggle in the marine transport industry, in the oil industry, in the metal industry, etc., etc., makes it plain that organized labor must be prepared to take on the field on all fronts.

JOINT strike action, international agreements, interlocking executive boards, international trade-union regulation of immigration—these are only a few of the measures that any All-American federation of labor worthy of the name would be expected to establish as a primary duty.

What about the "Pan-American Federation of Labor?"

IT has never considered international cooperation of any kind, let alone international strike action. The boycott, which has been used effectively in a number of Latin American countries in the past, and which would be a powerful weapon against U. S. manufacturers who export to Latin America, has also failed to find favor with the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

Labor Free Laissez Union Card Measure.

ONCE in a convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, (1921), the Mexican delegation introduced a resolution calling for interchange of union cards between members of the American Federation of Labor and the Mexican Confederation of Labor, but John P. Frey at the head of the resolution committee promptly slipped in the following substitute:

RESOLVED, That the Mexican Confederation of Labor and the American Federation of Labor communicate with their affiliated national and international unions with the object of establishing understandings and agreements which will bring about the interchange of membership cards between the unions affiliated with the Mexican Confederation of Labor and the American Federation of Labor."

THE substitute was adopted, and that is all that has been heard of the matter from that day to this.

Green Admits Delegates Represent Nothing.

AT the Washington convention just passed, one of the three or four Latin-American who represented some sort of legitimate labor organization introduced a resolution dealing with trade-union committees to regulate immigration. This too was immediately side-tracked by the American Federation of Labor machine.

THERE was a great deal of wordy debate at Washington, but very little to indicate that the delegates were participating in what claimed to be an international labor convention. Sometimes the thing became almost farcical. I remember that there was much excited discussion over a resolution approving the idea of continued Pan-American Federation of Labor conventions in the future. This was because one of the handpicked Latin-American "delegates" who represented nothing, except perhaps his government, saw a chance to get a permanent place on the Green-Woll payroll by attaching a rider to the effect that "in each country" the labor organization affiliated to the Pan-American Federation of Labor be recognized as the bona fide labor movement of that country." The idea of the rider (which of course had nothing to do with the original resolution) struck many receptive cords in the convention you may be sure. Enthusiasm reached such a high point that Green was oblized to make a statement explaining that "in many Latin-American countries the labor movement is only in its infancy and sometimes delegates come here from organizations having only a doubtful existence."

Discuss Erecting Lighthouse to Columbus!

EXCEPT for the usual meaningless resolution about sending out organizers, the only "constructive labor proposals" adopted were those recommending to some Latin-American governments the establishment of a department of labor and the one suggesting that all governments add labor attaches to their diplomatic and consular staffs abroad. Discussion on the establishment of a labor exposition proved a contentious one. It seemed that some "delegates" thought that Santo Domingo, for instance, should not have a Department of Labor, but a Department of Labor and Immigration! Discussion on this matter raged at such a fantastical almost the discussion on the proposal to collect funds for a lighthouse and monument to be erected somewhere in Latin America in memory of Columbus.

Leadership Betrays Workers

IN the face of actual trade-union struggle the Pan-American Federation of Labor evinces the same attitude of quiet sabotage as displayed in its convention resolutions. During the past three years there have been important strikes in many countries of North, South and Central America, but the Pan-American Federation of Labor has turned its back on them. The executive committee cannot point to a single struggle of the workers which it has assisted in any way thruout the period of its existence.

THE "Pan-American Federation of Labor," as at present controlled, can never accomplish anything in the interests of the workers of the Americas.

READING thru any one of the long reports of the executive committee of the "Pan-American Federation of Labor" you get the impression that its conception of international labor action is for Mr. William Green to write polite letters to the President of the United States or some other government official and receive polite letters in return.

Latin Workers Smell Rat

P. A. of L.—a Skunk.

IS it any wonder then that neither William Green, nor Samuel Gompers before him, has been able to allay the suspicions of the great mass of organized workers of Latin America as to what the purpose of the Pan-American Federation of Labor really is? Is it any wonder that, except for the Mexican Confederation of Labor, not one of the basic labor organizations of Latin America has even sufficient confidence in observer Mr. Green's or Mr. Gompers' conditions? Is it any wonder that the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor does not include the labor federations of Argentina, of Chile, of Uruguay? Is it any wonder that while two handpicked delegates from obscure organizations in Peru came to the Washington convention the bona-fide Peruvian unions stay away? Is it any wonder that Cuba, which has a relatively strong and experienced trade-union movement should be represented only by delegates from one union in part of one industry, and those delegates agents of President Machado, the bloody Wall Street-owned Cuban dictator?

IS it any wonder that the Pan-American Federation of Labor is a fraud and a fake?

AT the 1921 convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor eight countries were represented on paper. At Washington in 1927, "nine countries were represented," also on paper. In both cases it was manifest that except for the Mexican Confederation of Labor, the P. A. F. of L. is non-existent in Latin America as far as trade-union affiliation or action is concerned. The only difference is that in 1927 most of the delegates claiming to represent Central America and the West Indies have been exposed as fakers or government agents.

THE Greens and the Wolls cannot build an All-American Federation of Labor that amounts to anything.

Peruvian Leader Jailed; Fakers At Conference.

AS I was writing the colsing paragraph of this article a letter came to me from Peru bearing the news that Octavio Vargas Montigy, secretary of the Federation of Labor of Lima (the only labor federation in the country) has been arrested by order of President Leguia and his ultimate fate is in doubt. The arrest must have taken place at the very time when the fake Peruvian "labor delegates" in Washington were lauding President Leguia to the skies as "not a tyrant but a true friend of labor!"

Romance in the Soviet Union

By SHIRLEY REEVE.

WHILE exchanging English for Russian lessons with a student of the Military Political Academy, who is also a Military Commissar in the Red Army, we came to talk of our better halves. He of his wife and I of my husband. But it is the story of his wife that I am going to write about. And if with the cold keys of my typewriter I can convey to you a tenth of the real life and romance of this courageous young "Kommunistka" (Communist woman), who, tho still in her twenties, has already been decorated with the order of the Red Banner for her services in the Red Army during the civil war, you will be filled with enthusiasm and admiration for her. But what is more you will get a glimpse of the "stuff" that made the workers of the Soviet Union win out against an enemy a million times stronger than the hundred-headed dragon of our fairy tale days, in spite of all their handicaps.

Born in the Ukraine in the year 1902, she was barely 15 when the first sparks of the October Revolution took fire. Already then she was supplementing the meagre income of her working-class parents by working in a tobacco factory. Her father was a member of the "S. R.s" (Social Revolutionary Party) but she, hot-blooded girl, was impatient with the slow and circumlocuting gait of the party of her father and became an anarchist. Like a great number of the anarchists in Russia, she did not waver long before throwing in her lot with the workers and peasants. With a nature like hers this meant stopping at nothing to defend the interests of her class. And 1919 found her fighting on one of the most dangerous fronts against the counter revolution. "Not as a Red Cross Sister or clerical help, but right out in the front ranks with the men, as a machine gun operator.

One day, her husband told me, Gafa (her name) was at her machine gun facing an attack of the Poles on the Warsaw front. The battalion had been ordered to retreat but Gafa, seeing the commander of her Polk (regiment) wounded and thrown off his horse immediately after giving the command, she, with her wits sharper than ever, at once realized the great danger of allowing him, with all his papers, plans and orders to be captured by the enemy. Thus hardly five feet five inches tall and a mere wisp of a girl, she instructed the gunner at her machine gun to lift the commander up onto his horse and to drive off with him. She meanwhile trained her gun here and there, keeping off several fast advancing Poles. Only after the other two were well on their way did she make her own escape. It was for this wonderfully courageous act that she was awarded the order of the Red Banner.

The highest Order in the Red Army which is awarded for the most courageous action during a time of war only.

Her husband, who was at that time her Polk Commissar, greatly admired the girl as did all the soldiers who came in contact with her, and loved her. But that was not a time to think of love. The land was proletarian revolution was in danger and no Red Soldier, not to speak of those who were at the same time Bolsheviks had any thought of himself or of his personal feelings.

Immediately after the retreat of the Polk, the Commissar was ordered to another district and she was taken to the hospital with a wound in the arm and it was not until three years later that they met again while leisurely strolling down Tverskaya Boulevard in Moscow.

This was in 1921, the imperialists had long ago become convinced that they were wasting their money in financing the attacks on the counter-revolutionary generals on the Soviet Lands. Regular periods of industry and agriculture were now being turned by the mighty millions of the Soviet Union in the peaceful tho energetic task of building Socialism. This was a time when a man—a real man—could turn to thoughts of love without neglecting their self-imposed duty to society as Communists. The process of building socialism, on the contrary, provides the facilities for marriage without a woman's sacrificing all her other interests in order to realize those that are hers as a woman.

"On October 25th we will celebrate our third wedding anniversary," he joyously told me, "and the second birthday of our son."

To the question did not your wife find it difficult to be only one woman in a battalion of men. Did they not annoy her a lot of lovemaking, did they not in fact think that that was her reason for coming into the Army? "Yes," he answered, "her father thought so when he first heard of her joining the Army, but not our men. We always saw her in action and could do nothing but admire and respect her. Some of us loved her, myself for example. But not one of us ever thought of annoying her with unwanted attentions. God help the man who would have tried to do so. But then our soldiers are taught to have the highest respect for women."

REPORT NEGRO SCHOOL HEAD FIRED FOR RADICAL VIEWS; NEW YORK HOSPITALS BAR COLORED NURSES

By MARY ADAMS.

Forrester B. Washington has been appointed head of the Atlanta School for Social Work in place of Franklin Frazier. Frazier threatens to tell exactly why he was let go, if a statement as to his inefficiency is not retracted. This statement, was issued by Rhoda Kaufman and W. W. Alexander for the Board.

Dr. Alexander is connected with the Inter-racial Committee of Atlanta. The school is supported by the Laura Spellman Memorial, the Russel Sage Foundation and the Atlanta Community Chests. It is the same type of school as The School of Social Work, run by the C. O. S. here.

Publicity sent all over the country by the new head says there are any number of positions such as welfare, research and case workers waiting for graduates. Rumor has it that Frazier was dismissed for radical views on race questions.

Hoover Hands Out Sops.

Dr. J. S. Clark of Southern University, Baton Rouge, La., Dr. E. M. McCay of Rust College, Jackson, Miss., and H. C. Ray have been appointed advisors on reconstruction to the Red Cross units in their respective states. These appointments were made after Secretary Hoover had conferred with the Colored Advisory Commission on Mississippi Valley Flood, of which Col. R. R. Moton was head.

J. L. Peter, executive in charge of Red Cross affairs a three-page letter to Walter White of N. A. A. C. P. of New York in which he says, "As an agency of help and mercy the Red Cross would not of course wish to stand for unfair practices of the type you suggest toward colored refugees." Mr. White was not satisfied with this letter. Perhaps he had heard of the camp where the army cots were only distributed to the whites. Or maybe he read of the man who was shot dead trying to escape from a farm.

"Divide and Rule."

W. H. Le Grange in a lengthy dispatch to the African world states the position of the colored people of South Africa. We colored people, he says, are opposing the Native Movement. We stand on a platform of Equal Rights for all, because we realize Europeans must work out their own salvation. We do not want to be dragged down to the native level, but helped up to that of the white man. In short we want to be such a people that Europeans will be proud of. From the foregoing we can see that Great Britain has been most successful in her time worn policy of divide and rule.

Borno Jails Labor Leaders.

The State Department at Washington is unable to interpret the action of President Borno of Haiti in arresting the Haitian delegates to the recent Pan-American Labor Congress.

"The delegates, who were arrested at Port-au-Prince, were just about to embark for America.

They were able to send a message to the Dominican delegation, which was read at the convention. These men will keep company in jail with seven editors whom Borno sent there lately.

Forced to Sell Land.

A former K. K. K. cyclops, named Worthington is found an investigation to hold the deed to the land of Arthur Hitt, a colored man of Birmingham, Ala.

Worthington protests that he paid a fair price for the land. The price paid was $900. Arthur Hitt, the Negro owner, was forced to sell this land which is worth $3,000. He was taken from his home one night by masked men and told to go to a tree and flogged until he promised to sell. He was released only further flogging. Hoping to discover the occurrence Attorney Hitt has employed detectives and told his story which resulted in an investigation.

Hospitals Bar Negro Nurses.

George Harris, editor of the New York News, and a former Alderman points out in his paper that Negro patients as well as Jews are discriminated against in the city hospitals. None of the city nurse training schools admit colored women, says Mr. Harris. There is, however, a Jim Crow school for colored nurses in the Harlem Hospital. He makes the further point that there are no Negro internes in either Bellevue or Fordham hospitals.

Asks Garvey Release.

Gov. Groesbeck of Michigan has added his name to the list of those who are petitioning for the release of Marcus Garvey. Garvey, who built up a splendid mass organization among Negroes, the U. N. I. A., was sent to Atlanta when he was convicted of using the mails to defraud. He has served three years of his sentence. It is said that under the prison rules his health is beginning to fall.

Foreign Born Workers to Hold Penna Meeting Early This September

A Conference for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers of the State of Pennsylvania, will take place at Harrisburg on September 4th and 5th, 1927.

The National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, which has its office at 799 Broadway, New York City, was organized over two years ago for the purpose of combatting anti-alien legislation and "promoting naturalization work on a large scale among the eight million aliens in this country. The bills which are pending in Congress and which the Council is opposing are the Registration of Aliens Bills by Congressmen Aswell of Louisiana, Holliday of Illinois, and Brand of Georgia. There are also a number of compulsory naturalization bills which propose to deport aliens for not becoming citizens of this country.

WORLD-WIDE STRIKE WAVE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

B. T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THERE is little else that one can talk about nowadays except the Sacco-Vanzetti case. They are doomed to death on the tenth day of this month. The governor of the state of Massachusetts has decreed it. Nothing can halt the hand of the executioner except the mass protest of the entire labor movement of the United States. Will this protest be made sufficiently strong to impress the capitalists?

SOMETIMES we are charged with unfairness, even by sympathizers with the Communist movement. Many well-intentioned persons believe that the capitalists, taken individually, are fine fellows, but that they don't see things in the right way. Hokum. They see things in the way that benefits their class as a whole and themselves individually. Governor Fuller of Massachusetts, himself a millionaire capitalist, hates the ideas that Sacco and Vanzetti stand for and takes a pleasure in sending them to the chair. That is what there is to it.

JUSTICE! Hell! Would I think of justice if I had a portly capitalist burglar in front of me and if I were on the bench with a portfolio of commissar of proletarian justice surrounding me? I would simply consider, if it were expedient from the point of view that I held to blot this parasite off the map or otherwise. This is the standard of justice in a class society. Any one who endangers the present order of society is considered a menace by those who profit by the existing order. Can you blame them for feeling sore? No. But that is not all there is to it.

HERE is where we get to fundamentals. The class that Sacco and Vanzetti stand for, produce what the whole human race lives on. But those that produce do not enjoy all they produce. Parasites who never put hand to plow or machine, cross the ocean whenever they feel like it and command any luxury they crave for. Under the social order that Sacco and Vanzetti envison only those who produce, according to their ability would share the products of society as a whole. Is it surprising then that the bawdy plutes who hatten on the unpaid labor of the workers

Party Discussion Meetings

Party membership meetings have been arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party to discuss the Inner Party Situation and the Comintern Decision. In each meeting the representative of the Political Committee will speak first for one hour. Then the representative of the opposition for one hour. After the general discussion the representative of the opposition will sum up for fifteen minutes and then the representative of the Political Committee. The meeting will then vote on the resolution offered. In those meetings where the opposition has assigned two speakers, they divide the hour between them. Meetings were held last night in New York and Chicago, but this issue went to press too early to give the results. The speakers and meetings are as follows.

TONIGHT

Philadelphia.—Political Committee, Wolfe; Opposition, Foster. Shivack Hall, 340 Fairmount Avenue, 7 P. M.

Pittsburgh.—Political Committee, Lovestone; Opposition, Wentworth, 805 James Street, Northside, 7 P. M.

New Haven.—Political Committee Engdahl; Opposition, Krumbein.

Detroit.—Political Committee, Gitlow; Opposition, Bittelman. Finnish Hall, 3967 Fourteenth Street.

Labor Can Save Sacco and Vanzetti From the Electric Chair

Workers of the World! Help Save Sacco and Vanzetti!

Declaration of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America

To Working Class Organizations all over the World:

In five days, Sacco and Vanzetti are to be murdered for loyalty to the working class unless the organized might of the workers of the world saves them. The decision of the Massachusetts governor is the crowning infamy in a series of acts which began with the farcical frame-up trial. No one can any longer doubt but that there is no justice for the workers in capitalist courts.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America has already issued a call to the entire working class of the United States and to all workers' organizations in America to unite their forces to free Sacco and Vanzetti. In this declaration we called upon the labor organizations of America to set aside Tuesday, August 9, for strikes and for demonstrations in front of all government buildings and in central places.

Now we turn to the working class organization of all the rest of the world and ask them for help in saving these two American labor leaders. We ask you, whatever differences there may be among you, at such a time as this not to let these differences stand in the way of common action on behalf of these two men. We ask you to call strikes thruout the world on the same day as we and other American working class organizations have set for the American workers. We ask you to demonstrate with us on that date. We recognize the splendid service you have already given in these seven difficult years in throwing the light of world publicity upon this frame-up and staying the hand of the executioner for so long a period. We thank you on behalf of the two condemned men and the American working class and we ask you to intensify your efforts in these few days that remain before the date set for execution so that the united protest and the united action of the working class all over the world may free these two innocent workers' champions.

WORKERS OF THE WORLD UNITE!
CLOSE YOUR RANKS!
REGARDLESS OF TACTICAL DIFFERENCES, A COMMON FIGHT AGAINST A COMMON ENEMY FOR A COMMON CAUSE!
FREE SACCO AND VANZETTI!

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY OF AMERICA.

The Enemies of the Daily Worker Are the Enemies of Sacco, Vanzetti

GEORGE L. DARTE, Adjutant General of the Military Order of the World War, initiator of the prosecution against The DAILY WORKER, and representative of the enemies of the labor movement, has sent the following telegram to Governor Alvan T. Fuller, upon his decision to send Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair.

"Please accept congratulations upon your courageous decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case and your maintenance of the principles of American law and justice."

This same George L. Darte, who glories in the prospect that Sacco and Vanzetti, labor's two champions, will soon be legally murdered, acts as the instigator of the prosecution of The DAILY WORKER before the Federal Grand Jury. It is clear that the case against The DAILY WORKER is inextricably bound up with the effort to railroad Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair, and that it is part and parcel of an attack upon the entire labor movement of this country.

The decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case should give new impetus to the sale of certificates to the GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND. It should stiffen our determination to free Sacco and Vanzetti and to protect The DAILY WORKER, which is fighting for their freedom.

I. L. D. ENDORSES SACCO, VANZETTI PROTEST STRIKES

CHALLENGE TO WORKING CLASS

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Sharp condemnation of the decision of Governor Fuller in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, which is to result in their execution on Wednesday, August 10, if present plans go through, and an appeal to American labor to fight for Life and Freedom for the two convicted radicals to the very last ditch, is contained in a statement made today by James P. Cannon, national secretary of International Labor Defense, which has been in the front ranks of the campaign to obtain the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"The action of Governor Fuller," said Cannon, "in approving the decision to execute Sacco and Vanzetti is not only a vicious white-washing of the criminal revenge of Massachusetts reaction, but it is a challenge to the entire working class. It is not only an issue that involves the lives and freedom for these two innocent workers, but it is a defiance of the de-

7.—Messages of protest pour in. Fuller's decision pour in from all parts of the world.

Preparations for huge national strikes and mass demonstrations to snatch Sacco and Vanzetti from the hands of the Massachusetts hangmen who have doomed them to burn in the electric chair next Wednesday are being made by workers thruout the world.

Following the appeal of the Workers (Communist) Party for a general nation-wide protest strike on August 9th, the Sacco and Vanzetti Emergency Committee, representing half a million workers, the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee, with 275,000 members, the International Labor Defense, with half a million members and the Industrial Workers of the World have issued statements calling protest strikes to smash the [illegible] frame-up workers, from being [illegible] to the electric chair.

A general strike has already been declared in Buenos Aires which means over 2½ hour strikes will take place in Paris on Monday. Workers' organizations in Moscow, Berlin, London and Tokyo have already held huge demonstrations protesting against the decision to murder Sacco and Vanzetti. Reports from Buenos Aires state that measures are being taken to boycott American goods and that the [illegible] General Federation of Workers of Argentina has already issued a strike call for an indefinite period.

Plans for the strike in New York City got under way when Robert Francois, chairman of the Executive Board of the Machine and Transport Industrial Workers' Union announced that tens of thousands of dock workers would heed the strike call of the union. Francois in announcing his decision made it known that he had received a telegram from Lee Taliaferro, general secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, stating that all [illegible] would [illegible] the strike.

BOSTON, Aug. 5. That Governor Fuller threw [illegible] cold on favorable Sacco and Vanzetti [illegible] is evidenced by the refusal of the governor to grant a respite to Sacco and Vanzetti, which would have given the defense [illegible] to present [illegible] which would have [illegible] the [illegible] of the two workers were framed.

The governor admit that he had been presented a petition by both the South Braintree and the Bridgewater holdup men and besides a memorandum [illegible] which would have [illegible] the evidence proving that the two workers were framed.

The governor admitted that he had been presented a petition by both the South Braintree and the Bridgewater holdup men and besides a memorandum attempt to fasten the crime on Sacco and Vanzetti.

When the governor heard his story he refused to [illegible] hearing and told [illegible] carry his story to the state police. When he carried his story to the state police he was told that this was no case for [illegible]

TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE CALLS FOR NATION-WIDE STRIKE TO SAVE SACCO, VANZETTI

The Trade Union Educational League has addressed the following statement to the American labor movement:

"To all workers: Sacco and Vanzetti will die August tenth if the working class allows Governor Fuller's decision to be carried out. This is a blow against the entire working class.

"It is now apparent to all that Fuller's investigation was designed merely to stop the protest movement sweeping the world.

"There is but one form of protest now that will be heard by the murderers; that is the protest strike.

"Let every worker in America be on record against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti in the only way that counts. Strike!"

Signed, William Z. Foster, Secretary, Trade Union Educational League.

The T. U. E. L. has also addressed the following message to the whole labor movement:

"Governor Fuller has affirmed the death sentence on Sacco and Vanzetti. The Trade Union Educational League calls upon the world's labor movement to join in emphatic protest against this legal murder which is a blow at the working class."

Lewis Accepts Ohio Offer

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 5.— The president of the United Mine Workers of America in the central competitive field of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and western Pennsylvania, has accepted the suggestion of Gov. Donahey to meet at Toledo Aug. 15 with mine operators in an effort to settle the great coal lockout. This became known here late today when a telegraphic acceptance was received from John L. Lewis, from Baltimore.

The Ohio Operators Association has already declined.

BELLAIRE, August 5. — Officials of Sub-district 5 of District 6, said to be the largest sub-district in the United Mine Workers of America, have issued a statement itemizing some of the costs of strike-breaking to the coal companies, as follows:

derer and has barred Aldino Felicani, Defense Committee treasurer, from death house.

Felicani had taken out the Sacco, Vanzetti messages, out of which the warden says he had censored the lines describing Fuller as a murderer. The lines reappeared in the printed statements.

Tomorrow Attorney Arthur D. Hill will file a new trial motion at Dedham and will ask the superior court in Boston for a writ staying the execution of the framed workers.

MOSCOW, Aug. 5.—Protests from workers' and peasants' organizations thruout the Soviet Union began to pour in today when the news spread that Governor Fuller had decided to murder Sacco and Vanzetti.

Moscow's leading morning newspapers editorially denounce the approaching execution, and the Izvestia calls it "one of the most hideous crimes of class justice."

"Nothing helps—neither proofs of innocence nor confession of the actual murder, nor the protests of the most prominent American jurists," it adds.

"There are five days remaining. These days must be devoted to grandiose agitation, which should prevent the commission of this unheard of crime."

Plan Legal Battle.

Probable legal procedure in the last court skirmish to save Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from the electric chair was outlined this afternoon by M. A. Mashwanno, a young Pittsburgh attorney, who has been assisting the defense. The legal moves he said would probably be in this order:

1. A request of the superior court for a new trial on the ground of new evidence discovered during the review by Governor Alvan T. Fuller, evidence that has never been before a court.

2. A request for another gubernatorial respite, pending a decision by the court.

3. Application to the federal district court for a writ, taking Sacco and Vanzetti out of the jurisdiction of Massachusetts courts, or upon failure to secure a habeas corpus writ to file a writ for a new trial.

4. An appeal to the United States Supreme Court on constitutional grounds if final action in the state courts fail.

"Legal" Chances Slim.

While legal conferences were in full swing, the possibility loomed that all court avenues looked to a stay of execution has been closed.

In the meantime, the police guard at state's prison was doubled. Warden William Hendry denied reports that he had received several threats of death and violence to the institution.

Vanzetti spends much of his time, according to prison officials, in pacing his prison cell. Sacco, growing weaker each day, keeps to his cot.

From separate cells in the death house, the framed-up workers talk to each other, although they cannot see each other.

Ask Coolidge Intercession.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 5. — Declaring that Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti are innocent and that their execution in Boston would be regarded here as "judicial murder," the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee of Buffalo telegraphed President Coolidge today asking him to intercede.

"Behalf thousands Buffalo believe Sacco, Vanzetti innocent respectfully urge you intercede prevent what we would regard as judicial murder," the telegram read.

Tampa Cigarmakers Strike.

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 5. — Approximately 15,000 cigar factory workers returned to work here this morning after walking out on a general strike yesterday in protest against Governor Fuller's decision to murder Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

London Protest.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—A huge demonstration to protest against the legal murder of and to demand the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti will be held in Trafalgar Square on Sunday, Aug. 7.

An appeal to the masses to demonstrate everywhere against the slaying of the two prisoners was circulated here by the International Class War Prisoners' Aid in the form of a petition bearing the names of Prof. Albert Einstein, Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells and many prominent members of parliament and the church.

Precautions are being taken to guard the American embassy and consulates as feeling against the United States mounts as a result of the Sacco and Vanzetti sentence.

"Greatest Crime."

The International Class War Prisoners' Aid characterized the crime as the greatest in the annals of history and as the complete disclosure of American class justice. This crime, they said, will bring an ineffreeable stain of the honor of the United States thruout the civilized world.

Vanzetti's Sister Sails.

BOULOGNE, France, Aug. 5. — Luigia Vanzetti, sister of Bartolomeo Vanzetti, who was recently deported as having been refused permission to leave France by the Boulogne authorities has now been granted leave. She will embark Saturday for Boston in order to be with her brother during what may be his last days.

Milwaukee Labor to Hold Protest

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 5.—A mass demonstration to protest against the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti will be here Saturday under the auspices of organized labor. Workers and sympathizers will rally on the square in front of the court house.

Representative Victor L. Berger characterized governor Fuller's decision as "as iniquitous as the case of Alfred Dreyfus." Sacco and Vanzetti will not die because they committed a crime, he said, "but because they are workers."

Berlin Communists Hold Huge Meeting.

BERLIN, Germany, Aug. 5.—Thousands of workers thronged the Lustgarten facing the former Emperor's palace today, in a monster mass demonstration held under the auspices of the Communist Party.

Thousands of leaflets were distributed calling upon the American proletariat to release Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair, while speakers addressed the enthusiastic crowds.

The whole German people is aroused over the crime about to be committed in Massachusetts. Even such capitalist papers as the Berliner Tageblatt calling the decision "not only barbarous but unwise," while the reactionary Vossische Zeitung sees in the case "an act of inhumanity."

Lansbury Appeals For Mercy

LONDON, Aug. 5.—George Lansbury, member of parliament and vice-chairman of the National Labor Party sent the following telegram to governor Fuller:

"In the name of humanity I appeal to you to exercise the greatest of all gifts, mercy."

"Innocent" says Princeton Professor

PRINCETON, N. J., Aug. 5.—George McLean Harper, professor of English literature in Princeton University, yesterday declared that governor Fuller's decision will "weaken the respect for law and produce general discontent." "This statement fails to convince me," Prof. Harper said, "that the men are guilty or that they had a fair trial. The governor does not mention the alleged perjury of the 2 policemen who pretended to identify a bullet, nor the alleged conspiracy of the state's attorney who is said to have knowingly permitted this false testimony to be made in court. The men have already endured punishment more cruel than death."

Uruguayans Prepare to Strike.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Aug. 5.—Preparations are in full swing here for a giant strike against governor Fuller's decision in the Sacco and Vanzetti case. While feeling is intense and everything possible is being done to make the remaining days count, the Uruguayan government is establishing guards around the American legation, the consulate and around the American commercial and industrial enterprises.

Rio De Janiero Protest.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Aug. 5.—The Municipal Council has passed a resolution protesting "in the name of the City of Rio de Janeiro and American culture and civilization" against the judicial murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. United States buildings in Rio are under heavy guard.

Eyes Fascist Paper.

ROME, Italy, Aug. 5.—La Tribuna, official organ of the Fascists commenting editorially on the Sacco and Vanzetti case calls it the darkest judicial episode in history and adds, "No, it is not justice which for seven years has kept Sacco and Vanzetti suspended between life and death, but the most artful form of cruelty."

No leprous corpse in ministerial gown,
No microcosmic czar with lust for power
Nor hate, nor wealth shall strike these workers down
Comrades, ours is the might; brothers, ours is the power

Comrades, millions of throats
Millions of marching feet,
Millions of mighty arms
Can save them.

Sacco, Vanzetti Messages.
By ART SHIELDS.

Soldiers of the revolution undaunted Sacco and Vanzetti send stirring messages from their death cells to all their comrades over the world. "We are not surprised by this news because we know the capitalist class is hard without any mercy to the good soldiers of the revolution," says Sacco the shoe worker and strike leader. "It is up to you now brothers, comrades, you are the only ones that can save us."

Sitting in their death cells only a few feet from the electric chair that is to burn out their lives in six days they scribbled their messages out on some sheet of paper in longhand and gave it to their tried defenders Aldino Felicani and Gardner Jackson of the defense committee they were permitted perhaps the last visit from any but lawyers and relatives. Vanzetti the fisherman says: "Governor Alvan T. Fuller is a murderer na Thayer, Katzmann the state perjurer and all the others. He shaken hands with me like a brother, makes me believe he was honestly intentioned and that his killing of the three carless boys was not so as to have no precedent to save us. Now ignoring and denying all the proofs of our innocence he insults us and murders us. We are innocent. This is the war of plutocracy against liberty, against the people. We die for anarchy. Long live to anarchy."

Signed, Bartolomeo Vanzetti, August 1th, 1927. Charlestown State Prison.

Capitalism Without Mercy.

Sacco wrote: "In the death cell we are just informed from the defense committee that Governor Fuller has decided to kill us August the 10th. We are not surprised by this news because we know the capitalist class is hard, without any mercy to the good soldiers of the revolution. We are proud of death and fall as all the anarchists fall, it is up to you now, brother comrades. As I have told you yesterday that you are the only ones than can save us because we have never had faith in the governor. For we have always known that Governor Fuller, Thayer and Katzmann are the murderers.

"With warm fraternal greetings to all." Signed Nicola Sacco.

Women Workers Send Petition.

The DAILY WORKER has received the following petition signed by three workers:

"I Want Sacco and Vanzetti Saved." (Signed) Cristina Safia, Guiseppa Caruso, Mamie Safia.

ROAR OF PROTEST GREETS FULLER'S SNARL FOR DEATH

Darrow Assails Fuller Affirmation; 'Madness'

The wave of protest against the murderous Fuller decision continues unabated. Persons prominent in all walks of life and of extreme shades of political opinion have expressed horror at the callous brutality of the Fuller affirmation of the death sentence of the two condemned workers.

CLARENCE DARROW, world famous lawyer, "No alien, radical or Communist could get a fair trial in this country at the time these men were tried. As a matter of public policy, in view of the fact that so many people either believe in their innocence or doubt their guilt, it would be madness to execute these workers. I think it is a great injustice for Massachusetts to take the lives of these men. The state will never recover from it. Men will always feel that Sacco and Vanzetti were executed because they were radicals."

POWERS HAPGOOD, miner's leader and nephew of Norman Hapgood, in a telegram to Governor Fuller, "Your refusal to grant a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti and your conducting of the investigation in secret, brands you as the murderer of these two innocent men."

HUGH FRAYNE, organizer, American Federation of Labor, "No comment."

BEN GOLD, manager Furriers' Joint Board, "The last legal door of freedom has been closed to those fraudulently labor leaders. They have been 'guilty' of the crime of trying to organize the unorganized, for this and for this only have they been condemned. Now labor in whose behalf they fought must come to their aid. The unanimous voice of labor will demand by means of the general strike that the Massachusetts legal hierarchy cannot strangle our two comrades. The farmers will be there."

ROGER FRANZEON, organizer of the I. W. W. "The workers in six unions were horrified when the news of Governor Fuller's decision flashed through the world. Through the voice of Fuller, the textile barons of Massachusetts have declared relentless war against the wrisingchas. That class must now show the world that it can liberate its warriors. The general strike is the only weapon."

MARTIN J. LOEB, New York. "It will be easier for Sacco and Vanzetti to die than for Massachusetts to bear the shame. I am convinced as are millions of people that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent."

ROSE BARON, secretary I. L. D. "There is yet time. Only the mighty arm of labor can save these tortured, innocent workers. Down tools on Tuesday."

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

Calls On All Units to Start Demonstrations

ganized millions of workers who have locally ranged themselves on the side of Sacco and Vanzetti because they are convinced of their innocence.

Banner Bearers of Workers.

Sacco and Vanzetti are the banner bearers of the working class, and this act is the last possible prelude, if the legal murder is carried out, to a new persecution drive against the workers of the United States, and against the radicals especially.

"International Labor Defense has persistently pointed out the class issues involved in the whole case, and that the only hope of Sacco and Vanzetti lay in a huge class protest movement for their vindication and freedom. The latest events in the case have fully confirmed this position, and have conclusively proved the impotency of relying upon the 'justice' or 'fair play' and the 'liberal intentions' of the ruling class of Massachusetts.

Stay Murderers' Hand.

"We have a big task before us—the task of reviving on a colossal scale a movement on a class basis to defend the working class and Sacco and Vanzetti for whom it fights.

"We do not give up the fight for a moment. We do not admit defeat for we still have reliance upon the irresistible power of the organized working class which can yet be mobilized to stay the hand of the Massachusetts executioner. We will fight to the last moment for life and freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti."

Call to All Units.

An appeal has been sent by International Labor Defense to all of its units throughout the country and to the labor press, calling for monster demonstrations everywhere for Tuesday, August 9th, the day before the execution date is set. Labor organizations are being urged to call short protest general strikes everywhere on that day, and in addition, to send delegations of protest to Governor Fuller and to President Coolidge at Washington, D. C., urging him to intervene for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Cablegrams have been sent to labor defense organizations in France, Germany, England, Belgium, Russia, China and Canada, urging demonstrations, especially before American embassies and consulates. It is expected that within the next few days millions of workers throughout the world will be in the streets, demanding justice for the seven-year-long persecution and torture of the two heroic labor fighters.

Canadian Co-operatives Show Big New Increase

MONTREAL, (FP) Aug. 5.—Additions to cooperative societies in Canada last year numbered 453, bringing the total up to 1155 societies with a membership of 470,000, according to a report of the Dominion labor bureau. Included in this group are the pools which handled 150,000,000 bushels of wheat and 50,000,000 bushels of grain in 1926, operating through a central agency, the largest wheat marketing organization in the world.

MASSACHUSETTS LABOR DEMANDS PROBE OF BOARD

Organ of State Reflects View of Bosses

FALL RIVER, Mass., August 5.—During the continued report of the committee on resolutions at yesterday morning's session the convention of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor here, which is now on record for a full demanding a full inquiry into the operations of the state board of labor and industries, objections to the resolution were raised by Gately and the delegates of the telephone operators in Boston but this opposition was swept aside when Mary Thompson of the Women's Trade Union League made the first militant speech of the convention.

The complaint of Delegate Thompson was that the resolution was not strong enough. "The state board of labor and industries does not only require an investigation it requires to be cleaned out and cleaned up it required that real representatives of labor investigate conditions . . . At present the state board is a bosses' organization."

Thompson cited case where she had represented textile workers on strike and when she had protested against the attitude of the supposedly neutral arbitrators she had been told to keep quiet or have the hall and that fast for the show of fight put up by the rank and file workers on her deputation she would have been elected from the hall.

It is time the delegates to this convention realized that they have nothing to hope for except by as members of the working class. "Governor Smeetser is a Czar" and cannot give a fair hearing to workers organizations. She further exposed the department's practice of warning employers before sending out inspectors to their factories.

Williamstown Talkers "Amazed" at Fuller's "Unconvincing" Words

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug 5.—Members of the Williamstown Institute of Politics today characterized Governor Fuller's decision in the Sacco and Vanzetti case as "inhuman, amazing, and weak."

Dr. Pierre Le Paulle, former lecturer at Harvard and head of the round table on international law, said that he considered the case as working against the aims of justice, and allied to the treatment of Sacco and Vanzetti as worthy of Orientals. "These tortures have never been more cruel than the tortures of these men," he said.

Paris Unions to Strike In Sacco and Vanzetti Protest; Rally Sunday

PARIS, France, Aug. 5. — "If Sacco and Vanzetti are executed any congress of the American legion in Paris will become absolutely impossible," declared Dumaulte today. The workers are unfurtiated and the Unified Labor Federation has called a twenty-four hour strike for Monday, August 8th.

On Sunday afternoon, August 7th, the Sacco and Vanzetti Committee of Paris will hold a mass demonstration on the outer boulevard of Paris to which will flock the hosts of workers from the "Croisien rouge," the Red suburbs which sure and Paris on all sides.

Needle Trade Defense

Announcement of the latest Grand Affair of the Joint Defense Committee can now be made. This will be a Grand Jamboree at Starlight Park, all day August 28th. Starlight Park is the Luna Park of the Bronx. It accommodates 100,000 people and has many amusements with a wonderfully fine swimming pool for bathing in addition. Most of these features have been taken over by the Defense for the entire day and evening, promising at 10 a. m. There will be music, dancing, vaudeville, free work and numerous other features to be announced later. A special production of the Poem "Carmen" in the Great Open Air Stadium of the Park will be given.

Pledge Support to Trademakers.

The Joint Defense and Relief Committee is now carrying on a campaign for workers will of those organization, of fingers workers and sympathizers to pledge themselves to pay a small weekly voluntary tax for the support of the fighting cloakmakers and furriers. Every class conscious worker and sympathizer must become a member of this organization. Only through such a large mass organization that is ready to constantly support the fighters will we be able to success fully carry on the fight against Aaronson, Morgan Wolf and Company. If you are not a member of the Workers' Sick Benefit Fund, join it immediately. Send in your name and address and also the amount that you pledge yourself to pay weekly.

At a meeting of the empers of Unite, all pledged themselves to make weekly donations to the Defense. Every person who stamps in the coupon for a week pays 1.00 and week regardless 50 cents. A committee was elected to carry this into effect.

Dorothy Detzer, executive secretary, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, declared "Naturally I am amazed I was startled that Governor Fuller's statement was so weak a defense of his action, it was so unconvincing."

Charlestown Prison Where Death Chair Stands and Sacco and Vanzetti Are Held

Insert is a photo of Wm. Hendry, warden of prison, who is supervising the last preparations to kill the two innocent workers. He cares for nothing that his job. Below are two of a special guard ordered to surround the prison and make sure that big business gets its victims.

The KEY to the Death House

Is the development of a mass movement of protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The power of labor, united in a gigantic effort to secure their freedom, is the only power that will save them.

In addition to the huge mass meetings and demonstrations which are being held throughout the country and throughout the world, it is necessary that a daily agitation be carried on among the workers, it is necessary that they be kept constantly informed of the efforts of the capitalist henchmen to murder them, and of the growing force of the movement which is fighting for their freedom.

Under these circumstances the drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker takes on a new importance.

It is in the interest of Sacco and Vanzetti, that the Daily Worker Army must grow.

It is in the interest of the sacco -ful fight against the attack of the bosses, We must get Five Thousand New Readers.

MASSACHUSETTS' LABOR REFUSES TO OUST CONROY

Declares for Right of Political Opinion

(Special To The DAILY WORKER)

FALL RIVER, Mass., August 5.—The right of an official of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, now in session here, to advocate independent political action for labor was established here when Conroy of the machinists' union of Worcester was nominated for vice-president of the federation at the convention now in session.

The delegates rallied to his support when a vitriolic attack was loosed on him by reactionaries in the convention, who claimed he was not a good member of the American Federation of Labor because he did not follow the hopeless policy of the president and executive board of the A. F. of L. and "reward friends and punish enemies."

For Labor Party.

Conroy was active for a labor party in 1924, and succeeded in preventing endorsement by the Worcester unions of Walsh, the representative of the Boston and Albany railroad.

Conroy's defense at the convention was handled by a special delegate of the Worcester Central Labor Union. The convention decided that no man should be victimized for his political opinions, and defeated a resolution that required endorsement by the Executive Council before any member could run for political office.

The convention also declared by large majorities for endorsement of the unemployment bill, and for a public inquiry into the state labor commission, which has disgraced itself lately by its unusual unfairness towards organized labor.

Thayer Example.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case has not come up yet, but the delegates in voting to endorse introduction of a bill in the next legislature to require the election instead of the nomination of judges, ritted Judge Thayer, trial judge in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, as an example of the injustice possible thru the system of appointed judges.

The convention also wants added and introduced limiting the injunction powers of judges.

Had To Break In.

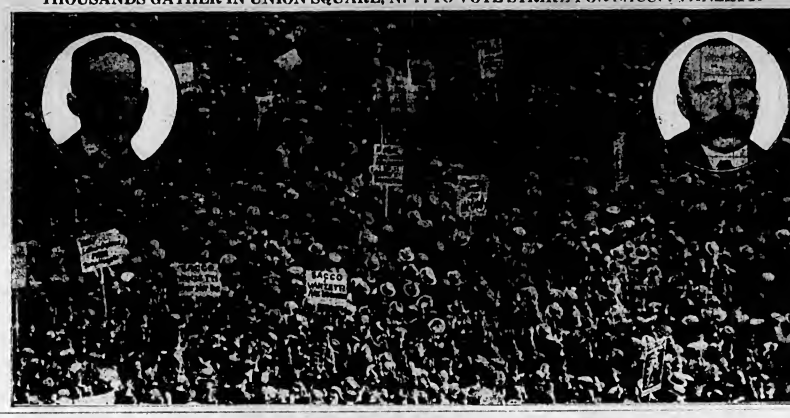
At yesterday's morning session the entire business was taken up with the report of the committee on resolutions. Much time was taken up with the various resolutions dealing with the use of the union label as a means of organizing the unorganized and maintaining union conditions.

Mary Thompson of the Women's Trade Union League spoke on the manner in which union conditions had been established in the neckwear shops of Boston pointed out that the neckwear workers had secured recognition of the union only after a short but very active strike, and only after the workers had forced the employers to sign an agreement with the union after they were able to secure the use of the union label in their shops.

Public Ownership.

The Convention went on record as favoring a bill to be introduced in the next assembly calling for the public ownership of natural resources for the supply of electrical power in this state and nationally.

Federation of Churches.



It was pointed out that the Churches Federation had been markedly partial in its allocation of speakers in the various churches to the Chambers of Commerce and the Employers Organizations generally. A resolution was passed calling upon the Federation to make a clearcut statement on its policy to labor before the State Federation could resume relations with the body.

Packing Kings Rush to Aid Hot Dog Vendor In Scarsdale Board Fight

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Scarsdale's battle against hot-dogs and peanuts will be fought all over again in county court here next week, Last night before Police Judge Charles M. Carter, the anti-hot-dog ordinance emerged victorious over Castas Hillakides, "Jim," as he is more widely known since the village board of Scarsdale took exception to his gay and fragrant pop wagon, was fined $10 for "using other than a hand drawn vehicle in connection with hawking or peddling."

With a very perplexed hot-dog vendor as defendant, with some of the kings of the sausage and meat packing industries as interested spectators and with an array of press representatives that recalled Westchester's more sensational recent trials, the defense opened its case in a court room that could hold only a score of spectators, while scores jammed the doorway and stood on chairs far out into the hall of the town hall.

Prominent among the big meat men ready with the most talented counsel in the country to defend the frankfurter was Frank Fitzer, president of the meat packing concern which makes Joe's sausages, Pendleton Dudley, eastern director of the Institute of American Meat Packers, and Dr. C. Robert Moulton, director of the bureau of nutrition of the institute. They formed a row with Joe, the defendant at the end of the counsel table.

THOUSANDS GATHER IN UNION SQUARE, N. Y. TO VOTE STRIKE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

FURRIERS WILL REBUILD UNION FOR MEMBERSHIP

Adopt Sacco-Vanzetti Protest Resolution

Meeting to protest the breaking down of union conditions in the furriers' industry and the continued selling out of hard won gains by the American Federation of Labor officials, 3,000 furriers pledged their loyalty to the Joint Board in its fight to rebuild the Furriers' Union in a crowded meeting at Cooper Union Thursday.

"Nothing but the united fighting ranks of the fur workers can save the union from utter destruction," said Ben Gold, Joint Board manager. "At present there is no union left, either in the right wing or in the left wing. The reactionary forces of the American Federation of Labor has broken the union and there is danger that if the fight continues it can never be rebuilt."

Worse Than 1924.

Gold declared that conditions in the Furriers' Union were "worse than in 1924." "There is absolute chaos in the trade. Manufacturing is being done under non-union conditions, and any worker who fails to realize this is blind," he said.

The fight to rebuild the union in its former power as an instrument for the workers has received great impetus in the last few days, from requests of many workers who deserted the Joint Board to be reinstated, Gold said. "The Joint Board is receiving letters every day from workers who now realize their plight and want to come back and help to rebuild the real union," he said. "If anybody thinks that the Joint Board is no longer fighting, they should see the daily shop meetings to which workers come with the greatest enthusiasm.

In reviewing the out of town situation, Gold saw great reason for hopefulness. "Almost every local outside of New York has elected a left wing administration, and even where the reactionary administrations have not been dislodged, the rank and file is progressive," he pointed out. "The rights can no longer deny that they have sold out to the bosses, and they can no longer conceal the fights for the spoils that are going on within their ranks. In spite of the bad conditions, I am confident that we can retrieve all that has been lost. The Joint Board is reorganizing its machinery and beginning the active work of rebuilding. I am ready to stop aside if this leads to peace, but as I insisted at the peace conference, the union must be returned to the workers and union conditions brought back to the shops. The Joint Board extends its hands in welcome to all workers and urges them to join in unifying the furriers."

Weisbord Speaks.

Albert Weisbord, leader of the Passaic strike, spoke to the furriers for the first time since the victory meeting after the 1926 strike. He took occasion to point out the relation of the furriers, whom he termed "the needle point in the side of the American bosses," to Sacco and Vanzetti, "who now symbolize the fighting proletariat.

"The forces that are about to murder Sacco and Vanzetti are the same enemies that you are fighting," he declared. "They are the same forces that are working to destroy the unions, to set up the open shop, to defeat child labor legislation—they are the labor haters of America.

Same Enemies.

"They are the same forces that are attempting to destroy your union, by forcing upon you a Wall-Meltrady union. Meltrady is the bridge to lead the workers to worse conditions.

"The gains that you won by the heroic struggle of 1926 are being lost

Boston Papers Prepare Public for Murder of Sacco and Vanzetti

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 4.—Boston capitalist papers are doing their utmost to prepare public opinion against the two men. The story of the case is treated in such a manner as to picture the convicted workers and their friends as dangerous men.

Bomb-throwing stories are featured, terms as "bomb-throwing friends of the defense" are being used and the words evidence or discovered when it relates to evidence of the defense is put in quotation marks.

The placing of extra police guards is also creating the desired atmosphere, the working men of Boston, however, are not as firm in their belief of innocence as before.

Washington Federation Excludes Militant

CENTRALIA, Wash., August 5.—The twenty-fifth annual convention of the Washington State Federation of Labor has adjourned after declining to hold a special election in Seattle to elect a president of the Federation. On account of alleged irregularities in the regular election held prior to the convention by referendum vote of the unions of the State the matter was placed before the convention with the above named result. The contest was between James A. Taylor of the Machinists and Leo Flynn of the Carpenters. Taylor had the highest number of votes.

The convention was without features except for the exclusion of Wm. H. Jones, delegate from Local 200, Painters of Seattle on the ground that he is a Communist. Jones has been repeatedly elected a seat in the Seattle Central Labor Council on the same ground. He has always been declared "not-guilty" by his own union.

The release of Sacco and Vanzetti was requested of Governor Fuller in a resolution sponsored by Local 300, Painters of Seattle. It was adopted. Other resolutions passed covered the following subjects: a state wide appeal for assistance for the striking laundry workers of Tacoma; an investigation of abuses in the operation of the State workmen's compensation act; extending support to the striking electrical workers of Everett; urging the enforcement of the law requiring all prison made goods to be labeled as such. The United Garment workers secured the passage of a resolution emphasizing the difference between the label of their organization and that of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

to you by the treachery of these labor fakers. The forty hour week and the increases that you won are being taken from you, the speed-up system and the contract system that you thought you had abolished are being given to the bosses."

Weisbord emphasized the sharpening of the campaign against militant labor forces, which the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti are a part. "The bosses are faced with the possibility of war," he declared. "The collapse of the Geneva naval conference can mean only one thing: that the capitalists are getting ready for another imperialist war. They understand that they can only continue their plans if they smash the unions. They cannot smash the unions of class conscious, militant workers, so they hope to substitute right wing unionism, which means company unionism, in order to attain their end."

The furriers gave a heartfelt ovation to Aaron Gross, chief business manager of the Joint Board, who appeared on the platform for the first time since the brutal attack of gangsters on June 9 which nearly cost his life. Although the workers clamored for a speech, Gross was not strong enough to address them.

CHICAGO RIGHTS CONTINUE UNION SMASHING WORK

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Despite the fact that the membership is supporting the progressive administration of the Cloak and Dressmakers Joint Board, the trial committee is continuing its union wrecking campaign. At yesterday's meeting David Hrbinsky, right wing official of Local 96, New York, openly declared that the right wing does not care for the opinion of the membership and their protests against the "yellow dog contract!"

The trial committee has ordered an election in Local 81 for Thursday. Less than twenty-four hours notice was given which is against the union constitution. Only right wingers will appear on the ballot. The membership is swung-d at these methods and will boycott the election.

A special meeting of the Joint Board will be held tonight to take up the situation and a statement will be issued on the fake elections.

The Executive Boards of Locals 20 and 100 today adopted an official protest against the action of the General Executive Board in taking off the ballot of active and responsible union members because they have a different point of view.

The Executive Boards of Local 20 and 100 are calling members to meetings to rally the workers behind the present progressive administration.

Salvatore Ninfo, right wing chief, was today in the market and tried personally to convince the workers to bypass their present leaders. He was completely ignored by the workers who refused to listen to his union smashing talk.

Infantry Reviewed by General Hugh A. Drum

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 5.—The 57th Infantry Brigade which is training here will be reviewed next week by Brigadier General Hugh A. Drum of the United States army at Fort Wadsworth, S. I. He has been advised to inspect and review the infantry brigade of the New York National Guard here.

The invitation was extended by Brigadier-General George R. Dyer, in charge of the 2,000 troops in camp.

The troops of the 71st regiment of Manhattan, one of the two units of the brigade, will be drawn up in formation Saturday on the Parade grounds to see the Cuban national order of merit decoration pinned upon their Comanander, Colonel Walter De Lamater, who some time ago entertained President Gerardo Machado, of Cuba.

Other speakers at the meeting were Kate Gitlow of the United Council of Workingclass Housewives, and S. Elgzin of the Joint Defense Committee.

Adopt Resolutions.

Resolutions adopted at the meeting condemned the "union-breaking policies of the International and A. F. of L. officials and accuse them of openly selling out the fur workers to the fur manufacturers." They call upon "all fur workers to support the Joint Board morally and financially to re-establish the gains of the 1926 general strike, and rebuild a strong, united Furriers' Union."

A resolution on the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti was adopted as follows:

Sacco-Vanzetti Resolution.

"Whereas the facts have shown beyond a shadow of a doubt that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent of the crime of which they are accused:

"And whereas the outrageous decision of Governor Fuller to murder Sacco and Vanzetti shows the determination on the part of the anti-labor forces to carry out the criminal frame-up of these two workers because of their loyalty to the working class.

Lewis Tells Ohio Gov. He Will Confer

"Pittsburgh Terminal earned $70,000 the first quarter of 1927 on a union basis. The finnneent journals estimate this company's loss for the second quarter on a non-union basis of $200,000 with only one mine in operation.

"The big Kinloch mine of the Pailey interests that normally produced 4,200 tons daily is now producing 600 tons, 18 deputy sheriffs and 17 Coal and Iron police are employed at the Kinloch mine at $10 the day and $2.50 daily allowance for board. The cost of guard maintainance at the Kinloch mines is more than 70 cents the ton. In the Pittsburgh District the cost for guard maintainance at non-union operations runs from 25 cents to $1.00 the ton. Advertised day rates run from $5.00 to $6.75 for from 8 to 10 hours work. The number of dny men have increased nearly one-half at every mine while the per capita per man day production is down one-half what it was under union operation. The coal is being sold around $1.60 on a nine run basis. It is obvious even to the humblest citizen that the land if progress the companies are making is towards the bankrupt courts.

"The labor turnover in Western Pennsylvania is about 6% per cent monthly. Company superintendents admit this much and such admission is sufficient answer to the press agented statement that the companies are securing all the men they want."

Improve Freight Rates.

WASHINGTON, August 4. (FP).—While miners in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are battling for the very life of their union, the Interstate Commerce Commission has taken recognition of the serious plight of the coal industry in their states by ordering a readjustment of freight rates in the Chicago territory.

Non-union western Kentucky mines, which have doubled in production in the last two years, crowding Illinois mines off the Chicago market, must pay 10 cents a ton more on shipments to Chicago and the northwest, the commission has just ruled. The new rate, which goes into effect by the 25th, means that southern Illinois and Indiana will have a 25 cents a ton advantage over western Kentucky. Shipments of coal from various Illinois and Indiana districts to Chicago will be increased through lower freight rates of 5 to 22 cents a ton.

Normally Bad.

Although the commission makes no direct allusion to the strikes, it recognizes the serious plight of the union fields, now hamstrung in by low-wage non-union districts all the way from western Kentucky to West Virginia, where coal is also entering the Chicago market in large quantities. "The social and business life of the mining communities," declares the commission, "is in deplorable condition. Thousands of miners and other people directly or indirectly dependent upon the industry, are out of work. Commercial activity in general in the affected districts is at low ebb." The commission refers to conditions in normal times, and not during the present strike.

Many Idle.

SAINT-Y-GLO, Pa., Aug. 5. (FP).—Over 1,000 pickets, union miners and their wives, marched more than a mile from Garman to Emmons where the coal company had blocked the public highway leading to the mine with a fence. A guard sat on the fence. While several pickets asked the guard to unlock the gate, others clambered over the fence. In short order more followed and the fence gave way as the crowd surged through.

Sheriff John M. Malcolm of Indiana county rushed up by automobile. Strikers asked him where the number plates of his car were, since they were not attached. They requested his badge of authority and found he hadn't it with him. Finaly the sheriff took a deputy's badge but there was no need for his interference.

Communists Capture Legion Convention, $12,000,000 and a Half Million Votes

YORK, Pa., Aug. 5.—More than $12,000,000 is expended annually in the United States to support three hundred publications whose sole purpose is to destroy American institutions, Col. James A. Moss, U. S. A. retired, of Paris, told 500 delegates to the convention of the Pennsylvania department, American Legion, at its opening session here yesterday.

Col. Moss, who is director general of the American Flag Association, told the delegates, part of the 8pt expected before the end of the day, that there was food for thought in the fact that 500,000 citizens cast their ballots for William Z. Foster Communist candidate for president in the last general election. Foster, Col. Moss said, has under the emblem of the scythe and hammer, which he said was the official emblem of the Bolshevist Party in Russia.

Labor's Opponents Laid Yellow Faker Sheet for Ending Building Strike

SEATTLE, August 5. The Seattle Times Record formerly owned by the Central Labor Council here, but now in the hands of a corporation of which E. B. Ault is president, has come out with a full front page spread congratulating itself on its part in averting a struggle between the contractors and building trades workers over the recent five day week issue. Of the workers involved only the bricklayers secured the shorter work week, the former by simply taking it and, the latter by a secret private agreement.

The Record "taunted with pride" to the building letters received from the Chamber of Commerce and business men, notorious for their opposition to organized labor. The paper, while not the official organ of the labor movement, claims to represent the best interests of the workers.

Firestone's Liberians Earn Princely Stipend As U.S. Rubber Slaves

LONDON, Aug. 5. (FP).—Dr. King, president of the African republic of Liberia is in London to interest business men in trade development with Africa. He declared extensive coffee, but no railways nor any roads worth speaking of. There is much available land waiting for the necessary energy to develop it. The Firestone Rubber group have leased a million acres of land in for rubber growing. They employ 5,000 to 10,000 workers. There is much more land available, if necessary.

You may ask where the "Paradise" comes in. Simple enough: the Liberian worker is glad to get the lordly salary of 6 cents a day. Dr. King does not need to tell us, in view of the fact that there are no roads worth speaking of, that the workers in his ineffable state put their savings into Buicks or Packards.

GANGSTER CASES ARE POSTPONED IN POLICE COURT

Three Thugs Are Held For Grand Jury

The two right wing killers, Benjamin Cohen and Meyer Friedman, who murderously attacked Aaron Gross on June 9th, had their cases postponed until August 9th when they appeared before Magistrate Brodsky in Jefferson Market Court Thursday morning.

Three of the seven thugs who cut up four fur picket June 21 were held for the grand jury Thursday morning by Magistrate Brodsky. Two others had their cases postponed until next Tuesday.

During the proceedings ex-Judge Smitkins, who appeared for the gangsters, was continually in conference with members of the right wing legal committee and Samuel Markewich, right wing counsellor.

Joseph Winagradsky, who was arrested in the market Wednesday when he was distributing leaflets advertising last night's Cooper Union meeting was discharged when he appeared in the same court.

Transferred To 57th St. Court.

Philip Glasman and Benjamin Goldberg, fur workers, had their cases transferred to the 57th Street Thursday by Magistrate Brodsky who was sitting in Jefferson Market Court. He heard part of the evidence Wednesday and will continue with the case August 22 in the 57th St. court.

The workers are accused of attacking two gangsters, Jerry Larson, alias Samuel Grossman and Harry Eater. The actual situation was just the reverse, but to save themselves the thugs claimed that the workers had attacked them. Larson, it has been pointed out, is a well known gangster.

Held For Special Sessions.

Max Levine, who together with Sidonnon Winiger and Vincent Leatea, were arrested at the Union Square Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration July 7th, was held for Special Sessions Thursday by Magistrate Stern in the 57th St. police court. Levine was discharged yesterday while Leatea was released Wednesday at the beginning of the trial. Edward Levinson, associate editor, the New Leader, appeared as witness against the workers.

"No Appeal Outside the Law."

Among the capitalist dailies of Greater New York but two of them have had such utter disregard for the facts in the case as to try to defend the murderous incision of Governor Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts in the Sacco and Vanzetti case. These two most venomous of all the reptile press are the New York Evening Post and the New York Sun. The Post argues that if the men were victims of "any noteworthy denial of justice in the conduct of their trial," at least one of the three men on the commission, or Fuller himself, would have been convinced of the fact. It concludes its diatribe by the observation:

"To resort to any eleventh-hour agitation is virtually to declare that the only verdict which the (defense) committee will accept is one which it approves. This is a defiance of legal processes."

The Sun refers glowingly to the "transparent honesty" of the decision.

How even the lowest of pen prostitutes dares to insult the intelligence of even their most backward readers by trying to convince them that Fuller's decision is honest, or that any one of the three members of his special advisory committee were prompted by any motive other than to cloak with their so called respectability this foul murder, is a problem for psychologists.

But some prostitutes acquire a reputation for special depravity that is not required of others of their kind—the editorial writers of the Sun and the Post are in that category.

Even the New York Times, foremost imperialist organ in America, cautiously questions the wisdom of the decision. The New York World argues that the decision does not "quiet the doubt that an injustice may have been done."

At the same time the World and other papers that timidly approach the subject claims that the proceedings have been according to law and insists that "there can be no appeal outside the law." Every ruling class, when it is challenged by another class, defends its own legal processes, no matter how vile and how despotic they may be. It must of necessity uphold the sanctity of its police, its courts, its jails and hangmen.

Against this conception the revolutionists the vanguard of the working class, proclaim that there is and there must be an appeal outside the law. That appeal is now being made to the working class of the whole world. The law that we revolutionists is not our law, it is the official cloak used to conceal the crimes of the capitalist class against the working class. It reeks with despise it and hold it in contempt. We proclaim that the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti rests with the working class. Their fate will demand action against this infamous decision of the bloody masters responsible for it. The only regret we have is that the working class of Massachusetts and of the nation is not yet sufficiently developed to be able to storm the walls of the jail that holds these workers, batter them down and liberate them so that by our might and our might alone in spite of and against the lethal cloak thrown about their would-be murderers we could restore them to the labor movement.

History teaches us that in revolts against despotism the first objects of mass fury are the courts and the jails, because they symbolize the fiendishness of the master class.

Even now, four days from the hour of their execution, the workers can yet save Sacco and Vanzetti by their mass power. By going into the streets in tens of thousands in every city in the United States, by urging in appeals to the workers of the whole world to rise in fury against everything that comes from imperialist America, by pilloring the ruling class of this country as blood-thirsty murderers who deserve nothing but contempt and execration from the rest of the world, we can yet save them.

If William Green and the rest of the reactionary officials of the American Federation of Labor do not want to add to their crimes against the working class, the crime of aiding and abetting in the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, they will approve a general strike for their liberation. But since little can be expected from this source, the masses themselves should perfect within the next few hours, days at the most, whatever machinery they can to vent their fury against the Massachusetts murderers.

Paris Workers Must Stop the Legion Convention.

The Communist organ of Paris, l'Humanite, has called upon the masses of Paris to make it impossible for the American Legion to hold its convention in that city because of the murderous decision against Sacco and Vanzetti. This admirable act meets with the wholehearted approval of every friend of these victims of class vengeance. Not only should the workers of Paris stop the convention of the Legion, but similar action should be taken by the international proletariat to make it impossible for American representatives of any stripe, aside from workers' representatives to insult the workers by their presence.

From another standpoint the French workers should resent the presence of the American Legion in their midst and make the convention impossible as a protest against the mighty power of American imperialism to which the workers of France, Germany, Hungary, Austria, Italy and all other countries pay tribute in order that Wall Street may realize profits off its investments in their countries. The Legion convention is a symbol of the greed, the avarice, the arrogance of the bloody and cynical despotism of the United States government, the executive committee of yankee imperialism.

Statement of Minority of Political Committee on the Resolution of the E.C.C.I. and the Question of the Party Unity.

On Wednesday, August third, The DAILY WORKER published the Resolution of the Comintern on the American Question, accompanied by a Declaration of the Political Committee. The following is a statement of the Minority of the Political Committee on the Resolution of the Executive Committee of the Communist International and the Question of Party Unity.

1. The resolution of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on the American question gives a clear and decisive line on the most important external and internal problems confronting our party. Our views are in full accord with the line of the resolution. We accept it without any reservations and urge the entire party to do likewise.

2. The resolution correctly puts in the foreground the struggle against American imperialism, indicates that danger and correctly emphasizes the necessity of combatting the liberal illusions about the peaceful rise of American imperialism in order to create the pre-requisites for the revolutionary struggle. In pointing out the necessity of a struggle against Great Britain's war preparations and provocations against the Soviet Union, and the imperialist intervention in China, of always linking up this struggle with the mobilization of the masses for the most energetic fight against the specific role of American imperialism, and of rejecting the point of view which minimizes the predatory role of American capital and presents it unilaterally as the most progressive force in the world as well as other aspects of the development of the fight against Great Britain and the war danger, the resolution lays down a correct line for the guidance of the party.

3. We accept the foregoing treatment of the problems of the American question and consider it a correct guide for the party. We differ from the resolution upon a thorough analysis of the role and form of the struggle of sections of the working class, both internal and theological carried up to the present time. We consider the unsupported attacks against the Lovestone propaganda and their agents, the majority leaders. We are convinced that the Executive of the Communist International has already pointed out in this resolution the main errors of the leadership of the majority group. We consider that a correct application of the line of the resolution will bring our party into the position of the class struggle, will overcome its opportunist errors and will bring the party into the ranks of the Communist International.

4. We have the special attention of the party to the following points, namely, that the Executive Committee of the Communist International has already pointed out the fact that the resolution of the Workers (Communist) Party has not overcome those errors which led to the split in the party. We consider that a clear line on the organization policy in the labor unions, the relation to the labor fakers and methods to be employed, the relation to independent opposition movements and the role of the party. The solution of these basic questions is essential to the mobilization of the entire party for work in the trade unions. The slogan, "Back to the Unions!" which the resolution rejects, is the ground for any further confusion or controversy on the points dealt with.

5. The resolution removes the basis for possible disputes on the question of the Labor Party, by reiterating the already established position that the Labor Party, as a class party, United Labor Ticket must have a strong mass basis in the trade unions. If that mass basis is not attained, then the Worker Communists, Party must itself as a party enter the election campaign." We fully agree with this point of view, and believe its re-statement should finally remove all possibilities of controversy on this question.

7. The insistence of the resolution upon the concentration of greater attention on election campaigns is a timely help to the party. This form of activity has a great significance in connection with the fundamental task of connecting the party with the masses and attracting new streams of workers to the party.

8. The resolution correctly recognizes that despite several objective difficulties the party has recently made important progress in many fields of activity. In the struggles of the miners, the needle trades workers, and in strikes of hitherto unorganized workers, the party has fulfilled its revolutionary duty and gained a positive influence to the lives and struggles of many thousands of workers. The collaboration of all active forces in the party made these accomplishments possible.

9. We are of the firm opinion that the line of the resolution on the internal party situation is entirely correct and that it points out the road which must be followed without reservation or delay under penalty of the gravest consequences for the party. The whole party and especially the party leaders must understand the line of the resolution on this question and carry it out unwaveringly.

The resolution calls for "the liquidation of the still existing groups which are entirely new and block the further development of the party." It points out the obvious fact—which already established in the course of the past year's work—that "the differences regarding the important political questions have recently been much reduced" and from this draws organizational conclusions "aimed to impress the whole party with the necessity of a broad collective leadership, as well as the complete liquidation of the factional struggle."

The basic objective causes for the "untenable position of fiction" formation within the Communist Party have been correctly pointed out in the resolution of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, where it says:

"The objective difficulties, the weakness of the Workers Communist Party and its inadequate contact with the masses of the labor workers are factors complicating the inner situation of the Workers Communist Party. An unusually recently strong party life, as the result of an insufficient mass basis, the inadequate contact of many members of the former factionary groups with the specific problems of the class struggle in the United States, favor the development of groups and factional struggles, the existence and intensity of which we seek in vain to explain through serious differences of principle."

The most important task confronting the party and its coming convention is to realize the resolution of the ECCI in the life of the party, to break down the factional barriers, to liquidate the outlived factions and to unite the party on the basis of collective leadership. The political basis for this unification has been steadily developing, but the organization unification of the party leadership has not kept pace. It has even been essentially hampered by the persistence in factional methods and the attempt to permanently maintain factional organization. In order that this article may be as brief as it is necessary that the reasons for this certainly clear to the party.

The Comintern resolution says:

"The majority of the Party Executive (Political Committee) did not sufficiently understand how to create such a condition of affairs as to bring about an amalgamation with the forces which are today in opposition. Within the ranks of the majority, a bloc with the Cannon group took place and the Weinstone group also split off from the majority. It is clear that the majority of the Political Committee followed a too narrow course within the party and themselves essentially contributed to the continued existence of fraction walls. A struggle of the majority of the Political Committee (Lovestone) against the groups at present in opposition (Foster, Weinstone, Cannon) would be justified if it were a question of anti-Communist comrades who threaten the further development of the Party (like Lore). This is not so in the case of comrades like Foster, Weinstone, and Cannon."

and further:

"Therefore, the majority of the Political Committee must recognize the necessity to do their utmost to bring about the Cannon collaboration with the Foster group and with the Weinstone-Cannon group, in order to attain complete fusion of the groups at the Party convention. Non-recognition signifies the revival of the faction struggle and signifies in the last analysis the degeneration of the faction into cliques and the creation of a party crisis."

While uniting with the right wing and the former leaders of the Lore group, the majority of the Polcom rejected unity with the other groups in the Central Committee and carried on an unjustified fight against them. The reason for the failure to bring about the unification of the party leadership after the political basis has been established, and despite the exceptional opportunities provided by the loyal collaboration of the leading comrades of all groups and the absence of any factional opposition, are not arbitrary or accidental. It is necessary to go to the root of these reasons and remove them before real progress can be made in carrying out the decisions of the CI resolution and the joint agreement of the American delegates for the liquidation of the factions and the unification of the party.

The opposition groups have not been free from errors of a factional character, which called forth from the ECCI the justified statement that "the opposition groups must cease their factional methods."

But the main obstacle to the unification of the party has been the theory of hegemony. Animated by this theory, which is entirely false, without foundation and exceedingly harmful and dangerous for the party the Lovestone group has claimed the right to permanently maintain itself as a closed faction and to exercise "hegemony" over the party. From this theory has proceeded an ultra-factional practice which not only failed to develop the party in the direction of unity, but artificially hampered this development. The rejection of this theory in deed as well as in words is an absolute prerequisite for the actually carrying out of the resolution of the ECCI and the agreement of the American delegation.

Since the return of the delegation the Lovestone group has not indicated any change in the slightest degree in the factional course it has followed up to now. While formally disavowing the demand for hegemony in words it maintains it in every action it has taken. It has proceeded on the same factional path in all matters since the return of the delegation, in complete disregard of the opposition groups and without manifesting the slightest intention of coming to any agreement with them, even on such questions as the division of duties and responsibilities provided for in the organizational decisions of the ECCI.

This attitude has been especially signalized by the issuance of a statement of the Political Committee majority on the resolution of the ECCI of such a factional character that the minority of the Polcom was unable to sign it, notwithstanding our declared will and endeavor to come to agreement with them on a joint statement.

Under these circumstances the minority of the Polcom, in behalf of the opposition groups, has been compelled to issue its own statement in order that our position may be put before the party. In doing so we regard it as our urgent duty and collective leadership. We declare our readiness to collaborate with the majority of the Polcom on the basis of conduct of the spirit of the CI resolution and the joint agreement. We realize here, in our opinion that "the leading forces of all three groups can and must unite," for in them contains in their ranks complicated stages."

The unity of the party in face of war danger and the offensive against the party as an incontestable necessity. The way to this unification has been correctly indicated in the resolution of the ECCI and the joint agreement of the American delegation drawn up in cooperation with the ECCI. These documents speak in clear terms for the liquidation of the factional struggle and for the merger of the existing groups into a collective leadership, without the hegemony of any group over the others. The basis for membership must support this unity. The party membership in the coming months must reject the theory, and practice of factionalism and thus lay the basis for real unity in the party.

BRUTAL CAPITALIST JUSTICE IN MASSACHUSETTS SPEAKS ITS FINAL WORD AGAINST SACCO. VANZETTI

Bx District 2. Workers (Communist) Party.

With cynical and contemptuous disregard of all the facts of the case, and of the world-wide appeal by labor and progressive people, Governor Fuller has doomed Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair. Despite the sham and hypocritical investigation and the judgment of Governor Fuller, Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent. American labor is not shaken for a single moment in its complete faith that these workers did not commit the crime of which they are charged. American labor is likewise unshaken in its conviction that the trial from beginning to end was a frame-up against these two workers because they belong to the working class and fought against the capitalists of this country.

The judgment upon Sacco and Vanzetti is a judgment against American labor as a whole. The judgment of execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, if carried out, will be the starting point of a new series of repressive laws against the labor movement of this country and against the foreign-born workers in particular.

Labor cannot accept the verdict as final. It cannot allow Sacco and Vanzetti to go to the electric chair. In the united strength of the workers class there is still power to free Sacco and Vanzetti. United and quick action can still free Sacco and Vanzetti. Only if labor employs the power at its command can they be freed. Away with illusions regarding capitalist justice! As Sacco said, "Only international protest by the working class can bring our liberation."

The action of Governor Fuller following the courts of Massachusetts demonstrates once again that the workers cannot secure justice at the hands of capitalist politicians and capitalist institutions. It proves again that as long as labor has to struggle and fight against the complete mercy of the political parties of the employers, will such flagrant violations of every elementary right of the workers continue. American workers must realize the necessity for the establishment of a labor party in this country and for labor taking vigorous and independent political action in its own behalf. This case has sufficiently exposed the crass dictatorship of capital which rules in this country.

The Workers (Communist) Party calls upon the workers of New York City to stop work in the afternoon of Tuesday, August 9, and unite in one mass demonstration calling for the absolute and unqualified liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti. The Workers (Communist) Party is ready to join with all labor organizations in such a united demonstration of protest. Sacco and Vanetti must not die!

WILKES BARRE, Penna. The Luzerne-Wilkes Barre section of the Workers (Communist) Party has sent to the DAILY WORKER a donation of $40, in addition to the $25 sent a few days ago. Such activity on the part of the coal mining comrades faced as they are with their many difficulties and struggles, is especially appreciated.

Byrd Postpones Polar Flight.

Owing to the extensive preparations necessary for the trip, Commander Richard E. Byrd has postponed the start of his south pole flight until next year, it was learned here today. He had originally planned to leave in October or November this year.

There will be 51 men and two planes in Byrd the exploration party. Besides Byrd himself, a meteorologist, a physician and six Europe on Monday to attend to the European end of the voyage.

should insist on blotting from the Sacco and Vanzetti off the map.

WE are not thru with this Sacco and Vanzetti fight. To hell with those who think that rather than the last card on the table. Tom Mooney would now be a ghost, but for the mighty protest of international labor. It may suit socialist preachers to state days of mourning after the executions, but that is not our line. We want to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti. This is our duty.

HOW can they be saved? The workers, the class-conscious workers are willing to go to hell on the matter. This is a case of where the capitalists enter the ring against the workers with bare fists. They feel that victory is in their mitts; that the workers are not ready to quit the challenge. They see no opposition blocks to their path. It is time for a determined protest. SACCO AND VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE.

A SKED at our typewriters or on the platform Sacco and Vanzetti say they will die on the chair. Those of you who have lived in even an ordinary prison cell will realize what it means. But it is the real torture of two days of waiting after the verdict that I state it. It is the fact that Sacco and Vanzetti mean YOU AND I and that the capitalists are murdering them because they think that by so doing they will scare the rest of us into submission. The capitalists are not fools. They believe that they will be successful. They know that liberal politicians do not mean a damned thing. They believe that they can get away with the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Shall they? It is up to you.

The Upheaval in Vienna

By WILL SCHLAMM (Vienna)

THE Austrian proletariat has had a terrible awakening from its peaceful dream of "Red" Vienna is only a blood-red Vienna. After two days of fearful slaughter, the Vienna workingclass — abominably abandoned and betrayed by the leaders of the social-democratic party — has been crushed by the blindly raging forces of "law and order."

The immediate cause of the bloody events was a gigantic and spontaneous demonstration of the workingclass of Vienna against the acquittal of two fascists who, on the 30th of January last, murdered a worker and a workingclass child.

The Austrian bourgeoisie, which, with the help of th League of Nations, had managed to extricate itself from a state of economic collapse, has for some years past been organizing fascism in order to be able to complete the economic and political subjugation of the Austrian proletariat. In face of a workingclass possessing the possibilities, the power and the organizations which the workingclass of Austria possesses, the process of restoring bourgeois economy can only be accomplished after the political subjugation of the proletariat. The second Seipel government is the conscious expression of the policy of the Austrian bourgeoisie.

The Austrian social democracy, this show-piece of the II International, could, with its reformist policy, appear before the masses with sham successes only so long as the bourgeoisie was compelled to pursue a policy of weakness and concessions. With the strengthening of the bourgeoisie and fascism, the flourishing period of the Austro-Marxist conjuring was past. In the course of two years, one worker after another has been vilely slaughtered by fascist provocateurs. The growing indignation of the masses and their desire to take adequate measures of self-defence, were continually damped down with reassuring statements and promises by the social democratic leaders.

This time, however, the indignation broke out in an elemental form and with wonderful and tremendous force. In fact the Vienna workingclass has risen in a powerful revolt and has proved that it is to be counted among the best and most courageous battalions of the world revolution. But at the same time it has proved, at the cost of 1500 wounded, 150 killed and a severe defeat of the proletariat, the baseness and the treachery of the Austrian social democracy.

On Thursday, July 14th, late in the evening, the acquittal of the fascist murderers was made known. The Communist Party summoned the workers to protest and to a mass demonstration to be held on Friday evening.

But early on Friday morning the workers in numerous factories ceased work and proceeded to march to the centre of the city. The police proceeded systematically and attempted to break up the first groups of workers who had arrived, but the tremendous masses of workers which were arriving at every moment soon made this attempt impossible. The police still continued their provocation and at ten o'clock the first shots were fired. In the meantime the masses had completely filled the great Ringstrasse, and although they were quite unarmed, defended themselves against the police and disarmed many of the latter.

One police station from which shots had been fired was cleared out and demolished. In the meantime, huge crowds had assembled before the Courts of Justice, where they were suddenly fired upon from the interior of the building. The demonstrators commenced a fierce attack on the premises, which they finally captured and set on fire. Bright flames are soon shooting up from the hated building. The working people of Vienna has stormed the Bastille of Austrian class justice! The firebrigade is prevented by the masses from extinguishing the flames.

There now appears upon the scene the political fire-brigade: Herr Seitz, the social democratic mayor of Vienna, and Julius Deutsch, two shining lights among the social democratic leaders, attempting to extinguish the flames. They are received with a storm of indignation and are obliged to retreat for the time being. In the meantime the police have suddenly disappeared. But this is only a stratagem! After a short time the police are to be seen advancing simultaneously from various directions in closed ranks armed with carbines and military rifles. They now commence firing volley after volley into the crowd. But the workers do not draw back.

The workers continue the fight with passionate enthusiasm, while an unending line of automobiles removes the innumerable dead and wounded. It is some hours before the murderous fire disperses the compact masses. Early in the afternoon troops of the republican army with machine guns, march against the workers. (According to the law such a measure requires the express sanction of the mayor, in this case the social democrat Herr Seitz). In the afternoon the armed forces gain control of the inner city. Now they cannot and will not withdraw. Punitive expeditions now proceed against the workingclass districts. During the evening and till late in the night they drive furiously through the workingclass quarters, shooting wildly in every direction. This night takes toll of dozens of dead.

And now it is early Saturday morning. No newspapers have appeared. Only a news-sheet of the social democratic party and the "Rote Fahne"[1] forgan of the Communist Party). It has not allowed itself to be suppressed either by the police or the measures of force of the socialist party leader. The socialist party ex ecutive calls upon the workers to obey in every way the decrees of the police, to remain at home and not allow themselves to be provoked by "Communist hooligans." Not a strike, obviously not a single fighting slogan! Only the spontaneous general strike is recognized, but only for 24 hours. And the ridiculous farce of a railway and postal strike is proclaimed to be the decisive fighting means of the workingclass.

The Communist Party calls for the arming of the workers, for an indefinite general strike, and commons the workers to come into the street. Its slogans are:

Down with the government! Fight for the workers' and peasants' government! Disarming of all fascist organizations! Setting up of armed self-defense organization in place of the Schutzbund, which has proved an absolute failure! Release of the proletarian Reichswehr from the barracks and fraternization with them! The Communist slogans are received with unexampled enthusiasm. But the C. P. is too weak in a decisive grip an organizatory leadership. The masses are without leaders.

Saturday night. The police are firing in the workingclass district of Hernals; the workers build barricades and hold them. But they have no weapons!

Early Sunday morning. The socialist party leaders, who on the previous day had distributed among the masses a leaflet fiercely attacking the Communists—not a word against the government!—succeed in getting the tramway men to return to work. In the night of Saturday and Sunday the Communist Party issues an illegal leaflet to the masses, calling on them to hold out and to carry on the fight for the well-known demands. General feeling is in favor of the Communists, but it is unorganized.

Sunday afternoon. Conference of the carefully selected social democratic functionaries [illegible] to a mere [illegible] Communist [illegible] ratic manoeuvre, which [illegible] ground from under the Communists, is [illegible] a call for the arming of the workers, [illegible] set up a legal organ of [illegible] the [illegible] the social democratic functionaries who, [illegible] to the C. P. [illegible] and all question. It is armed with [illegible] and [illegible] hatchet, together with the entire party [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] law and order in [illegible]

The conference of functionaries reflects [illegible] the Chinese event of [illegible] Canton [illegible] appearing minority desires weapons and against the new municipal police. The C. P. leadership has the opportunity [illegible] to [illegible] in hand again to be able to bring about the resumption of work in the factories early on Monday morning.

The C. P. calls upon the workers to continue the strike, and issues the slogan: general strike on Wednesday 20th of July, the day of the funeral of the fallen. The socialist party leaders want to bury the dead without participation of the workingclass.

The Seipel government has seized the first opportunity in order to crush the workingclass by making use of the S. P. leaders and to break the strength of the proletarian organizations. In doing so the government has deliberately opposed a section of the bourgeoisie which is in favor of a policy of coalition with the socialist party. Seipel does not want any coalition and he prevents it by means of mass murder. The socialist party leaders want a coalition, and therefore left the workingclass without weapons and without leaders, as they want to prove themselves to be "fit to govern."

The Communist Party placed itself in the lead of the struggle, and is now persecuted with boundless hate by the government and the S. P. leaders. At the same time a campaign of incitement, inspired by England, is proceeding against Russia. The Vienna insurrection is crushed for the time being, but the C. P. is seeking to approach the masses and is beginning to organize them for successful counter-attack. It needs the help and support of the revolutionary proletariat of the whole world!

British Imperialism in China

I.—British Economic Interests in China.

By SCOTT NEARING

BRITAIN'S early economic interests in China centred about the opium trade. The opium was produced in India and imported into China by the British East India Company, which had secured a monopoly of Chinese trade. The trade was not direct, however. It was carried on through a guild of Chinese merchants at Canton.

Opium imports increased rapidly. They were 200 chests in 1725. Between 1820 and 1828 opium imports doubled. Between 1828 and 1835 they doubled again. Again they doubled between 1835 and 1839. In the latter year British merchants imported 35,200 pounds of opium into China, about one hundredth part of the quantity that had been imported in 1729.

Meanwhile Chinese officials were doing what they could to stop a traffic that threatened to debauch the entire Chinese nation. In 1800 a series of imperial edicts were issued, prohibiting the importation of opium into China and also prohibiting its production in China. Despite these efforts, the trade grew.

In 1839 the Chinese government made a determined effort to stop the opium trade. A huge quantity of opium was seized as contraband and destroyed, and British ships were forbidden to enter Canton ese waters. The result was the First Opium War (1840-1842). A good description of these episodes will be found in a book "China and the Nations," by Wong Chin wai, published in 1927 (Stokes, New York).

As a result of the First Opium War, China was forced to turn over Hongkong to Britain. This port was then used as a base for opium smuggling until, at the end of the Second Opium War, which began in 1856, the opium trade was legalized at the insistence of the British.

The First Opium War had another result that was of great consequence to the future of British economic relations with China. Four Chinese ports were "opened" to British traders.

The "opening" of Chinese ports meant that the Chinese merchant guilds no longer held the monopoly of trade. Instead they were forced to share the trading business with foreign merchants. The plan gave the British merchants an entrance into the Chinese market. It also laid the basis for an economic conflict that eventually brought on the Chinese Revolution of 1911.

British trade with China grew rapidly through the middle years of the last century. The yearly average was 10.1 million pounds sterling from 1846-1855; 16.8 million pounds from 1861-65, and 22.5 millions from 1871-75. There was a change in the balance and in the character of the trade, however. In the early years, British exports to China greatly exceeded British imports from China. By the end of the century, the situation had been reversed. The character of the trade had also changed. In the early years, the British merchants sold finished goods, ready for use to the Chinese market. In the later year, the British manufacturer sold machinery to China, with which the goods for the Chinese market might be produced in China. This point is well made in a recent book "British Imperialism in China," written by Elinor Burns, and published in London by the Labor Research Department. The value of British machinery exports to China was $225,000 in 1875; $1,125,000 in 1895, and $3,750,000 in 1910.

In order to enable the Chinese to pay for these large amounts of capital goods, British bankers loaned money to China. The British share of loans made to the old Chinese governments is placed at $500,000,000. This, added to the private British capital investments, brings the total of British economic interests in China to about $1,500 million.

Here, in brief, is the economic basis of British interest in China. It is founded on trade and investments. Its object is economic profit to the British trader and investor.

2.—The Flag Follows the Investor

Building this vast economic interest in China has been anything but a simple matter. It has proved

RAISE YOUR VOICE IN PROTEST—SAVE THEM FROM THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

The Story of a British Spy in Russia

IN the Autumn of 1926 the G. P. U. learned of the intention of the Russian monarchist organization in Paris to send a group of terrorists to Moscow with a view to carrying out a series of attacks upon the People's Commissars of the Soviet Union.

In the summer of the same year a foreign looking foreigner had been arrested at a Moscow railway station. He had a Roumanian passport under the name of Pavel and was stated to be a merchant. He was armed with a revolver.

After brief denials the arrested man was compelled under the overwhelming weight of evidence against him, to admit that the passport with which he had entered the Soviet Union was a false one, and that in reality he was the well-known Russian White Guardist Georg Eugen-vitch. Elvengren, a very well-known member of the leading "White Guardist authorities." At the same time the arrested man admitted that he had come to the Soviet Union with the sole aim of organizing terrorist groups.

As first Elvengren refused to name his accomplices, but later his detailed statements were of considerable assistance to the G. P. U. in its work of exposing and foiling the terrorist machinations of the Russian White Guardist organizations abroad. Elvengren gave an exhaustive statement concerning the real instigators of the white terror. In particular he declared that the terrorist group to which he himself belonged was formed with the active cooperation of the member of the British Secret Service Sidney George Reilly, and with the assistance of the Commerce and Industry Society in Paris which is formed of emigrants, and of the terrorist group of Aubert, the well-known Swiss White Guardist.

Who Is Elvengren?

Elvengren is one of the most "respected" of the leaders of the bloodiest undertakings of the Russian reaction, counter-revolution and terror.

In the past he was Staff Captain of Horse in a Cuirassier Regiment of Guards. From the first moment of the revolution in 1917 he was in the first ranks of those who waited for an opportunity to revenge and utilized the fury of the obstinate monarchists. He began an active, and bloody struggle against everything approaching "revolutionary rebellion."

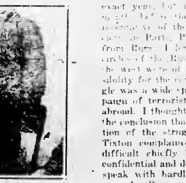
Immediately after the March revolution Elvengren entered the ranks of the monarchist military organization, which aimed at the overthrow of the Provisional government and the restoration of the Romanoff monarchy. The organization called itself the "War League," and Admiral Koltchak was one of its most prominent leaders.

After the destruction of the "War League" by Kerensky, Elvengren joined the famous Georgian organization of nobles where he was a particular friend of the chairman.

In the days of the October revolution, Elvengren entered the organization led by Boris Savinkov, Gotz and Avksentiev known as the "Committee for Salvation." The first task which Elvengren received from the committee was to take companies of Cossacks, surround the Smolny and arrest all the Bolshevist members of the Soviets.

After the defeat of the counter-revolution in the Crimea in which Elvengren took a leading part, he left with other well-known White Guardists and participated actively in the crushing of the revolutionary workingclass movement in Finland by General Mannerheim. Upon the conclusion of this "heroism" Elvengren began to participate steadily in a number of adventures and he allied himself with the most various Russian organizations and foreign governments and groups whenever he saw the possibility of a bitter struggle against the revolution.

Elvengren himself, his activity and at the same time all those forces which carry on a life and death struggle with the Soviet Union, are best characterized by the personal written statements of Elvengren. We give him the floor to speak, expose and to accuse:



The Conspirative and Espionage Work of Elvengren In Finland.

Elvengren describes a number of counter-revolutionary and espionage organizations which were formed in Finland in the years 1918-21 and which sent their agents, spies and murderers to the Soviet Union and then mentions the following details:

"Upon the initiative of Count V. Buksgevdyen (at present chairman of the Russian emigrant colony in Finland and delegate to the foreign congress of the monarchists in Paris) who had addressed himself to me, a meeting was called at which it was decided to form a permanent group meeting regularly and sending its representative to the united session of the chairmen of all organizations.

"At this meeting at which, apart from the founders, also Captain Wilken, was present, the chief question discussed was how the struggle against the Soviet Union could be best developed, how it was to be prepared and what should be done.

"I used the opportunity to make the acquaintance of Wilken. He interested me, and I made efforts to become closely acquainted with him and to establish connections with him. . . I was soon able to discover that he was chairman of an active group of English spies, that he was working under the instructions of the group and that he participated in the preparations of the English who were striving to force Finland into a war with the Soviet Union

Sergei Druzhowski, forger of false counter-revolutionary documents, on trial before the Russian Supreme Court in June.

"Before the Kronstadt rising, Captain Wilken went to Kronstadt under the instructions of the English receiving papers, obviously under English influence the English had great influence in Finland at that time) from Professor Zeidler a barman of the Red Cross in Finland) supporting him to be an official of the International Red Cross. He was allegedly to take over the supply of Kronstadt. The one time General Yavid who was a friend of Professor Zeidler received a similar document. They both went to Kronstadt, and when I learned that the Kronstadt rising was dragging itself out and that connection had been established with Yuborg and journeyed from Helsingfors to Yuborg.

"I approached Zeidler who as intermediary with Kronstadt and best informed about events." (This was when Elvengren was participating in the Kronstadt events, he also took up connection with the monarchist organization in Leningrad under the leadership of Tatentsov. This organization, as is known, saw its chief task in the carrying out of terrorism.

"The Russian monarchist groups in Finland knew of my connection with Savinkov, but in this connection I had absolutely independent; and did not often speak of the matter, for the monarchists detected all connection with Savinkov, for the most part.

"In Finland I was the representative of the Russian Political Committee in Poland" led by Savinkov. When I was once in Warsaw, I participated in the composition of the so-called "Warsaw Documents." This document contained an appeal for support for the continuation of the struggle. It also contained a point inserted by me attacking the emigration."

The Various "Specialties" of Elvengren.

The reactionary Russian monarchist Elvengren was at the same time a "democrat," almost a socialrevolutionary, a supporter of Savinkov and if necessary a Menshevik, which Kronstadt sometimes.

He attempted to use the supporters of Savinkov and also Kronstadt for the monarchist machinations. At the back of all these activities there was the function of Elvengren as "White Russian Ambassador" in Finland and ambassador of the "National White Russian Republic" to the government of Finland.

Such a government at whose head was the Minister Lastovski existed at that time in various countries, Poland, Esthonia and Latvia. Upon this point Elvengren writes as follows:

"... in the summer of 1920 I arrived in Reval, . . . where at that time there was a delegation of White Russians. They were conducting negotiations with the Esthonian government with the authority of the White Russian Rada and their aim was to bring about the formation of a national White Russian Republic. I was acquainted with this delegation and with the history and situation of the national White Russian movement. I can only remember the leader of this delegation Sakharkv with whom I mostly conducted negotiations. The members of the delegation proposed that I should go to Riga and make the closer acquaintance of their government. Before I left, Sakharkv wrote a letter to the head of his government Lastovski, and armed with this letter I went to Riga.

"After making the acquaintance of Lastevski and a number of other White Russians, they proposed to me that up to the clarification of the question whether or not it were possible to form a national White Russian government, I should undertake the post of consul of the White Russian government in Finland.

"I accepted this proposal and received the necessary papers, a diplomatic passport seals, etc., and departed for Finland."

DISARMAMENT

For the last few weeks a conference had been held at Geneva in Switzerland consisting of delegates from several of the most powerful capitalist countries including United States, England and France. This conference is supposed to be called for the purpose of reducing the peculiarities of war by the deductions of war machinery. Today this conference has either collapsed or is on the verge of collapsing.

The reason this conference as well as many others called for the same purpose is collapsing is because under the capitalist system there can be no permanent peace. Each capitalist power does not desire peace but advantages over their opponents in case of war. That's the reason the delegates of Great Britain and the United States could not agree and consequently the conference was doomed to failure.

The only way we can have permanent peace is not by calling useless and fake disarmement conferences but by instituting workers' governments in all present capitalist countries. Workers' governments will have NO interest or desire for war.

STRIKE

Dear Comrades: The morning was dark and rainy, yet the streets were thronged with striking farmers, who were standing on the picket line. I noticed a peculiar fellow who mingled with the crowd. He was shabbily dressed and smoked a cigarette. He was walking to and fro nervously, and trying to avoid other persons' glances. I determined to know his history, but soon found it not an easy matter. For he tried to avoid speaking to other people.

A day later I saw the same individual telling his story to a union official. It was then that I got this man's history. He was a married man, with four children, and his family was starving. Also, the first day I saw him, he attempted to rob a store, but lost his nerve. So now he had planned to turn to the union for help.

After the official had heard his story, the man received the following answer. "The bosses refuse to settle." The man's head drooped and he walked out. The next day my eyes fell upon an article in the newspaper reading as follows: Furrier striker dies a suicide. Wife also dies from shock. Four children are bereaved. Thus another life passed away.

Organizing the Unorganized

tice however, go much further than any of the anti-Fascist anti-labor methods practiced under cover are becoming the vanguard and are leding practiced against militant labor with the collusion and even open support of the A. F. of L. leadership. Witness Matthew Woll's activities in New York and as acting president of the Civic Federation.

The workers in the big industries are over ripe for organization. This has been shown by the activities of the small number of groups inside the big industries that have been formed thus far. The outstanding examples are the groups in the Detroit automobile plants, which after a few months work now publish plant papers with a total circulation of 35,000. Amongst these workers, who are the most exploited by the over-lords and autocrats of industry is the real volcano of proletarian discontent and struggle that has not been even tapped as yet by our activity.

But the group activities inside the plants as strategic and important as it is can only bring the desired results if a broad political movement can be developed that will bring this tremendous proletarian industrial army striving for better conditions and organization into a broad political stream to restore the rights to organize, strike and picket and to restore civil liberties. Many sections of the petit bourgeoisie, particularly the farmers, could be brought into a united front on such issues. In many of the typical industrial farms of the U. S. there are no labor unions and those that are, in many instances dominated by the stool pigeons and agents of the bosses, will not go into a political movement against the old parties and towards a Labor Party. Yet it is quite clear that the political oppression of labor has made the situation quite ripe for political expression and political organization, based on the present conditions of the workers' economic, political and ideological. In many instances political organization and activity offers greater opportunities of mass organization and open agitation than direct attack on the economic battles of the trusts, and offers opportunities to draw the intelligensia of all the various categories of labor, petty bourgeois, etc. into the struggle and leadership against the ever increasing oppression of imperialist capitalism.

There must be political protection in order to enable labor to organize and prevent its organizations once established from being crushed by the police club of capital. The work in the factories must be protected, supplemented and extended by a whole series of supporting and complimentary activations of which the political is the most important, also cooperatives, fraternal and sport organizations, that even under the iron heel of imperialist capitalism can still operate with relative freedom. In the establishment of such organizations and in support of our great task amongst the unorganized the work and experience of the left wing in the existing labor unions inside and outside the A. F. of L. will be of great aid. Any effective work amongst the unorganized is sure to still the imagination of labor. This was demonstrated in striking form in the Passaic struggle, which was supported by hundreds of A. F. of L. locals despite the denunciation of Green, Woll and Company. Effective work amongst the unorganized is the key to the American labor movement, the road to the defeat of reaction in the labor movement and the road to the victory of the American workingclass. Let all militants get ready for this the greatest of our tasks.

The Actress

I. Act

Translated from the Russian of P. Romanov by VERA and VIOLET MIROVSKY

The name of the revolutionary actress Anna Beltgardt, was popular in the factory districts, her name arousing, from her interpretations of anti-religious roles. Her new pantomime, "Insurrection," at each performance aroused the noisy delight of her audience. The people never called this small golden-haired woman other than "our actress." In no other role could they find such truth and sincerity.

Once the mistress of a large estate and a rich mansion, during the years of revolution she had passed through all stages of hardship and now, having once charmed her guests with her voice and grace, she decided to employ her talents to earn bread and avert a death by starvation. The value of money, however, fell before her arrival and for two or three roubles she sang three performances a night in cheap cabarets and, for lack of dressing rooms, awaited her turn in a dirty little corridor behind the stage.

She could not adapt her self-respect to these people who had lost all conscience, who were entirely indifferent as to how they earned their living. Earning sometimes two and a half roubles a week, she reached the stage where she demanded meeting acquaintances and never went out in the street to avoid passing the balconies with their bold displays of pastry.

At last she had no powder left. With a feeling of shame, she used tooth-powder instead and, unable to send her clothes to a laundress, she carefully locked the door and washed her lingerie in a soup tureen. When she had only one chemise left, she clumsily made herself another from a pillow case. The use of tooth-powder instead of face powder, however, caused her more suffering than hunger and lack of clothes. She did not know why herself. Her chief consolation in this trying time was religion. Such is her recent past.

When told that the old life would never return, that she must somehow adapt herself to the new, she could feel nothing but horror. What would it mean to adapt oneself to the new life? It would mean to go to bed below in God, to spit on the floor, have dirty finger nails and to take other people's mansions away. No, better death than that. What could be attractive in this life, which required neither the tender elegies of Turgenev nor the delicate feminine hands developed by centuries of care, nor that appalling helplessness which had captivated her friends in the old days. She could offer nothing as a substitute for this; she could not, though she might wish it with all her heart, which was a kind and loving one.

Then a sudden change. A black hairy man gave her a pantomime called "Insurrection" and from that day Anna Beltgardt lived here. She did not know herself why her acting aroused such enthusiasm. She acted as simply and naively as she lived. She did not know any other way. But invariably she felt during the performance in the hall hold his breath when she appeared. Perhaps it was because she expressed her mood not in words but in movements. Perhaps she made a deep impression because this small woman had a frail transparent body and the translucent truthful eyes of a child. Perhaps, both together. The fact remains that the impression produced by her acting was always inefreaceably deep. Such a transformation of people as she perfected only by one who had experienced all," he was portraying.

Working people are sensitive to execution. They immediately detect falsity and insincerity when a cultured actor pronounces their ordinary words in his trained, cultivated tones, words which in reality are used by them who have voices not at all cultivated. In such interpretations they sense artificiality. But a working class audience is also considerate. It laughs and applauds generously even when everything is not going well. That's what the stage is for; it isn't really happening so we can't take it seriously. "Still," they try to please us." And so they are pleased in the end.

When, however, someone gives them genuine art, they recognize it at once and there is a different ring to their applause.

In the hall, all who had not yet seen the new play, were waiting for it with a small woman would, with her dancing, interpret the insurrection. You would think that a whole crowd would be required. How could she do it alone?

The curtain goes up. The program begins.

First came the singers, in peasant costume, with new bast shoes. They sang, swinging their arms, dancing their national dances, during which the disheveled red wig of the peasant boy in the unnaturally clean shirt and new, unworn shoes, slipped off, showing black hair at the back, and because he did not notice it—it was very funny. His earnest endeavors aroused the pity of the audience.

"It isn't easy for him to earn his living," thought each.

Then came a story-teller, also in a red wig and bast shoes, with stories of the people's lives, the point of which was the wrong pronounciation of words, such mistakes as he supposed would be made by the common people. The audience might have been insulted but applauded goodnaturedly—Bread.

The curtain was lowered. The chairman came out and spoke loudly, as one speaks of what has been long and impatiently awaited.

Anna Beltgardt will perform her new number, "Insurrection."

All sounds were hushed. In a second came the sound of music, faint, half heard, as though coming through thick glowing walls. The curtain went up quickly and noiselessly. The scenery represented a prison, the corner of a thick grey stone wall with spiders of white wash, a heap of straw on the floor and a small square window with thick iron bars. In the other corner stood an altar, covered with red fustian, and on it a wooden cross and the New Testament.

All eyes were fixed on the open prison with stone steps leading upward. What would appear there?

The music sounded an abrupt chord like the breaking string of a violin and at the same time, down the stone steps, as if thrown down by a cruel push from the jailer, rolled a frail body.

A shudder passed through the audience, then all was still.

It is she. Her tiny body, crouched into a ball, lay helplessly on the stone floor. Then she slowly raised her head and, standing on her knees, with an expression of throbbing pain from the blow, gazed with innocent, childish fright at the walls, at the straw on the floor, the barred window. Her eyes showed none of that exaggerated horror and suffering usually affected on the stage. Her face was the face of a child whose tears at some sorrow have not yet dried but whose attention is already distracted by new surroundings. The surroundings are distressing—a heap of straw and a barred window.

She understood. The sudden realization of her position evidently pierces her brain. She jumps up, throws herself against the door, bangs on its heavy knob, tears against it, bites her hands in a frenzy of despair.

For her the audience does not exist. For her there is no crowd of people sitting in the hall at her back. She is alone before that door which has closed forever, which nothing can open, against whose heavy wood she can only beat her head and bite her hands to dull the pain of consciousness of being buried alive.

There is only one thought among those hundreds of people sitting in the hall: to throw themselves against that door. Not only the door but the wall would go down before hundreds of strong workmen's shoulders.

Suddenly something flashed across the face of the small suffering woman, her glance fell on the red altar and the cross. To her that red cloth is the symbol of her blood, which will be spilt perhaps today, perhaps tomorrow. Her wide-open eyes are full of a silent wordless horror, then the horror changes into an intense pious humility. With arms stretched forward, with tears streaming down her pale cheeks, she crawls to the altar on her knees. One feels such horror and pity for her that each member of the audience repeats to himself that all this is not true, it is only a play.

Suddenly she raises her head as though struck by a new thought, looks intently at the altar, at the cross, rises, approaches with the curiosity of a newly-wakened consciousness, examines the things, touches them and passes her hand over her eyes.

In the hall all is still; there is only the hushed breathing of a hundred breasts. Then, she listens, her ears have caught some sound outside. She shudders. With the cross in her hand, she goes to the door. The sounds draw nearer, she can clearly hear the revolutionary hymn and the running of many hundred feet.

"Victory!"

Her eyes flash from the door to the window, a change passes over her face. It is lighted by a new hope and the entire audience unconsciously reflects that smile of joy and triumph.

She is no longer small, miserable slave. She seems to have straightened out, grown, her eyes have become large and radiant. She suddenly breaks the cross in half, spurns it with her feet, tears the red covering off the altar and carrying it like a victorious banner, rushes toward the prison door which swings open to triumphant shouts—

In the hall they shout, rattle their chairs, wave to her, and she, once more the small, helpless woman, comes out on the stage and, stretching out her arms in a child-like manner, bows and smiles a touched and grateful smile.

The performance is over. In the dressing-room she stands before the mirror, rubbing off the make-up with a bit of cotton, closes her little suitcase and, receiving her ten rubles, leaves the hall. Arriving at home, she unlocks her room. In it is a large old-fashioned bed, two portraits of ancestors in generals' uniforms, near the wall a table with a coffee-pot. Now she eats bread with caviar, drinks coffee and milk.

It is late. She undresses and standing on the carpet by her bed, in her nightgown, with little bare feet, she prays long and earnestly to the crucifix over her bed.

She asks god to try to understand and pardon her, as it is necessary to her acting, that she is still faithful to him with all her heart. But tooth-powder instead of face powder! That is too much.

son first. I had [illegible] meeting Baldwinski did he want put one of the way. He then gave up the names of Krassin, Tchicherin, Radek, Rakowski, and Bukharin and perhaps still others. He was particularly interested in getting rid of Krassin.

"We answered with the secret code word, and I went to Berlin with Savinkoff and Deterding. He was met at the train from the station to the house of the monarchist secret agent Oxbey who was the chairman of the Evangelical conference in Berlin. He was closely connected with and completely dependent upon the British secret agent Reilly. Orlov, second in command to Savinkoff, an agent, photographs and descriptions of the Soviet representatives were consulted, he could do everything necessary. He had in his possession various fine with pockets, hats etc. Savinkoff ordered five revolvers and photographs and descriptions of Krassin, Tchicherin, Radek, and Bukharin.

"We discussed the stopping place of the Soviet delegation in Genoa and made preparations to carry out an attempt upon its members. I learned in Berlin that Tchicherin would also come. As I had not gotten time to get into touch with spy connections I went into the station but I could find no one there that I left the station. I got in touch with me to operators with a view to carrying out an attempt upon the members of the delegation which included Litvinov, when it set off. We knew that a special train with a saloon-car was waiting at Potsdamer Railway Station, and we succeeded in gaining access to the platform which was closed to the general public. All my companions had false passports and sufficient money in case of flight. It turned out that only less important members of the delegation were in the saloon-wagon of the train and that the chief members of the delegation were attending a dinner at the German Foreign Office, and so the train left without them. But Tchicherin and the other members of the delegation reached the train by automobile at another station. After the delegation departed for Genoa, I remained with my group in Berlin and we intended to carry out terrorist attempts upon the Bolshevist leaders who had remained in Berlin. It was rumored that Rakovski had remained in Berlin. We intended to carry out an attempt against Litvinov, but we found out only too late the wagon in which he was traveling. With the failure ended this depressing affair."

From the statement of Elvengren it is clear that he did everything he could of a technical nature to kill our delegates to Genoa. At the decisive moment, the real "mastermind" in the affair appeared, Sidney George Reilly. Our delegation only escaped death thanks to our own precautions and to the watchfulness of the Berlin police. Elvengren writes then about his further activity:

"Up till the autumn of 1923 I was in France and met periodically various monarchist personalities, for instance, the Czar Kyril, the Grand Duke Andrei Vladimirovitch, etc. This time was occupied with a search for means to continue the struggle."

In this purely monarchist environment Elvengren directed his attention once again to his chief and favorite weapon against the Soviet Union, the weapon of terrorism against the Soviet leaders, but Elvengren himself saw the physical impossibility of organizing a wide-spread conspirative activity inside the Soviet Union.

Together with Andrei Vladimirovitch and Aubert, Elvengren organized an attempt upon Comrade Tchicherin utilizing the circumstance that Tchicherin was in the south of France for purpose of convalescence.

The detailed statement of Elvengren in relation to this attempt may be summed up briefly:

"Under the direction of Andrei Vladimirovitch an active terrorist group was organized to act independently and without entering into any connection with the other emigrant organizations. The financial means were to come through Kyril from Americans, and negotiations for this purpose were going on. Through the White Guardist Ladichenski who was a member of the group, connection was taken up with Aubert and the group expected to receive money through the mediation of Aubert from Ford.

"When we heard that Tchitcherin was in the south of France, our group decided to carry out an attempt upon him. General Vuloshin, Prince Anyenenski, the one-time Chancellor General Kulinev and myself were entrusted with the carrying out of the attempt. However, we were not successful in discovering the exact place where Tchitcherin was staying."

After the failure of this plan Elvengren occupied himself up to the time of his arrest with a plan for a campaign of terror on the territory of the Soviet Union itself.

The statements of Elvengren alone expose sufficiently the work of the White Guardist monarchists and their imperialist masters. The statements of Elvengren are however only a fraction of the whole material in the hand of the Soviet government.

A Lynching Party

By MEYER DWORKIN

(Reminiscence from Russia)

THE orphan Usik was the terror of the village. He was nicknamed "Driftwood" and was given to horse stealing. The village Kulaks—of which he was one himself—put up with it as well as they could because of a natural necessity, as well as their villages of course are to remote, was eagerly awaiting the day when "Driftwood" will be apprehended.

I chanced upon "Driftwood" one July afternoon. It was very quiet, hot, and fragrant with honeyed clover. All men folks were out in the fields busily harvesting their first crops of rye. Only elderly women and very small children could be seen about here and there removing in a shady place on the sand near a hut.

He appeared from his hut nothing met whatever. He was a boy of about twenty, and wore a home-spun white blouse girdled by a bright red hand-made cotton belt. He was stocky and short, and had watery blue eyes and a shiny oily face, unlike a White Russian at all. He was like a drop of mud in the White Russian human stream. He had a carefree attitude and approached me with familiarity. He patted my chestnut-brown horse, and I foolishly inquired whether he was working. He reached down deep in the bulging bosom of his shirt and handed me a large fragrant red apple. It was fragrant with honey and flowers, and "Driftwood's" strong young body.

"Here boy," he said smilingly. "Don't listen to anybody. Work's hell, and a waste of life. When it doesn't start working he stops smiling." He gave my horse a juicy blue plum and pointed to his large black tearful eye.

As the party approached me with familiarity. He patted my chestnut-brown horse, and I foolishly inquired whether he was working. He reached down deep in the bulging bosom of his shirt and handed me a large fragrant red apple. It was fragrant with honey and flowers, and "Driftwood's" strong young body.

"Here boy," he said smilingly. "Don't listen to anybody. Work's hell, and a waste of life. When it doesn't start working he stops smiling." He gave my horse a juicy blue plum and pointed to his large black tearful eye.

"Once a man gets the bad habit of steady hard work he becomes dangerous and is a beast of other men's burdens, and should be put in jail. He is dangerous, I tell you boy."

He bit into a small green very juicy apple and continued:

"I tell you boy, I know. I worked once upon a time myself. . . .

The sizzling juice ran down his mouth and he went on:

"Work makes a man full of sores and anger, like after a beating . . .

He laughed scrubbing his dishevelled hair.

"And besides there's too much food produced around, that a mortal should have to work on those hot days. Supposing I am a rich man's son? Come and, there is the food Deterder waiting."

He hopped into my cart and roared like a boy with laughter.

"You know it is enough that my three grandfathers were fools and worked themselves to death to provide a fat living for the kulak in yonder estate, and the fat pope who is almost bursting around the belt. . . .

As it happened in his case "Driftwood" only worked when he thought that the surrounding fruit orchards were overladen with ripe juicy fruit, or whenever he knew it was about time that the kulak's grazing colts were large enough to sell for big roubles. Work was one thing that life could never convince Usik the necessity of. However, as it happened that "Driftwood" joined a band of roaming gypsies, and not hesitating to practice his art in horse stealing, he was caught. It was winter. At the end of the village, in a tiny hovel-like hut, where the widow Mary lived with her two pale small daughters, Usik was apprehended and dragged out through the window to the snowy street.

A storm was raging furiously, and "Driftwood" was half naked and barefoot. He was dragged about the craggy street and mauled all the while by a wild enraged mob. Usik was soon beyond recognition. He was one bleeding sore. Soon from somewhere appeared a sled and "Driftwood" was thrown into it, followed by a cursing mob it disappeared in the distance beyond the village across the snow wastes.

All the while the half dead Usik lie thinking how to escape his captors, and suddenly his chance came. Once at a sharp curve "Driftwood" rolled off of the sled, and as if suddenly awakening from a terrible dream, he took off across a storm-swept snowy

Rimes of Starvation Al

There, little fur picket, don't you cry,
You'll be a jail-bird by-land by.

Roses are red, violets are blue,
The Forward loves a furrier as Ford does a Jew.

Where the enraged mob reached the scene found the face-faced Usik perched high up on a tree, as if ensnared in a net. His eyes gleamed with sparks of the cornered beast, and he was trembling with furious cold. Mercy he never expected from man. Such was from an enraged peasant who caught a horse thief.

However when the mob saw him painfully trembling it subsided. And kneeling in the snow before their several men and women crossing themselves, extracted that he had better come down before he perished of cold. But "Driftwood" refused. Only on certain terms would he come down. They were, a good warm sheepskin fur coat worn by the leader of the lynching party, several good drinks he knew they brought along, and a good supper on returning to the village. The winter sun was setting frosty-red, illuminating bushes and dazzling the firm snow around the forest. It was glistening fiery as far as the eye could see across the desolate snow wastes, and almost caught fire around the edge of the wood. Everything around was dead still. A blazing winter sky was descending with a more severe frost. Night was approaching, and a howling cold wind began herping and swaying the birch where "Driftwood" as bare-foot and trembling.

The mob, remorse stricken, was now kneeling before Usik as before the crucified christ, and it agreed to his terms. He climbed down ruefully like a squirrel, and was immediately wrapped in a comfortable, soft, sheep-skin coat, held ready for him by two peasants. He smiled. He was given a drink. And everybody followed him closely back to the village that lay in the distance under a starry western horizon.

As the party approached the village, an elderly bearded peasant, who was all the way watching that "Driftwood" was warm, called out loudly to the rear:

"Run ahead, Antip, ring the church bells, tell all the folks that a man was saved!"

Portrait of a Tired Radical

HE used to be a radical too, 10 or 12 years ago a radical who sort of specialized in "Socialism, the Embattled Farmer, Justice for All, and such semi-bourgeois ideology.

But now he is tired.

Now he says the Movement is dead. He says it takes a very long time to make a radical, which is true. But, in his case, it hasn't taken long to make a reactionary.

A few times he went on the soapbox.

He used to spend night after night arguing Marxian theory—dodging Marxian revolutionary tactics. Now, being tired, he says America is too young, too raw, too prosperous for a radical revolution. When you come right down to it, he never was a radical at all, at least in the direct-action, proletarian radical sense, he was never a radical. He always had a comfortable job, and only now is he succeeded in knowing what it means to be class-conscious. He probably doesn't know today that the proletariat is born, not made, and that they have to fight to live and not merely to please the intellectuals and irritate the capitalists.

His radicalism was a pale, bloodless creature, but he liked it then. Trouble is, he never could get out of it himself. He never succeeded in being detached, objective, with a feeling for the powerful class and social demands on proletarian radical revolutionary tactics.

Now, being older and very tired, he gets his pleasure in home-grown and good food. He is able to say too damned decisively even for a tired radical grown bourgeois: "The American working man is the happiest and most favored in the world; it has no kick coming. Capital has made the lot of the American working man better than any other working man knows and that is why he is satisfied . . .

There are no socially oppressed classes in America except the negro. And we have even the 'poor white', is not socially oppressed. He could produce more and more economically if he would buy improved machinery and more land. Great art is fostered and nourished by capital. To have a great art, you must have great wealth" . . . Marx was one of the profoundest of social economists, but the American working man does not need Marxian doctrine" . . . When the majority of American workingclasses want a new deal, then—and only then will there be a social revolution. And not before. . . . There is no serious need for a radical press in America, and I do not believe in supporting and subsidizing publications that have no popular demand."

He confesses that he is making a better job than at any other time in his life. Better pay now. More leisure. A fine wife, and kids. He's satisfied. Smugly content to settle down for his declining years. No kick coming against the fat guys . . .

But as I say he's very tired.

British Imperialism in China

By SCOTT NEARING

—Drawing by Fred Ellis.

British diplomacy, and on numerous occasions has led to the use of British gun-boats, before solutions could be found for all of the knotty problems that arose out of the exploitation of China by British imperialists.

The intimate connection between the investor and the flag showed itself in:

1840-42—The First Opium War. Britain took Hongkong. Opened five Chinese ports to British trade.

1857-60—Second Opium War. Caused by Chinese seizure of an opium smuggler flying the British flag. Coast cities bombarded. Anglo-French troops took and looted Peking. More open ports and unequal treaties.

1862—Britain annexed lower Burma, a former tributary to China.

1886—Britain annexed upper Burma.

1886—Chefoo Convention. Britain secured control of the Yangtse Valley as a sphere of influence.

1899-1901—Boxer Rebellion. British and other troops pillaged Peking and imposed a heavy indemnity on China.

A very good summary of these historic episodes will be found in "An Outline History of China," by H. H. Gharon and Josef Hall, published by Appleton in 1926. In the aggregate they constitute the record of subjugation of China by the imperialistic powers. Britain well in the lead until 1911.

3.—Japanese and American Rivalry.

Previous to the War of 1914, Britain found her economic position in China sharply challenged by the rival empires: Germany, Japan, United States. German hopes were blasted by the outcome of the war, but Japan and the United States remained. In 1913 16.5 per cent of the imports into China came from Britain, 20.3 per cent from Japan, and 6 per cent from the United States. When the war was over, and the world calmed, Britain had 30 per cent of the imports (1925); Japan 31 per cent and the United States 11.7 per cent. Meanwhile the Shanghai massacre, the killings by the British at Chamien and the bombardment of Wahsien had created a storm of anti-British sentiment in China that was expressing itself in the Boycott of 1925.

Thus the British imperialists in China found themselves face to face with a Japanese rival that must have the raw materials and markets of China in order to survive economically, and an American rival, with swollen coffers and immense surpluses that were seeking an outlet in China, as in every other available nook and cranny of the world.

British subjects had made extensive investments in China, and the British government had spent blood and treasure to safeguard and further these investments, only to find themselves face to face with the menace of imperial rivals who were just as ready to steal British ships and colonies in 1927 as British interests had been to steal German property in the preceding decade.

This was not the only menace to British imperial interests in China. British imperialism found itself face to face with the Chinese themselves: first, with the Chinese business men and later with the Chinese workers and farmers.

4.—The Chinese Bourgeois Revolution.

Trade monopolies are very old in China. When the British first tries to sell goods in China they found that they must operate through Chinese merchant guilds which held a monopoly of trading. Before this could not last. Beginning with the Treaty of Tientsin (1842) the British opened up one centre after another, set up their own shops and did their own trading in defiance of the Chinese merchants and their traditional monopoly.

The British went farther. They not only took control of the Chinese customs, in conjunction with the other "Powers," but they limited the amount of customs duties that the Chinese could charge to 5 per cent. Under these circumstances, the British manufacturer could make and dump goods on the Chinese market below the cost of hand-made native Chinese goods.

This line of action, on the part of British imperialists, placed the Chinese merchants and manufacturers in direct economic competition with the British interests. Add the fact that the British business men refused to pay taxes to the Chinese government, and that the British bankers dominated the world of credit, and a picture is painted of a Chinese business class [illegible] at the mercy of the imperialists.

"But," urges some objector, "did not the other imperialists do the same thing?"

Of course. The British were no more inherently imperialistic than the others. They merely got to the scene earlier and had more at stake. The principles were those of imperialism the world over. The leaders, in this instance, happened to be British.

For years Chinese business men were forced to put up with this position of inferiority. In the meantime, they were adapting themselves to the new business set up. Many went to foreign countries, such as Britain and the United States, and established prosperous businesses. The Chinese business men continued to exercise great influence in centres like Singapore, Manila and other Asiatic points. And in China itself they were no-getting the most profitable forms of trade and industry, investing their capital and competing actively with the new interests.

The textile industry had been put on a factory basis faster than any other in China. The China [illegible] cotton mills, with 2,112,134 spindles, as against 5 British mills with 270,346 spindles, and 14 Japanese mills with 1,415,341 spindles. In other industrial lines, the Chinese did not occupy so strong a position, but it is evident, though that the Chinese business class, like those of Japan, can operate under the western methods.

Here is a new rivalry for British imperialism in China. Chinese business men desire to exploit the Chinese workers and the Chinese markets and resources. On every hand, however, they find themselves surrounded by the special privileges and monopolies of the foreign imperialists. It was this group in China that financed and in the main pushed through the Chinese Revolution of 1911.

To be sure, there were other elements in the situation than the opposition to the foreign economic interests. The new Chinese business classes wanted to free themselves from the semi-feudalism of the Manchu dynasty. But the slogan around which they most easily united was a common opposition to foreign domination of economic opportunities in China.

5.—Facing the Chinese Workers.

British imperialism in China had another bill to meet—a bill presented by the workers of China. Chinese coolies had sweated on the docks while Chinese women and children had toiled in the mills, working for less than a bare living, and helping to swell the dividend roll of British investors. The conditions

There are a number of reasons for this:

1. The Soviet system presents a view of social life that is very close to the experiences of the Chinese citizenry. They understand the meaning of "committee government" because they have practiced something very like it.

2. Socialism offers the Chinese masses a possible means of escape from the worst phases of private capitalist exploitation. What they have known of this system has convinced them of its practicability.

3. Socialism is an ideal for a system of society that rewards production, in a system that emphasizes the desirability of productive and useful effort. The great mass of the Chinese are workers and again the idea [illegible] very close to their experience.

Demand for Sacco-Vanzetti Strike Tuesday Growing

COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL IN PLEA TO WORLD'S WORKERS TO HELP SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI FROM CHAIR

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 7.—The Executive Committee of the Communist International issued the following appeal today headed. "Save Sacco and Vanzetti."

It read as follows: "Communists in all countries! Toilers of the whole world! Once more in a last hour effort the Communist International appeals to the toilers of the world. Once more it raises its voice appealing to the workers of the world to stop the hand of the executioners who are ready to carry out the sentence of American class justice against Sacco and Vanzetti.

"The workers of all countries have been moved by great indignation, they have protested in powerful manifestations against the mockery of a trial afforded the two revolutionaries—Sacco and Vanzetti, who for seven years have been pining in an American prison under the threat of death.

"The sentence of death against Sacco and Vanzetti is an unheard of provocation against the world proletariat. It heralds a new, cruel oppression not only towards the American working class but also towards the whole world proletariat. It testifies that 'civilized America' of all its technical achievements reserves for proletarian revolutionaries only one; the electric chair. We appeal to all workers and to all revolutionary organizations.

"Protest with all your passion and power against the execution sentence. Organize mass demonstrations!

"Only the united efforts of the international proletariat may save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair.

"Workers, come out into the streets! Everything to save Sacco and Vanzetti! Do everything to aid the struggle against the bloodthirsty American bourgeoisie."

The appeal is signed by the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

JUDGE BROADHURST REFUSES STAY OF EXECUTION TO SACCO-VANZETTI

BOSTON Aug. 7 (FP).—Superior Court Judge Broadhurst, a reactionary but the only justice available at the time, denied the plea of Sacco-Vanzetti defense counsel for a stay of execution after the filing of another new trial motion. Attorney Arthur D. Hill filed the motion for new trial at Dedham with eight supporting affidavits, new evidence since the sentence of death was pronounced on the two workers.

Hill immediately took the plea for a stay to Chief Justice W. P. Hall of the superior court, at Fitchburg.

The new trial motion is based on the affidavits of Frank Sibley, John Beffel, Elizabeth Bernkopf, Lois Rantoul, Robert Benchley and Proctor relating the prejudice of Judge Thayer at the time of the trial.

PROVOCATEUR'S BOMBS PROVOKE POLICE GESTURE

Guard Everything to Get Sympathy for Hangman

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press)

Although New York police have been unable to connect the bombing of the two subways with Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, elaborate patrol duty has been started to continue until after the expected execution in Boston. Not since war days have police had their vacations revoked and been assigned to guard the city's transportation systems, banks, public buildings and power plants.

"Suspend judgment," cautions the N. Y. Telegram of the comparatively liberal Scripps-Howard group. The editorial warns against accusing Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers with the bombings as acts of reprisal.

STRIKE!

To Save Sacco and Vanzetti

With workers thruout the country realizing that their strength alone can save Sacco and Vanzetti, preparations for a huge nation-wide strike tomorrow are moving rapidly ahead.

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY CALL.

In its call for a nation-wide strike the Workers (Communist) Party statement says:

"We call upon the labor organizations of America to set aside Tuesday, August 9, for strikes and for demonstrations in front of all government buildings and in central places.

Only the united might of the labor movement can save its two valiant champions.

"The demand for the blood of these two innocent workers is an unprecedented challenge to an attack upon the American labor movement."

EMERGENCY COMMITTEE CALL.

In its strike call, the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee declares:

"The freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti now rests in the hands of labor. Only overwhelming mass demonstrations throughout the country can save these victims of capitalist justice."

PUSH PLANS TO "DOWN TOOLS!" TUESDAY IN SPITE OF BOMB SCARES, POLICE ATTACKS, OFFICIAL INACTION

Workers Rush Demands Upon the Heads of the American Federation of Labor

THE FIGHT FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI.

1.—Sentiment for national strike on Tuesday to save Sacco and Vanzetti growing; Workers (Communist) Party, Socialist Party, Industrial Workers of the World, International Labor Defense and numerous other organizations urge strike.

2.—Strike voted by representatives of 186 organizations at Philadelphia meeting.

3.—Police in numerous cities attack demonstrations in effort to smash strike; break up monster meeting on Boston Commons, in Binghampton; raid Workers (Communist) Party headquarters in Los Angeles.

4.—Judge Thayer, agent of Massachusetts industrial autocracy, who sentenced the two workers to the chair will hear appeal for new trial today.

5.—International protest spreads; Paris police bar parade; declare Anti-American boycott in Mexico.

6.—Conference of various Sweden's organizations Saturday evening votes 24-hour strike beginning Monday night.

Telegrams were last night pouring into the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor at Washington, D. C., demanding that it take a leading part in the strike action, Tuesday, August 9 (tomorrow), to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

At the same time an increasing pressure was being brought to bear upon local and state officials of the A. F. of L. in all sections of the country demanding similar action.

THE DEMAND OF THE WORKERS.

This demand was being made by an increasing number of mass meetings and demonstrations over the land, as well as by resolutions adopted by local unions.

Thus 186 organizations of workers, including many trade unions, represented by nearly 500 delegates meeting in Philadelphia, unanimously ordered telegrams sent to President William Green, of the A. F. of L., and to James Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor. It also provided that a delegation take up with local labor officials the development of the strike movement.

A. F. OF L. OFFICIALDOM SILENT.

Up to a late hour last night no announcement had come from the A. F. of L. officialdom as to what action would be taken. Local officials, in different sections of the country, continued to use the capitalist press to declare they would oppose the strike. This, however, did not seem to discourage the rank and file of labor.

Instead of intimidating the workers, and holding back the strike movement, the efforts of the police to break up the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations, especially the one held Sunday, on Boston Commons, only strengthens it and gives it greater impetus. The workers also have refused to give one inch as a result of the numerous bomb scares and outrages in New York City and elsewhere.

Raid Boston Meeting

POLICE BREAK UP DEMONSTRATION ON THE COMMONS

Arrest James' Nephew, Pleading for Sacco

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—Twenty-five thousand persons were thrown into confusion this afternoon when the police broke up two protest meetings of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers. The crowd was charged by mounted police after an ultimatum to stop the meeting had been given to the speakers by the authorities.

"We have just been notified by the police to stop this meeting," cried Harry Cantor, chairman of the meeting held under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party, "but fellow workers I think we will continue."

No sooner had he spoken than he was jerked from his platform by the officers and hauled to a nearby station. Then the police charged the meetings, swinging their clubs.

The smash-up of the Workers Party meeting followed a police attack on a meeting held under the auspices of the socialist party. Permits had been obtained for both meetings.

Mounted police drove their horses thru the crowd and dispersed the second meeting as Harry Cantor, after denouncing the death sentences on Sacco and Vanzetti as a piece of class injustice, introduced Arturo Giovannitti, general secretary of the Italian Chamber of Labor.

Arrest Chairman

Police under Superintendent Crowley, armed with machine guns, deraged Harry Cantor. As John Ballam began to speak, the police finished their job and dispersed the meeting. Edwin H. James, a nephew of Henry and Wm. James, and Alfred Friedman who attended the meeting and who protested against the action of the police was severely beaten.

Scores of police, some of them mounted, surged thru the crowd. Many persons were brutally kicked down. Others were clubbed by the officers.

Then came the clanging patrol wagons and herded several members of the crowd out of the Commons.

Lenox Meeting.

The socialist party meeting was broken up when Alfred Fisher Lewis, chairman, announced that a number

Los Angeles Police Raid Workers Party to Hinder Sacco-Vanzetti Protest

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Police and the "red squad" raided the Workers (Communists) Party headquarters and smashed the office apparatus yesterday. They also arrested Douglas, Globerman and Smirnoff, who were in a committee meeting at the time. This raid and arrests took place in the evening. In the afternoon the "red squad" confiscated five thousand leaflets demanding justice for Sacco and Vanzetti. All the most active comrades are being shadowed by detectives because of the general strike call and mass demonstration arranged for Tuesday by the labor movement of Los Angeles, the Sacco-Vanzetti conference, and the Workers Party.

Strikebreaker Wood Dies of Operation for Brain-Tumor in Boston

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—Major Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines, died this morning from the effects of an operation to remove a tumor of the brain.

Wood is best remembered as the chief of the strike-breaking forces of the United States army that were used to help the United States Steel Corporation break the steel strike of 1919-20. He was stationed at Gary, Indiana, and established martial law and terrorized the strikers in the most brutal manner.

Ran for President.

In 1920 Wood was a candidate for the republican nomination for president of the United States, but was defeated in a number of republican primaries in states where such farces were held. He earned only the state of South Dakota in the pre-nomination campaign. So thoroly hated was he by the forces of labor that the manipulators of the republican convention, holding forth in Elbert H. Gary's suite of rooms in the Black stone Hotel in Chicago, refused to nominate him, for fear of defeat at the presidential election in November of that year.

ANGELES LABOR COUNCIL CALLS SACCO MEETING

Arranges Huge Protest Gathering for Plaza

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—By a two to one vote last night the Los Angeles Central Labor Council called for a mass demonstration of all workers in Los Angeles Tuesday, at 5 p. m. at the Plaza Square to protest Sacco-Vanzetti sentence.

The council also sent a wire of protest to Governor Fuller.

The Los Angeles Central Labor Council has elected Candidate Wright of the carpenters' union as delegate to the state federation of labor convention on September 19. Wright was opposed by two reactionary candidates. Cigar-makers' Local 225 has also elected two progressive delegates to the same.

American Legion Votes to Panhandle Public

Sacco's and Vanzetti's Bravest Champion

WITHOUT The DAILY WORKER, Sacco and Vanzetti are left practically helpless to the mercies of the capitalist press, to the mercies of those who have the highest praise for Governor Fuller's brutal decision to send these two innocent workingmen to the electric chair. While the capitalist press is seeking to poison the minds of the people with stories of bomb explosions, specially concocted for the occasion, The DAILY WORKER is carrying on a vigorous fight to free these men.

Should the attempt of the reactionaries to crush The DAILY WORKER succeed, because of the fact that not enough money was raised for the defense of the paper, it would be a stunning blow to the campaign for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. Therefore we must renew our efforts to build the GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND, and protect the paper from the enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti, the enemies of labor, who seek to destroy it.

Philadelphia Prepares for Strike Action on Tuesday

186 LABOR GROUPS UNITE FOR DRIVE IN QUAKER CITY

Call on A. F. of L. Heads to Join in Struggle

workout in protest against the capitalist demand for the lives of our two comrades in Massachusetts.

The strike drive gained great impetus at the enthusiastic gathering of 500 delegates from 186 workers' organizations, many of them trade unions, at Machinists' Temple, addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, and Albert Weisbord, leader of the recent Passaic textile strike.

Demand A. F. of L. Take Action.

Resolutions were unanimously adopted demanding that the local, state and national organizations of the American Federation of Labor take immediate action in aid of the strike movement.

These demands were addressed to the heads of the Philadelphia Central Labor Union, to James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, and to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The resolutions also asked for a complete United Front between all forces working for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. This was a plea directed especially to the Sacco-Vanzetti Committee organized by the local socialists.

Many Decide on Strike Action.

There was no discordant voice in the gathering. Even delegates from trade unions, usually classed as conservative, argued energetically for the city-wide strike on Tuesday and urged that every effort be made to draw in the unorganized workers as well. It was declared that special committees should be appointed to give special attention to the unorganized.

The delegate of Local No. 194, Barbers' Union stated that the 2,000 members of his organization were ready to strike. He told of the organization drive for his union, that had been carried on for the last three months, that had brought 1,000 new members into the union.

The Carpenters Will Strike.

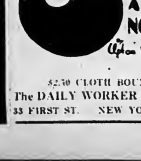
Delegates from two locals of the Carpenters' Union stated that their members were ready to strike. Similar reports were made by the delegates of the furriers, the upholsterers and other organizations.

This is the Sacco-Vanzetti Committee that held a demonstration and parade for Sacco and Vanzetti on July 3, that called out at least 20,000 workers. They were addressed at that time by James H. Maurer, president of the State Federation of Labor, and others speakers.

The Offensive Against Labor.

Engdahl pointed out that the capitalist-planned murder of Sacco and Vanzetti was but a part of the whole employing class offensive against the working class in this country.

"If Sacco and Vanzetti are burned to death in the electric chair in Massachusetts, then the lives of other working class leaders are also endangered," said Engdahl. "If the employers are able to perpetrate this murder against the working class, then the ruthless attacks of capitalists against labor will grow."



Great enthusiasm greeted Engdahl's declaration that the workers must use their strike weapon in this crisis.

Weisbord pointed out that the interests of the workers in Philadelphia were directly involved in the struggle. He showed that if Sacco and Vanzetti can be murdered with impunity, then the open shop war of the employers will go everywhere, and even more drastic attacks will be launched.

Library Workers to Get Increase In Pay Soon

Library workers in the service of the three great library systems of Greater New York have been successful in forcing Joseph V. McKee, of the Board of Estimate, to recommend that the librarian's pay be increased. The recommendations include a uniform plan of service for the three library systems and increase in salary rates commensurate with the duties of the library workers.

It is expected that the Board of Estimate will act upon the recommendation at one of its next sittings.

CONCERNING THE "BOMB OUTRAGES"

If the subway blasts and other reported "bomb outrages" in various cities of the country had any connection with the Fuller decision in the Sacco and Vanzetti case, they were planted by friends of Fuller and enemies of the two Italian workers now in the shadow of the electric chair in Charlestown penitentiary. At such times as these, when the intelligent section of the working class and the overwhelming majority of the public is audible in denunciation of the murderous decision of Fuller, it is to the interest of the hangmen, of the culprits who engineered the frame-up, and their supporters to try to alienate support from the victims.

In the first place the radicals do not need to throw bombs in order to arouse the fury of the masses—the task is to give intelligent leadership to that mass indignation so that the executioner will not dare throw the switch that will hurl a bolt of concentrated fire—chained lightning—into the tortured bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti.

All radicals connected with the defense, without exception, have publicly repudiated such tactics as sporadic bomb throwing. But one man endeavored publicly to connect the Communists with such measures. That person was Joseph P. Ryan, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York City. This lackey of the capitalist class and enemy of labor who obtains at least part of his livelihood from the workers whom he betrays, does not dare to directly charge the Communists with such idiotic acts. He says:

> "I think the Communists are responsible for the subway blasts. I don't know whether a Communist planted the bomb, of course, but I do know that they have incited such crimes in the mind of some poor ignorant foreigner by their wild statements and their calls to action and their soapbox meetings.
> I think the federal government is too lenient with those fellows."

To be sure Ryan has mighty good reason to hate and fear our calls to action because the burden of our agitation as it affects Mr. Ryan and his associates has been to arouse the membership of the trade unions to their real interests and force him and his kind to get out of the movement and draw all their pay from the enemies of labor whom they serve.

If Ryan knows anything at all about Communists, he knows that we not only do not approve individual terror, but we combat it as detrimental to the working class or any cause for which we struggle. Individual terror is the weapon of agents provocateur who in times of stress commit some act or a series of acts that gives the enemies of labor an excuse to start an organized reign of terror against the labor movement. For almost eighty years—since the very inception of the Communist movement—we have steadfastly fought against the use of the "propaganda of the deed," and we will always be found fighting against it. Our position is that he who resorts to such methods is either consciously or unconsciously an enemy of the working class.

By attacking the Communists the labor fakers are objectively shielding the real enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti, just as their refusal to endorse a general strike for the liberation of these two victims of capitalism places them in the same pillory with Governor Fuller and his advisory committee of intellectual hangmen.

Not individual terror, not a spectacular deed of violence, but the mass power of the workers of the United States and the world, will achieve freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. To that task the Communists of America and of the world have dedicated themselves and by that method and that method alone will we continue the struggle.

Provocateur's Bombs Start Police Action

cators" is how the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee characterizes the subway bombings. Rose Baron, secretary of the committee, says: "Bombs" are usually found to explode when there is a popular wave of protest against some particularly brutal act on the part of capitalism. Despite Police Commissioner Warren's fear on parades and meetings for the next week, various labor groups are going ahead with plans for a part time strike for Sacco and Vanzetti and for mass demonstrations.

Ryan Asks New Trial.

Joseph Ryan, president of New York Central Trades and labor Council, has declared that he believes the two Italian workers should have a new trial. The central body has not announced participation in the city-wide strikes, which will bring out hundred of thousands of clothing workers, dock workers, barbers and other labor groups.

N. Y. World Appeals to Fuller.

"The World respectfully petitions the Governor of Massachusetts to commute the the sentences of Sacco and Vanzetti to life imprisonment. An act on the grounds of mercy."

So begins the lead editorial of the New York World, democratic and "liberal." The World states that there is "a very weighty body of instructed opinion which is not altogether convinced that the whole truth about the Braintree crime is set forth." If the sentences were commuted, the World points out, "there would still be a chance to undo the mistake," should Sacco and Vanzetti be found innocent.

Is Harvard Hangman's House?

From now on, I want to know," says Heywood Broun at the end of a column in the New York World protesting Judge Fuller's decision against Sacco and Vanzetti, "will the institution of learning in Cambridge which once we called Harvard be known as Hangman's House?"

Broun says it shall take much courage for Fuller to make his decision, judging by the messages of approval coming from business men. Broun takes up specific weaknesses of the governor's decision and shows the holes in it.

Reporter at Vanzetti-Sacco Trials Describes Events Refuting Fuller

The DAILY WORKER has received too late for presentation today a long interview with John Nicholas Beffel, now a member of the New York World editorial staff, but in 1920-21 a Federated Press reporter at the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, and a close student of the case then and since. He states now in detail how the actual facts contravert many parts of Fuller's statement. This interview will be published tomorrow.

Police Smash Crowd On Boston Commons

of alibi witnesses for Sacco and Vanzetti, whom Governor Fuller had refused to hear, were at the meeting. If Sacco and Vanzetti were guilty, Lewis declared, the alibi witnesses were perjurers.

Deputy Inspector Crowley pushed his way to the platform and announced that the was to be no discussion of "perjury or perjurers." As Arturo Giovannitti arose to address the meeting, the police dispersed it. Just before the meeting, Captain Herbert Reddish of the police summoned Alfred R. Lewis, chairman of the socialist meeting, and suggested that it would be well for the speakers not to refer to Judge Thayer as a "murderer."

It is the first time in the history of the Boston police department that the "red squad" has been mobilized. The unit have 1,000 rounds of ammunition, fifty-six shot guns, twelve machine guns and several eighteen inch bayonets.

Back of the mobilized strong the entire police department ready for an emergency and the National Guard awaiting call. Behind these forces are the United States marines expecting to be ordered out.

Boston is an armed camp tonight although all appears peaceful on the surface. Two thousand policemen have been cut off from their families as they await instant duty.

Although all these precautions have been taken, for any kind of terrorism tomorrow, for tomorrow the courts will hear motions on the famous case that has been in progress for seven years. Judge Webster Thayer, who recently sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric enar, will hear this summer home in Marinand go to the court house in Dedham tomorrow afternoon to pass upon the eighth motion for a new trial. It is certain that he will repeat his decision to railroad the workers to the electric chair.

New Court Moves.

Tomorrow morning the warden of the state prison, who has the prisoners in custody will be in the Supreme Court on a motion for a writ of habeas corpus brought in an effort to get the men out of the death house. The defense holds that they should be returned to their regular prison cells pending the decision for a new trial. The prisoners will not be in court.

It is the general impression here tonight that both court hearings are preliminaries to getting the case into the federal courts. It would be impossible under the law for them to appeal to the federal courts without such a move because the law provides that a case cannot be taken to the United States courts until it has been thru the state court three months. It has been four months since the men were sentenced, hence it was necessary to go back to the state courts tomorrow with some kind of motion in order to go to the federal court the next day.

If the defense fails to get the district federal court to intervene, the case will be carried to Justice Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, the plea being that the state courts have violated the Constitution of the United States which provides that every person shall have a fair trial.

The contention for seven years has been that Sacco and Vanzetti did not have a fair trial.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

SACCO-VANZETTI STRIKE DECIDED ON AT WATERBURY

Workers Plan to Quit Work on Tuesday

cided in a great mass meeting here.

"What are the workers of Waterbury going to do to stop this outrage against the working class?" demanded George Siskind, the principal speaker. And 500 workers thundered: "Strike!"

Workers Will Give Their Verdict.

"The last verdict has not yet been spoken," the speaker declared. "That will be the verdict of the American workingmen." And he added, "The workers of America will tear Sacco and Vanzetti out of the hands of their executioners, for the issue is not whether these men committed murder but that they were radicals, draft evaders, slackers, Italians and foreigners."

Siskind told the eager audience how the frame-up had been effected during a period of "red" hysteria when the American people were being fed on lurid stories of the terrible fate of this country if the reds ever got control of the government.

Plot to Frame Sacco Was Told.

He told the story of Salsedo, Sacco's friend, who was either thrown out of the top floor of a 14-story building in New York, where he was being held incommunicado by Mitchell Palmer's red raiders, or jumped out crazed by the third degree they had given him.

The speaker went on to tell how Sacco came to New York to investigate that case and how he was seized by the red hunters and held on no other charge than that of being a radical. It was then that it was decided to frame him.

Branding the government's refusal to produce records now in the department of justice files which substantiate the case as proof of the frame-up plot, Siskind proceeded to quote Judge Thayer's statements that he was going to get the two radicals.

Labor Will Tie Up the Country.

"Sacco says that unless labor acts he is lost," Siskind declared. "We have the power. We can tie every wheel in this country," he said. "Why even Governor Fuller's chauffeur won't be able to run his car if we call a general strike. What are you workers going to do?"

"Strike!" roared the hall.

A resolution was then adopted calling all workers to lay down their tools on Tuesday, August 9, at 4 p. m. to protest against the legal murder of the two convicted men. A telegram declaring Fuller's decision and the methods of the prosecution and the investigating committee was sent to Governor Fuller. "Your investigation was nothing but a murder plot against the life of our two brothers," the telegram declares. And we demand their immediate liberty."

The meeting, which was held under the auspices of the Workers Party, was addressed in Italian by N. Napoli, New York editor, and Angelo Distefano of the New Haven Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee.

Police Break Up Sacco Vanzetti Meeting Held In Binghampton; Arrest

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 7 City police broke up the Sacco and Vanzetti meeting here yesterday afternoon, and arrested Herbert Benjamin, the speaker, who was afterward released on $100 bail after being held on a technical charge. Benjamin will speak at an indoor demonstration Monday.

The night before Benjamin had addressed over 500 show workers in the neighboring city of Endicott. These workers voted unanimously to participate in the half day protest strike Tuesday forenoon.

Coolidge Political Fortunes End; Who Have Banks Picked?

WASHINGTON, Aug. The practical politicians of the capital trying to peer through the haze of the next ten months, are already beginning to reckon the Republican convention of 1928 as generally similar to the historic 1920 convention.

Whether history will repeat itself in details and see the favorite son distanced and a dark horse nominated, as was the case in 1920, can only be conjectured, but they point out that the pre-convention situation is much the same.

The three strong men of 1920 were Lowden, Wood and Johnson. Ultimately they killed each other off and Warren G. Harding was nominated. The three strong men of 1928 now appear to be Lowden, Hoover and Dawes, with Charles Evans Hughes constituting a possible fourth with big business finally selecting some less smirched candidate.

Meanwhile gentle guffaws pervade the smoking rooms and lounging parlors of this capital, where political leaders foregather. The cause of mirth is the final belated explanation of close friends of Cal. Coolidge that the word "choose," as supposedly used in the famous announcement, was an obvious plain and simple abbreviation, was selected thru no sense of New England humor, but was a gently nod disinclined but to the world at large that "Our" president could have won again if he had wanted to, but didn't want to.

SACCO-VANZETTI STRIKE TIES UP ALL PARIS

BISHOP BROWN HAILS DAILY WORKER AS FIGHTER FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

Galion, Ohio, August 1th, 1927.

Bert Miller, The DAILY WORKER, New York, N. Y.

MY Dear Comrade: By this mail we are paying John Day Company's bill and enclosing herewith a check of $320.00, the balance of the $1,000.00 pledged to the sustaining fund of The DAILY WORKER.

This pledge was to be paid at the rate of $50.00 per month, but as the John Day Company had waited so long for their money and as The DAILY WORKER is in such pressing need of funds, we felt that we must make a special effort to pay the whole amount to both at once and fortunately we have succeeded.

One reason why we are particularly glad of our success is the hope that the money coming to you at this time may enable you to do a little something on behalf of dear Sacco and Vanzetti which otherwise might be impossible. We are mourning the action of the governor; but see nothing that we can do about it.

Perhaps the money will also be of some little assistance to the manager and editors of THE DAILY WORKER in this time of their trouble with the powers that be in the state.

With every good wish from both for all, I am,

Very cordially yours,

WM. M. BROWN.

CLASS FOES UPON JURY CONDEMNING SACCO, VANZETTI

Sacco Knew Fuller Was His Murderer

By ART SHIELDS

BOSTON, Aug. 7 (FP).—Nicola Sacco, the class conscious shoe worker, had no illusions about Alvan T. Fuller, the $10,000,000 employer, who was deciding his fate. Nor did he fear him.

When the big, healthy, well-dressed man with a magnetic smile visited him in the death house, Sacco saw through him. The conversation is here repeated for the first time, through the labor press:

Sacco: I did not send for you. I did not sign any paper. You will give me nothing.

Fuller: I understand you. I was a worker in a factory like you.

Sacco: Yes, maybe. But you made $10,000,000 and your mind changed. Now you are a capitalist and I am an anarchist. You are bourgeois. I am a proletarian. You do not live in my world, so I expect nothing from you. Goodbye.

And the workingman, cutting the audience short, walked to his cell and shut the door to continue his hunger strike.

Anti-Labor Jury.

Vanzetti, the fisherman; Sacco, the shoe worker, never had a trial or hearing by a jury of their peers. Their final doom by a wealthy open-shop employer was a logical and tragic climax.

Workers' juries, their fate was always [illegible] their enemies. The story [illegible] to Vanzetti's 1920 Plymouth trial, when he was betrayed by an attorney who was a stockholder in the Cordage Co. against which Vanzetti had led a strike. Foreman Nickerson of the cordage plant was on the jury.

The story continues through the 1921 Dedham murder trial when the jury panel being exhausted, Judge Thayer told the sheriff to get more men. The sheriff, visiting a Masonic lodge, got a jury of his peers, but not of the prisoners.

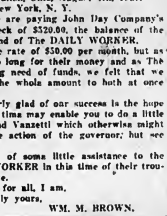
Class Foes

Judge Thayer, who ruled against Sacco and Vanzetti in the several trial motions of the next years, is a rich man, who considers Sacco and Vanzetti "anarchist bastards." The day of Fuller's decision Thayer was playing 18 holes of golf at the Ogunquit Club in Maine.

Then came the advisory commission, drawn from their class foes. Consider Abbot Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard. How Lowell, collector of a $3,000,000 business college endowment, must have looked at Sacco, the workingman, who has broken English told the Bedford court that a poor man had no chance to go to Harvard.

Stratton Biased.

Stratton, president of Mass Institute of Technology, supported by the wealthy industrialists, had exercised himself against the anarchists before his appointment.



Ex-judge Robert Grant, a favorite dinner guest at Boston society outings, had frequently expressed his admonence of those who needs to admiring Back Bay audiences.

A army of their sword Bunk! Thumbs down judges, determined to "get those bolshevik good and proper," as Judge Thayer said to the Worcester golf course at the time of trial.

Fall Demand for Coal May Shatter Lockout

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—The Illinois Mine Workers' Union announces the opening of a mine at Belleville under temporary extension of the Jackson-ville agreement. It is owned by the Fullerton Coal Co. Repairs costing $46,000 are being made on the Nasen mine near Mt. Vernon. This mine has been idle since January, 1926. It employs 200 men.

Vanzetti's Prison Boss

FOR FOUR YEARS Bartolomeo Vanzetti has been working under Michael Ahearn (above), superintendent of the Charlestown prison tailor shop. Vanzetti does no work now, having been transferred to the death house.

Big Business Glad It Can Destroy Two Of Its Labor Foes

BOSTON, (FP).—While workers around the world are protesting the decision of Gov. Fuller to kill Sacco and Vanzetti, leading bankers and manufacturers of New England are rejoicing in the death doom of the two Italian workingmen. Gov. Fuller's desk is stacked with letters from millionaire employers and financiers or their underlings, betraying their class hate in their congratulations on his decision.

Former U. S. Senator William M. Butler—Coolidge's leading Yankee patron—steps into the picture with a letter from William P. Kelly, a lawyer in his office, and at the same time an assistant district attorney in Norfolk county where the two radicals were convicted.

"It is gratifying to know," says Kelly, "that public officials in this commonwealth cannot be stampeded by those who desire to cast them aside by vicious propaganda to the end of establishing a government in accordance with their own false doctrines."

Big Mill Owner.

Kelly's employer is the chief cotton mill operator in New Bedford, where he put through four wage cuts in a two and a half years period after the war with the aid of the Sherman Defense Agency. Butler, as U. S. senator, did not move when appealed to by the Sacco-Vanzetti defence to open department of justice files showing the innocence of the two workers.

Franklin W. Hobbs, ex-president of the New England Associated Industries, an open-shop textile manufacturer himself, a leader in the great 1921 open-shop drive and an ardent worker for the repeal of the Massachusetts 48-hour law, says: "I have read your decision with great satisfaction."

Phone Boss Glad.

Stuart Gerry, secretary of the New England Telephone Co., which [illegible] telephone strikers, who [illegible] the return of [illegible] your decision has [illegible] added [illegible]

Among the scores of other letters written [illegible] decision are the following:

Several members of the big banking house of Harris, Forbes & Co., whose name is a magic word in [illegible]

John F. Reed of the Boston Exchange.

Andrew J. Peabody, an attorney for the Boston Elevated Railway.

Benjamin P. Moseley of F. S. Moseley & Co., bankers.

J. L. R. Brown, Sheldon Fall Nott, Bank treasurer.

From Gloucester, Mass., comes a letter of John Hays Hammond, ardent foe of the United Mine Workers, and chairman of Harding's coal commission, applauding the death verdict.

WUHAN REACTION IN SAVAGE DRIVE ON LABOR UNIONS

Feng and Chiang Unite Two Governments

HANKOW, August 7.—The rickshaw strike has ended, the labor union backing exhausted all its means of material support for the strikers. The Wuhan government is still taking drastic action against labor and as a means of crippling the unions has proceeded to the reorganization of the All-Chinese Federation of Labor and the Hupeh Provincial Labor Union Council.

Occupy Labor Headquarters.

As measures toward crushing all vestiges of labor organization except those spurious forms subservient to the counter-revolutionists the Wuhan government troops have occupied the premises of the General Council of Labor Unions and has arrested thousands of active unionists. It has also caused to be distributed proclamations against the council. During the past few days the Wuhan government has made new arrests among the Communists, accusing them of an attempt to launch a general strike as a protest against the shooting of striking rickshaw during a demonstration.

Martial Law Declared.

The strike has not yet taken place because the government, fearing from one excess to another against the workers' movement, has proclaimed martial law and has inaugurated drastic measures to keep people from gathering even a few and threw in the streets.

Protect Foreign Property.

That the Wuhan government is playing the game of the imperialists is indicated by its instructions sent from the government to the commanders of the armies stating that "the wounds with foreigners to antagonize imperialist governments should be carefully [illegible] properly duplicate protocol and it is the duty of the armies to protect all foreigners [illegible] Under the [illegible] foreign property [illegible] description is inaugurated.

Denver Workers Protest.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 7.—On Sunday evening, July 31st, hundreds of men, women and children paraded the streets carrying banners, acquainting the people with the case of Sacco-Vanzetti and advertising the outdoor meeting held

At the conclusion of the parade a great crowd assembled to listen to speakers representing all kinds of organizations.

Carl Whitehead, a prominent lawyer; C. V. Howell, Workers' Educational Direct or for Colorado and Wyoming; a Negro preacher, a representative of the A. F. of L.; labor organizations; W. Penn Collins, a lawyer and secretary of the Humanitarian Heart Mission; and Hugo Oehler, a Kansas City, representing the Workers' Party, all spoke on the Sacco-Vanzetti case and explained all the details. They urged the crowd to protest with all their might against the execution of the two labor organizers.

Geo Saul, secretary of the I. L. D. in Denver, was the chairman of the meeting and at the conclusion made an appeal to all present to join the I. L. D. and help defend all class war prisoners. The meeting and parade was held under the auspices of the I. L. D.

"Justice Miscarried": Galsworthy.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—"I have been reading very critically and dispassionately Professor Frankfurter's summary of the evidence and procedure in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti. From the facts therein stated I see no argument I cannot follow, but one of the conviction that justice has miscarried.

"A miscarriage of justice wherever it takes place is repugnant to the mind, but a miscarriage of justice which involves death—the irrevocable—is abhorrent. And, sincere friend to American that I am, I hope with all my heart that the ancient and honorable State of Massachusetts will yet avoid the commission of what might go down to history as an abhorrent deed.

Wells and Bennett Protest.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—We, the undersigned, firm friends and admirers of American and American institutions, are deeply impressed by the weight of evidence against the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti. London Workers to Protest.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—As if in anticipation of the decision of Governor Fuller on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, workers throughout Great Britain have made plans for huge protest meetings, parades and demonstrations, according to advice received by the national office of International Labor Defense. Preceded by a city-wide parade in London, under the auspices of the International Class War Prisoners Aid, a monster meeting will be held in Trafalgar Square on August 9th. George Lansbury, M. P., has consented to arrange for a meeting between a group of Labor members of Parliament and the American Ambassador in London on the question of justice for Sacco and Vanzetti. In addition, the executive council of the Trade Union Congress, through George Hicks, its general secretary, has reaffirmed its solidarity with the victims of Massachusetts reaction.

Wilkes-Barre Calls for Strike.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 7.—Characterizing the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti as the grentest crime of the last hundred years, the Executive Committee of the Sacco-Vanzetti Conference has issued a call to very man and woman in the anthracite region to go on strike on Tuesday, Aug. 9.

The appeal says:

"Declare Tuesday, Aug. 9, a day of protest. We call upon you all to stay away from work on that day as a protest against the execution for our innocent brothers. Have special meetings of your organizations and in every manner have your organizations declare that day a day of protest."

Hungarian Workers' Club Demand General Strike

Aug. 7.—Workers of the Hungarian Workers' Club of the Bronx passed a resolution condemning Governor Fuller's decision to murder Sacco and Vanzetti and calling for a general strike. The resolution says:

Although Governor Alvin T. Fuller of Mass. has been convinced during his investigation that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent of the crime they are charged with, and still he wants to send them to the electric chair, and

Whereas, the working class needs its brave fighters who are willing to sacrifice even their lives for the liberation of the working class

Be it Resolved that we, Hungarian speaking American workers of the Bronx, assembled at our meeting hall, 854 Jackson Ave., Bronx, N. Y., on August 5th, 1927, demand from Governor Fuller the immediate release of these two workers;

Be it further resolved, that we demand from President Green of the American Federation of Labor that he immediately issue a call for a general strike on behalf of these two workers;

Be it further resolved that one copy of this resolution be sent to Gov. Alvan T. Fuller of the State of Mass., one copy to President Green of the American Federation of Labor and one copy to the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

T. U. E. L. Calls for Strike.

The Trade Union Educational League has issued the following appeal to all workers:

"To all workers! Sacco and Vanzetti will die August tenth if the working class allows Governor Fuller's decision to be carried out. This is a blow against the entire working class.

"It is now apparent to all that Fuller's investigation was designed merely to stop the protest movement sweeping the world.

"There is but one form of protest now that ill be heard by the murderers. That is the protest strike.

"Let every worker in America be on record against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti in the only way that counts, strike!

(Signed) William Z. Foster."

Baltimore Sun Flays Fuller.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 7 (FP).—In a caustic editorial, the Baltimore Sun, chief of the international forces.

Soviet Union Workers, By Hundred Thousands, Denounce Fuller's Act

MOSCOW, Aug. 7.—During the last two days thousands of meetings have been held thruout the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, in which the workers voice their extreme indignation and disgust at the cruelty and hypocrisy of American court and the American capitalist class. It is estimated that at least 100,000 workers have attended meetings held in all quarters of Moscow alone, while similar demonstrations took plnce in other towns, particularly the large industrial centers, such as Leningrad and Kharkoff. Speakers point out, and the crowds keenly understand, the duplicity of the American business man who holds up his hands in horror when the workers' government executes counter-revolutionaries actively engaged in assassination, arson and terroristic destruction of life and goods, while at the same time American "justice" is "railroading" to their death after a long martyrdom in prison, two innocent workers who are guilty only of protesting in legal ways against the exploitation of their class.

Bloodthirsty Bishop Is Called "Un-Christlike" By Sacco Committee Head

Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco - Vanzetti Emergency Committee, wired to Episcopal Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts yesterday as follows:

"Your congratulations to Governor Fuller on his death decree very unchristlike, but then Christ was never a Massachusetts bishop."

The above telegram was sent to Bishop Lawrence following the cleric's message to Fuller in which he said, "You will, I am sure, allow me to express to you my admiration of the way in which you have done your duty in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. You have been wise, patient, dignified and courageous—worthy of the best traditions of the commonwealth."

asserts that Governor Fuller has brushed to one side nearly all the relevant evidence which has accumulated in seven years to prove that Sacco and Vanzetti are absolutely innocent of the South Braintree payroll murder in 1920.

Governor Fuller's decision "does little or nothing," declares the Sun, "to dispel the widely held belief that the execution of these two men would be one Dr. Fahlan Franklin has said, 'a stain upon the name of Massachusetts and a calamity in its effects throughout the world.'"

"Two courses," the editorial states, "were naturally open to Governor Fuller in making public his refusal to intervene, with the original verdict of Judge Webster Thayer. He might have stated his bare decision to that end, supported by mention of the separate conclusion of the Lawrence committee that the single have arguments put to point the weighty evidence which the defence has accumulated, particularly since the trial, to show that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent of the South Braintree crime. Instead, the governor answers a few of these points and ignores Ames, including many of the points that are damaging to the prosecution. Inevitably the result is to create suspicion that there are certain awkward questions which the Governor cannot or least does not wish to—attempt to explain away.

Governor Fuller's statement goes at length into the Bridgewater case, in which prisoners say the governor says "practically everyone who witnessed the attempted hold-up and who could have identified the bandits identified Sacco and Vanzetti." Prof. Felix Frankfurter's comment on Vanzetti's prosecution for the Bridgewater trial is that it "grew out of his arrest for, and is interwoven with, the Braintree affair. The evidence of identification of Vanzetti in the Bridgewater case rendered on the frivolous, reaching testimony of Mellie Lombardo, a newsboy who had caught a glimpse of the criminal and 'knew by the way he ran he was a foreigner.'"

"It is difficult to see why Governor Fuller refused a new trial in the Bridgewater affair. It is difficult to see why he makes no mention of the connection of the Department of Justice with the Braintree trial. And it is difficult to see why he does not state that new evidence was not considered by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in refusing a new trial. The adverse decision of the governor is couched in dispassionate language. It is the result of hard and conscientious labor on his part, and has the implicit backing of the influential Lowell committee. But it does little or nothing to dispel the widely held belief that the execution of these men would be, as Dr. Fahlan Franklin has said, 'a stain upon the name of Massachusetts and a calamity in its effects throughout the world.'"

"To let Sacco and Vanzetti die," declares an editorial appearing in all the Scripps-McRae newspapers, "is to breed hate and bitterness in the antipathies which Governor Fuller, by his decision, seeks to uphold. It is that which makes the Sacco-Vanzetti case, with its seven long years of winding a tortuous way to a tortuous death, a grim and terrible tragedy."

The officers of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Local No. 50 have addressed the following appeal to their members.

You are requested to carry out the following decision made at our last meeting held Aug. 3, at 275 East Houston Street:

Those who fail to carry out this decision will be heartily fined by the branch.

50,000 RALLY AS POLICE FORBID ENTRY TO CITY

Second Big Strike Is Planned for Today

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Fifty thousand people took part in a demonstration at Bois de Vincennes on the outskirts of Paris this afternoon under the eyes of a thousand police, mounted republican guards and a regiment of infantry, to demand the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Ten thousand sympathizers paraded to the edge of the city with red flags and placards with Luigia Vanzetti, sister of the condemned man, at the head.

As the parade began, police dragged away carrying posters considered "insulting" to the United States. No demonstration was permitted in Paris under governmental orders.

In Paris proper a 24-minute strike which tied up autobuses and tramways took place today.

Reinforcements around the American chancellory were increased by thirty mounted policemen. Republican guards did not permit anyone to come near without showing proper credentials.

The embassy and consulate were each guarded with twenty police. M. Chaipe, the prefect of police, directed the guards at the Bois de Vincennes demonstration in person.

A 24-hour strike has been declared for tomorrow, 1'Humanite, communist newspaper, declared that all autobuses and tramways will stop.

Socialist Perfidy in Sacco and Vanzetti Case.

No epithet of degradation is sufficiently strong to stigmatize the infamous conduct of the socialist leaders of New York, who from the beginning have tried to use the Sacco and Vanzetti case in their own interests, while totally disregarding the fate of these two victims of capitalist class vengeance. Time and again the Communists have proposed to the socialist leaders that they unite with us on this one pressing issue. So often as we have proposed united action, so often have they refused. But each refusal has exposed their true character as enemies of the working class to more members of their own party. Each act of treachery on their part alienates more members from their ranks and brings new and sincere proletarian elements to ours, with the result that today they are bankrupt leaders, without a following. But each loss of membership makes these discredited leaders more malicious and mendacious.

So low has that party sunk that even its leadership reflects its decrepit condition. August Claessens is local secretary of the socialist party and its official spokesman, and to him was assigned the task of refusing to sanction a united front on the Sacco and Vanzetti strike set for tomorrow. His reply is a low attempt to conceal the treachery of the socialist leaders and befuddle their own membership. He declared:

> "If it had not been for the Communist 'crew of wreckers' the labor movement would have been in a position to win freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti as it did for Moyer, Heywood, and Pettibone.
> They knew that their 'united front' request would be rejected and made it only as a public gesture."

Claessens is guilty not only of plain mendacity, but exposes his complete ignorance of history. He neglects to state that the socialist party of 1905-6 was a living, virile factor in the labor movement, comprising in its ranks militant elements of the working class, while the socialist party of today is a mere travesty of its former self, the best elements having been driven out in the series of expulsions, beginning in 1919, when the membership of that party by referendum vote defeated the Hillquit-Berger-Lneal outfit and elected the entire left wing slate. It was not the left elements that caused the split in the socialist party, but the right wing elements who refused to obey the democratic mandate of the membership, and instead called upon the Chicago police to help them maintain control of the party machinery.

Claessens and the socialist party leaders do not dare to explain the role of the reactionary leadership using its power on behalf of the capitalist class to weaken the labor movement so it will be unable to resist any assaults of any kind because they have aided and abbetted that crime against labor.

Sincere fighters in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti will unite in spite of their differences for joint action to liberate these tortured workers. Charlatans and fakers will try to utilize the plight of Sacco and Vanzetti for their own aims. The Communists stand for unity; the socialists oppose unity. It will require a more astute apologist than Claessens to conceal that fact from the workers.

Major General Leonard Wood.

During the past decade the name of Major General Leonard Wood was a symbol of despotism to millions of workers in the United States as well as to the whole liberty-loving population of the Philippine Islands. His outstanding achievements as a servant of American imperialism were inseparably bound up with campaigns of frightfulness against unarmed populations. He was not particular whether the objects of his depredations were American soldiers returned from the slaughter house of France into industries or suppressed colonial peoples striving for independence. It was sufficient for Major General Leonard Wood that they wanted to improve their condition at the expense of American imperialism. All who struggled against Wall Street were his enemies, because he was the good and faithful servant of that murderers' row that has a church at one and the river at the other.

Wood earned lasting obliquy for his reign of terror against the striking steel workers at Gary where he commanded a part of the United States army in 1919-20. His achievements there made him the logical candidate for the post in the Phillippines, and he fulfilled all expectations of his imperialist masters, who alone will mourn his loss. He was a man of presidential calibre—that is of the calibre we have today. He was Elbert H. Gary's favorite candidate in 1920, but his record in the steel strike made his success at the polls doubtful. Reluctantly Gary had to concede the merit of the claim that a yellow dog could get more votes among workers than could Wood.

This phase of his career is illuminating inasmuch as it reveals some of the tricks of American politics. His position in the army when the United States entered the war made him the logical commander in chief, but Woodrow Wilson's democratic advisers told the professor that to send Wood to France would enhance his prestige and make him a presidential possibility. So "Black Jack" Pershing was sent instead. Then when the steel strike came on and Gary called for federal troops, Newton D. Baker, Wilson's secretary of war, placed Wood at the head of those sections of the army that occupied Gary, Indiana. That was a political move of more than ordinary astuteness as it eliminated Wood as a serious contender for the presidency. The spectacle was edifying to a revolutionist. One gang of Wall Street flunkeys conspired to knife another aspirant to a higher stage of flunkeyism.

Puppets of history, these creatures strut for a time upon its stage, to pass into oblivion and leave room for others.

Wood is gone, but the foul system that spawned him still exists to create others of his type, until the system itself is swept away.

A solemn thought in connection with Wood is that he often boasted that the reds would have to be exterminated, but today Wood is gone and the reds he so despised are still here to record the fact.

So it will be with the social system, a part of which he represented.

Labor Banks on the Down Grade.

During the first six months of 1927 labor banking in the United States suffered its first decisive reverse in history. Since the beginning of this festering growth upon the labor movement of the United States labor banking has made steady progress as far as statistics of deposits and resources are concerned. They attracted the savings of that relatively small section of the American working class that has a favored position in the imperialist scheme of things—the labor aristocracy, bribed by the superprofits realized from the imperialist exploitation of colonials and semi-colonials. The apex of labor banking was reached last year. This year there has been a steady decline in the resources of these institutions.

During the first six months of this year, according to a comprehensive and accurate survey made by the Industrial Relations Section of the Department of Economics and Social Institutions of Princeton University, the resources of all labor banks were $128,655,750 on June 30th, 1927, as compared to $126,015,666 on December 31st of last year, a decline of $1,359,914. Apologists for labor banks may argue that this is a slight decrease that may be overcome, but such argument is based upon the wishes of the labor fakers who try to fool the workers into supporting such institutions rather than upon economic facts. The real reason for the decline is to be found in the part time work and unemployment that exists in many industries, affecting even the higher strata of labor. It means the privileged workers are forced to withdraw their savings in order to exist, and this falling off of resources is still more significant because it indicates that thousands of workers, who formerly made regular deposits, no longer are able to save.

Lest some demagogic apologist of labor banking arises and proclaims that the recent collapse of the great chain of Brotherhood banks is responsible for this decline and that the other banks are advancing, let us emphasize the fact that these figures deal with the period just previous to the collapse of the Brotherhood schemes.

When we get the figures on the effect of the venture launched by Warren S. Stone, "the father of labor banking," the reverses of labor banks will readily be recognized as a debacle.

The French and Belgian Socialists Join Their Imperialist Masters

By. H. M. WICKS

OPPORTUNISM, that malignant growth that infected the labor movement through the decades of the peaceful development of capitalism, impelled the French and Belgian socialists to follow in 1914 the path of those German Social-democratic renegades who formulated the policy of August 4th and voted the war credits for the government of the kaiser. The same forces that gave impetus to the diseased growth in Germany also produced war jingoism in France, Belgium, and England and had its reflex in Russia as exemplified by Plechanoff and Alexinsky.

Pre-war opportunism which carried the germs that produced war jingoism was based upon the union of the upper strata of the proletariat with the lower bourgeoisie. The German party in particular, as the leading party of the second international, suffered greatly from this disease growth, this devastating blight. There was no other powerful opposition party hence thousands of bourgeoisie elements were attracted to the social democracy. The right-wing of the proletariat and the left-wing of the bourgeoisie both received certain favors in the way of crumbs that fell from the hands of the imperialists and both groups, united in one party, felt their interests endangered by the demands of the mass of proletarians. In times of peace this manifested itself most frequently in attacks upon and suppression of the "impractical" views of the "extremists." This opportunism consciously distorted all the theories of Marx and Engels regarding the revolutionary struggle—street fighting, the general strike and insurrection. According to the heroes of the second international all necessary achievements, and the working class could be realized within the frame-work of the capitalist state and within the confines of capitalist class legality, in all those countries where workers could vote.

AGAINST the main current there developed an opposition that in its most pronounced form embraced syndicalism and the general strike as a substitute for all other class action. This tendency predominated in France just before the opening of the world war. At a special congress of the French socialist party held on July 15th-17th, to discuss instructions to delegates at the international socialist congress called in Vienna for August 23, 1914 (which was never held because of the war) a resolution was carried declaring that:

> "The French party considers the spontaneous general strike of the workers of all countries combined with anti-war propaganda among the masses, as the most workable of all means in the hands of the workers to prevent war and the international arbitration of the present dispute."

The main supporters of this resolution were Jean Jaures, Edward Vaillant and Marcel Sembat. Jules Guesde refrained from voting, although he vigorously opposed the resolution. Guesde, who was the leader of the Marxist wing of the French party, pleaded that he was not opposed to the general strike on principle, but that the international congresses had not sanctioned it therefore it could not be used. The resolution itself is weak and un-Marxian inasmuch as its realization is based upon the spontaneous action of the masses. The doctrine of spontaneity is itself a form of opportunism. The French party did not perceive that to organize successfully such a movement requires the decisive action of the party as the medium of such. Further confusion is indicated in that they did not understand that a general strike has its own tremendous implication—mobilization for the revolution.

Instead of such unrealistic resolutions the question before the French party should have been the conduct of its parliamentary representatives in the chamber of deputies. For a time at least these deputies could have given revolutionary direction to the proletariat. By hurling defiance at the government, by daring speeches in the chamber, they could have spoken to the masses on the outside and started the movement for a real fight against the war danger. The arrest of a deputy or a number of deputies would have been useful as measures toward mobilizing the workers for revolutionary activity.

But instead of taking revolutionary action the leaders of the French party in the chamber, as soon as they learned of the action of the German members of the reichstag went over to the government. Instead of exposing the treachery of the German social-democrats by appealing to the proletariat they joined their own government in its fight against the ruling class of Germany.

Jules Guesde, the old leader of the "Marxist" wing of the French party became foreign minister in the war cabinet and devoted his talents to inciting the government against every one within the borders of France who dared hold aloft the revolutionary standard that he had so shamelessly disgraced by his treachery to the working class. Vaillant and Sembat also went over to the jingoes as did Gustave Herve, who had served long terms in prison for anti-war agitation.

LIKE the German heroes of the second international the French social patriots declared that they were fighting a war of defense. While the German socialists declared they were fighting against Russian despotism, in spite of the fact that the German general staff directed its first blows against France, by striking through Belgium, the French socialists proclaimed that they were fighting against the menace of German despotism. Instead of carrying out in action the decision of the Basle congress to fight against their own governments they fought for their governments.

In the most servile manner the traitors tried to justify themselves by proclaiming that the masses had gone over to the side of the "war of defense" and that they as their leaders had to follow them. As a matter of fact the masses never had an opportunity to voice their demands. Deserted in their hour of need by their leaders, disorganized by treachery within, it was easy for the military power of the government to drive them into the army and the war industries.

The social-democratic masses had been accustomed to look for leadership to these identical parliamentary representatives and when that leadership failed them they were helpless. So the social-patriots, the leaders of the second international, in both France and Germany, as well as Belgium, not only became miserable prostitutes of imperialism, but they tried to cover the masses with their own shame. To a prostitute all are prostituted.

Had these creatures been revolutionists instead of vile flunkeys of the bourgeoisie they would have voted against the war credits, have spoken openly for the defeat of their own governments, have rallied the workers to struggle against the war, have demanded fraternization of the soldiers in the trenches and made preparations for the publication and distribution of illegal literature among the workers in the war industries and the soldiers at the front. In every way and under all conditions this work should have been carried on against their governments for the purpose of inciting strikes in the munition works, mutinies in the ranks of the army and preparing for the time when the objective revolutionary situation would be at hand—a situation that every Marxist should have recognized as an inevitable concomitant of the war and a situation that actually did exist in every country participating in the war before two years had passed.

IN Belgium the leading figure of the second international, Emile Vandervelde, followed the footsteps of the German and French renegades. He became minister to the king of the Belgians, one of the greatest of the war criminals. The action of Vandervelde deserves special attention because it was his duty as head of the international to issue the call to the parties of all belligerent countries for a determined stand against the war. Even after Stuedkum, Scheidemann and the German reichstag members had betrayed the workers it was still possible for the international bureau to repudiate them and try to organize the masses for the revolutionary struggle without them and against them.

But instead of fulfilling his duty as the international proletariat Emile Vandervelde and his associates in the Belgian socialist party became a lackey of King Albert, who in turn was the servile tool of British and French imperialism.

When all the facts of the world war are gathered and classified and some proletarian historian sits down to write the authentic history the history that will be the textbook of the future of the part played by Albert and his ministers, including the socialist Vandervelde, he will show that the Belgian government could have spared the life of every Belgian working man who spilt his blood in the interest of imperialism. Albert deliberately threw his subjects into the mouths of German cannon not onto German bayonets in the interest of Britain and France and for no other reason. Those two imperialist powers (Britain and France) knew the danger of an unhampered march of the German army through Belgium and, although the kaiser's government offered to reimburse the Belgians for damages incurred during the march through their territory, the Entente persuaded Albert that his government to pile their own dead Belgians in heaps of corpses before the well-trained German forces. Albert murdered his own workers, not for any interests of his own country, but in the interest of foreign imperialist powers and Emil Vandervelde was his first assistant murderer.

Vandervelde, head of the second international, as minister in the king's cabinet of this hireling government, of this ignorant Catholic and vicious tool sank lower in his perfidy, his treachery, his betrayal of the working class he professed to represent than even Scheidemann sank in his efforts to serve the supremacy of the kaiser. Among the traitors to the working class Vandervelde was the most monstrous of all, because history had given him the role of lackey of the most vile of capitalist governments.

THE working class of the world, on this thirteenth anniversary of the betrayals, must study the lessons of 1914 in order to be able to meet and defeat this cancerous growth of opportunism which a section of the working class in former social-patriotism. The same infection, the same virus that spawned great betrayal of 1914 exists today in the American labor movement and in all capitalist countries of the world and one of the most effective methods of combating the threat of new wars is to fight against opportunism wherever it raises its head.

Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People" Here Next Month

Arthur Hammerstein announces that his New Hammerstein theatre being built at Broadway and Fifty-third Street, will open about October 15th with "Golden Dawn." The cast includes Louise Hunter of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Marguerite Sylva, Olin Howland, Barbara Newberry, Robert Chisholm and Paul Gregory.

"A midsummer Night's Dream," recently done at the Forest Hills Stadium, to be repeated for three performances at the Lyceum theatre Friday matinee, August 12th, Sunday evening, August 14th, and Monday afternoon, August 15th—all for the benefit of the Actors Fund of America.

John Hundley, last seen in "Twinkle, Twinkle," has been engaged by Joseph Stantley for "Just Fancy," scheduled for September. Other additions to the cast are Kathryn Burnside, Lita Lopez, Spanish dancer, and Peggy O'Neill.

Richard Herndon has chosen Helen Chandler for the leading feminine role in "Creolea," the new play by Samuel Shipman and Kenneth Perkins with which he will present next month.

"An Enemy of the People," has been decided as the opening production by Walter Hampden. The revival will begin in September at the Hampden theatre. He also plans to do a play based on "The Light of Asia," by Sir Edwin Arnold, and Shakespeare's "Coriolanus," which has not been seen in New York for forty years. Revivals of "Hamlet" and "The Taming of the Shrew" are also listed.

Eddy Foy in "The Fallen Star," written and staged by Tom Barry, is the headliner at the Palace theatre this week. This is Foy's 57th year on the stage. The other acts include: Kitty Doner; Robert Chisholm, Australian baritone; Violet Hening and Co., in "The Snob," a comedy by Edwin Burke; Billy House and Co; Three Swifts and Beehee and Rubyette.

The bill of vaudeville at Moss' Broadway this week is headed by Pickard's Syncopaters, Bobby Randall, Julius Tannlin and Co., in "Southern Capers;" the A. D. F. Trio, Reed and Lucy, Royal Gascoignes, and Mary Coward and Larry Braddon.

St. Louis Unit Holds Successful Picnic to Support Daily Worker

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The South Slavic Section of the Workers Party of St. Louis, Mo., knowing the situation of our press, and knowing how necessary and important this paper is, unanimously voted to hold a picnic exclusively for the benefit of the workers press.

The picnic was held on the 24th of July. There were around 500 present. There were workers on this picnic, that were never before on our gatherings. People came from the surrounding cities. Among these were quite a number of Bulgarian Comrades from Madison and Granite City, Ill. Also there were workers from the striking mining district. In general this picnic was a manifestation of solidarity and consciousness of the workers towards the press.

At 6 p. m. Comrade Zinich, who spoke last Sunday in St. Louis for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, gave a speech. We must not forget to announce that the women comrades did their utmost to help along. Comrades Wreisky and Skiljan donated a pair of pillow cases, for the press, and Comrade Veber a cushion for the same purpose. There were also a number of other things, which brought a sum of around $76.00. A few subscribers were gotten and some books sold.

Our sympathizers also worked with will. Some helped the bar-keeping, some behind the bar, and others selling tickets. They worked like comrades, in a way that showed solidarity and kindness towards the workers press. When the guests were leaving for home, one could see satisfaction with the picnic and service.

Proceeds from the picnic were $274.00. The expense of Comrade Zinich's railroad tickets was added to the expense of the picnic, because the S. S. Section called him to be present on these several occasions.

The proceeds were divided as follows: The original party price: The DAILY WORKER's, $100.00; The Radnik Daily, $100.00; The Delavac Weekly, $74.00. Total $274.00.

We thank the arrangers, and the guests for their work and wonderful attendance.

This is only one more answer to those who wish our press a downfall, and to those who think the workers' paper does not need the support of the workingclass of this country.

Now we appeal to all comrades and leaders at the DAILY WORKER, RADNIK and DELAVAC, that each and every one to do their part as much as possible, so that we may help the workers' press, and with this do a great part toward helping the workingclass. We must not give the capitalist the satisfaction of seeing our press laid down.

We in St. Louis will continue our work with greater effort than ever, and hope to double the work by working in harmony.

Debs Book Out; Former Leader Tells of Jails

CHICAGO, Aug. 7. The national office of the Socialist party, at 2653 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, announces publication of a posthumous book by the late Eugene V. Debs entitled Walls & Bars, in which he tells of his experiences as a political prisoner in County jails, state prison and federal penitentiary. Debs has none of the illusions of the prison reformer of the liberal ilk. The prison problem, he says, "is directly correlated with poverty and poverty as we see it today is essentially a social disease."

Oil Barons Conspire Openly to Limit the Product; Raise Price

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 7.—The first major attempt in the history of the oil industry, to bolster a declining market by voluntary production restriction, got under way today in the Seminole field.

For the next two months the daily output has been set at 450,000 barrels, compared with a high last Friday of 525,000. Each lease will curtail production one-ninth under the plan promulgated by umpire Ray M. Collins. The plan was drafted by a committee of leading oil men.

If the experiment is successful it may ultimately be adopted for varying periods by other large fields, which, like the Seminole have been intermittently helping to glut the market, experts predict.

Workers Threaten General Strike Protesting Sacco-Vanzetti Ruling

This meeting is in Union Square. Meetings like it are being held all over the world. Los Angeles workers assemble in The Plaza, August 9, at 5 P. M.

LOS ANGELES COMRADES ACTIVE DURING SUCCESSFUL YEAR; DOWN FACTIONALISM

By R. E. D., (Worker Correspondent)

One year ago last spring the present Sub-District Executive Committee came into office and announced its conditions of work by "taking in all the new members we can, and expelling none." We did this because we realized we were already weakened by too many interneciue fights to stir up others, and we had to have members to pay the rent, support the Press, and make donations to the many Party needs. The result was to hold our membership and actually to increase it. When Bob Minor was here to get us to endorse the famous Unity Resolution, we had 410 at the meeting; last Tuesday night July 26 at a general membership meeting to and The DAILY WORKER letter we counted 125. This meeting was absolutely harmonious and came gallantly to the rescue of the Daily and of the Furriers on strike and made substantial donations to both.

Successful Finances.

Our second policy was to look after the finances and see that when we undertook an obligation we couldn't come out in the hole. So when Bert Wolfe came here we gave him a rousing reception and paid his expenses and sent him away with a good donation. Also Albert Weisberg, Paul Crouch, Walter Trumbull and others. We celebrated the Paris Commune, the Embassy Ball, 1905, the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense, Bishop Brown, etc., etc., and did not fall in debt.

Then we joined up with the I. W. W.'s and the Centralia Defense, the I.L.D. and the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense and gave a Red Day Picnic that was a rouser and netted a big sum to all concerned, besides tending to allay the hostility between these organizations and the Communists. We accomplish a real United Front tactic.

What is the reason of our success? Is it because we are smarter, wiser, and better Communists than elsewhere?

It is rather because we reformed from all factionalism. We knew our duty as to work, get in new members, make expenses and a profit for the Party; did what educational work we could, increased the sale and circulation of the Party papers and magazines, reported promptly our activities to the units above us, and sent in funds where they belonged as fast as received; also to make financial reports each month, get them audited; sold books, and worked worked, worked like the devil!

We met criticism by putting the critics to work too. If they didn't like the way we did things we promptly gave them a chance to show how much better they could do. And in case they did better, we didn't begrudge them a word of praise. Work makes good Communists; idleness makes poor ones.

Another success was our City Election Campaign where we got nearly 8000 votes for our candidates on the School Board, altho there were 18 candidates who ran to fill 4 vacancies.

We must admit a slight falling off in the local sales and circulation of The DAILY WORKER here. But that is on two accounts:—1. The delay of the paper reaching here. 2. The lack of a healthy agro-agitative fire put in the place of Comrade Biess, who was one of the best agents of the Worker had anywhere.

We can point with pride to the advanced class in Marxism, which is meeting regularly every Wednesday night and picking good progress in Bukharin's History of Materialism. In the fall elementary classes will be organized under competent teachers and then ample material for the winter.

The nuclei directors are somewhat inexperienced and after they attend the advanced class, they will be better able to teach.

The headquarters have been remodelled and renovated. Now we have a good practical office, a reading room and library open to the public afternoons and evenings, a good sized room for nucleus and committee meetings and a large hall seating comfortably 150 or even more after lunches are sandwiched.

The order for Inprecorr have almost quadrupled; the Communist International will have to be increased; the Labor Defender sells better than ever; Labor Unity is eagerly snapped up by the mails and the socialist classics are always in demand.

One final word. The main reason for the healthy condition of the Party in Southern California is due solely to the honest efforts to keep up a United Front with Labor organized or unorganized.

Woman Speaker to Tell Los Angeles Nucleus of U.S.S.R.

By L. P. RINDAL,
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., August 7.—In spite of the warm weather and other forms of "fun" working overtime trying to break down energy, activities along the line of the class struggle have not died out entirely in the city of the open shop.

At 1:30 p. m. every Sunday, class conscious workers conduct mass meetings at the Hollenbeck Hall, 103 Marchessault street, facing the Plaza on the north side. Here resolutions have been passed protesting against the sending of marines to Nicaragua, China and other foreign countries, threatening, etc., have been sent to the left wing of the Kuomintang Party members, such as Frank Sear-light and Robin Dunbar, have taken prominent part, and Michael Hughes, of the proletarian party, has lined up one hundred per cent with the other two mentioned.

Downing to Speak on Labor History.

Mortimer Downing, editor of the New Feminist, will speak on "History of Organized Labor in the United States" next Sunday. Trade Unionists, Communists and other groups of labor have been invited to attend.

Woman Lectures On U. S. S. R.

Clara Taylor Warne, coming from Moscow a year ago, spoke in Los Angeles recently on the "Treatment of Sexual Diseases in Russia." The lecture, illustrated of the screen, was a success.

Fact and figures proved Russia to be far ahead of other countries in its effort to stamp out social diseases. Even enemies of the First Workers' Republic were forced to admit these facts. Mortimer Downing, editor and communist-organizer of the I. W. W. Educational program group, once an anarchist, submitted the propriety of Soviet Russia in this respect.

Clara Warne speaks mostly at Women's clubs. She has been active at the brotherhood hall in the near future.

Defend The DAILY WORKER

Under the auspices of the local I. L. D. group, a protest mass meeting was held at Music Art Hall last Sunday, July 24th. Frank Cassidy and James H. Feiber, speakers, were at their best, as were the members of the Ukrainian Singing Society who received great applause. The main subject for the evening was "Defense of the Workers' Press. The DAILY WORKER."

Charge Nassau County Construction Graft

MINEOLA, Aug. 7.—That there is a wide-spread graft in the construction of highways and bridges in Nassau County was revealed today when State Comptroller Maurice S. Tremaine sent an investigator to the county as a result of numerous complaints received from residents there.

Exorbitant amounts of money are being spent on county construction and charges of widespread graft are made in many of the letters.

SUMMER CAMP IS OPENED BY LEFTS OF LOS ANGELES

500-Acre Ranch for Use of Children

By ROSE RUBIN

Away, three months ago, a call was issued by the Young Pioneers of Los Angeles, and the Women's Communist League, for a conference to organize a summer camp for workers' children. The call was enthusiastically responded to by all the left wing organizations in the city, and also by the Carpenters and Painters Unions.

At the time of the organization of the conference, it seemed as if the many details and obstacles that were met in the action starting of the camp, were insurmountable. It was only due to the unwavering determination for a camp, and the energy of the leading comrades in the conference that made possible the opening of the camp on Sunday, July 31st.

Appreciation is due to a sympathizer of the workers movement, R. Moot, who gave the use of his 500 acre ranch for the summer to be used as the site for the camp. It is a beautiful spot, and ideally located for a camp. There is a large six-room house on the grounds that serves as the commissary and dining room. Tents are to be pitched on a grassy plot of ground, well shaded by large trees. There is a big stream for wading, and many of the trails lead into canyons that are overgrown with natural vegetation, that will give splendid material for study for the Nature Study Class that is organized for the children.

"Camp Soviet."

A "camp soviet" has been instituted, wherein all the children have a voice and vote in all camp matter. There is a trained nurse for first aid. A committee of mothers will have charge in the food supplies and food management. Instead of the patriotic and religious training of the Boy Scouts and Girl Scout camps, working class problems and ideals will be taught by means of songs, games and plays.

The typical shouts and songs of the thirty-five children that came to the camp on Sunday, was a source of inspiration of those who worked so hard to make the camp a reality, and was also a great source of encouragement to all those interested in workers' children's movements, to maintain and elaborate their camps, and make possible many more such camps in the country.

Los Angeles Holds Big Sacco-Vanzetti Meeting

(By A Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal. Under the auspices of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the workers of Los Angeles held a big protest mass meeting at Music Art Hall yesterday. The audience was a colorful one in more than one sense of the word. Wonderful speeches were made in English, Spanish and Italian by M. Downing, Weder, Armando Borchi and Manuel Tavizon. In short, the sum total of the speech-making was that "there is only one hope left—THE VOICE OF LABOR. The voice must be heard so distinctly that the IMMEDIATE RELEASE of these two innocent workers will be forthcoming."—In other words—Action!

Meetings were also held in the following cities: Boston; Cleveland; Avella, Pa.; Chicago; Pittston, Pa.; San Francisco; New York City; St. Louis; Great Falls, Mont.; Denver; Martins Ferry, Ohio; Seattle; Duluth; Omaha; St. Paul; Minneapolis; Buffalo; Utica; Detroit; San Jose; Philadelphia; and Milwaukee.

LOS ANGELES ANTI-IMPERIALIST WORK DEVELOPS WITH PARTICIPATION OF MEXICAN WORKERS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—It was not until six months ago that any persistent attempt was made to carry on anti-imperialist activity in Los Angeles. In starting such work it was easily seen that the element around which most of the activity must center was the large Mexican population.

Los Angeles claims to be the second largest Mexican city on the American continent, the only larger being Mexico City itself, and within the city proper there are more than 250,000 while within a radius of 100 miles on the three sides that this radius can be extended there are to be found over one half million Mexican inhabitants. Among the most poorly paid workers of this state and also by the Carpenters and Painters Unions. hardest oppressed against in every way possible, these workers who had fled the dictator-ship existing in Mexico previously, and the bed of American imperialism there, find themselves under the bootheel of this same imperialism here. It was not a hard task to teach the meaning of Imperialism to these workers, the majority of them knew too well the meaning and the campaign carried on in the Mexican press. The late events in Mexico and the invasion of Nicaragua and China by American forces brought quick and ready response from them.

Organize League.

In February of this year, the anti-Imperialist United Front was organized. Response from the American elements was poor but six labor unions and a few fraternal organizations sending delegates, the Mexicans however came to the united front with great enthusiasm and a desire for active participation in the struggle against Imperialism. The organization found it cumbersome however to carry on meetings in both languages and now the Mexican and other Spanish-speaking workers have set about to form the anti-Imperialist League of Los Angeles consisting of only Spanish-speaking elements.

NEWS FROM NEW JERSEY

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 7.—Sixteen presidents of the building trades international unions are in session in Atlantic City presided over by Wm. J. McSorely of Washington, D. C. The delegates adopted a policy of fighting building employers who employ union men in state and non-union men in another state. Hereafter building contractors will have cooperative under closed shop conditions every where unless the bosses hand their jobs lied up by strikes.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 7.—For the second time in as many weeks charges of contempt against Fred Carlin the business agent of the Teamsters Local 478 were dismissed in Chancery Court in Jersey City. This time Vice Chancellor Bently presided. The bosses of the material supply companies are attempting to establish the open shop over since the agreement expired in May. The teamsters are actively fighting the bosses to maintain union recognition. The bosses have employed the injunction and the courts to fight the workers but in vain.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 7.—The official call for the convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor has been sent out to all the units affiliated. The convention will take place at Camden, N. J., on September 12, 13, 14, and will be the 49th annual congress. Problems of local and state importance will come for solution and all progressives are urged to prepare.

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich., Aug. 7.—Frederick A. Giles, English aviator, plans to hop off Monday in "Detroit's Goodwill Messenger" on the first leg of an air journey to Wellington, New Zealand, it was announced today. His journey will cover 11,181 miles. After competing in the San Francisco-Honolulu $25,000 Dole prize flight, Giles expects to hop from Honolulu to Brisbane, Australia.

Anti-Imperialism Campaign Is Begun By Young Workers

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—After an enthusiastic meeting with Paul Crouch, the Young Workers League has decided to begin immediately an anti-militarist campaign in the district. Leaflets will be issued in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The Youth Day Celebration to be held September 11th will have as its main slogan, "Fight Against Militarism, and Imperialist War." And anti-militarist campaign will be organized in the local unions, under the direction with the Anti-Imperialist League and the Hands Off China Committee. The agitation against the R. O. T. C. will be taken up as soon as school opens next month.

On the industrial field, the Young Workers League Factory Group is issuing the "Stove Worker," factory bulletin, and this paper is evoking a sympathetic response on the part of the exploited young stove workers. Every member who is working in a shop or office is an active union member. Where comrades who are beginning to learn how to lead and participate in strikes and to work in the unions for the best interests of the workers.

Active members of the League are starting a class in "Elements of Political Education" under the direction of Sid Hush of the Workers Party. At present a class is being conducted for functionaries by the District Organizer of the League. Open Forums are held every 2 weeks.

All Out August 9 for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Strengthen the Arm which will SAVE SACCO and VANZETTI

Only the power of the masses can save the two victims of capitalist hatred.

Only the united strength of labor can rescue them from the electric chair.

The Daily Worker is the collective organizer of the mass movement which is growing every hour to free Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Daily Worker supplies the motive power which stirs the masses and drives them forward to the fight for the release of these two men.

The drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker is therefore a necessary and vital part of the campaign for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

As the day for the execution approaches, the need for a more intensive effort to increase the circle of readers of the only paper which tells the truth about the case, grows greater and greater.

The drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker is a drive for, the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti

FARMERS

INCREASED PRODUCTION MEANS POVERTY FOR FARMS, AGRICULTURAL REPORTS SAY

Increased productivity is as characteristic of agriculture as of manufacture, Secretary, C. J. Brand of the National Fertilizer Association tells the North Carolina farmers. Brand's figures suggest that depressed farm prices, the trek of the farm population to the cities and industrial unemployment all result from the fact that producers are penalized for their productivity.

Increased utilization of power and fertilizer are cited by Brand as important causes of the expanding productivity of the farm population. In 1850 farmers used 1.4 horsepower per worker, till 1925 4.5 horsepower per worker, an increase of more than 200 per cent. Between 1860 and 1926, the consumption of fertilizer grew from 700,000 to 7,500,000 tons.

Brand points out that the land utilized per farm worker has increased from 20 crop-acres in 1880 to 33 crop-acres in 1926. Production of grain per man-acre has increased from 12,000 lbs. to 25,000 lbs. Since 1850 farmers have increased their yields of wheat 17 per cent, oats 14 per cent and potatoes 39 per cent. Corresponding gains are indicated in hogs and eggs.

"American farmers," says Brand, "produce more per man than do the farmers of any other country, a fact which many critics of so-called rural inefficiency overlook, but production per acre in some crops is not as high as in other countries because farmers are not using the optimum amount of plant food.

"Our average yield is only 13 bushels, but we use only 5 lbs. of plant food per acre on the average while Holland produces 41 bushels with 168 lbs. of plant food per acre and England 31 bushels with 19 lbs. of plant food. Nevertheless American farmers produce 2.3 tons of farm produce more per capita than the farmers of the United Kingdom, 2.8 more than German farmers, 3.2 more than French farmers and 6.5 more than Italian farmers."

Farm Labor Supply Shows Unemployment.

The larger supply of farm labor this year than last year is seen by the economists of the U. S. department of agriculture as a reflection of the lower volume of industrial employment. The report farm labor supply and demand in close balance, with farm labor plentiful in some parts of the country except the north and south Atlantic states.

Farm wages, according to the report, are down slightly compared with last year. The average wage per month with board this July was $35.59 against $36.10 in July 1926. Wages per month without board are $49.84 against $49.89; per day with board $1.89 against $1.91; and wages per day without board $2.44 against $2.48 a year ago. Farm wages are now 81 per cent above pre-war.

Agricultural Figures.

Reports to the department of agriculture from 13,475 farmers in all parts of the country show an average net income of $1,034 this year compared with $1297 for 15,330 farms in 1925; $1205 for 15,103 in 1924; 1020 for 16,183 farms in 1923; and $917 for 6084 farms in 1922.

The average size of the farms reporting for 1926 was 315 acres with an average investment of $16,308. Average gross receipts were $2448. Average cash expenses were $1473, including $386 for hired labor, $242 for livestock bought, $252 for food, $73 for fertilizer, $46 for seed, $183 for taxes, $120 for machinery tools and $179 for miscellaneous items.

FARM PRICES STAGNANT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7. (FP)—Despite the tom-tomming of the Coolidge press agents that farmers will have a good year, the department of agriculture shows prices in July at the June level and 6 points lower than last year, one of the worst in farming history. The price level is 130, based on a prewar average of 100, as compared with 145 for industrial prices.

2,000,000 FARMERS IN CO-OPS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (FP)—Nearly 2,000,000 farmers belong to cooperative marketing and purchasing organizations, the department of agriculture announces in a survey of the decade 1915-25. This represents nearly a three-fold gain within 10 years, with a doubling in the number of organizations. Their business totalled $2,400,000,000, nine-tenths of which represented sales.

Seventy per cent of the business is done in the 13 north central and Pacific states with Minnesota leading and California second.

"STARVATION" HOOVER SEEMS TO BE HEIR TO MANTLE OF COOLIDGE; BIG CHIEFS DECIDE

By HARVEY O'CONNOR
(Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Overnight Herbert Hoover has become the biggest figure in Republican national politics. For Hoover is the touchstone whose actions within the next few weeks will tell whether Calvin Coolidge has been jerked out of the race for the 1928 presidential nomination.

If the secretary of commerce decides actively to enter the lists for the White House competition in 1928, then the country will know that the silent but powerful figures backstage in the Republican party have given Cal the hook and that Hoover is the heir apparent.

Serious Talk

Two weeks ago the secretary of commerce visited the president to report ostensibly on the Mississippi flood situation, but they are known to have gone over the 1928 political prospects very carefully. Immediately after the conference a report was given out in Washington that Coolidge would not be a candidate again and that Hoover would be given his official sanction as crown prince with full privileges of ascent to the throne on March 3, 1929. Hoover of course denied the reports "out of a sense of loyalty" to his chief.

Cal to Unbroken

But at that conference it may have been agreed on that Coolidge would announce his withdrawal from the 1928 race and hand over the tremendously powerful political machine of the administration to Hoover. If that was the decision, then it becomes certain that the financial and industrial lions who control the G. O. P. have either decided that Cal isn't strong enough to run over the third term tradition or that he can't be trusted with leadership of the government policies of quiescence in 1929-32, which may be a most difficult and even tense, if certain Jeremiahs on Wall Street are to be believed.

These critics of woe see portentous clouds on the horizon, of tremendously overexpanded producing power (in profits tremendously shrunken buying power of the masses); shaky foreign investments; and international and domestic complications.

"Super-Hoover"

Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, trusted hands man for the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the big Wall Street financiers, an able, energetic and highly intelligent politician is the man who fills the bill.

To the liberals he is acceptable because he is an "engineer in politics" a wise, capable leader who can wipe off the stains that eight years of Harding-Coolidgeism have left on the national escutcheon. To the charity people he is the big Red Cross man who saved the poor, starving Belgians and Russians, and now the flood sufferers in the Mississippi valley. To the Chamber of Commerce of Zenith, U. S. A., he is the ideal Rotarian, the Super-Babbitt. To the conservatives he is the safe and sane yet courageous political leader who knows that government is the servant of profits. No other politician in America enjoys such wide popularity among the molders of public opinion; 99 per cent of the Washington correspondents are his strong personal admirers. He is assured of a "good press," a fundamental consideration.

It has been widely held opinion in Washington that Hoover would be president in 1932. But if the powers that be have decided from the race, then Hoover is four years nearer the White House.

Letters From Our Readers

How The DAILY WORKER Makes Friends

In the morning before going to work I get the DAILY WORKER and I read it while digesting my breakfast. Several mornings I have noticed on the next table to me doing the same thing—a young blond fellow. Comrades must know each other and I walked over and asked, "Are you a comrade?"

"No not yet," he said, "but I will become one."

He is a recent emigrant from Germany and had no political affiliation. But his experience on the other side and the Marxism books that he reads, tells him that the Communist Party is the only party worth belonging to.

One morning he greeted me: "I gotten my membership card." We made a holiday that day. And since than we meet and discuss and some of the duties that the party calls upon.

Now at our restaurants meets we discuss party affairs. And we have injected The DAILY WORKER into the Industrial Insurance agents, that step in for a bite in the the same place, with such success that they read The DAILY WORKER occasionally and have cancelled their own industrial policies.

Why Farmer John Goes to Town—The Banker Has His Land

Capitalism Develops an Enemy Among the Thinking Students of the Nation

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

STUDENTS, like workers, are stretching hands across the seas in support of the growing fight for the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

It was at its demonstration against Massachusetts "justice," rendered in the decision of Governor Alvan T. Fuller demanding that Sacco and Vanzetti burn in the electric chair, Wednesday, August 10, that the Student Sacco-Vanzetti Committee made public a telegram from the International Youth Congress, being held in Frankfurt, Germany, which said:

"Convey our fraternal greetings and hope for success to Sacco and Vanzetti."

The energetic struggle of the Student Sacco-Vanzetti Committee, on behalf of our two doomed comrades, gained new impetus at the gathering held Thursday night at the New School for Social Research, over which the secretary of the committee, Celia Dobbin, presided, with the speakers including Arthur Garfield Hays, the lawyer; Leonard D. Abbott, the editor and writer; Rose Pesotta, of the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee, and the writer, representing the Emergency Sacco-Vanzetti Committee.

Tens of thousands of pieces of literature have been circulated already by this Students' Committee. The students were not content to confine their demonstration to the auditorium of the New School for Social Research at 465-469 West 23rd Street, no matter how excellent an audience came. They provided for having the speeches broadcasted over the radio.

This student effort will be bad news for those would be assassins among the American intelligentsia who are seeking the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Students' Committee was organized by students attending Columbia University that is headed by the arch reactionary, Nicholas Murray Butler, political and intellectual ally of John Hays Hammond, the multi-millionaire, who has just addressed a letter to Governor Fuller of Massachusetts, lauding him for his loyalty, thru his decision, to the murder clique that is ready on Wednesday to press the button to start the electric fire that will burn out the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The student demonstration Thursday night should be bad news for Butler! Bad news for Hammond. Bad news also for the intellectual prostitutes, President Abbot Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, and President Samuel W. Stratton, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who acted on Governor Fuller's "committee" that also declared Sacco and Vanzetti "guilty"! Bad news for all the Goose-step leaders, in all America's universities and colleges, who seek to straight-jacket the student mind of the land.

It was my privilege to point out to these students the historic role that the students had played in other lands. I told them of the sons and daughters of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union Republics, who now constitute the student body of the First Moscow University, the oldest university in all Russia. Even under czardom, however, there were revolutionary elements among the student body of this university, taking their stand with the oppressed masses, resulting in troops being mobilized in the Military Training Academy across the street.

During student demonstrations, I pointed out, these troops were called on to break up the gatherings held, making cruel use of the infamous Russian knout in performing their bloody task.

It was significant, in a way, that at the Student Sacco-Vanzetti Demonstration, at the New School for Social Research, Thursday night, a score of police constantly hovered about the building, inside and out, and on 23rd street, adjoining, ready for any "development."

As in Russia, so in China today, the students are taking a prominent part in the revolutionary struggle, fighting side by side with the workers and farmers.

It is therefore encouraging to see the students of the United States joining with the workers in this dark hour of struggle, I pointed out.

Leonard D. Abbott, in opening his address, paid a tribute to The DAILY WORKER, and the fight that it was making for Sacc Vanzetti.

"I have been particularly impressed," said Abbott, with the declaration carried each day at the top of the first page demanding Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die! and then counting off the days as the hour of death approaches. The DAILY WORKER is waging a courageous struggle for Sacco and Vanzetti."

Not only the words of Leonard D. Abbott, but the applause that followed, went out over the radio, which must have been bad news indeed for George L. Darte, assistant general of the Military Order of the World War, who is one of the leaders in the attack being made on The DAILY WORKER, and who has just sent a telegram of praise to Governor Fuller.

Abbott told of his personal acquaintance with both Sacco and Vanzetti and reviewed the seven-year fight that had been made to save them from death in the electric chair. He told of the revulsion in the mind of the intellectual world against the injustice that had been done to those workers, which has brought protests from such men as Anatole France, Romain Rolland and H. G. Wells and a host of others.

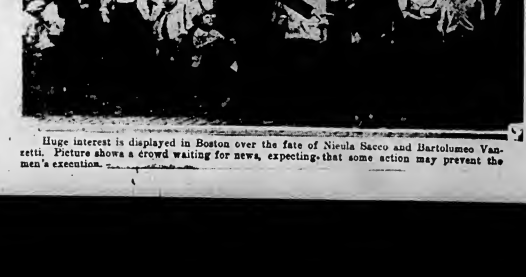
Attorney Hays made a brilliant attack on Governor Fuller's decision. He thought that the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti, however, was sealed, and that nothing could be done to save them from death next week. The enthusiasm of the audience, however, was catching and he was soon compelled to enter the spirit of the occasion.

At one point in his address, a worker in the audience called out:

"But what are you going to do about it?"

"What are you going to do?" asked Hays.

"I'm going to strike!" declared the worker.



"All right, go ahead and strike, and I'll strike with you."

The final words of Celia Polisuk, the student, was: "Keep up the fight!"

But, with the conclusion of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, no matter what its outcome, capitalism is developing an enemy of no mean proportions among the students of America.

WOMEN

TRADE UNIONISTS' WIVES DISCUSS WHAT WOMEN CAN DO TO BUILD MEN'S UNIONS

By HELEN G. NORTON

KATONAH, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Thirty trade unionists' wives, gathered at Brookwood Labor College for a week's conference, concluded that women's auxiliaries could do these things: Develop common interests with the men; build organizations that will not slump after a strike is over; develop joint activities with auxiliaries of other unions; preach labor in other women's organizations; build loyalty by actual service to individuals and families in special need; have enough social activities to warm the hearts and keep the organization active and familiar; plan for educational work; get together for the organization of teachers and office workers and create a home atmosphere friendly to labor.

The wife who won't take an interest in her husband's union activities and the husband who snubs his wife if she does were both severely scored. "We need a union home, not merely a union man," someone said.

Auxiliary meetings should devote less time to floor work and seeing which committee can furnish the best refreshments, and more time to studying labor problems, the women decided. Company unionism, women in industry, wages, labor legislation, economics, and the public school system were listed as projects for study by Theresa Wolfson, author of "Women Workers and the Trade Unions."

The position of women in industry today was reviewed by Mary Anderson, director Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor. She emphasized the need for organizing women workers and scored hard-shelled labor unions which refused to organize the women in their industries, pointing out that so long as women worked for lower wages, the men's jobs were not safe.

The women at the conference represented auxiliaries of machinists in railway shops, automobile factories and shipyards, lithographers, carpenters and postal clerks. They came from as far north as Montreal and New Brunswick, as far south as Virginia, and as far west as Detroit and Chicago. The institute was sponsored jointly by the educational department of the machinists' auxiliary and Brookwood Labor College.

AUTO MAGNATES START MAKING DETROIT A "SHE-TOWN"

DETROIT, Aug. 7 (FP).—Because women can do the semi-skilled work of running punch presses and drills in the auto factories, men are being laid off to join the mob of unemployed Detroit workers. Women are given the jobs because the prevailing wage for them is 20 to 40 cents an hour lower for the same work. Detroit is beginning to take on the aspects of a "she-town" in which the woman works out and the man looks after the kids.

The Ford Worker, published at 1067 Grand River Ave., by radical workers in the Ford plant, carries in its July 15 issue a letter from an American-born Ford employe who had been on the Ford payroll 6 years, getting interest so on a day. But work got scarce and in the spring he was laid off indefinitely. Unable to find work elsewhere to maintain his wife and 3 children he finally consented to have her look for a job. He writes:

"She was luckier than I was. She got a job running a drill press for 40 cents an hour. She could do the work as well as I could as the company hired her because she was cheaper. If she had refused it some other woman would have taken it. So I stay home and send the kids to school. Farm all about this great land of the free."

CO-OPERATIVES

AFRICAN CHIEFS FORM CO-OPERATIVES; FLOOD OUTRAGES; OTHER NEGRO NOTES

Stephenson Bribed Negroes Too.

D. C. Stephenson, ex-K. K. K. Grand Dragon of Indiana, suffered his checks about freely. The investigation now going on has uncovered publicity in the police sheet to influence favorable appointments and the election of Gov. Ed. Jackson. The Ledger has since gone out of business.

Chicago Negroes Want Unions.

The Committee for the Promotion of Trade Unions among Negro Workers has been formed in Chicago.

African Chiefs Form Coops.

African chiefs on the west coast of Africa have formed co-operative societies for the orderly marketing of their tropical products. W. Tete-Ansa from Africa has been in this country for some weeks to make arrangements for shipments to American. West Africa has been dealing with London, but the representatives of the co-operatives are seeking a wider market for cocoa, palm oil and mahogany.

Forced to Withdraw Obnoxious Clauses.

The Herzog government was hard pressed by labor members of the South-African parliament that was forced to withdraw the so-called sedition clauses in the Native Administration bill now before the House. The Industrial and Commercial Workers union, a native organization, protested the measure also, along with the South African Labor Party. Arthur Barlow, labor member, warned parliament, that the South African Labor Party would stand by the native union, as it was part of the organized labor movement of the world. The Industrial and Commercial Workers are now affiliated with the Amsterdam International. Kadalie, the leading Negro labor organizer of the native union, is in Europe, his checks about freely. The investigation now going on has uncovered publicity in the police sheet to influence favorable appointments and the election of Gov. Ed. Jackson. The Ledger has since gone out of business.

Militarism in Haiti.

The conditions of terror from the occupation by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom some months ago to study conditions in Haiti has led to its report. It says, in part, states that the economic finds the condition in the island somewhat improved. It goes on to recommend the appointment of an official commission to study transition arrangements. That the island be demilitarized. That non-commissioned officers be replaced by Haitians or specially commissioned marine corps officers. That the Protocol of 1915 be modified. That American banks be required to pay market rate of interest on deposits. That the Rockefeller Foundation continue its welfare work. And finally that after the election of a parliament responsible to the people another commission be appointed. The committee that went to Haiti were Emily Balch, Frances Zeita Baker, Addie Waite Hunt, Charlotte Atwood, Paul Douglas and Mrs. H. S. Watson.

Outrages on Negroes During Flood.

Reports of the outrages and murders against Negroes in the flood area, the Mississippi Women's Committee on Racial Relations of Jackson, Miss., have appointed a subcommittee to investigate also, along with the Arkansas mob law. It will work for better school facilities throughout the state and will help the colored children's home in Jackson. A home for delinquent Negro boys. To show its good faith the committee will ask several Negro women to serve on its body.

TEXTILE WORKERS HAVE CO-OP STORES

Cooperative stores of a number of New England textile workers' groups are described in the current issue of Co-operation, organ of the Cooperative League. Most of the groups are of Italian workers and some have had stores for as long as 20 years. The cooperative have survived several strikes and the unions which plan to only disappear again.

Stafford Springs, Conn., has one group, where with 140 members. It has a wool mill loom of 7,000. Winchendon and Lawrence, Mass., have textile workers' coops. Barre, Vt., has quarry workers. There are others in Saxonville and Plymouth, Mass., Leominster, Mass., and Portsmouth, N. H. and New Haven, Conn.

Four Singing Societies Help Workers Movement

There are four singing societies in Los Angeles the Lyed union, Hungarian, Ukranian and Jewish. They are always ready to donate their services to the Left Wing. Besides there are the Freiheit Mandolin Orchestra, Wagner Junior Orchestra, and the Freiheit Ludenl Club.

The Freiheit Gesangs Ferein is one. They meet every Monday night at the

LEATHER WORKERS HEAR SHIPLACOFF TAX GRAFT STORY

Denouncing the attempt that the right wing administration of the Fancy Leather Goods' Workers' Union will make at Cooper Union tonight to impose a $60 tax on the membership, the Executive Committee of the Trades Union Educational League of the union has issued the following statement:

"The Shylocks of the Fancy Leather Goods workers are attempting by hook or by crook to steam-roller through a holdup proposition of a $60 tax on the membership.

"The Shiplacoff-Wolinsky outfit has not learned anything from the reception that it received at the hands of the membership at the last meeting. This corrupt outfit is not prepared to give up its dream of a $20,000 graft from the membership.

Turn Down Proposition.

"Last Thursday's meeting held at the Rand School, which was called for the purpose of jamming through the tax recommendations, has shown that the straw Napoleon Shiplacoff with his vicious attacks on the left wing, can no longer confuse the minds of the workers. Thus when the great phraseologist proposed his $60 tax he was answered by jeers and laughter. The Shiplacoff-Wolinsky gang seeing that it was beaten, called off the meeting.

"At the night meeting the Shiplacoff gang hopes to fare better. It is coming better prepared and is determined to defy the membership which is virtually unanimous in its opposition to the outrageous tax.

"It is certain that the mass of workers will come to this Cooper Union meeting and reject the cut-throat proposition to lift $60 from each union members.

Arbitration the Bunk, Men Find as Chicago Car Companies Parley

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Chicago street car men who agreed to submit their demands for wage increases to arbitration are learning again that so long as the workers parley with the bosses they will be tricked, cheated and exploited.

Dissatisfaction exists everywhere with the concession made to the Chicago Surface Lines by which the insurance demands of the unions are to be construed as equivalent to wage increases in proportion to the cost to the company, if granted by the arbitrators. It illustrates the contention of the trade unionists that opposes company welfare schemes on the ground that "you never get something for nothing from a corporation." They say that what the companies give in pensions, insurance and alleged good times at picnics and dances is more than counterbalanced by reduced cash wages. The arbitration agreement of the street-car men confirms this view.

No progress has been made in the hearings for higher wages because of the illness of Kickham Scanlan, the arbitrator chosen by the union.

SHOE WORKERS DISTRICT COUNCIL EXPOSES UNION-WRECKING GANG IN CONTROL OF GENERAL OFFICE

In order to familiarize the rest of the workers in the shoe industry with the recent wholesale expulsions carried out in the New York district by the Fitzgerald-Nolan machine from the general council of the Shoe Workers Protective Union, the District Council, whose charter was revoked as the first step in the actual wrecking of the organization, has issued the following statement to the membership of the organization, which is a damning indictment of the union-wreckers in the organization who pose as labor leaders:

To all locals and members of the Shoe Workers Protective Union:

Brothers and Sisters:

You have undoubtedly heard that our charter has been revoked by the General Council, also the charters of locals 55, lasters and wood heelers; 51, fitters; 55, felt slipper workers; and 68, children's shoe workers. These locals have declared their intention to back up the District Council. In this statement we are presenting our side of the case for your consideration.

Why Have We Been Expelled?

You surely know that the situation for the workers in our industry, particularly in the eastern states is a very bad one. Thousands are out of work as a result of the too long hours we have to work with modern machinery. Many factories are being erected outside the unionized centers, because the bosses never satisfied, want to make still greater profits by operating their plants with still cheaper unorganized labor.

This situation in the industry has produced a condition in the New York market which makes the bosses absolutely ruthless and brutal in the treatment of their workers. Speed up, reduction of wages, lengthening of the hours, is the objective of the employers. Because of these unfavorable conditions in the industry the growing strength of the employers, who are backed by big capital, we have been advocating a program of amalgamation of all existing shoe workers' unions into one industrial union in order to make a united front against the bosses. We have been advocating that the entire strength of the organization be mobilized to organize the enormous army of unorganized workers that surround us so as to make it possible to maintain at least what we have in union shops and what is more important improve our conditions by organizing this great army of unorganized workers.

Knowing that the present general officials to control of the national administration are following individuals playing politics in the organization for their personal gain, instead of being servants of the workers, whose interests they are supposed to represent, our District Council supported one of our able general organizers, Pascall Cogrove for general election. Fitzgerald and Nolan fearing that Cogrove might be elected took him off the ballot and later forced him out of the organization. We, desiring to maintain the unity of the organization, submitted under protest to this outrageous treatment of one of our best representatives.

The employers evidently having been made aware of this attitude of our general officials and profiting by the large number of unemployed, caused by over-production in the industry, began to attack the union demanding wage reduction, provoking us with discharges and lockouts, etc. We fought back and several of the shop strikes were unsuccessful. The rank and file being aware of the action of the general official began to demand that the matter of striking against wage reductions under such circumstances be decided upon in consultation with the crews of each shop. The District Council having exhausted its own finances in the struggle against wage reductions decided to refer the case of the R. W. S. Shoe Co. to the crew of the shop. The crew decided to compromise on a wage reduction of 5 per cent instead of 15 per cent as the boss demanded. The Cutters' Local 66, who in all similar cases in the past had urged a compromise attitude in such cases told the cutters in these shops not to submit to the decision of the shop crew. Whereupon the District Council submitted the whole case to the General Council with a statement that if the General Council will extend support financially and otherwise we are in favor of striking this shop against wage reductions. If the General Council however, cannot support the strike the District Council would be forced to sanction the action of the crew in accepting the 5 per cent reduction.

Meanwhile the Unity Shoe Company discharged 4 workers and upon action of the union to reinstate them the company discharged 18 more. The union being confronted with a direct open shop move in spite of the lack of resources and lack of support from the General Council decided to strike in defense. General President Nolan in the meantime had come to the city and strange to say agreed with the Cutters' Executive, who in the case of the R. W. S. Shoe Company strike, ordered the cutters not to accept the 5 per cent wage cut and advised the council to declare this shop on strike. On the other hand in the case of the Unity Shoe Company, which was on strike due to the discharge of 22 workers, General President Nolan advised the council to call off the strike in this shop and refused to take action against the Cutters' Executive, who had ordered the cutters to scab on the other crafts in the shop. The crew of the Unity shop being thus confronted with the cutters' scabbing on them gave up in disgust. On the other hand the workers of the B. W. S. witnessing the action of the president refused to strike in support of the cutters in their shop and insisted on accepting the 5 per cent wage cut. Thus the general office pitted one craft against the other in order to support the cutters, who had supported them in the last general election.

It became clear that the general officers were not concerned with themselves upon the New York organization were willing to go as far as wrecking it completely even if it meant the splitting of the 20,000 organized workers and another dozen members in paper locals. The District Council therefore appealed to the General Council to have the matter

"Fuller's Decision Illogical", Says Reporter at Famous Trial

vital bearing on the question whether Sacco and Vanzetti were fairly tried. Certainly no reasoning individual, reading the governor's decision, will concede that he has in any way justified putting the two men to death.

"Gov. Fuller says that his inquiry was based on three questions: 1. Was the jury trial fair? 2. Were the accused entitled to a new trial? 3. Are they guilty or not guilty? He contends that the trial was fair, and that the defendants were guilty of the South Braintree murders.

"My belief that the trial at Dedham was not fair is grounded on first-hand knowledge of facts, of which the following are representative:

Thayer Openly Prejudiced.

"Judge Thayer was obviously and outspokenly prejudiced against the defendants and the defense, and hostile toward them before any evidence had been offered.

"Sacco and Vanzetti were tried in an iron cage (shaped like a piano box, with the sloping top open). This, plus the heavy guard always in evidence at the courthouse, gave them the look of dangerous men to the observer.

Incompetent and Questionable.

Witnesses Incompetent and Questionable.

"Identification testimony was given by witnesses both incompetent and of questionable character.

"Framed testimony was given—specifically the pre-arranged answer by Captain William Proctor, gun expert for the prosecution, to get around Proctor's refusal (in private conference with Prosecutor Katzmann) to testify that the mortal bullet came from Sacco's pistol. This is revealed in Proctor's affidavit.

Prosecution Hid Facts.

"Evidence was concealed by the prosecution. It knew from the start that Roy Gould, traveling salesman, was only a few feet from the escaping bandit car at Braintree, that he had a close view of the bandits, and that he had said that he could not identify Sacco and Vanzetti as being among the robbers. Yet the state did not summon Gould, and it did not notify the defense of what he knew. Not until long after the trial was he found by the defense by accident, and made affidavit concerning his knowledge.

Concealed Fingerprint Evidence.

"Finger-print evidence was concealed by the prosecution. Photographs of the finger-prints on the undit automobile were made for the prosecution, but it would never permit the defense attorneys to examine those photographs, and it never introduced the finger-print evidence in court. Why not? If the finger-impressions of Sacco and Vanzetti were not on those doors, was not the defense entitled to the benefit of that fact? If their finger-prints had been on the doors, certainly the state would have used them as evidence.

"Emphasis upon the radical social beliefs of the defendants was used as a bludgeon by the prosecution. It was true, as Gov. Fuller points out, that the defense introduced the radical issue into the trial. It is true also that Judge Thayer advised the defense not to introduce that issue. But his advice on that point was never considered a magnanimous act by the defense.

"Bringing the radical issue in was unavoidable. The defense had to bring in to show why the defendants lied to the police on the night of arrest—lying which was characterized by the prosecution as 'consciousness of guilt,' stressed by Judge Thayer in his instructions to the jury.

Avoiding Persecution.

"They lied that night, each of them testified, because they feared persecution as radicals, and because they wanted to protect their friends, many of whom had been deported, and one of whom—Andrea Salsedo—had died in a plunge from the 14th-story Department of Justice offices here after being held incommunicado two months.

"On the night of arrest the police found In Sacco's pocket the hand-written copy for a handbill which he was about to have printed, announcing a meeting to protest against Salsedo's death, which had occurred two days before. That night the Brockton police did not ask the prisoners about any murders or holdup, but about their social beliefs. 'Are you a socialist, . . . Are you an anarchist? . . . Do you believe in government?'

Surely Innocent.

"In a close study of the whole case beginning not months before the Dedham trial, I have never found any reason to doubt that Sacco and Vanzetti were telling the absolute truth about things, movements on the night of arrest, and concerning their whereabouts on the day of the murders of which they were convicted. The same is true concerning Vanzetti and the Bridgewater affair.

"When Prosecutor Katzmann began his cross-examination of the defendants, he did not ask about the payroll robbery, but began with questions about social doctrines. I remember the metallic tones of his first query to Vanzetti: 'So you ran away to Mexico to dodge the draft, did you?' And then many kindred questions.

"The whole case now rests on circumstantial evidence. Every piece of direct testimony given by prosecution witnesses has been discredited.

No Robbery Evidence.

"No trace of the payroll money was ever found. There was no evidence that Sacco and Vanzetti ever got any of it, no showing that they ever changed their mode of living after the robbery. Their record were clean. They had been steady industrious workers. Sacco had family and a home; he was a skilled shoe-cutter, praised by his employer even though he was known as having radical ideas.

"Vanzetti was known as sober and steady. Numerous witnesses, including the whole police force of Plymouth, were ready to come forward at the time of the trial, to testify to Vanzetti's integrity. My recollection is that these witnesses were not put on the stand because of a trade between the prosecution and the defense; the prosecution agreed that, if the defense would dispense with the character witnesses, it, the prosecution, would refrain from bringing in evidence to show that Vanzetti was already serving a term in prison for an earlier holdup. Presumably however, the whole jury knew about the latter fact anyhow; it had been frequently discussed in the newspapers read in Norfolk county.

Strange Testimony.

"Frank Burke, proprietor of a glass-blowing exhibition, testified that he was within a few feet of the escaping bandit car, facing it; that one of the bandits leaning out fired a shot at him, and that he was certain this bandit was not Sacco and not Vanzetti.

"Gov. Fuller says: 'I see no evidence of prejudice in Judge Thayer's conduct of the trial. That he had an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused after the evidence is natural and inevitable. If Thayer had no prejudice why did he, at the very opening of the trial, begin admonishing the talesmen about loyalty to flag and government, and lauding 'the boys who died upon the battlefields of France.'" And why did he continue those speeches day after day?

"I heard Judge Thayer openly utter a threat against the defense. This I dealt with in detail in an affidavit filed with Gov. Fuller early in May. In that statement I told of a scene in a private dining room in the Dedham Inn, where the judge and the reporters at, on the fourth morning of the trial, Thayer had been made indignant by a statement given out by the Italian consul saying that the Italian authorities had 'complete confidence that the trial will be conducted solely as a criminal proceeding, without reference to the political or social beliefs of any one involved.'

Thayer Hostile to Defense

"The reporters were asking questions. One correspondent, Fred H. Moore, chief defense counsel. Mention of his name aroused the judge's hostility. (This was on the day when a special venire of 175 extra talesmen had been gathered in, and all morning the defense had strenuously opposed the use of any of these talesmen as jurors, on the ground that they had been summoned not from the highways and byways as required by law, but, from special places, such as a May-pur meeting.

"Referring to Moore's objections to special venire, Judge Thayer asked: 'And what do you suppose that fellow wanted me to ask those veniremen? Are you a member of a labor union? Are you opposed to union labor? Are you a member of a secret society?'

"Thayer made a gesture of anger, and went on, saying to the newspapermen: 'Did you ever see a case in which so many leaflets and circulars have been spread broadcast saying that people could not get a fair trial in the State of Massachusetts?'

"As he turned to leave the room he shook his fist and said to the newspapermen: 'You wait till I give my charge to the jury. I'll show 'em!'

"Gov. Fuller says: 'The charge of the judge was satisfactory to counsel for the accused and no exceptions

SOVIET UNION WORKER: "TRY AND GET IT!"

The Railroad Workers, Their Children and Education in the Union of Soviet Republics

NOTE—During his recent visit to the Union of Soviet Republics, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, secured answers from Alexis Anasow, general secretary of the Soviet Railroad Workers' Union, to questions that workers in the United States might have asked if they had had the opportunity. Some of the answers have already been published.

Today, Secretary Anasow tells of the system of education in the Soviet Union and the relations of the railroad workers to it. The question and the answer follows:

LABOR AND EDUCATION IN THE SOVIET UNION.

QUESTION. What is the system of education in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, who fills the higher schools, and what facilities are provided for the workers to get the necessary training for admission to the universities?

Schools Exist For Toilers.

ANSWER. I. Differences in school conditions under czarism and under Soviets:

1. Prior to the revolution, the workers and peasants and their children had very limited facilities of gaining an education in the middle and higher schools. There were schools that were absolutely closed to them (lyceums, institutes, and the like). Now the schools exist for the toilers.

2. All scholasticism and metaphysics has been driven from the schools. Instead of theology, social science is being taught in the schools, thus cultivating in the students a materialistic conception of history.

3. Formerly there was no strictly uniform system of popular education, so as to render it difficult to the children of the working classes to gain access to the higher schools. Now the whole educational system has been so adapted as to afford the utmost educational facilities for the toilers.

4. Formerly universal education was not permitted. Now universal education constitutes the immediate aim of the Soviet government.

5. According to the basic laws of the Soviet Constitution, the schools are based on the following principles:

(a) Separation of schools from the church.

(b) Class privileges in the schools for toilers and their children.

Accordingly, preference of admission to the schools is given to workers and their children; next to peasants and their children, to intellectual workers and their children, and so on.

II. Methods of Teaching in the Schools.

The methods of teaching in the Soviet schools are as follows:

Children between the ages of 8 and 17 pass through the usual education schools, of which there are at present three categories: (a) the four year school (for children between the ages of 8 and 12); (b) the seven year school (for children between the ages of 8 and 15); and (c) the nine year school (for children between the ages of 8 and 17).

These graduating from the four year elementary school may continue in the occupational and technical school, which trains candidates for positions on the junior administrative and technical staffs (assistant station-masters, chiefs of railway depots, etc.).

Those graduating from the seven year school may continue in the technical school which trains candidates for positions on the intermediate technical and administrative staffs (station-masters, assistant district traffic managers, etc.).

Those graduating from the nine year school may continue in the superior technical school which trains railway engineers.

For the purpose of training skilled workers in the various branches, there are:

(a) The factory apprenticeship schools, and

(b) The short term courses.

Along with these there exists also a system of brigade apprenticeship, as an extra-mural form of training skilled workers directly on the job, under the tuition of expert workmen.

Preliminary education covering the seven-year curriculum is required for admission to the factory apprenticeship schools, but as a temporary measure, scholars are admitted also with a lower standard of preliminary education, and in such cases the educational deficiency is subsequently to be made good during the term of tuition in the apprenticeship school

Each technical and occupational school (apprenticeship school, technical school, and higher technical school) has its own specified task—to train specialists for a certain category of work, whilst those graduating from the lower technical school may pass on to the higher technical school. Thus, for instance, the apprenticeship school constitutes the basis of preliminary training for admission to the technical school. From the technical school the graduate may be admitted to the second year of the corresponding higher schools and from the lower technical school to the first year of the same schools.

For the special benefit of workers there were organized: (a) Workers' faculties at the higher schools, with sole admission for workers and peasants having a record of three years industrial life.

The purpose of the workers' faculties is to train workers and peasants for admission to the higher schools.

(b) Evening technical schools for the workers, for the purpose of giving technical and occupational education to workers during evening hours.

(c) Training courses of various kinds, at which the workers are given opportunities to raise their qualifications. The age limit for admission to the technical and occupational schools is 40 years.

The plans and programs of tuition for the technical and occupational schools are worked out by the Department of Education, with active participation by industrial management organs and the trade unions, so as to adapt them to the interests of the respective lines of industry.

These schools are established by the educational authorities, on the basis of requests made by the respective industries.

III. Railway Technical and Occupational Schools, and Their Students.

The highest technical schools for railway workers are: the Moscow Institute of Transport Engineers, and the Leningrad Institute of Ways and Communications.

Both these schools have at present a total of about 3,600 students, of whom about 4 per cent are women. As to social status there are divided as follows:

Workers	49 per cent
Peasants	23 per cent
Children of railway officials and other intellectual workers	28 per cent

In the technical schools the children of workers constitute 60 per cent, the remainder consisting of the children of railway employes.

Altogether in the 23 technical schools with their 30 departments (for the various services, such as traffic management, road maintenance, telegraph, material supply, etc.) there are 113 classes with 4,856 pupils.

In the 45 occupational schools with their 63 departments there are 176 classes with 5,581 pupils.

There are 130 apprenticeship brigades, with 2,815 apprentices.

Training courses for young workers there are 55, with 2,444 students.

Training courses for adult workers there are 29, with 965 adult students.

The Training of Skilled Workers On the Railway Transport.

The training of the necessary staffs of qualified workers on the railways is done by means of:

1. Apprenticeship schools, of which there were on the railways towards the beginning of 1925-26 153 schools.
2. Apprenticeship brigades, 125.
3. Training courses for young workers, 56.
4. Professional (occupational) schools, 48.
5. Professional (occupational) courses, 191.

The method of apprenticeship schools and apprenticeship brigades is applied in the training of the necessary skilled workers for the railway workshops. There are also schools for telegraphists. There are also specialised courses for the various occupations connected with the railway traffic.

The period of instruction in the apprenticeship schools is fom 3 to 4 years. The selection of pupils is made by special selecting commissions, with the participation of the trade union organs. First preference is given to children of railway workers, and only 15 per cent of outsiders are admitted. The age of admission is between 14 and 16.

were taken to it." Contrary to the custom in other commonwealths, Judge Thayer did not submit his intended instructions to the defense counsel in advance of delivery, so that counsel had no inkling of what he would say in his charge until it was uttered.

Defense Declines "Magnanimity."

"Then, when counsel objected to certain paragraphs in the charge (this in conference out of the jury's hearing), Judge Thayer made a show of magnanimity by offering to recall the jury and to re-read those paragraphs and tell the jurors to disregard them because of objections by the defense. Naturally, the defense declined Thayer's offer, because the recalling of the jury for such a purpose simply would have emphasized the points made by the judge in the objectionable paragraphs.

Identification Testimony

"On what kind of identification testimony was the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti obtained?

"Mary Eva Splaine, shoe factory bookkeeper, saw the bandit car at South Braintree escape. She was in a second-story window at or 20 feet away, and she saw the car only in the brief time required for it to travel 25 feet at 15 miles an hour—which is one and one-fifth seconds (her view was cut off by a cobbler shop). Yet she gave a detailed description of the bandit who leaned out from behind the front seat—told his height, weight, color of hair and eyebrows, complexion; described his face as thin, fore-head high, shoulders square; described his left hand, which was two feet or more from his face, on the back of the front seat.

Witness Contradicts Herself

"At the trial Miss Splaine identified Sacco as that bandit. But in the preliminary hearing a year before the trial she admitted under oath that she could not swear positively that Sacco was the bandit. She was positive then that it was he, she contended, because of long reflection on the events of the day. All this will be found on page — of the trial record.

"On page 56 of the stenographic transcript of the trial that Mrs. Splaine said in police court concerning Sacco: 'I do not think my opportunity afforded me the right to say he is the man.'

Could Not Say Sacco in Car.

"Frances Devlin, who saw the escape from the same window as Miss Splaine, also positively identified Sacco at the trial as the bandit who leaned from the car. But she admitted that at the preliminary hearing she had said: 'I don't . . . positively identify Sacco.' She admitted that at the Brockton police station Sacco was compelled to assume features like that of a bandit for identification purposes. Another witness, a salesman, was another 'positive identification' witness. His testimony was discredited by three men to whom he talked a few minutes after the event, when he said that he couldn't identify any of the bandit. It was shown to Judge Thayer, in the absence of the jury, that when Proctor tried to identify Sacco in September, 1920, (when Sacco and Vanzetti were in the courtroom at Dedham for a hearing) Goodridge also was in court in a charge of eavesdropping with friends belonging to his employer.

One Witness Was Absconded

Judge Thayer rejected this evidence because no judgment was entered in the Goodridge case. But Goodridge pleaded guilty to the absconding charge, and his case was filed. Goodridge received a reward of freedom for his willingness to testify against Sacco.

"Lola Andrews, a woman of bad reputation, testified that she was in South Braintree on the morning of April 15, 1920, prior to the time it and that she asked a question of a man who was under the car, apparently fixing it. This man she identified as Sacco. But Mrs. Julia Conley, a woman who was with her at the time, testified that Mrs. Andrews did not speak to the man under the car. A Quincy policeman and others testified that Mrs. Andrews told them she could not identify any of the bandits.

Witness Retracts Retraction

After the trial Mrs. Andrews made an affidavit repudiating her testimony, and subsequently retracted that retraction.

"Mike Levangie, railroad crossing watchman, identified the driver of the bandit car as Vanzetti. But even the district attorney admitted that Vanzetti could not have been driving the car, because various other witnesses had declared that the driver was a light, consumptive-looking man.

Only Evidence Against Vanzetti Doubtful.

"Other persons testified that Levangie said, shortly after the shooting, that he could not identify any of the bandits. Edward Carter swore that Levangie told him that day that the driver was light-complected. Levangie's 'identification' was the only evidence introduced to show Vanzetti's presence at the murder scene.

"Does Gov. Fuller believe that the prosecution acted watchfully in all the handling of the bullet evidence? He says nothing about Captain Proctor's affidavit in his report. Yet in that affidavit Proctor has sworn that District Attorney Katzman tried to get him to testify that the bullet which killed one of the payroll guards came from Sacco's pistol. Proctor refused to Sacco's pistol. Proctor refused to testify thus, and so by arrangement when Katzmann asked Proctor in court what was his opinion on the question whether the mortal bullet could have been fired from the Sacco pistol, Proctor answered: 'My opinion is that it is consistent with having been fired by that pistol.' Thus the gun evidence was turned against Sacco, without Proctor actually having expressed the belief that the mortal bullet was fired from his gun.

Lawyer Bungled Bridgewater Defense.

"The governor touches briefly upon the conviction of Vanzetti for the Bridgewater holdup attempt, pointing out that Vanzetti did not take the stand; that he waived the privilege of telling his own story to the jury, and did not subject himself to cross-examination. There was good reason for that, as Mr. Fuller has been told. Vanzetti did not take the stand because his attorneys, Vahey and Graham, would not let him. They obviously bungled the case in many ways. At that time, too, Vanzetti spoke English badly. But he took the stand at the murder trial in Dedham.

Governor "Believed" Testimony.

"Does Fuller think that the first trial of Vanzetti 'I have talked with the government witnesses who saw the Bridgewater holdup and who identified Vanzetti, and I believe their testimony to be substantially correct.' I believe, with the jury that Vanzetti was guilty and his trial was fair. . . . In the Bridgewater case practically every witness who witnessed the attempted holdup and who could have identified the bandits identified Vanzetti.

"If we are to believe that this Fuller says more in his investigation, comment on the Bridgewater case proves that that inquiry was superficial and inadequate.

"How true is the trial record in the Bridgewater case?

"If a second read it, does he actually [illegible] testimony of Maynard [illegible] Eleven-year-old high [illegible] grader. This boy identified Vanzetti as the shot-gun man to whom he was no closer than 100 feet, even in a fair testimony.

Could Tell Nationality by Way He Ran

"How could he see that a foreigner by the way he ran?

"What sort of a foreigner?

"Other Italian? A Spaniard? An Italian or a Russian run differently from a Swede or a Norwegian?

"What is difference?"

Gun Smoke Thru Building

Lola Andrews testified that she saw a shotgun muzzle protruding from a car window, and that a cloud of smoke came from it. She testified that she saw "fire and smoke from a gun" while she stood in a window of the depot, 75 feet back from Brand Street and 900 feet from Main street where the hold-up took place.

"But she could not possibly have seen the gun smoke from a gun because a twenty house completely shut off an observer in the window mentioned from any view of the crime scene.

Moustache Testimony Changed.

"If you, Fuller read the record, you'll observe the testimony of Benjamin F. Bowles, 'private guard' identified Vanzetti at the trial the shotgun man. Bowles swore at the preliminary hearing that the shotgun man's moustache was 'heavy and bushy.' But presently it became clear that three Plymouth policemen would testify for the defense that Vanzetti's moustache had been trimmed and thinning for years. So the Bowles changed his testimony to [illegible] more that the shotgun man's moustache was 'bushy.'

Bicycle Handled in Suit Procedure.

"How true, Fuller believe Frank A. Harding? He at first stated that the shotgun bandit carried a sawed-off shotgun, according to the Boston Globe of Dec. 24, 1919. But at the preliminary hearing, he testified that the shotgun man had an overgrown [illegible] Chaplin moustache."

Two Killed in Collision

[illegible]AND, N. J., Aug. 8.—Two men were dead today and a twelve-year-old boy [illegible] injured following a collision between a milk truck and a passenger automobile here.

[illegible] Grossman, 24 of Forks, N. J., driver of the truck, was instantly killed and Fred Simeon, 21, riding in the automobile died today in the hospital. Oscar Grossman, Jr. 12, was [illegible] injured.

"Our Only Hope of Life in Comrades Outside", Say Sacco and Vanzetti

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 8.—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti today sent the following message to their comrades thruout the world: "We are unafraid to die Wednesday at midnight for our revolutionary beliefs. But we place our only hope of life in our comrades outside." The message was sent by word of mouth, the prison warden stopping all written communications. Let labor respond with an irresistible nation-wide strike TODAY!

STRIKE! TODAY!

Defeat the Murderers of Sacco, Vanzetti

START MARCH ON BOSTON TODAY TO PICKET PRISON

Demand, "Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!"

Following the huge mass demonstrations that will take place thruout the country following a nation-wide walkout to save Sacco and Vanzetti, thousands of workers will pour into Boston to march before the State House and picket the Charlestown penitentiary containing the death house where Sacco and Vanzetti sit, and the executing chamber where it is planned to put them to death.

Hundreds of prominent labor leaders, authors, professional men will lead the demonstration.

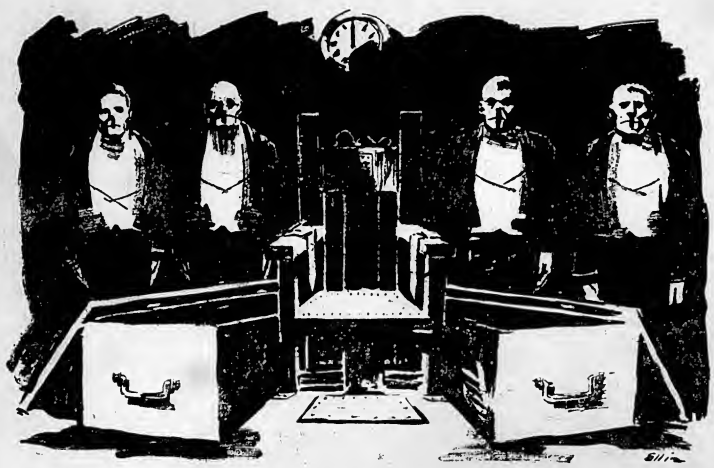
Jane Addams, Upton Sinclair, Heywood Broun, Professor Charles A. Beard, Sinclair Lewis, William Z. Foster are some of the people who have been invited by the Sacco Vanzetti Defence Committee to lead the demonstration.

The committee tells the peaceful marchers to come armed with the inextinguishable faith that, "Sacco and Vanzetti must and shall not die!"

Rose Baron, Secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, 80 East 11th street, in a statement made public late yesterday announced that the Sacco-Vanzetti Defence Committee of Boston, which is the central national organization, has wired an appeal to the New York Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

The telegrams ask that the New York Committee urge well-known New Yorkers and prominent national figures to attend a peaceful demonstration outside the Charlestown Prison on the night of the execution.

The list of names which the Boston Committee urges the New York Committee to get in touch with follows:



Jane Addams, Director of Hull House, Upton Sinclair, novelist, Professor Felix Frankfurter, professor of the Harvard Law School and author of the famous book, "The Case of Sacco and Vanzetti," Professor John Dewey of Columbia, Heywood Broun of the New York World, Professor Charles A. Beard, Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the Nation, Dr. Norman Thomas.

The list continues with the names of Arthur Garfield Hays, prominent attorney, Sinclair Lewis, author of Elmer Gantry," H. L. Mencken, editor of the American Mercury, "Mother" Jones, Miner Workers leader, Carrie Chapman Catt, Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, Dean Roscoe Pound, George Jean Nathan, dramatic critic, Waldo Frank, novelist, Franklin P. Adams (F. P. A.) columnist of the New York World, Judge Ben Lindsey of the Juvenile Court, Denver, Colorado, George Kirchway, former warden at Sing Sing, Frederick C. Howe, Louis F. Post, Floyd Dell, novelist, Sherwood Anderson, novelist, Bruce Bliven, economist for the New Republic, Walter Lippman, editorial writer of the New York World, William Hard, political newspaper correspondent.

Names added later in the day were Carl Sandburg, poet, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, William Z. Foster, head of the Trade Union Educational League.

LABOR DOWNS TOOLS AT 10 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING TO STAY HAND OF EXECUTIONER IN MASSACHUSETTS

Millions to Quit Work Thruout Many of Nation's Great Industries

Hundreds of Thousands Idle In New York to Demonstrate In Union Square

At ten o'clock today millions of workers thruout the country will go out on a nation-wide strike to snatch Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair to which they have been sentenced by the judicial puppets of New England's industrial autocracy.

It is estimated that more than half a million workers in New York City alone will throw down their tools this forenoon in the greatest walk-out the city has ever seen. Millions more thruout the country have already pledged themselves to join the fight to save the two framed-up workers from being railroaded to the electric chair.

MUST OVERCOME OFFICIAL INACTION.

Despite the attitude of the American Federation of Labor officialdom, which has maintained a cowardly silence, when labor leaders in other countries thruout the world have joined in urging a strike to save Sacco and Vanzetti, the rank and file of the American labor movement is responding courageously to the strike call.

Refusing to heed the silence of the A. F. of L. officialdom or the clubs of police, which smashed a huge demonstration on the Boston Commons Sunday, the rank and file of American labor in great numbers has pledged itself to the struggle to save Sacco and Vanzetti.

MANY ORGANIZATIONS FOR STRIKE.

The solid front presented by American labor in its struggle to free the two framed-up workers is indicated by the natures of the organizations sponsoring the strike.

The Workers (Communist) Party, the Socialist Party, the Industrial Workers of the World, the several Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committees, the International Labor Defense, hundreds of unions with no political affiliations, have all announced their intention of joining the monster strike tomorrow to snatch Sacco and Vanzetti from the hands of their capitalist hangmen.

AMALGAMATED READY.

Sydney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America announced yesterday that he had sent out telegrams ordering the 140,000 members of that organization in this city, Rochester, Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities to suspend work for from thirty minutes to an hour today in sympathy with Sacco and Vanzetti.

About 39,000 members of the union are employed in the needle trades in New York City. The strike call was sent out, President Hillman said on a referendum vote of the 200 local unions of the organization.

THE SHOE WORKERS STRIKE.

The New York District Council of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union has issued the following call to its members:

"District Council No. 2, Shoe Worker Protective Union calls upon its members to unite with the tens of thousands of other workers in protest against the infamous decision of Governor Fuller on the Sacco and Vanzetti case.

"Tuesday, August 9th, at 10 a. m. all shoe workers should walk out from the shops and declare a strike for the immediate liberation of our two innocent fellow workers and come to the Union Square demonstration.

"LONG LIVE PROLETARIAN SOLIDARITY"

"Their liberation depends upon the solidarity of the workers"

"SACCO AND VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

"LOUIS TRUBOWITZ, President.

"H. LEVINE, Secretary."

THE JEWELRY WORKERS STRIKE.

The Executive Board of Local 17 of the International Jewelry Workers' Union has issued a statement calling upon all members of the jewelry novelty trade to stop work at 10 o'clock today to protest against the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The statement follows:

"To all members of the International Jewelry Workers' Union, Local 17, and all those who work in the novelty jewelry trade.

Mike Gold Will Report On Picketing in Boston For the Daily Worker

Mike Gold, of the New Masses, writer and poet, has been added to the staff of The DAILY WORKER that is covering the Sacco-Vanzetti case in Boston. He will go with the delegation from the Union Square meeting today to picket the state house and prison in Boston, Wednesday and Thursday.

GAS EXPLOSION IN COAL MINE KILLS; WORK MUST GO ON

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 8.—Four miners were burned, one perhaps fatally, in an explosion of gas in the Stanton mine of the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Company here, today.

All men in the vein in which the blast occurred, were accounted for. Other sections of the mine, where 700 men are employed, were able to continue operations. Gas and dust explosions never occur in properly inspected mines.

The old custom of ceasing work in a mine when a fatal accident occurs has been given up, under the leadership of Cappellini and other union reactionaries.

THAYER DENIES MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

Defense Attorneys Plan to Carry Fight to United States Supreme Court

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—Attorneys for Sacco and Vanzetti prepared late today to carry the case of the two framed-up workers sentenced to die in the electric chair Wednesday night to the federal courts.

All efforts to get a stay in the state courts were exhausted today. The supreme court denied two petitions. One was for a writ of habeas corpus and a stay of execution and the other was for a writ of error calling for a review of facts as well as law in the famous case. When these petitions had been denied the attorneys went before Judge Webster Thayer, the trial judge who sentenced the condemned men, with a motion for a new trial which was refused.

Thayer Denies Trial.

DEDHAM, Mass., Aug. 8. — Judge Webster Thayer, in Norfolk county superior court late today denied a motion for a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Attorney Hill urged Judge Thayer as he sat in the heavily guarded court room to designate some other judge to hear the motion. His request was based on the fact that Judge Thayer himself was prejudiced against the workers because they were radicals.

In Boston prior to this hearing, Judge George A. Sanderson, in state supreme court, had denied two petitions in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. One was for a writ of habeas corpus and a stay of execution and the other was for a writ of error for a review of facts as well as law in the case.

The legal proceedings to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, whose resolve ends at midnight August 10th, will probably be shifted to the federal courts.

Mrs. Sacco Near Collapse.

"I just ask you to designate some other judge to hear the motion for a revocation of sentence and a new trial," Attorney Arthur D. Hill said to trial Judge Webster Thayer, leprous-looking czar who sentenced the two innocent workers to the electric chair.

Mrs. Sacco, near to collapse, as the result of her terrible ordeal, listened as the defense attorney continued.

"No matter," he said, "how carefully you are trained the result is inevitable. Time is short. If your hon-

Los Angeles Workers Go On With Demonstration Though Arrests Multiply

LOS ANGELES, August 8. — While successfully continuing their efforts to arrange a monster demonstration in the Plaza here on Tuesday at 5 p. m., the leaders in this work, and especially the Communists, have been subjected to extreme hindrance and attempts at persecution by the police. Sidney Bush was arrested last night, and the police are threatening that all active Workers Party members will be in jail before the demonstration takes place.

The Central Labor Council at its last meeting passed a resolution calling on all workers to attend the demonstration.

The present state of affairs started with a raid on the Workers Party headquarters two days ago, two arrests, and the confiscation of 500,000 leaflets.

Railroad Men Protest Strike In Argentina For Sacco, Vanzetti

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 7.—Joining the World-wide movement for Sacco and Vanzetti, the railroad workers here have decided to go on strike August 10, the date set for their executions. The train crews will suspend work for 15 minutes, while the workers at the shops intend to abstain from work for 24 hours.

Prisoner Compares Boston Courts to Those of Late Kaiser

Capitalism's Ancient Weapon; Provocation and Dynamite

WHILE we do not know who the persons were that exploded bombs in the subways and at various other places we are certain of at least one thing—they were agents of the capitalist class, paid provocateurs, whose task it is to try to alienate the sympathies of the overwhelming majority of workers from the Sacco and Vanzetti case.

So spontaneous, so widespread was the wave of fury that arose against Governor Fuller, his chosen commission and the rest of the Massachusetts gang conspiring to murder the two innocent workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, that something had to be done to detract attention from them. The bomb and provocation was the reply.

That is the time-worn answer of capitalism. It was the answer to the eight-hour agitation in 1886, when the Haymarket martyrs were legally murdered by the agents of the McCormick and Marshall Field interests in Chicago.

It was the answer of William H. Wood, head of the woolen trust during the Lawrence strike of 1912-13.

Both these notorious acts of provocation are history. No one denies that they were acts of capitalist vengeance. During the life of Wood, the multi-millionaire mill owner, he was proved to have been responsible for the Lawrence dynamitings. Aiding and abetting the game of capitalist class provocation in the subway blasts were the writers on the capitalist press. One of the tabloids came out with the lying headline "Reds Bomb Subways." Even the New York Times editorially sneers at the Communists for blaming capitalism's agents for the explosions. The Times says our branding the blasts as work of provocateurs is "copied from the Russian Soviets."

Long before there were Soviets in Russia, American capitalism had convicted itself of such crimes. It has no regard for human life and will cynically murder even its own servants in order to attain its ends. It murdered a governor of Idaho more than twenty years ago in order to railroad to the gallows Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone. It murdered its own policemen in the Haymarket affair in Chicago. Of what concern is it to capitalism and its reptile press than a few subways riders, for the most part workers, are blasted to bits, if only they can safely murder Sacco and Vanzetti as a ghastly warning to other workers not to dare fight for better conditions in the capitalist slave pens? What are a few lives compared to the illusion of the impartiality of the capitalist courts and capitalist governors?

We unhesitatingly charge that the bombs were exploded by agents of capitalism and enemies of the workers and of the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti. We further demand that these explosions be investigated by commissions with representatives of radical labor and sessions held open to the press and public, in order to ascertain the facts.

Let no worker be deceived or intimidated by these frameups.

Continue the fight for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Mobilize your mass power!

Proclaim the general strike for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Your overwhelming numbers make you invincible.

Act! And Sacco and Vanzetti will be saved!

"I REFUSE TO STAND BEFORE THEM!" JAMES

Philosopher's Nephew Gets 90 Days in Jail

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—Refusing to stand in municipal court when his name was called and refusing to pay a fine totalling $75 for "inciting to riot" and assault upon an officer during a Sacco and Vanzetti demonstration Sunday on Boston Common, Edward Dalton James, wealthy nephew of the late Henry James, novelist, caused a furore today when he took a sentence of 90 days in jail.

James, who spent the night in a dark Bar police station, took a seat in the prisoner's dock when he was led into court. Asked to stand when his name was called he refused saying: "I refuse to stand up before the courts of the laiser and I refuse to stand up here."

No Distinction Between Murderers.

He added, "I will not recognize murderers whether they be judges or a governor."

Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers had been barred from the courtroom.

The prisoner remained in his seat while the charge against him was read. James, who was arrested with three others, flatly refused to pay the fines imposed, he will appeal the ninety day jail sentence.

Denies Slugging Policeman.

He was charged with striking police officer Fred Regan in the jaw while shouting "down with the police." This is denied.

Custer in court this morning faced two charges, first for refusing to obey an officer, second for disturbing the peace. He pleaded guilty to the first charge and the second charge was withdrawn. He was fined $10 which was paid. Many were present, ready to testify against Custer. A throng of sympathizers with the prisoners were barred from the court. The case was handled by the I. L. D.

Mrs. Alice Glendower Evans, ardent Sacco and Vanzetti supporter, furnished bail for Harry Cantor, Alfred Freidman and Klubis Pien; but James was apparently forgotten in the rush and spent the night in jail.

23d Day of Hunger Strike.

At state's prison Sacco today entered the 23rd day of his hunger strike and Vanzetti likewise refused breakfast. Sacco was said by prison officials to be weak, but they were not alarmed.

Sacco and Vanzetti defenders, leaving no stone unturned to save the lives of the two men, today sent a letter by President Coolidge at Rapid City, S. D., asking him to follow "the precedent set by President Wilson and the Federal Government in the Mooney case" and appeal to Governor Fuller to respite the Sacco-Vanzetti executions pending a presidential investigation.

The defense committee's national request for a peaceful march on Boston called attention to the fact that more than 100,000 Americans would travel to Chicago to witness the Dempsey-Tunney fight "come to Boston with a black hand on the sleeve." Read the message.

"FULLER'S DECISION ILLOGICAL" SAYS REPORTER AT FAMOUS TRIAL

John Nicholas Beffel, Trained Observer, Points Out Host of Inconsistencies

Gov. Alvan T. Fuller's decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case is characterized by John Nicholas Beffel, newspaper man who attended the trial of the two laborites at Dedham in 1920, as "illogical and in disregard of many factors which have vital bearing upon the case."

Beffel, who is now a member of the New York World editorial staff, was New England correspondent for the Federated Press in 1920-21, and watched the Sacco-Vanzetti situation at close range for more than a year. He began investigation of the case in December, 1919, reading the official transcripts covering the Vanzetti trial at Plymouth and the preliminary hearing at Brockton.

What Factors Disregarded.

Then he visited the scenes of both crimes, the payroll murders at South Braintree and the payroll holdup attempt at Bridgewater—and various other points which in one way or another were associated with both cases.

"Governor Fuller's decision," declares Beffel, "fails to take cognizance of many factors which have a

Munich Workers Demonstrate

MUNICH, Aug. 7. A Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration held here today by the Communist Party in front of the office of the American Consul general was broken up by the police. Twenty workers were arrested.

Giovanitti Stopped On Boston Commons When He Attempts Speaking

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—When the police stopped Arturo Giovanitti from speaking at the Commons Sunday he had only said "fellow workers" and the police rushed in. "Break it up," shouted Hoefler, and the state officers rode forward with the other police.

"You've said enough," roared Crowley as Giovanitti tried to continue talking from the grass.

"I haven't said anything yet," protested Giovanitti, "wait till I finish talking before you arrest anyone."

"You are talking against the courts," barked the police chief. "Meanwhile the police were milling about and pushing the crowd.

"Tough guys these cops, the fellows who broke the strike of their brother policemen in 1919. They had their orders, permit or no permit, no voice must be raised for the two anarchists till they were electrocuted.

"Break it up," they kept shouting. I heard a young Italian worker yell "Sacco and Vanzetti," and at once two score cops were hitting about trying to find out who had defied them.

The effect of the incident has been electric. As a young man on Boston street put it ten minutes after, "Now I know these fellows didn't have a fair trial."

Szechenyi Crippled On Joy Ride.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 8.—Count Laszlo Szechenyi, Hungarian minister to the United States, was severely injured when his motor car tipped over a precipice near here today and he was buried under the debris. The count's companion, the countess Sendheim, also was badly injured. The Szechenyis are relatives of the millionaire Vanderbilt family.

Washington Committee Sends Fuller Protest

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—Whereas, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, after having suffered persecution for seven years, and,

Whereas—After appealing to the courts for a new trial, they were four times denied, and,

Whereas, As a last resort Governor Fuller was appealed to grant the request for a new trial, and,

Whereas—The Governor sustained the condemnation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Therefore, be it resolved: That we assembled here, Friday, August 5th, at the Typographical Temple, Washington, D. C., do most emphatically condemn the whole proceedings as a crime against two innocent fellow workers, and,

Be it further resolved: That we call upon the officials of the A. F. of L. to call a one day general strike on Sunday, August 7 as a protest against the proposed killing of two innocent fellow workers, and,

Be it further resolved: That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Governor of Massachusetts, the President of the United States, the A. F. of L. and the press; and,

Be it further resolved: That President William Green of the A. F. of L. be requested personally to carry this resolution to Governor Fuller at once.

The above resolution was unanimously adopted by all present.

Protect THE STRONG ARM Fighting for Sacco-Vanzetti

"The DAILY WORKER is waging a courageous struggle for Sacco and Vanzetti," says Leonard D. Abbott, noted writer and editor.

This cannot be said as truly of any other American daily newspaper. The nearer the hour of the execution, the greater is the need for the strong arm of a labor paper, to stand by Sacco and Vanzetti in their fight for freedom.

Yet at this most important and serious moment The DAILY WORKER awaits the summons to the Federal Court, to answer the Grand Jury indictment, which is intended to crush our paper, and remove its stout opposition to the legal murder, which the capitalist class is seeking to perpetrate.

THE GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND therefore becomes an integral part of the campaign to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair. To protect The DAILY WORKER at this time, means to shield the white light of publicity which exposes the black den of reaction, parading under the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, it means to safeguard the powerful dynamo which generating the power of the masses that will yet save Sacco and Vanzetti.

WORLD PROTEST AGAINST MURDER

REPORTS continue to come in of the world wide wave of protest, strikes and boycott of American goods in the struggle against the death sentence imposed on Sacco and Vanzetti. The demonstration in Paris was a success, transportation being injured and all the factories in the suburbs shut down while workers gathered in meetings before them to pass resolutions against the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Other points of principal activity continue to be Argentina and Latin America generally, wherever the labor movement is permitted to exist, England, Germany, the Scandinavian countries, and the Union of Soviet Republics.

MAKE CONSUL SEND CABLE.

PLYMOUTH, England, Aug. 8.—Workers demonstrating out of sympathy for Sacco and Vanzetti, surged before the United States consulate today.

Leaders requested the U. S. consul to send their protest to Washington and escorted him to the post-office to see the cable dispatched.

Afterwards the police cleared as speakers were addressing the crowds and broke up the meeting.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 8.—Swedish socialists and Communists conducted a demonstration here today protesting against the affirmation of Sacco and Vanzetti's death sentence by Governor Fuller of Massachusetts.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—The United States embassy today continued to receive scores of letters and telegrams protesting against the forthcoming execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The worldwide Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations in America continued today to be widely featured in the London newspapers.

British authorities generally do not fear any anti-American violence in this city.

BAVARIAN WORKERS TRY TO STORM U. S. CONSULATE.

MUNICH, Bavaria, Aug. 8.—Hundreds of Bavarian workers and sympathizers gathered in front of the American consulate here and threatened to storm the building in protest against Governor Fuller's decision in the Sacco and Vanzetti case. The police, who were hurriedly called for, dispersed the crowd after a struggle.

Feeling thruout the Reich is strong and the American consulates and embassy are under heavy guard. Floods of telegrams and letters demanding that Sacco and Vanzetti be liberated continue to pour in.

GREEK WORKERS DEMAND SACCO-VANZETTI LIBERATION.

ATHENS, Greece, Aug. 8.—Thousands of Greek workers demonstrated here to protest against the slaying of Sacco and Vanzetti by the capitalist courts of Massachusetts. A telegram asserting the innocence of the two prisoners and demanding their immediate release was sent to Governor Fuller.

WINNIPEG WORKERS PROTEST AGAINST LEGAL MURDER.

WINNIPEG, Canada, Aug. 8.—At two demonstrations here on Saturday and Sunday hundreds of workers protested the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Standing in the drizzling rain the crowds cheered the six speakers who outlined the history of the case and chacterized the decision of Governor Fuller as flagrant class justice.

A resolution declaring the deep conviction of the workers in the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti, victims of a vicious frame-up and travesty of justice by the Massachusetts courts, and calling on the governor to release them, was sent to President Coolidge and the United States Supreme Court.

ARGENTINE WORKERS TIE UP OIL FIELDS.

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 8.—The Argentine railroad workers have joined the strike movement which is organizing a protest strike for Sacco and Vanzetti set for August 10. The trainmen will halt work for fifteen minutes, the shop workers will go out for twenty-four hours.

All activities in the oil fields at Cunodoro Rivadavia have been paralyzed while the authorities are taking extraordinary measures to control a situation that is likely to get out of their hands at any moment.

GENERAL STRIKE IN URUGUAY.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Aug. 8.—A 24-hour general strike of Uuguayan workers went into effect here Monday night as a protest against the judicial murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by the class courts of Massachusetts. All United States buildings are being closely guarded.

BRADFORD UNIONISTS CABLE COOLIDGE.

BRADFORD, England, Aug. 8.—After passing a resolution censuring the action of Governor Fuller in the Sacco and Vanzetti case, a deputation from the Bradford and district trades union council visited the American consul, A. R. Thompson, Sunday. The consul refused to see them or to receive the resolution. The council then decided to cable the protest to President Coolidge.

SOUTH AFRICANS RAISE DEMAND.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Aug. 8.—A cable demanding retrial for Sacco and Vanzetti was sent from a mass protest meeting here.

Washington Forum Bldg. Falls in Ruins; Try to Blame Sacco, Vanzetti

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. A heaven controversy raged today between police and building inspectors over the cause of the collapse Saturday night of the building housing the "Fellowship Forum," a fraternal publication, which has Ku Klux Klan leanings.

Maj. Edwin Hesse, chief of police, said the wreckage was the result of excavation work in the basement.

Joseph S. Vance, general manager of the paper, reiterated his belief that the building was wrecked by enemies of the Forum.

There is also the usual attempt to ascribe the "explosion" to sympathizers with Sacco and Vanzetti.

Warden Refuses to Let Madeiro's Mother Take A Picture of Her Son

BOSTON, Aug. 8. Having no picture of her son, and wishing something to which to remember him, the mother of Celestino Madeiros, doomed to precede Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair, asked permission today to take a snapshot photograph of her son as he stood in the death cell. The warden refused and the New Bedford woman and her daughter left their camera. They were in tears when they departed from the death house.

Half-Day Strike Is Winning Support in Philadelphia, Penn.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. The resolutions unanimously adopted by the delegates of 150 workers' organizations in conference today, demanding a half-day strike for Sacco and Vanzetti on Tuesday, were as follows:

JOIN THE STRIKE!

We, the representatives of said organizations of Philadelphia, Pa., assembled at the Machinists' Temple,

Strongly condemn the atrocious decision of Governor Fuller of the labor haters' brand to murder our comrades Sacco and Vanzetti, for their loyalty to the working class.

Organized labor everywhere must do everything within its power to free those two martyrs of labor, Sacco and Vanzetti.

We solemnly pledge ourselves to extend our energies to the uttermost in behalf of their freedom.

Let Tuesday noon, August 9, be set aside as the time when all labor must quit work throughout the city of Philadelphia as a protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Every delegate here assembled must go back to his respective organization to see that there is a half day strike to begin Tuesday noon goes into effect.

We call upon the Central Labor Union of Philadelphia to see to it that all trades unions of the city respond.

We call upon James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to make this strike country wide in state and country.

We declare that we realize the situation demands the solidarity of all sections of the working class. This only means solidarity labor can show at present in the struggle to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Two Thousand Hear Mother Bloor Talk On Sacco, Vanzetti

CLEVELAND, Aug. 8. Two thousand workers gathered on Public Square in the downtown section last night to protest against the decision of Governor Fuller, confirming the death sentence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

This meeting, called by the International Labor Defense, was the culmination of a series of meetings held throughout the city Saturday morning and continued until late last night.

Mother Bloor Speaks

Mother Bloor, the principal speaker, received a great ovation from the crowd when she took the stand. In her speech she pointed out that the case of Sacco and Vanzetti is by no means unique in the American labor history, but instead is a typical example of the "justice" meted out to workers who dared to challenge the judgment of American capitalism. The speaker declared that only workers' power can bring about the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. She urged workers to take the initiative in the matter and establish a workers' and farmers' government in America, like the brutal frontier bandits who are now in power in Mexico.

The meeting adjourned after passing a resolution condemning Governor Fuller for his brutal refusal to grant the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, and pledging itself to continue the fight for their freedom.

Machinists Pass Resolution

The subscribed sum of $50 by the International Association of Machinists expressed their sympathy with Sacco and Vanzetti and vowed to protest against the unjust decision of Governor Fuller. A statement issued by the local at their meeting last night. The statement also condemned the action of Governor Fuller.

Hundreds of Thousands Down Tools for Sacco and Vanzetti

MANY UNIONS DECLARE READINESS TO DEMONSTRATE ON TUESDAY

"The executive board of Local 17 calls upon all its members to unite with the tens of thousands of other workers in protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. It instructs its members and all others who work in the jewelry novelty trade to stop work on Tuesday, August 9th, at 10 a. m. and declare a strike in protest against Governor Alvan T. Fuller's decision in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti and come to Union Square.

"SACCO AND VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!
"LONG LIVE THE SOLIDARITY OF THE WORKERS!
"I. COHEN, General Secretary."

THE IRON WORKERS STRIKE.

A. Rosenfeld, secretary of the Iron and Bronze Workers' Union, yesterday said that the "workers have been instructed to stop work at 10 a. m. and join the protest strike for Sacco and Vanzetti. All workers are urged to be at Union Square at 4 p. m."

PLUMBERS' HELPERS STRIKE.

The American Association of Plumbers' Helpers issued a statement yesterday signed by C. E. Miller, president, and James F. Walsh, organizer, calling upon all plumbers' helpers to down tools at 10 o'clock today. Also to report at Union Square at 4 p. m. and join the thousands of other workers in raising their voice in protest against Massachusetts "justice."

FOOD WORKERS WILL BE THERE.

The Hotel Workers Branch of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union has called upon all their members to report to union headquarters, 133 West 51st St., at 2 p. m. today. From there they will proceed in a body to Union Square at 4 p. m. P. Pascal Cosgrove, secretary, is in charge of the arrangements.

SOLIDARITY OF WORKERS CAN SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI FROM THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

To the Workers of New York:

On the display of your solidarity today hangs the lives of two innocent members of the working class. Nothing can save our comrades now but a united, massed demonstration aimed at the master class which will convince these judicial murderers that organized labor will take the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti as a relentless and renewed declaration of class war.

Workers of New York! Down tools today at 10 o'clock sharp. Challenge the right of the capitalistic oligarchy to glut their bloodlust with the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Come to Union Square at four o'clock and demonstrate the strength of Sacco and Vanzetti's last court of appeal—the militant vanguard of the working class.

Free Sacco and Vanzetti!
Life, not death to Sacco and Vanzetti!
Down with judicial murder!
Show the strength of the working class.

Signed, Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee,
ROSE BARON, Secretary.

ANTI-FASCISTS TO DEMONSTRATE.

According to Carlo Tresca, secretary of the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, all their branches have been notified to see to it that the entire membership joins today's strike and reports at Union Square at 4 p. m.

FOOD WORKERS TO STRIKE.

The Central Executive Board of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union at last night's meeting passed a motion calling upon all the members of the organization to join today's strike for Sacco and Vanzetti. Local No. 1, of the same union has also passed a similar resolution.

WILL NOT CALL OFF STRIKE.

"Even if Sacco and Vanzetti are given a reprieve, which does not seem likely, we will not call off our plans for Tuesday's protest strike," said Leonarda Frisna, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee yesterday. A similar statement was issued by Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

CLOAKMAKERS WILL STRIKE.

"To all cloak and dressmakers in Greater New York.
"Fellow Workers:

"The reactionary forces of capitalist America are preparing to murder Sacco and Vanzetti. For their devotion to the working class, for their loyalty to the cause of radicalism, Sacco and Vanzetti, after seven years of persecution, are about to die.

"This is a bold defiance of the whole working class of the world. The Massachusetts courts and government officials have deliberately closed their ears to the demands of the workers and have hearkened only to the politicians and the plutocrats.

"Will you workers let Sacco and Vanzetti die? Will you sit quiet and let this criminal deed be committed without a protest?

"Sacco and Vanzetti must be saved, and only the united forces of labor can prevent the carrying out of this terrible crime.

MUST DEMONSTRATE.

"Labor must demonstrate its protest; it must demand freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. The New York Joint Board of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union calls upon all cloak and dressmakers to leave their shops at 10 a. m. on Tuesday morning, August 9, for a one-day strike for their brothers. All workers are urged to join in the protest demonstration at Union Square at 4 p. m. on Tuesday afternoon, where prominent labor unionists will voice the demand that the prison doors be opened.

"Workers the world over are protesting on this day. The cause of Sacco and Vanzetti has become the symbol of the injustice meted out to the working class everywhere.

"Sacco and Vanzetti must not die! Make this cry a reality. They must be freed!

"NEW YORK JOINT BOARD INTERNATIONAL LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS' UNION.
"LOUIS HYMAN, General Manager."

FURRIERS ISSUE CALL.

"To all fur workers working in the shops of the Associated Fur Mfrs., the Fur Trimming Mfg. Assn., and the Independent fur shops.
"Fellow Workers:

"The plutocracy of America is ready to carry out its brutal sentence of class justice against Sacco and Vanzetti. After torturing them for seven years in a most inhuman fashion, capitalist reaction is now preparing to send Sacco and Vanzetti to death. The only crime committed by Sacco and Vanzetti is that they have been loyal to the workers and fought for the workers' interests.

"The attempt to put Sacco and Vanzetti to death is a provocation against all workers and a challenge to the entire working class movement.

"Sacco and Vanzetti must be saved from the cruel hands of the capitalist executioners!

"Sacco and Vanzetti must be saved from the death hands of American capitalists.

"Only the decisive action of the workers can now stay the hand of the executioner.

LAY DOWN TOOLS

"The New York Joint Board of Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15 of the International Fur Workers' Union of U. S. and Canada calls upon all fur workers to lay down tools and come out on strike Tuesday morning, August 9th, at 10 o'clock and join in the protest demonstration at Union Square at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

"We call upon all fur workers to join the workers all over the world in a mighty protest and demand for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, the victims of class vindictiveness and brutal class justice.

"Fur workers, save your innocent brothers from the bloodthirsty capitalists.

"Demonstrate the mighty will of the workers.
"Save Sacco and Vanzetti!
"JOINT BOARD FURRIERS' UNION, LOCALS 1, 5, 10 and 15.
"INTERNATIONAL FUR WORKERS' UNION U. S. & CANADA.
"B. GOLD, Manager."

WORKERS' COOPERATIVE JOINS.

After listening to a speech by Edward Royce, the several hundred workers of the Workers Cooperative house, the Bronx, yesterday voted to join today's strike for Sacco and Vanzetti. A. Severino presided.

WORKERS CLUB CALLED OUT.

The Vegetarian Workers Club has issued a call for all of its members to go on strike.

FURRIERS WILL BE THERE.

The Shop Chairmen's Council of the Furriers' Union has gone on record for "down tools" at 10 a. m. today as a protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. They also call upon all fur workers to be at Union Square at 4 p. m.

PREPARING A NEW MOONEY CASE

Apparently alarmed at the great surge of public sympathy for the innocent Sacco and Vanzetti, almost in the arms of the electric chair, the rulers of America, with characteristic disregard for human life, have set out to counteract that sympathy with some new "Red plots." The first step is to blow up a couple of subway stations. Photo above shows wreckage in one of them—a couple of thousand dollars damage—cheap propaganda at that. The second step is to accuse "Boston radicals associated with the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. The third—a new Mooney case.

THE WORKERS PARTY MEMBERSHIP DISCUSSES CONVENTION PROBLEMS

Political Committee Resolution Endorsed by St. Louis, Buffalo, Cleveland, Boston, Minneapolis, Waterbury, Conn., and West Frankfort, Illinois.

In the discussions at membership meetings of the Workers (Communist) Party held Sunday, the declaration of the Political Committee on the resolution of the Communist International on the American question was endorsed in all cities from which reports were received. They include St. Louis, Buffalo, Cleveland, Boston, Minneapolis, Waterbury, Conn., and West Frankfort, Illinois. The vote was as follows:

Sacco's Father Urges Son's Innocence as Day Of the Execution Nears

TORRE, MAGGIORE, Italy, Aug. 8.—"My son is innocent," declared the father of Nicola Sacco and, he adds, "they will certainly not put my son to death."

Sabino Sacco, brother of the prisoner, told how Sacco was arrested just before he was to have returned home to Italy.

"The whole trial was a frame-up," Sabino said, "It was in retaliation for the strike of iron workers which Vanzetti and my brother led and which the police were unable to break up for six months."

Thayer Denies Motion For New Trial

or has the power for a stay of sentence, I ask you to use it, any man has a right to raise any legal defense and have his motions acted on by an impartial tribunal."

Hill then opened his legal guns against the prejudice of Judge Thayer, Reading rose to object to that line of argument.

Hill turned like a flash and shouted "Mr. Reading, I've been tolerant of your interruptions. I submit I have the right and terrible responsibility on my shoulders without further interruption from you."

Reading said Hill was not confining himself to the statute involved.

Hill reported that "with consent of court, I propose to argue in this manner." He then resumed his argument.

Thayer Still Bloodthirsty.

Judge Thayer returned to his original question as to the legality of the motion that was presented after sentence had been imposed. Hill, his jaw set, both hands extended in front of him, resting on the desk of the clerk of court, snapped.

"Is it possible that there is no legal power to grant reprieve, when a man is in the death chair, even if newly discovered evidence shows him to be innocent?" Hill snapped, "surely a man is not as good as dead the moment sentence has been passed on him."

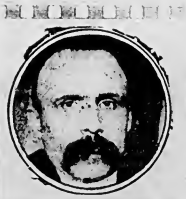
"I still contend your honor has the right to act on this motion," Hill continued. "I think I have the right to be heard on a motion to have a justice other than you act on the motions, because of flame of alleged prejudice which have been charged to you?"

A court officer tip-toed across the courtroom, carrying a glass of water for Mrs. Sacco.

The hearing was opened with all courtroom doors locked and with armed guards at the entrance. No person was permitted to pass the guards.

Defense counsel came from Boston where Judge George A. Sanderson of supreme court had denied a stay of execution, a writ of error and a writ of habeus corpus.

Several flashes occurred in the first few minutes of argument between Attorney General Arthur K. Reading, representing the Commonwealth and Attorney Arthur D. Hill, chief defense counsel.



Judge Thayer cut off Hill's address and told him that arguments would be based on statute 50s, General Laws of 1922, which says that a justice of the superior court shall have no jurisdiction on motions for a new trial after sentence is imposed.

After Sacco received a chair on one side of the courtroom and went throughout the proceedings, State detectives occupied vantage points on all sides.

Sanderson Also Hardboiled.

Judge George A. Sanderson in state supreme judicial court earlier in the day refused to grant a stay of sentence, refused to issue a writ of habeus corpus and refused a writ of error.

Attorney Hill had based his plea on the prejudice of trial Judge Webster Thayer and in framing their supreme court ruling motions for a reopening of sentence with new trial were before Judge Thayer before for the eighth time.

WUHAN REACTION "REORGANIZING" PARTY BY FORCE

Fear Influence of Communists Upon Masses

HANKOW, Aug. 8.—The counter-revolutionists who have with the support of the military adventurers and servants of imperialism seized control of the Wuhan government are using that power to stifle opposition within the Kuomintang in preparation for the plenum of the Central Committee scheduled for August 15.

"Reorganize" Sections.

All sections of the Kuomintang in Hunph province have been "reorganized" by the reactionaries supported by the military. Persons notorious for their anti-Communist views have been appointed to all posts. The Wuhan government is also reorganizing in the most hurried manner the different sections of the labor and peasant unions in preparation for the plenum, in an effort to exclude Communists from attendance because they fear the influence of the Communists upon the masses who strongly resent the turn of affairs that, due to the treachery of the Wuhan clique, has placed the Kuomintang at the mercy of the military machines. As far as the rank and file are concerned they support the Communist who advocate driving the enemies of the revolution out of the Kuomintang, but their unarmed condition precludes their immediate action.

Fear Peasant Uprisings.

The military machines are draining the whole country and the burdens falling heavily upon the workers and peasants only adds to their fury. It is only a question of time when the peasant revolution will be unleashed, sweeping before it the military adventurers.

A condition is approaching when the generals will no longer be able to feed their armies, then will exist conditions that will "drain place" the movement under the leadership of the Communists who are the recognized leaders of the revolution.

Against the POISON GAS Attacks

TERRIFIED by the fury of the working class against the outrageous decision of Governor Fuller, which authorizes the legal murder of our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, the ruling class now seeks to hide its guilt by the time-tried method of provocative bomb scares, engineered by agents provocateur.

The capitalist explodes its barrage of poison gas, attempting to create a wave of hysteria against those who are fighting for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Amid all this clamor, there is one cool and collected force which daily hammers home the truth of the case, and which daily wins new mass support for the convicted men.

That is the Daily Worker.

The drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker is the most effective way to neutralize the poison gas attack.

It is the most [illegible] to build [illegible] Sacco and Vanzetti's most effective champion, the Daily Worker.

Other Massachusetts Judges Join Thayer, Fuller and the Murder Commission.

Judge Webster Thayer has for the eighth time denied a motion for a new trial in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti. This malignant fiend, whose prejudiced was so glaring that even the commission of learned men chosen to whitewash the conspirators who plotted to murder these two victims of one of the most foul frame-ups in history, pointed it out in their decision.

Farcial in the extreme was the action of Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall of the superior court of Massachusetts who selected Thayer to pass upon his own prejudice. This was adding insult to injury and shows again the cynical contempt for the opinions of the vast majority of the population of the civilized world. The only opinions revered by the Massachusetts judiciary is that of the murderous, decadent Back Bay codfish aristocracy of Boston; only these depraved swine are considered by the Fullers and the Thayers and to hell with the opinion of all others.

Yesterday morning another judge added his name to the list of would-be assassins. That was Judge George A. Sanderson of the state supreme judicial court who refused to grant a stay of sentence, issue a writ of habeas corpus or issue a writ of error when presented with facts regarding the known prejudice of Thayer.

Nothing other than this outrage could be expected from the kept judges of Massachusetts. They have unanimously refused to stay the hand of the executioner. This latest exhibition of fiendishness should spur the workers of the United States and other countries on to more militant and determined action against the carrying out of this execution. But a few hours remain in which to show by its mass power that the workingclass will not permit these victims of capitalism to be sacrificed as a warning to other workers not to dare to challenge the right of the mill owners to exploit their slaves even beyond the limit of human endurance as they do in the benighted state of Massachusetts.

Let the answer of the workers to the whole gang of prostitutes upon the Massachusetts bench be mass strikes and a militant fight to liberate Sacco and Vanzetti.

Mr. Dawes Announces His Candidacy.

Vice President Charles G. Dawes, Chicago banker, labor hater, organizer of fake patriotic societies and notoriously connected with the Lorimer slush-fund scandal in Illinois, is a candidate for president of the United States. He announced his candidacy at Buffalo during the ceremonies dedicating the new international bridge between the United States and Canada.

It is true that Dawes did not, in so many words, proclaim himself a candidate. But his speech criticising the Geneva naval conference and proclaiming against naval competition between the two countries was the best possible method of announcing his desire to become the republican candidate for president.

It is a typical shyster political speech which can be inter preted favorably by either the pacifists or the militarists. He does not object to ships that are beneficial in strengthening the imperialist flotilla of the United States navy, but he objects to the particular form of competition he imagines may result from the Geneva fiasco:

> "If in their respective programs, under the principle of equality, the United States requires heavy cruisers which Great Britain does not need, there is no excuse for inaugurating a competition under which ships will be built which neither of them need."

Dawes' speech is very significant politically. It emphasizes the suspicion that he is the favorite candidate of a very substantial element in the republican party. That Frank O. Lowden is not to be considered a serious contender is obvious in view of the notoriety attached to him when his lieutenants were caught buying votes in the state of Missouri during the 1920 campaign. The republican machine didn't dare accept him then—and he was second choice after the elimination of Major General Leonard Wood. Certainly the bosses of republicanism who get their orders from Wall Street will not accept him today—or tomorrow. Lowden is a stalking horse for Dawes. He represents the same middle west interests that made Dawes a national political figure, and will receive his reward as a member of a Dawes cabinet.

Mr. Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, is an active candidate, but his chances are slim because of the hatred for him in the middle west. The farmers have not forgotten his price-fixing on wheat during the war when the industrial and financial profiteers were realizing enormous profits from their unbridled price-boosting. His exploits in the flood crisis in the South make Hoover's name despised in that section. This latter is not, however, a matter of first rate concern to the republicans, anyway.

Altho the favorite candidate of the Wall Street gang of pirates, Hoover can hardly be counted upon to make an impressive campaign.

Dawes is the most logical candidate at this time because of the fact that he is a political bridge between Wall Street and LaSalle Street. His services to the House of Morgan in helping impose the plan that bears his name upon Germany are undisputed. At the same time he, himself, is a LaSalle Street banker. He has openly come out against the veto of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill; because of its political effect upon the farmers' vote. He now appeals to the middle class. His Wall Street affiliations will be placed in the background so that in case everything goes well for him and he gets the nomination he can appear as the champion of the middle class and the farmers.

When in office, of course, he will serve his masters and the government will remain, as before, the government of Wall Street.

The farmers should not be fooled by any of the crude tricks of the old party politicians. Their only hope is a class party that will defend their interests as opposed to the Wall Street gang. Such a party must unite the two great producing groups, the workers and farmers. That alone is the way to fight against their oppressors.

Behind the Scenes of American "Public Opinion"

Chicago Tribune Buys Forgeries In Germany and Publishes Them In U. S.

By S. BORKSEVITCH.

THE Moscow trial of the famous forger of Soviet documents, Druzhilovsky, provides interesting and sensational material about the machinations of bourgeois governments and different groups offended by the October Revolution. These documents are intended to hamper the improvements of inter-relations between the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and the United States of America. Druzhilovsky's first forgery was made by order of the Berlin agent of the Polish General Staff, Paterkovsky, and contained instructions for the preparation of elections in the executive committee of the Profintern." It was addressed to the "Executive Committee of the United States of America."

This forgery, intended to aroused public opinion in the United States against the U. S. S. R., gave instructions now to organize elections of the executive committee and in an explanatory note on one of the points it was stated that the Executive Committee of the Comintern ratified the assignment of 40,000 dollars to Comrade Reichenberg as the first monthly instalment, beginning with January 1925) of 25,000 dollars to cover the needs of the Party and that Comrades Barbengast, Foster and Stoklitsky are put in charge of the money." The forgery was signed by Kolaroff and Stewart.

THE Polish spy Patserkovsky and Druzhilovsky with this document to the American Consul in Berlin, and to Druzhilovsky's old friend, Gum, a Russian officer.

Gum, on seeing this "document" sent Druzhilovsky with a letter of recommendation to an American journalist, Seldes, in the Berlin office of the Chicago Tribune.

The latter called Druzhilovsky's attention to the fact that Reichenberg's name was not properly written (Ruttenberg) in the forgery, but Druzhilovsky declared that it is the same person and showed him another forgery on a notepaper of the official government organ of the U. S. S. R., which he had received from the Russian detective bureau stating that the money sent to the Communist Party of the United States is despatched in the Comintern to Ruthberg-Ruthenberg."

Stoklitsky also had never been in the American party, having returned to Russia after Foster came into the Party. Hence they never could have been on any sort of commission together.

At the bottom of the telegram Druzhilovsky added that the "Izvestia" office is a "branch of the Executive Committee of the Comintern."

SELDES paid Druzhilovsky for the "document" and published it in the Chicago Tribune of February 15, 1925. Simultaneously the document was also published in the New York Times of the same date.

Druzhilovsky sold these documents for 100 dollars also to an American office on New Wilhelm Strasse No. 8, which gathers all kinds of information for the United States, and for 50 dollars to an employee of the American Consulate, George Meyer, a former Russian officer.

Druzhilovsky could sell this so many times because he used his documents on condition that his money be returned them immediately after they had taken down photographic copies.

Apart from these documents Druzhilovsky prepared forged instructions of the Executive Committee of the Comintern, on notepaper prepared in his own apartment house to "the American Ambassador of the United States" in which the Comintern thanks the "Ambassador" "for his successful campaign in favor of the recognition of the U.S.S.R. by the United States of America;" it also states that 50,000 dollars have been assigned for secret expenditure. The instructions also pointed out the necessity of taking measures "to prevent a deterioration in the personal relations between Senator Borah and Coolidge, President of the United States, pointing out that the "physical elimination of Warren who was advanced by Coolidge to the post of Secretary of Attorney may help Coolidge in his foreign policy which is favorable to the U. S. S. R."

IN the same forgery it is stated that "Petkovsky, Soviet Ambassador in Mexico has to inform some Bananic, that a credit account has been opened for her to the amount of 20,000 American dollars."

The forger made it his aim to discredit in the eyes of American public opinion the Soviet Union which allegedly supports and finances, fiesh and they tore out his fingernails. When the old man began to weaken under the torture they executed him.

Party of America which is bought with Soviet gold.

The content of the document, according to Druzhilovsky, was dictated to him by Gum, an employee of the American embassy in Berlin.

Druzhilovsky made another forgery, also under instructions of the same Gum, "an instruction of the Executive Committee of the Communist International to the Communist Party of America concerning its reorganization."

A forgery of no less interest was manufactured by Druzhilovsky by order of an employee of the New York Herald named Shaplin, alias Kaplan. This gentleman ordered a document about the sales of diamonds in America by the Soviet Government through the Comintern." Druzhilovsky forged the document under Shaplin's instructions in the form of instructions of the Executive Committee of the Communist International to some fictitious controlling organs about investigating whether proper deductions have been made from the sale of diamonds in America for the agents of the Comintern.

That document was also sold to the American Office on Neue Wilhelm-Strasse No. 8.

All American forgeries were translated by Gum into English. Gum took down copies and handed them over to the United States Ambassador; Druzhilovsky then sold them to representatives of the American press and to the Information Bureau. The money which he received was shared by the whole clique.

It is difficult to enumerate in a newspaper communication the mass of falsified documents which Druzhilovsky and his friends sold to the American Embassy in Berlin, which were produced by order of dubious American journalists and correspondents. One thing is certain and that is that the sensational disclosures made at Druzhilovsky's trial showed clearly by whom and how world public opinion is moulded and particularly the public opinion of the United States about the U. S. S. R."

The trial of the forger of diplomatic documents which caused inestimable harm not only to the Soviet Union, but to the labor movement of various countries, clearly showed how forgeries are produced in the various countries. It lifted the veil which concealed the dirty work of bribery by several spy agencies to disrupt the peace of the world and to involve humanity in new wars and disasters.

It revealed the sources of the famous "Zinoviev letter" and the Bulgarian forgeries. It is in the interests of the broad masses of humanity to stop the dark activities of the hideous, sneaking scoundrels who found an asylum in the capitalist countries after the world war.

"Crush the Infamy"

BECAUSE they dared to dream of a better system of society, and, what is more, because they dared to translate their dreams into words and acts, Sacco and Vanzetti are to be shrivelled to death in a Massachusetts electric chair on August 10th.

AFTER seven years of unimaginable torture, after innumerable false hopes and starts for the road of freedom, Governor Fuller has slammed his bloody fist into their faces and irrevocably said, "Die."

THE world of intellect has pleaded with the Massachusetts legal hierarchy for their lives. In vain. The militant vanguard of the workingclass has protested and demanded that their comrades might live. Also in vain. Eminent jurists, thinkers, and writers have begged that they be returned to the class which bore them. But Governor Fuller has said, "Die."

REVOLUTIONISTS the world over have demanded that these victims of the class war be surrendered, but Fuller has hanged a blood-stained ear to their pleas.

THE fighting, thinking youth of the world have shouted, "Let them live" and four old men, senile and crafty, have muttered from out of the dust-laden corners of their safety-holes, "Let them die."

AN insatiable blood-lust on the part of the ruling class, is one of the virulent symptoms of a society ready for the surgeons knife. These things have happened before. It happened in the few decades before 1789, when the suffering workers of France threw off their bloodthirsty masters in a glorious spirit of revolt. It will happen again.

IN Toulouse, as in Massachusetts; in the year 1761 as in the year 1927; the religious hierarchy then, as the legal hierarchy now, grabbed with power, in a frenzy of hate decided to crush all opposition to its almost omnipotent power.

JEAN CALAS, a protestant, living in the city of Toulouse had a daughter who became a convert to catholicism. Shortly thereafter his son committed suicide because of failure in business.

NOW, there was a ruling in France at that time, that the body of a suicide was to be placed face downwards and dragged by horses through the streets of the city and publicly hanged on a gibbet. Jean Calas loved his son and to avert this mutilation asked friends and relatives to testify that the son had died a natural death.

THE catholic oligarchs spread the rumor of murder. They said that Calas murdered his son because like his sister he preferred catholicism to protestantism and to prevent the conversion the young man was murdered.

THERE was not the slightest shred of evidence to support this fanatical view, but they took the old man and secretly put him to torture, they applied white-hot irons to his

HIS family was hounded and threatened. Their home and property were confiscated and in desperation Calas committed suicide by the guillotine. He sheltered them and cared for them and listened to their story of medieval barbarism.

IN the meantime the Church continued to berate the people, to live off their tithes and to aid in their oppression and enslavement.

The court was corrupt and hacked by sycophants and pounders.

POLICE ATTACK LABOR'S PARADE; MANY INJURED

March Follows Meeting At Union Square

Scores of workers were brutally beaten up when the police yesterday broke up two impromptu parades of workers who were marching from Union Square to City Hall after the end of the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration in the square.

The first group, 5,000 strong, paraded through the Italian section until they were attacked by police at Malberry and Hester streets. Seven workers were arrested there.

Five thousand other workers were forced by mounted police at Fifth Avenue and Eighth street. Two arrests were made here.

The first group of demonstraters marched along Second avenue to Houston street. When they entered the Italian section a young worker hoisted a copy of Tuesday's DAILY WORKER on a stick. The streamer: "Strike Today!" brought cheers from the workers along the route of the march.

At the suggestion of the demon-

50,000 Meet In Union Square; Demand Sacco And Vanzetti Go Free

Fifty thousand workers, gathered in Union Square yesterday, demanding that Sacco and Vanzetti be freed, constituted the mightiest demonstration of labor that the nation has yet seen.

The North End of "The Square" was jammed tight under the eyes of many hundreds of police, on foot, on horseback, in armed cars and motorcycles. The great throng overflowed into "The Square" as far South as Fourteenth Street, while additional thousands, kept away from the meeting by the police cordon, conducted an endless march along the streets surrounding "The Square."

It is estimated that 1,500 policemen in all were on duty, armed with the latest instruments of warfare against demonstrating workers. They were very evidently there to intimidate the great throng, rather than "maintain order."

Although the demonstration had been scheduled for four o'clock, a stream of workers started to pour into Union Square early in the morning. Men and women, who had gone out on strike in the morning to protest against the attempted legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, streamed into "The Square" from their shops and factories and by eleven o'clock there were thousands of workers already on hand. LAST MINUTE EFFORTS TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI

1.—By train, bus and boat Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers rush to Boston to picket the State House and take part in the death watch before Charlestown prison. Great protest demonstrations planned in Boston.

2.—The hour announced for the execution is 12:30 tonight. Judge Thayer refuses stay of execution. No further action before state courts possible.

3.—Forty-two pickets arrested yesterday before the State House, Boston.

4.—Fifty thousand workers gather at Union Square yesterday in New York, after a huge protest strike, and adopt resolution demanding freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. Spontaneous parades starting at the meeting smashed by the police with great brutality and one arrest. Police break up meeting held at N. Y. City College.

5.—Millions on strike thruout the world; many demonstrations before embassies and consulates of the United States.

50,000 WORKERS GO ON STRIKE IN PHILADELPHIA

Police Stop One Rally; Second Is Held

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Fifty thousand workers went on strike here today, protesting against the attempt to murder Sacco and Vanzetti. The police prevented one meeting from being held and attempted to stop a second one.

When several thousand workers gathered at 1115 So. Broad street at 2 p. m., the police refused to allow them to enter the hall and forcibly made them disperse.

Not so successful. When John Fullerton was speaking, they announced that the meeting could not continue. After the police left, the workers reassembled and went on with the meeting. They were addressed by Albert Weisbord, Sam Blunt, Furriers' Union, and J. Oswardo of the Bakers' Union.

In the evening the workers went to the Arch Street Theater, jamming it to the doors.

Among the unions that participated in the strike were the Upholsterers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Cloakmakers, Bakers and Metal Workers.

Engdahl Is In Boston On Sacco-Vanzetti Case For the Daily Worker

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, left for Boston last night to direct the forces that will give the readers of labor's only "Daily" the true and detailed story of the latest developments in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. In the arrests of pickets before the State House yesterday, the industrial autocracy of Massachusetts only indicated in another way its determination to carry out its sentence of death against Sacco and Vanzetti. Nevertheless, the struggle to "Save Sacco and Vanzetti," goes on with increased energy. It must succeed. Workers, however, must not depend on the capitalist press for their information. They must read The DAILY WORKER.

Stop Newark Meeting

NEWARK, August 9. — Police refused to allow tonight's Sacco-Vanzetti meeting to be held at Military Park. Hundreds of workers who assembled were driven away by police under the direction of Lieut. O'Connor and Commissioner Gillen.

According to Irving Freeman of the Federated Press who was in charge of the arrangements, if they are refused a permit today, they will hold a meeting nevertheless and make a test case. The committee issued a statement vigorously protesting the action of the authorities in not allowing the meeting to take pace.

PRISON WARDEN DECLARES MURDER WILL BE DONE BETWEEN MIDNIGHT AND 12:30; PICKETING GOES ON

Police Launch Campaign of Mass Arrests Against Last Minute Protest

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti will burn in the electric chair between midnight and 12:30 o'clock tonight unless the mighty rising wave of working class protest, registered yesterday in the United States and throughout the world proves mighty enough to save them.

The hour of death was set by the prison warden of the Charlestown Penitentiary early last night, according to reports received from Boston.

Mass arrests greeted the "On To Boston" last minute campaign to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the hands of the Massachusetts murderers who have sentenced them to burn in the electric chair at midnight tonight.

Forty-two leaders of the picket line in front of the Boston State House were arrested yesterday when they defied the regiments of city and state police parading the streets of Boston to demand the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti. The picket line was broken up.

PICKET THE STATE HOUSE.

The picketing of the State House followed the influx of thousands of workers from cities and towns near Boston. With the call for a "March On Boston" issued by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee and the growing realization that mass demonstrations alone will save the framed-up workers from death, thousands of workers are pouring into the city to demonstrate in front of the State House and the Charlestown prison, in which Sacco and Vanzetti sit.

Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers School; Alfred Baker Lewis, socialist secretary; Gus Shklar, district organizer for the Workers (Communist) Party; Harry Gratton, Grace Hutchinson, Fred Douglas and Mrs. Fred Douglas were among those arrested for picketing the State House.

UNIONS FURNISH PICKETING COMMITTEES.

The picket line was composed of committees sent by the Capmakers' Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, the Upholsterers' Union, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Furriers' Union, the Workers (Communist) Party, the socialist party, the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the International Labor Defense, as well as individuals. Those arrested will be given a trial at nine-thirty o'clock this morning. They are charged with disturbing the peace.

In spite of the arrests additional demonstrations will be held

MILLIONS STRIKE THRUOUT NATION IN HUGE SACCO-VANZETTI PROTEST

Boston Police Arrest Labor Leaders in Vain Effort to Quell Walk-out

Millions of workers went on strike yesterday to save Sacco and Vanzetti from being railroaded to the electric chair. It was the most gigantic walkout of its kind in all American labor history. In New York City alone approximately half a million workers left their jobs and joined what was one of the most effective tie-ups in the history of the city.

Reports from other sections of the country indicated a wide response to the strike call. Although the right wing labor officialdom thruout the country did its best to smash the protest, the rank and file of American labor heeded the call to the struggle to free the framed-up workers.

Police in various cities conducted a campaign of terrorism and wholesale arrests. In Los Angeles 19 prominent leaders in the struggle for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested after raids on the headquarters of the Workers (Communist) Party; in Philadelphia and Boston Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers were arrested for distributing leaflets calling for short general protest strikes; in New York City the offices of Il Lavoratore, Italian newspaper were raided and members of the staff were threatened with "the same medicine as Sacco and Vanzetti."

Boston Union Heads Arrested

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Immediately upon issuance of the Boston strike call today two officials of the Capmakers' Union, J. Miller, manager and J. Seligman chairman of Local 7, arrested and held without bail thus depriving the strike of two of its most active driving forces. The strike grew out of a call issued last night by the hastily formed Sacco-Vanzetti strike committee, capmakers, upholsterers and furriers participating.

This was followed by a conference at 6 o'clock this morning of representatives of all the clothing unions.

Halt the Legal Murder!

THE act of murder, which has been planned by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts against the two champions of labor, Sacco and Vanzetti, will be halted only, if the workers raise such a mighty voice of protest, that even the arch-fiends of capitalism will hesitate to defy it. This voice of protest must be raised in every corner of the land against this infamous deed.

Who will raise this voice of protest? Who will reach the workers in the mines, mills, factories and farms? Who will rouse them to the infamy of the terrible crime which is being framed against them?

Now more than ever it becomes the duty of all class-conscious workers to GUARD THE DAILY WORKER, to contribute by means of the certificates which have been distributed, toward the protection of the strongest and bravest voice raised against the execution of our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti.

Fifty Thousand at Union Square Meeting for Sacco, Vanzetti

50,000 WORKERS DEMONSTRATE IN NEW YORK CITY

Mightiest Labor Protest in Nation's History

cial meeting was arranged for Irving Plaza.

30,000 at Two O'Clock.

By two o'clock there were more than thirty thousand demonstrators in "The Square."

Speaking from four platforms, scores of speakers addressed the demonstration, denouncing the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti as a vicious piece of class hate and urging workers to join the mass march "On to Boston!" today to save the framed-up workers from the hands of the Massachusetts hangmen.

With thunderous applause the tens of thousands of workers in "The Square" approved a resolution demanding the immediate and unconditional release of Sacco and Vanzetti, declaring them the victims of a monstrous frame-up by the capitalist class and calling upon William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to utilize the full power of labor for the immediate and complete independence of the two workers. A message to Governor Fuller demanding the immediate freedom of the framed-up workers was also voted by the gathering.

"They Shall Not Die!"

Among the slogans displayed at the meeting were: "Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die," "Boycott Massachusetts Products," "You shall not Burn Our Fighters," "Governor Fuller, you have heard the voice of Wall Street," "Down with Capitalist Justice."

Police, under Chief Inspector Lahey, stood about a foot apart in a circle about the demonstration and eyed the proceedings. Other police were massed inside of the park. Twenty armored motorcycles stood at one side of the square, while an equal number of mounted police were stationed on the other side. Special details of police were on the roofs of all neighboring buildings.

A detail of policemen was stationed around each of the four platforms. Each speaker, before he was allowed to mount the platform, had to give his name, address and nationality to the authorities.

Police Before "Freiheit."

The 1,000 policemen were assigned from 14th to 17th Streets. Along Union Square and Broadway they were stationed in front of all of the buildings, many of them being in front of the Jewish Daily Freiheit, at 30 Union Square.

At 5:45 p. m. no more workers were allowed to enter the park. Only those who had entered the marked-off space previous to that time were able to listen to the speeches.

Those workers who were unable to pass the deadline of the police marched up and down the neighboring streets in packed formation. They had to move very slowly, due to the denseness of the crowd. The police kept them constantly on the move, not allowing them to stop for even a second.

Many Speakers Address Throngs.

Among the speakers who addressed the meeting were Ben Gold, Louis Hyman, J. Louis Engdahl, Pat Devine, C. E. Miller, Charles Mitchell, G. E. Powers, Jack Stachel, Anton Bimba, Al Schapiro, D. Benjamin, Pascal Cosgrove, M. J. Olgin, Ludwig Lore, Carlos Tresca, Rebecca Grecht, Joseph R. Brodsky, Alexander Trachtenberg, Rose Wortis, Louis Quintalino, Charles Krumbein, Alfred Wagenknecht, W. W. Weinstone, and many others.

When Ben Gold was introduced, the crowd let loose a wild outburst. When he finished speaking from the platform on the south end of the square, a detail of police prevented him from reaching the next platform where he was to speak again.

The meeting ended at 5:30 p. m. As soon as the workers started to leave the square, the mounted police got into action and shoved the workers about roughly.

Ten thousand copies of the DAILY WORKER were sold, a record amount for a working-class demonstration.

In the morning indoor meetings were held under the direction of various unions.

Police Break Up Newark Parade.

NEWARK, Aug. 9.—A huge parade here was dispersed by police after thousands of workers who had come out on strike early in the day marched to City Hall to protest against the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The parade started at the headquarters of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers at 12th street and South Orange avenue. The demonstration was stopped at City Hall by Commissioner Brennan, who declared that no permit had been granted.

A meeting was held at Montgomery Hall later in the afternoon. On its march from City Hall, the parade passed Military Park, down Central avenue, to Market street, up 15th avenue, to 10th street. At 10th street and South Orange avenue, the crowd dispersed.

Green Cowardly Whitewashes the Murderers

Under the mass pressure of the membership of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, William Green dared not completely ignore the Sacco and Vanzetti case. He tried to evade the question for days after Fuller's decision to murder these two workers was made public by absenting himself from his usual haunts and ignoring the insistent demand that the executive council of the Federation recommend that its affiliated international unions join the strike movement for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Green finally broke his silence by sending a letter to Governor Fuller. But in the letter he showed himself the loyal servant of the bloody monsters conspiring to murder these two Italian workmen by whitewashing the farcical investigation of Fuller and his committee. The first paragraph of Green's letter reveals his flunkeyism before Fuller. He says:

"Notwithstanding the thoro investigation which you and the commission you appointed made of the record of the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, your examination of all the facts and information relative thereto, and your decision that these men had a fair trial, there are very many people who still entertain grave doubts about their guilt or innocence."

The Green letter concludes with an appeal, not for freedom, but for "executive clemency."

Green does not even state that he doubts their guilt! Taking the attitude of one standing apart from the struggle of the workers this man who is the head of the American Federation of Labor does not even imply that the Sacco and Vanzetti murder plot is a blow against labor.

A traitor to labor, he appeals to Fuller, one of the murder conspirators, instead of to the working class that he ought to speak for. An appeal from the head of the Federation to the affiliated unions would be a powerful weapon in behalf of these two workers whom the capitalist class of Massachusetts has determined to burn to death tonight! It would aid tremendously in staying the hand of the executioner! But an appeal to Fuller couched in such honeyed words as Green uses only enhances that vile enemy of labor in the eyes of his class and indirectly sanctions the murders.

Green's letter places him squarely on the side of the executioners of Sacco and Vanzetti and is one more foul blot upon the labor lieutenants of American capitalism—the most corrupt and venal labor leadership on the face of the earth.

Let labor continue its strikes in spite of and against William Green, who scorns the working class and grasps in fraternal brotherhood the bloody fists of Thayer, Fuller, President Lowell of Harvard, President Stratton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Judge Grant and the judges of the courts of that state.

MILLIONS STRIKE THRUOUT NATION IN PROTEST AGAINST MARTYRDOM OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

Amalgamated, Barriers, Shelterers, capmakers and millinery voted to strike, going out at noon today. Many workers didn't even report in the morning, beginning the strike four hours ahead.

I. L. G. W. U. voted not to strike but to permit members to go out as individuals. Building laborers, Italian barbers and other Italian workers are out unofficially.

The strike committee flooded the town with thousands of leaflets. The following have been arrested charged with distribution: W. Murdoch, organizer of the Down Trodden Progressive Textile Committee, Mildred Young, Martin Daum, Sarah Goldberg, Steve Fuleo. All were released on bail.

Police preparations give Boston the aspect of a beleaguered city. The Sacco-Vanzetti Committee is concentrating all its energies nationally and internationally for bringing pressure on Coolidge to follow the Wilson Mooney precedent, by telegraphing prominent Americans, progressive senators and enabling prominent citizens of foreign countries, asking them to enable Governor Fuller.

The general strike call was signed by the Sacco-Vanzetti Strike Committee. It read: "Strike for freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti! The last day strike begins at noon Tuesday. Only the workers' protest can save us. Come to the following halls and be assigned for picket duty." A list of halls used by various unions was printed. All police stations, where police are on 24-hour duty, were notified.

"First Time Such Large Strike."

Commenting upon the success of the general strike, Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, said:

"This is the first time in the history of the American labor movement that a mass strike of such proportions as this one was called without the aid of properly organized strike machinery. It may be said in all truthfulness that the hundreds of thousands of strikers responded practically through the sole medium of the capitalist and Labor press.

"This is a warning to the American Federation of Labor bureaucracy that organized Labor in this country will follow militant leadership in a moment of workingclass crisis. William Green, president of the A. F. of L., without his official request for clemency until the moment when he was overwhelmingly convinced that the New York unions were acting without his ukase.

"The spirit which actuated the individual Labor leaders in New York with reference to the Sacco-Vanzetti protest strike is most commendable, and will serve as a precedent in future exigencies."

Many Unions Join.

Among the unions which joined the walk-out in New York City were the following: Harbor Boatmen's Union, Ship and Yard Workers, Clothing Workers, Garment Workers, United Hebrew Trades, Pocketbook Workers' Union, Painters' and Tailor's Union, Journeymen Barbers' Union, Waist Makers' Union, Carpenters' and Excavators' Union, Fur Workers, Plasterers' Union, Cement Workers' Union, Hod Carriers' Union, Painters and Decorators' Union, Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Laundry Workers' Union, Metal Workers' Union, Shoe Workers' Union, Bricklayers' Union, Amalgamated Power Plant Workers, Architectural Iron Workers' Union, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, United Textile Workers of America, Marine Transport Workers' Union and Typographical Union Local 7.

Sons of the organizations urging the strike were also the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, Bronx Jewish Workers' Club, Finnish Workers' Federation, Workers' Party, Young Workers' League, International Labor Defense, National Council for the Protection of the Foreign-Born, Private Chauffeurs' Protective Club, Sacco-Vanzetti Brooklyn Conference, Workers' Unity Association and the Workmen's Circle.

Colorado Miners Still Out.

(Special to Daily Worker)

DENVER, Col., Aug. 9.—More than 4,000 miners in southern Colorado are still out on a three-day strike to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. A. S. Embree, I. W. W. organizer, announced. This figure represents 80 per cent. of the normal working force, he declared.

Cossacks Break Up Miners' Meeting.

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 9.—Riding their horses into a mass meeting which had gathered at Jessup, near here, to stage a demonstration of sympathy for Sacco and Vanzetti, near the Pulsile Service Coal Company mine, mounted state police brutally dispersed the gathering today.

The demonstrators planned, it is stated, to march to the mine to persuade the miners to leave their work as a protest. No arrests were made.

Mt. Vernon Builders Strike.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Between 75 and 100 men, plasterers, carpenters and bricklayers employed in the construction of three apartment houses on Grand street here, walked out today in a one day strike as a gesture of protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, according to the police. Only the plumbers remained on the job.

Louis Thoma, general foreman of construction of the three buildings, asked police aid to protect his half finished structures from any possible damage, and three policemen were detailed to guard the buildings.

Rochester Workers Strike.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 9.—More than 10,000 workers were on strike here today in protest against the impending execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. The walk-out followed a giant mass meeting held under the auspices of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee.

The strikers gathered outside factories and threatened those who remained working. Practically all the large clothing factories were forced to close and the officials asked police protection. Many of the clothing workers went out on strike over the orders of their union leaders who forbade a walkout until tomorrow afternoon.

Harbor Workers Strike.

A part of the city-wide strike protest against the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Hundreds of marine transport workers and seamen answered the call of the Waterfront Joint Strike Committee by a twenty-four hour general strike of shipping in New York harbor.

The Waterfront Joint Strike Committee which includes the International Seamen's Club, the I. W. W., the Italian section of the International Longshoremen's Union, and represents practically every branch of harbor work, issued its call for a strike from one o'clock Monday night to midnight on Tuesday. Only the International Seamen's Union, an A. F. of L. organization and the International Longshoremen's Union refused to cooperate.

Police Circle Meeting.

Hundreds of the striking workers and sympathizers ringed round by police and police wagons took part in the mass protest meeting at South and Whitehall streets yesterday to demand the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Processions formed at the International Seamen's Club on South Street and at the I. W. W. hall bearing placards calling on labor to snatch Sacco and Vanzetti from Massachusetts legalized murder, marched along the waterfront and gathered in a great crowd by the South Ferry.

The crowd filled the street and the windows of the office buildings and lined the elevated platforms overhead to hear Pat Devine of the International Labor Defense describe how the cordage kings of Massachusetts had railroaded Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair.

Devine traced the case from its beginning, with the death of Salsedo, who was either thrown out of the fourteenth floor of the department of justice building in New York, or was provoked to jump out, until the present moment when word had just arrived that Judge Webster Thayer, lackey of New England capitalism, had refused the last plea of the Sacco and Vanzetti Defense for a stay of execution.

"The lawyers are like undertakers in the way," Devine declared "You may escape them today and you may escape them tomorrow, but they will get you in the end." Devine described how they worked up the evidence against the two innocent anarchists.

W. L. Fisher of the I. W. W., and Lena Chernenko of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers urged the working class to organize if they did not wish to find themselves in the electric chair tomorrow.

"Do you believe we can save Sacco and Vanzetti?" Lena Chernenko demanded, "Is it possible to save them at this late hour? No. It is only by a mass organization of the working class that outrages like this can be prevented."

Other speakers were Jack Walsh and Harry Myers, both of the Marine Transport Workers Union.

Harry Kweit, chairman of the meeting, then read a resolution confirming the absolute conviction of hundreds of marine workers and seamen that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent and demanding their immediate release. The resolution was unanimously passed and will be sent to the Sacco and Vanzetti Defense Committee.

N. Y. SACCO-VANZETTI COMMITTEE CALLS ON COOLIDGE TO INTERVENE

Points to Department of Justice Connection With Case to Prove Innocence of Guilt

Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee at two thirty o'clock yesterday sent the following telegram to President Coolidge:

"Unless you intervene, Sacco and Vanzetti die Wednesday night. We respectfully appeal to you to exercise the power conferred upon you by the people of the nation to follow the precedent established by the late President Wilson in the Mooney case. Millions of citizens throughout the land believe that a relationship between a federal department and the Sacco-Vanzetti prosecution existed at the time of the trial. Judge Thayer said that the convictions of these men rest solely on the interpretation of their conduct at the time of their arrest as consciousness of guilt. We feel confident that the files of the department of justice will explain their conduct following their arrest, international sentiment indicates that the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti will seriously affect amicable relationship with the rest of the world. We urge you to use the Wilson precedent in the Mooney case. Because of the fact that the world is watching the outcome of this case in a state of high tension we urge you to consider this momentous situation most carefully.

"Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, Rose Baron, secretary."

POLICE BREAK UP N. Y. CITY COLLEGE STUDENT SACCO-VANZETTI PROTEST

Gathering Instantly Held Off the College Campus

New York police, after the fashion of the Cossacks in the czarist days of old Russia, broke up a demonstration in favor of Sacco and Vanzetti being held by students of City College on their campus yesterday.

Among the speakers invited were Felix Cohen, an alumnus, now attending Harvard University; Arthur Garfield Hays, a lawyer, attorney for the Civil Liberties Union; Norman Thomas, director of the League for Industrial Democracy, and J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER. Leon Denenberg, of the N. Y. Students Sacco and Vanzetti Committee; Louis Burman, a student, was acting as chairman.

Meeting Held on Campus.

The meeting started on the open campus, the huge granite foundation of the main building on which rose a giant flag staff usually graced with an American flag, being used as a speaker's platform.

Burman opened the meeting, declaring that the gathering was not being held under the auspices of any organization, but was the result of a spontaneous demand on the part of a large number of students that a Sacco-Vanzetti Protest gathering be held.

He then introduced Felix Cohen, son of the professor of philosophy at City College, as the first speaker. Cohen declared his faith in the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti and urged the students to read the book on the case written by Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard University.

Engdahl's Plea Is Interrupted.

Engdahl next began to analyze the case as an example of capitalist class "justice" against which the thinking students of the nation must rebel, in common with the whole working class. He was giving a word picture of the make-up of the ruling class autocracy in the New England states, and especially in Massachusetts, that inaugurated the attack on Sacco and Vanzetti, when several squads of police, in military formation, headed by Sergeant Lander, marched on the campus.

The sergeant mounted the platform and tore down the sign that merely read, "STUDENTS' SACCO-VANZETTI MEETING." The other policemen circulated among the increasing crowd, as Engdahl continued talking. He was not allowed to continue long, however.

College Head Leads Attack.

In another few minutes Francis X. Healy, director of the summer session of City College heading a flying squad of police, demanded that the meeting end. The students insisted they had the right to hold the meeting on their own campus, that they had done so in the past, but Healy was supported by the police, and insisted the meeting stop.

The students decided that if they couldn't hold the meeting on the campus, they would hold it on a public street, where the college authorities could not molest them.

Break Up Second Meeting.

Some of the students got into the police line to 139th street and Amsterdam Ave., while others had to go around the entire block to reach the same destination.

Chairman Burman tried to open the meeting again, but it was once more broken up by the police, who claimed this time that it was being held too near a fire hydrant. The police, at this juncture, were reinforced by fivemore squads headed by a Deputy Inspector, Edward J. Quinn of the Fifth Division.

"We'll hold this meeting or all go to jail," declared the students, marching to Hamilton Terrace and West 141st street, which is not college property, not on a busy thorofare and full proof against any other excuses the police could think of, except that the students didn't have an American flag as is required by city ordinance at open air gatherings. Instead of a

The body will be cremated in the Ridgewood Crematorium. The burial will take place Thursday, August 11, 2 P. M. from the Chapel of Mr. Stichman, Fairview Avenue and Madison St., Ridgewood, N. J.

More Protests Against Sacco-Vanzetti Murder

William L. Patterson, president of the American Negro Labor Congress issued the following statement in behalf of his organization yesterday in a telegram to the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee:

"The American Negro Labor Congress protests the decision of Governor Fuller's commission as the most infamous in the history of the American Labor struggle. The Negro Congress has rallied upon American Negro Labor, organized and unorganized, to show its resentment by joining with white labor in the strike set for August 9, 1927. (Signed) William L. Patterson, President of the American Negro Labor Congress, New York Local."

Food Workers Protest.

Declaring that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent, the Amalgamated Food Workers yesterday sent a telegram to Governor Fuller demanding that he stay the execution of the two framed up workers.

The union announced its intention of taking part in the monster strike and demonstrations.

Massachusetts Courts Determined to Kill; Strike Spreads

JUDGE THAYER DENIES STAY OF EXECUTION TO SACCO, VANZETTI

United States Supreme Court Last Legal Hope for Framed-Up Workers

DEDHAM, Mass., Aug. 9.—Judge Webster Thayer, judicial puppet of the Massachusetts industrial czars, who have sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti to die in the electric chair, denied the framed-up workers' motions for a stay of execution and revocation of sentence today in Norfolk County Superior Court.

Surrounded by Guards.

Thayer wrote the decision at his Worcester home, surrounded by police and armed guards.

It was immediately telephoned to defense counsel Arthur D. Hill at his offices in Boston and to attorney general Arthur K. Reading, the latter representing the state in the last state court proceedings in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Stenographers were at the courthouse to transcribe copies of the decision which were moved to Boston by fast automobile.

Defense Counsel Arthur D. Hill began a final drive on the state courts in an effort to save the lives of the two workers. His plan was understood to be to carry the case again to the Supreme Court on exceptions from Judge Thayer's ruling, with an appeal to the United States District Court and a justice of the United States Supreme Court still in the offing.

Twenty-two armed state troopers patrolled the palatial, summer estate of governor Fuller at Rye Beach, N. H.

Three "sharp-shooters," expert shotgun men, from each police station, were assembled at police headquarters. The gathering of the fifteen "dead shots" was shrouded in mystery but followed the discovery of the "general strike" circular in Roxbury.

Appeal to Borah.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—The Defense Committee appealed to Senator Borah as Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The message stated that "Sacco and Vanzetti have become international symbols of American justice, and goodwill toward the United States will be profoundly impaired in Europe and America if these men are executed while the United States Government has evidence in its possession bearing on their innocence. We are appealing to you as Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as well as to William E. Borah, humanitarian. We believe a federal investigation opening the department of Justice files will bring the two radicals their freedom."

The telegrams to Senator Borah, Senator LaFollette and Miss Addams then went on to explain that Sacco and Vanzetti had been sought because it was alleged, they belonged to the Galleani group of anarchists, Vanzetti being a contributor to Cronaca Sovversiva, the "Galleani" paper published in Lynn. The telegram concluded:

Telegraph Lindbergh.

"We submit this department of justice manchuria cannot be brushed aside, and we further submit it is an absolutely valid explanation of the consciousness of guilt' Sacco and Vanzetti showed when arrested, and which Judge Thayer asserts is the strongest proof of their guilt of the murder charge."

The Defense Committee also telegraphed to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, asking him to appeal to the President to appoint a commission of inquiry. European goodwill created by the transatlantic flyer was being destroyed by the pending execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, wired the Committee, appealing in the humanitarian ideals of Lindbergh's father.

Arrested For Leaflets.

Two young women were arrested in Boston for issuing circulars calling for a general strike to save Sacco and Vanzetti.

In a vain and frantic effort to cripple the Boston walk-out, the Boston and state police are conducting a reign of terror. The young women arrested are Mildred Young, 22, a shoe worker, and Miss Sarah Young, 27.

Use Machine Guns.

Riot squads from the twenty-one police stations were assembled at police headquarters, with three men in each squad manning sub-machine guns capable of firing 1,500 bullets a minute. The riot squad of 400 and more men was ready for instant call to aid the 2,000 policemen engaged in "twenty-four hour duty" at the various headquarters.

"STOP THIS MURDER!"

Police Sack Offices Of Il Lavoratore in Sacco-Vanzetti Raids

"We'll make you dance in the electric chair like Sacco and Vanzetti!"

That is what plain-clothes men told members of the Il Lavoratore Staff, whose offices at 39 East 10th Street they raided yesterday afternoon.

After ransacking the offices and tearing down posters calling for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, the eight policeman left, after advising the members of the Il Lavoratore staff that "they had better get out of the country."

U. S. Embassy Tries Blow at Sacco and Shows Part in Raid

PEKING, China, Aug. 9.—The American embassy has admitted, under strain of the excitement roused by the Sacco Vanzetti case, and the eagerness of the embassy staff to have the two workers electrocuted, that it has in its possession property stolen from the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The American diplomats in China, as well as the U. S. department of state, have always insisted that the raiding here of the embassy of the Soviet Union some weeks ago was an affair of the local Chinese generals.

Now announcement is made, as tho it were news, that "The Workers (Communist) Party of America has conducted a propaganda campaign for a united front of activity in behalf of the relief of Sacco and Vanzetti." The source of this information is said by the U. S. Embassy to be contained "on pages 115 and 173" of a book seized in the Soviet Union Embassy at Peking, and "now in the possession of the American Embassy."

Ownership of such a book or pamphlet by the Soviet Union Embassy or some individual in it would not be against the law of nations.

Immigration Head Tries to Terrorize Aliens Who Strike

HOQUIAM, Wash., August 9.—Almost snarling with rage against sympathizers with Sacco and Vanzetti, Representative Albert Johnson, chairman of the House committee on immigration and naturalization, threatened all aliens in the U. S. A. with deportation and refusal of citizenship papers if they did anything to stay the hand of the executioner in Massachusetts.

The congressman, while denouncing any interference with the killing planned for August 10, took occasion to hold Matthew Woll of the A. F. of L. up to the world as a fit example, and praised his attitude of treachery to the working class when any of its rights are attacked.

During another part of the interview, Johnson sneered at "the attempt of those alien bandits to escape the electric chair."

Johnson promises his hearers that the immigration laws would be tightened up so that "only the right sort of aliens" could come into America.

LABOR ABROAD INFORMS AMERICAN REPRESENTATIVES OF RESENTMENT

American consuls and ambassadors felt the deep resentment of the working class of Europe, South America and Africa yesterday, because of the complicity of the United States government in the proposed murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Demonstrations assembled outside of the dwellings and offices of the representatives abroad of murderous America were frequently so incensed by attempts of the police of their own countries to save their American allies from discontent that they broke past all restraint and made attacks on the buildings over which the American flag floated. In Morocco a crowd burned the flag. Some of the more important demonstrations are mentioned below.

MEXICAN LABOR WIRES COOLIDGE.

MEXICO CITY, August 9.—The Mexican Federation of Labor has wired President Coolidge, asking for the pardon and commutation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Federal Council of the local labor unions has ordered fifteen minutes of suspension of work and all public amusements tonight and public service tomorrow in all principal centers.

Special patrols have been placed outside the American embassy and the offices of American oil companies.

Y. C. L. IN ROTTERDAM.

ROTTERDAM, August 9.—The Young Communists' League staged a demonstration today urging a general strike in protest against the Sacco-Vanzetti execution. The police dispersed the demonstrators, who afterward went to the American consulate where they staged a demonstration.

SWISS TELEGRAPH AIDS EXECUTIONER.

GENEVA, August 9.—The Swiss telegraph administration today refused to transmit to the United States Minister at Berne a long telegram protesting against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, which had been drawn up at a monster mass meeting, on the ground that it would be injurious to a friendly government.

NORWEGIAN UNIONS PROTEST.

COPENHAGEN, August 9.—The national organization of the Norwegian trades unions has organized Sacco-Vanzetti protest meetings throughout all Norway, to be held at the close of work on Wednesday.

FINN WORKERS CABLE.

HELSINGFORS, August 9.—The Finnish workers' national organization and the executive of the social democrats have cabled to the United States government, protesting against the Sacco-Vanzetti execution and demanding the release of the men.

BRAZILIAN POLICE WORRIED.

RIO DE JANEIRO, August 9.—Fearing possible outbreaks by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, Rio de Janeiro police today doubled the police guards in the vicinity of the National City Bank building, located in Rio Branco avenue, and around Canadian and English banks in the city.

The American embassy and the American consulate here were protected by a special guard.

WORKERS STORM U. S. LEGATION IN STOCKHOLM.

LONDON, August 9.—A demonstration of 15,000 persons attempted to storm the United States legation at Stockholm, Sweden, last night, said a Central News dispatch from that city today. A strong cordon of mounted police beat back the workers, arresting several of the leaders.

MONTEVIDEO LABOR STRIKES.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, August 9.—A 24-hour general strike has been called by the labor groups for tomorrow as a protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Appeals have been issued to all workers in the republic to join the strike. It is expected that many commercial houses will close their doors.

Troops are to be kept in the armories tomorrow prepared for demonstrations which may develop "of a revolutionary character."

Shouts of "Down with Yankee imperialism!" were frequently heard at a large protest meeting held yesterday, as speakers vehemently denounced American justice.

BURN FLAG AT CASABLANCA.

PARIS, August 9.—The American consulate at Casablanca, Morocco, was the scene of a demonstration by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers. After burning the American flag in the Place de France, in front of the consulate, the crowd hurled stones through the consulate's windows. The police were unable to cope with the demonstrators. Several arrests were made.

ALL FRANCE TAKES PART.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—All France participated in Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations yesterday. Workers went on strike in the following cities: Lyons, Tours, Dunkirk, Vetic, Cherbourg, Toulouse, Nantes, Bethune, Havre, Toulon and Brest. Large protest parades took place in Marseilles and St. Etienne.

A committee of Americans in Paris is organizing a meeting today to voice an appeal for Sacco and Vanzetti.

The mother of Captain Charles Nungesser, the lost trans-Atlantic flyer, cabled Governor Fuller: "I implore you to listen to the earnest appeal of all France."

BORDEAUX DOCK WORKERS OUT.

BORDEAUX, France, Aug. 9.—Every dock worker in Bordeaux was striking yesterday in a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration. The ships were unable to clear.

MARCH ON CHERBOURG CONSUL.

CHERBOURG, Aug. 9.—Several thousand workers marched on the American Consulate here last night in a demonstration against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. The police had difficulty in defending the consulate from the fury of the crowd. A number of people were hurt on both sides.

IRISH LABOR ASKS CLEMENCY.

DUBLIN, Aug. 9.—The Irish Labor Party and the Irish Trade Union Congress today sent a cablegram to President Coolidge asking executive clemency in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. The message follows:

"Irish labor joins labor in other countries urging clemency for Sacco and Vanzetti."

The Workers Party of Ireland adopted a resolution protesting against the Sacco and Vanzetti death sentences.

GREAT PRAGUE MASS MEETING.

PRAGUE, Aug. 9.—Communist workers at a great mass meeting held tonight on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti voted an order for a general strike tomorrow in all the factories of Prague. The chief speaker was H. Vajtauer, a Czech Communist, expelled from the United States.

HAVANA POLICE FEEL DANGER.

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 9.—Plain-clothes men from the Judicial Police Department have been stationed at the American Embassy and all public buildings. This step was taken to prevent possible demonstrations by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

DEPUTATION PROTESTS IN CAPE TOWN.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Aug. 9.—A deputation of members of the Communist and labor parties visited the American Consulate yesterday to protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Resolutions passed at a public meeting of the Communist and Labor Parties yesterday, demanding the immediate reprieve of "these innocent working-class victims of capitalist justice" were cabled to the United States.

ROUMANIAN WORKERS WRITE MINISTER.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 9.—Resolutions in protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, adopted at mass meetings held throughout Bucharest and other Roumanian cities, yesterday, have been sent by William S. Cylbertson, American minister here.

An armed guard has been posted at the American Legation and ... to guard against any possible demonstrations.

Fact Bombs

It is not the subway bombs of the agents provocateur which the ruling class fears, as it approaches the eve of the foul murder, which it is bent on perpetrating.

It is the fact bombs of truth, from which they recoil in terror.

It is the truth which they seek to hide from the working class.

It is the truth about the Sacco Vanzetti case which is the greatest menace to those who are determined to carry through this inhuman crime.

The drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker means spreading this truth, so that its destructive effects may reach the very foundations of capitalism itself.

It means five thousand new centers from which the bombshells of truth radiate their powerful force against the bulwarks of injustice, against the capitalist system of society of which this injustice is an inseparable part.

Trying to Frighten Alien Workers in Sympathy With Sacco and Vanzetti.

Albert Johnson, ignorant peanut politician, a member of that benighted outfit known as the lower house of congress, and chairman of the immigration and naturalization committee, staged a little publicity stunt for himself by joining the jackal pack in full cry for the blood of Sacco and Vanzetti. This miserably small person, who depends upon bile as a substitute for brains, issued a "warning" to alien workers not to participate in demonstrations for the liberation of these two Italian workers whom Johnson, without any evidence whatsoever, called "bandits and murderers."

Johnson's venomous attack was published conspicuously by the reptile press yesterday morning in order to frighten the masses of foreign-born workers who are aroused over the plot to murder Sacco and Vanzetti, but fortunately it had little effect as was evidenced by the proportions of the demonstrations.

So raw was Johnson's cheap threat that even the labor department at Washington, which is responsible for the enforcement of the immigration laws, issued a statement repudiating him and declaring that participation in Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations "would not serve as cause under the law for the deportation of any alien."

Johnson, an inordinate publicity seeker, tries to bask in the light shed by this world-famous case and denounces two workmen whose shoes he is not fit to wipe.

It is to be hoped that the workers in Johnson's district in Washington are able to place a labor candidate on a labor ticket in the field against him in the coming elections and expose him for the vicious, low, mendacious whelp that he is.

The Meaning of the Agitation for Soviets in China.

Again the wisdom of the invincible leadership of the Communist International impels the admiration of the revolutionary forces of the world in its direction given the Communist Party of China in that difficult situation. Some weeks ago the International demanded that the question of the formation of Soviets in China be raised. At the same time the struggle was to go on for mastery of the Kuomintang, the party that served as the rallying point of the early stages of the revolution and whose traditions had strong support on the part of the masses of workers and peasants.

The demand for the slogan of Soviets was raised so that in case of failure to wrest the Kuomintang from the control of the bourgeoisie, whose revolutionary role in China is now a thing of the past, the Communist Party could appeal to the masses to further develop the revolution through the organization of Soviets against the bourgeoisie. It was revolutionary preparation for the next step.

The next few days will determine whether the control of the Kuomintang shall pass into the hands of the bourgeoisie or whether that party shall still serve as the organ of revolution against the bourgeoisie, the agents of imperialism and the militarist adventurers. The renegades and counter-revolutionaries in the Wuhan government are using their military power to crush the proletarian elements in the Kuomintang in preparation for the plenum to be held the early part of next week. They are conducting systematic wholesale murders of Communists and may succeed by carrying further their designs and succeed in controlling the Kuomintang.

In that case the immediate formation of Soviets becomes the order of the day while the Chinese revolution marches forward, under the leadership of the Communist Party, to its next stage—the stage of the revolutionary mass struggle against all the organs of the capitalist class.

The Oil War Takes a New Turn

Like all forms of cooperation between the imperialists of the United States and the imperialists of Great Britain the apparent unity of action between the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and the Royal Dutch Shell of Britain only conceals the conflicts that rages beneath. While uniting for a limited time on a given policy both concerns strive for the advantage. Walter C. Teagle of the New Jersey concern and Sir Henri Deterding of the British controlled Royal Dutch Shell united in rabid denunciation of the Soviet Union when facts regarding the oil deal between the Standard of New York and the Vulcan concern on the one hand and the Soviet government on the other. Teagle agreed with Deterding only because he feared his concern would bear the brunt of a world wide oil war, since the Standard of New Jersey comes in direct competition in many places where the Royal Dutch Shell has a strong foothold.

But while agreeing to follow the line of Deterding, the New Jersey magnate, Teagle, frantically strives to make financial connections that will eventually enable him successfully to fight Deterding. While the Standard of New York smashes the Royal Dutch Shell by getting in on the ground floor on Russian oil, the Standard of New Jersey carries on its fights with more indirect methods. While Mr. Teagle was issuing joint statements with Sir Henri Deterding in denunciation of the Soviet oil deals of the two other American companies (members of the same corporation) he was also negotiating with Herr Bosch, head of the German dye trust, for an agreement to cooperate in exploiting the crude oil and oil patents of that concern. The agreement has just been concluded.

The German dye trust deal seems to be something separate and apart from the general campaign of Standard Oil against the Royal Dutch Shell. But in this era of trusts and international cartels it is necessary to be able to penetrate beneath the surface to discern the real movement instead of the apparent movement. Indirectly Teagle will be able to get the benefits of trade with Russia because the German dye trust already holds important oil concessions in the Soviet Union. Mr. Teagle's moral indignation against the Soviet Union does not preclude indirectly dealing with the hated Bolsheviks through the German trust.

The German trust has developed a process whereby it produces synthetic gasoline from coal lignite. The New Jersey branch of Standard Oil is to have the benefit of this invention which gives it an added advantage over the Royal Dutch Shell.

It is not improbable that in the near future the New Jersey concern will secure sufficient vantage points by penetrating various European oil concerns to hurl defiance at Deterding and his Royal Dutch trust and line up with the Standard of New York and Vacuum Oil.

The tone of high moral indignation emanating from the head of the unprincipled oil trust is amusing and fools no one of ordinary intelligence. The old game of baiting the Soviets is about finished. The mighty reconstruction going on in Russia and its steady economic advance, especially in all lines of heavy industry force respectful consideration even from the most vicious trust on earth. The oil kings know that if they get any of the Russian oil they will have to deal with the Soviet Union, which is a tribute to the ability of the Russian proletariat and peasants under the leadership of the Bolshevik party to realize socialism in their own country in spite of the enmity of the capitalist world.

Labor Leaders and Pan-Americanism

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

(This is the fourth of a series of articles analyzing the Pan-American Federation of Labor and its recent convention at Washington.

Nothwitstanding the many polite assurances of autonomy for all affiliated organization which are reiterated at each succeeding convention, the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor constitutes an unmistakable attempt on the part of the A. F. of L. officialdom to penetrate the Latin-American labor movement and force it along a definite line.

American-Owned.

There can be no question as to where the effective control of the "Pan-American" body lies. Its headquarters are in the A. F. of L. building at Washington. Its president is, and has always been, the president of the A. F. of L. Three of its four officers are members of the A. F. of L. Three of its five conventions have been held in the United States, and at every one of those conventions the functioning head of every committee without exception has been a delegate of the A. F. of L. No resolution has ever been adopted without the support of the A. F. of L. delegates. Seldom has there been anything like a contest on the floor and nearly every decision has been unanimous.

The history of the Pan-American Federation, therefore, is the history of the "foreign policy" of the A. F. of L. machine.

American capital now exploits workers in every country of the Americas. American imperialist capitalism has established its mastertorates in the West Indies and in Central America. It has made the Caribbean "an American lake" and threatens the national independence of a score of Latin-American countries. Out of this situation there has arisen a natural impulse toward all-American labor unity, against the lords of Wall Street and Washington. The "Pan-American Federation of Labor," a paper organization so far as most of Latin-America is concerned, was created to profit by and to distort this natural impulse.

Unless we appreciate that it is a creature of the A. F. of L. bureaucrats, we shall not be able to understand the role of the P. A. F. of L. in the contemporary period of advancing American imperialism.

Trade Union Imperialists.

Readers of The DAILY WORKER do not have to be told what to think of Woll, Noonan and their henchmen do not represent the interests of the workingmen in the United States or anywhere else. Basing themselves upon the upper strata of privileged workers, they represent a labor aristocracy which has been permitted to share in a tiny portion of the profits of American capitalist exploitation, and which in return has accepted the point of view of the ruling class. Unable to realize that its own ultimate fate must be bound up with that of the workingclass as a whole, the labor aristocracy has shown a tendency to desert the struggle of the unskilled workers of the textile factories, the steel mills and the coal mines. The labor fakers (Green, Woll, etc.) carry this tendency still further. They lead the way to the conversion of the trade unions from organs of militant struggle into organs of "labor banking," "labor insurance," "labor-union capitalism," "class collaboration" in all its forms. Thru the ordinary instrumentalities of business under these circumstances "labor capital" becomes involved in the whole complex of American capitalism, is drawn into the general stream of the banking system, and part of it is exported abroad as part of the billion and a quarter dollars which the United States invests in Latin-America and other foreign countries every year. Thus a section of the workers is partner, although in an insignificant scale, in the superprofits of colonial and semi-colonial investment, wrung from the enforced, exported semi-colonial labor whose lower living standards are brought into competition with the standards of the mass of American workers.

The labor fakers, who lead a life more akin to that of the capitalists than of the workers, join the National Civic Federation, in company with some of the foremost "open-shoppers" of the country. They invite the American Legion to send speakers to A. F. of L. conventions. They put thru resolutions endorsing military training camps. They act in the labor movement as the conscious or unconscious agents of American capitalism, and of American imperialism.

The Monroe Doctrine.

The policy of American imperialism in Latin-America is carried on under the slogan of the Monroe Doctrine. The Monroe Doctrine is spoken of in international parlance as a "unilateral agreement," that, it is proclaimed by and maintained by the United States government but it has never been considered binding on Latin-America by other foreign powers except the United States. In practice the Monroe Doctrine has meant that Latin-Americans are denied the right to appeal to any other great power for assistance against the imperialist aggressions of Wall Street and Washington. The United States government assumes the right to "maintain order" in Latin-America, in other words to order things as best to please Wall Street and Washington.

Machinery of Pan-Americanism.

The Monroe Doctrine is the slogan. "Pan-Americanism" as the theory which is supposed to justify the actions of Pan-Americanism bears somewhat the same relation to American imperialism as does "Pan-Germanism" bore to the policy of the Kaiser or and "Pan-Slavism" to the policy of the late czar. A whole series of organizational instruments have been created for facilitating the Pan-American ideal. Perhaps the most notorious of these is the Pan-American Union, with headquarters in Washington, another is the Pan-American Federation of Labor. The P. A. F. of L. is the labor instrument of the Monroe Doctrine.

From the origin of the P. A. F. of L. to the present day, its directors have used it to defend American capitalism and American imperialism. This was as at the Laredo convention, when the dispute between the A. F. of L. delegates and the as yet rather supernuous Mexicans arose over the question of whether or not there were any political prisoners in the United States. It was so at the Mexico City conventions, where the United States government was thanked for what it had done for Santo Domingo. It was so at the Washington convention just passed—where a wholesale attempt was made to explain away the rape of Nicaragua, Haiti, Panama and other territories as "mere excesses" having no essential connection with the integrated foreign policy of the United States government!

The Sensitive Plant.

Indeed, when delegate Martinez of Venezuela attacked the United States government he was promptly rebuked by President Green, who delivered himself of the following remarks:

"Our young friend from Venezuela has engaged in a filter denunciation of the government of the United States. This notwithstanding the fact that there are five delegates here who are United State citizens, representing the American Federation of Labor in this conference. A proper respect for the feelings of these delegates ought to serve as a restraining force in the temper of his language. We have listened with patience before, when delegates have spoken but I wish to make this brief and emphatic statement so that it may be understood that the American delegation has not been in agreement with all that has been said by the Venezuelan delegate against the United States government."

Martinez had been pouring these bitternesses against the hostile Haiti and Nicaragua whose feelings seemed to strike Mr. Green as particularly important. No mass parade of the Pan American Federation of Labor would Latin Americans listen complacently to anything like that!

Follow the Leader!

There was no danger of that as the Washington convention let the question of the United States aggressions against Mexico, which have been the object of protest thruout South and Central America. There was not a single resolution of any kind dealing with U. S. aggressions except those harmless ones adopted as head off others which had been introduced directly criticizing or protesting against acts of the United States government as in the case of Nicaragua.

In all stages of the delegate, the United States government was presented as the natural leader of the nations of the Americas as their elder brother, who could be relied upon when wronged them, but with whom their interests were essentially safeguarded.

It is superfluous to say that the P. A. F. of L. has never organized, or attempted to organize, trade-union action against any manifestation of American imperialism. That it has fended off attempts at such action has been already amply demonstrated in the course of the articles.

WHO AM I?

I am almost the richest man in the world and certainly the homeliest.

I am the big oil and dough man, but I have to live on crackers and milk because my stomach cannot tolerate anything more substantial than milk and crackers and my brain would revolt at any mental food stronger than the bible.

I have a birthday once a year and give money to promising youngsters but never more than a dime to one person.

I think that the government of the Soviet Union is composed of thieves and criminals but I buy their oil just the same.

I am a fairminded man.

Among the achievements for which I am famous is the Ludlow massacre where I slaughtered striking workers. I believe very strongly in god and support a number of his business establishments.

LOS ANGELES YUGENT CLUB IS STIMULATING COMMUNIST JEWISH YOUTH TO NEW ACTIVITY

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 8.—It is only a year since the Freiheit Yugent Club has existed in our city, but in this short time our club has shown that it is worthy of its existence and that it has fulfilled the promises put forward when it was organized.

One of the main objects of the club is to bring the great mass of the Jewish speaking working youth, who are still under the influence of the Zionist movement of the yellow "Forward," nearer to the revolutionary left wing in the labor movement. Toward this aim we are working and striving, and to some extent, we have achieved it.

Live Activities.

Our club is rapidly gaining contact with the working youth, through our social evenings, lectures on revolutionary subjects, live newspapers, and, last but not least, hikes and outings to the most beautiful places of southern California.

Besides the social purposes of our entertainments, a great many of them were organized for the purpose of helping financially some strikes, other important events in the labor movement.

Outing Netted $120.

Recently the F. Y. C. together with the Women's Consumer League, organized an outing, and the result was $120 for the striking furriers in N. Y. and $65 for the DAILY WORKER.

The Freiheit Yugent Club is spreading out its activities in various fields. In the very near future we plan to organize a dramatic section, and a sport section.

Young Workers Rally to Yugent Club

There is a place in the F. Y. C. for every young worker, and it is your duty to join us, and help us forward in our purpose and aim.

We meet every Saturday night at the Cooperative Center, 2705 Brooklyn ave.

Rev. Purnell Very Sick.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Aug. 9.—King" Benjamin Purnell, leader of the House of David, is suffering from a chronic case of tuberculosis in both lungs in addition to nourtis and diabetes, Dr. C. N. Sowers, the cult chieftain's physician testified today in the State's dissolution suit against the colony.

"He may love a year or two long er, but he probably will die within the next 12 months," Dr. Sowers said.

DRAMA

New Owen Davis Play On Wagner List

Alice Duer Miller's new play, which was tried out in Atlanta this Spring under the name of "Vickie," will be Charles L. Wagner's first production of the season at the Mansfield theatre, which he has leased from the Chanins for the coming year. Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer will head the cast of the production, which may be retitled "The Springboard."

Mr. Wagner's second play of the season will be a mystery play. The name and theme will be withheld until later. "Robert and Marianne," by Paul Geraldy which Claudette Colbert translated, will be produced during the season. Owen Davis's play "Two Shall Meet," which was written for Owen Davis, Jr., will be produced about christmas. Edith Wharton's novel "The Old Maid" is being dramatized by Zoe Akins, and will be given a production with Josephine Victor head the cast.

"Concerning Marguerite," the play of old New Orleans by William Dubois, is another play in view. Walter Huston, heading "The Barker," will go on tour on August 29, and the Chicago company, headed by Richard Bennett, will continue at the Blackstone theatre until the middle of September and then tour the middle West. Will Rogers, also under the Wagner management, will commence his tour January 1st. Marie Gordon resumes her concert season November 1.

Needle Trade Defense

Self Defense.

With the campaign for Work- ers' Self Defense only a few days old, hundreds of workers are already enrolled and carry the Workers' Self Defense Red Cards. The office of the Needle Trades Defense and Relief Committee is receiving scores of new applications daily from workers and sympathizers who are pledging themselves with a weekly tax of 50 cents to $2.00.

This Self Defense organization can become a tremendous mass organization for the support of the factional leaderships and furriers, and everybody should join it. A hundred thousand workers and sympathizers can be enrolled in this army of Self Defense. This quota must be reached quickly, altogether to win the Self Defense.

Every member of the Self Defense organization will receive a dues book and stamps will be issued for each payment on a pledge.

Come Fix Your Shoes.

The Cooperative Shoe Repair Shop opened at 119 Avenue A. is now in full swing. Come in with your torn shoes and leave with a good-as-new pair. Bring the shoes today. Bring the family shoes in the morning, on the way to work, and get them back repaired when you go home from work in the morning.

This shop is the first opened by the IEGELETCOS (Workers Cooperative Stores) which is preparing to open a number of cooperative chain stores throughout the city. Fifty per cent of the profits of this fire store goes to the Defense for the Cloakmakers and Furriers.

$15 From Jewish Workers Relief In Paterson.

A few years ago there existed in Paterson a Jewish Workers Relief Committee which collected funds for the workers of Soviet Russia. There was still a balance of $15 in the bank, so it was decided to donate this money to the Joint Defense and Relief Committee. Brother Boruch Leib had the honor of delivering it to the office.

W. C. Branch 355 Sends $10.

Receipt of $10 collected at a meeting of Progressive W. C. Br. 355 is acknowledged.

$60 From Rochester T. U. E. L.

Another Donation From the House of Joy.

A check for $30 was received from the agents of the House of Joy Hotel in Fallsburg, N. Y. This is the fourth time that the guests of this hotel have made substantial donations to the defense.

$23 From Eager Mountain House.

The guests at Eager Mountain House sent a donation of $23. Although they are on their vacation, and far from the city, they have not forgotten the fight of the cloakmakers and furriers and send their contributions regularly. They hope to help with as very soon to help in the final battle.

Volunteers, Wanted.

There is an abundance of work in the office of the Joint Defense and Relief Committee. Every worker and sympathizer who can spare a few hours during the day is requested to come to the office of the Joint Defense and Relief Committee and ask for Leon Chernenko.

Music Notes

Verdi's tuneful "Il Trovatore" will be the fifth of a series of free Open-Air Opera performances given every Thursday night in Starlight Park Stadium. The cast this Thursday night will include R. Straosius, G. Pulitz, Julia Benson, Zara Jay, Josephine La Pena, E. Palazzi, P. Cefaro, and E. Dalle Molle.

Alexis Kosloff, of the Metropolitan Opera House, has just formed a permanent ballet and dancing touring company, with which he will travel and appear in all the big cities of the U. S. His first performance under the new policy will take place in the open air arena of the Starlight Park Stadium in the Bronx, Friday night, when he will offer dances from "Prince Igor," "The Midsummer Night's Dream," "Schehersade," and special divertissements. A cast of more than 100 dancers and the Russian Symphony Orchestra, Pacob Altscheuler conducting, will appear in his support.

The needle trades workers of Rochester held a picnic for the defense of the N. Y. fighting cloakmakers and furriers. The first proceeds of which was $60. It was immediately sent to the office of the defense.

JOSE RUBEN

Who will be seen here in the new Edward Knoblock-George Rosener drama "Speakeasy," due here early next month.

50,000 In New York City Declare Sacco and Vanzetti Must Not Die

DECLARING that "Sacco and Vanzetti Must Not Die!" 50,000 workers thundered their approval of resolutions adopted at the Union Square Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration yesterday as follows:

VICTIMS OF MONSTROUS FRAME-UP.

"Whereas, Sacco and Vanzetti are the victims of a monstrous frame-up by the capitalist class and capitalist justice in this country, and

"Whereas, their execution would constitute a foul murder of two innocent workers, and

"Whereas, the investigation of Governor Fuller and his commission was carried on in the same frame-up spirit as the entire trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, and

"Whereas, this commission was more concerned with whitewashing Judge Thayer and Massachusetts justice than to actually establish the facts of the case, and MURDERED FOR LOYALTY TO LABOR.

"Whereas, all the facts of the case declare unequivocally for the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti and show that they are about to be murdered because they are fighters for the welfare of the working-class,

"Therefore, Be It Resolved, that this demonstration goes on record demanding the immediate liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti from the dungeons of Massachusetts and calls upon the governor of Massachusetts to grant immediately full and complete freedom to these workers. We want no life imprisonment but absolute freedom!

MAKE DEMANDS ON GREEN.

"We furthermore call upon President Green of the American Federation of Labor, in the name of the millions of workers of this country to utilize the full power of labor for the immediate and complete freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. Only the international unity and solidarity and militant spirit of labor can save Sacco and Vanzetti!

"LONG LIVE THE INTERNATIONAL UNITY OF LABOR!
"LONG LIVE THE SOLIDARITY OF THE WORKING CLASS!
"SACCO AND VANZETTI MUST NOT DIE!
"LONG LIVE SACCO AND VANZETTI!"

Police Attack Paraders In New York; Use Club

strators, women, men and children joined the line as it passed their homes. At the beginning the parade filled up one sidewalk. Soon it swelled until it filled several blocks. As they marched along the workers sang the International and shouted "Down with Mussolini," "Down with Fuller, Thayer and Coolidge."

By this time more than twenty copies of the DAILY WORKER were mounted on sticks and were carried in the front of the procession.

The "Riot Call."

At Mulberry and Grand a policeman sent in a riot call, so when the workers reached Mulberry and Hester St. twenty reserves from the Elizabeth St. police station charged into them.

The leaders of the demonstration were driven to Canal St. where they were viciously beaten up by the police. One worker was knocked down by a policeman's club. The officer then stamped on him with his feet.

Half an hour later Inspector Makray arrived with 50 more policemen who combed the neighborhood for workers sympathetic to Sacco and Vanzetti.

Those arrested are: George Poelas, Otto Schultz, Isaac McKaney, Joe Gresachi, Samamain Agreinh, Salvatore Bore and K. Slarecko.

Another Line Charged

The second demonstration was charged by 12 mounted police at the corner of Fifth Ave. and 8th St. as they were marching down Fifth Ave. from Union Square.

Sergeant McCaren ordered his squad to club the workers. They followed orders and the heads of six paraders felt the policemen's nightsticks.

Women attempting to get out of the way of the cossacks ran into hallways. They were followed there by the police, who apparently had been given orders to have no mercy. The policy of the police was: bust up the workers in preference to arresting them. Samuel H. Friedman was the only worker arrested.

Fight New Reign of Oppression Against Foreign-Born Workers

Fifty thousand workers in Union Square yesterday, demanding that Sacco and Vanzetti be liberated, also pledged themselves to fight against all efforts on the part of the reactionary forces of the land to enact new laws thru congress against foreign-born workers. The resolution follows:

Fight for Foreign-Born

Whereas, the capitalists are already using the approaching execution of Sacco and Vanzetti to institute a reign of oppression against the foreign-born workers, as shown by the declaration of Representative Johnston, of the Immigration Commission, who, without any authority, tries to intimidate the workers and deny them the rights which all workers in this country have, and

Whereas, these same reactionary forces will utilize the Sacco and Vanzetti case in order to introduce new repressive laws against American labor and against the foreign-born workers in particular,

Therefore Be It Resolved that this demonstration goes on record pledging its whole-hearted support, to combat any attempt of the reactionary forces of this country to introduce new laws of oppression against the workers, and

Be It Further Resolved that we will pledge ourselves to mobilize united front of Labor on all fields, all sections of labor to combat any new measures against the workingclass and that we will work for a to defeat the reactionaries.

Thousands Pour Into Massachusetts Metropolis to Picket State House and Prison

today terminating in a Midnight Watch at the Death House where Sacco and Vanzetti are to be done to death.

MANY ORGANIZATIONS SUPPORT EFFORT.

Following the appeal of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee for a "March on Boston," many other organizations have issued statements urging mass demonstrations in Boston. The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, the International Labor Defense and the Student Sacco-Vanzetti Committee are among those urging the march.

THE STRIKE WAS SUCCESSFUL.

The strike on Tuesday proved successful in all the clothing trades with the exception of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, that only brought about a partial stoppage.

Only one newspaper man will be permitted to witness the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Other correspondents will be located in the prison press room about fifty yards from the death house. The lone press representative who will be allowed in the death room will be connected with the press room by telephone.

The official observers of the murder will include Dr. George Burgess Magrath, medical examiner of Suffolk County; Surgeon General Frank Williams of the National Guard and Sheriff Charles Capen of Norfolk County, where the crime of which Sacco and Vanzetti were framed was committed.

March on "The Bastille"

Early tomorrow morning the "March on the Massachusetts Bastille" will start from the New York headquarters of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

Labor leaders and a few notables will board buses and travel to Boston to join in the death watch demonstration of sympathizers of the two condemned men.

Other persons from here have gone by boat and train and there will be at least 1000 New Yorkers at the death watch, according to Rose Baron, major-domo of the local committee.

Many Fail to Go.

But few of the long list of authors, artists, college professors, lawyers, preachers, and social workers, most of them men and women of notable note, who were invited to participate, will be there, Miss Baron admitted.

"The list was sent us yesterday by the Boston Sacco-Vanzetti Committee," she said today, "and we were not able to get in touch with many of the persons named. Most of them are on vacations, many in inaccessible places in the country.

"Of those with whom we got in touch, not a one said he was unsympathetic with our cause, and those who had to refuse our invitation to go to Boston did so because circumstances prevented them."

Ruth Hale Joins Movement.

Ruth Hale, president of the Lucy Stone League and noted feminist, will be in the group outside the state prison to represent New York.

Others will be Rex Stout of the American Civil Liberties Union, Harriet Silverman of the Workers' Health Bureau, Lola Ridge, poet, William Gropper, caricaturist. A delegation from the Civic Club, and William Patterson, president of the American Negro Labor Congress.

Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver is on his way across the continent to Boston, according to Miss Baron, although dispatches from Los Angeles quote him as saying he has not been asked to participate in any Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration.

In addition, going from New York will be representatives of many labor organizations, including the Amalgamated Food Workers, the Iron and Bronze Workers, the Paper Box Workers' Union, the Brotherhood of Carpenters, the Technical Engineers' Union, the Plumbers' Union, the Jewelry Workers' Union, the Millinery Workers' Union, the Grocery Clerks' Union, the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the Textile Workers' Union, the Passaic International Labor Defense, the Workers' Party, and the Young Workers' League.

Alibi Witnesses For Vanzetti Ask to Be Tried for Perjury

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Seven alibi witnesses for Bartolomeo Vanzetti appeared at the office of Gov. Alvan T. Fuller late Monday and asked to be arrested as perjurers. The witnesses declared that at the time of the Bridgewater holdup Vanzetti was selling eels in the town of Plymouth, miles distant from Bridgewater.

The spokesman for the alibi witnesses was Beltrando Brini, who was a thirteen-year old boy at the time of the Bridgewater hold-up.

"Silk Hat Rules!" Says Dos Passos

(Special to the Daily Worker).

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 9.—While four quarters of the world roars with the Sacco-Vanzetti case, Boston is as quiet as the center of a hurricane.

The maneuver by which two college presidents and a judge draped pall of respectability over the frame-up has effectually silenced the "best minds." The intellectual phalanxes led by the Boston Herald that were to save "civilization" and the honor of the American legal system have scattered and the protesting liberals are running to cover. All they wanted was a pretext to do nothing. Meanwhile Sacco and Vanzetti are starving in their cells in Charlestown Prison, as cut off from the sun and sky and talk and friends as if already dead.

Rose Sacco sees them every day. But since their letters to Fuller were published the warden is sitting like a hippopatamus at his desk. He puts a heavy censorship on the letters to comrades outside that they are routinually writing. Gagged, the state is putting its victims to death.

At the Defense Committee, typewriters are continually hopefully clicking telegrams to cities and states and to many organizations to find and awaken the sleeping conscience of America.

Where is conscience of America? So far no one has found it. Will the electric current shattering these two men's bodies at the same time shock us awake from our rotarian dollar marked sleep. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is showing a "consciousness of guilt." The officials have lumps nerves. Seven Italians, quiet people, nervous, walked up the marble staircases of the State House. Came from Plymouth to ask the governor to arrest them for perjury if he believed them liars on Vanzetti's alibi. The governor was "absent." He flew up in the air and ran them out of his office. Everywhere are cops and fat state police on horseback and plain clothes men.

Two officials of the can workers' union arrested and held without bail on mysterious suspirion of picketing garment workers around the state house, arrested in batches.

Group of students on steps of Harvard library scattered by dick and all newspapers pictures of gun, ammunition and President Lowell of Harvard in silk hat.

A silk hat can do no wrong and tell no lies, work no frame-ups, say people one to another. And the silk hats in their clubs, are in a hurry to get it over with, to have the men burned and buried, so they can go back to their summer resorts and baseball games and the funeral of General Leonard Wood.

When they are burned and buried let the silk hats try to forget Sacco and Vanzetti.

A number of meetings were held in different parts of the city today. Thousands have answered the strike call of the Upholsterers' Union, Cap Makers' Union and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. They all participated. Early in the morning the police arrested James Miller and William Seligman, business agent and chairman of the Cap Makers' Union, while they were in the shop attending to their business. They are held without bail and were grilled in connection with the bomb incidents in New York. Newspapers are making all kinds of wild statements of bomb plots, and police are stationed everywhere, and everything is done to prepare public sentiment for the execution.

Williamsburg Open Air Meeting Sends Resolution On Sacco

WILLIAMSBURG, Aug. 9.—Two thousand enthusiastic workers met here in an open air meeting addressed by Bimba, Leral, McDonald, Lecy of the Barbers' Union and others. They passed a resolution demanding that Governor Fuller set free Sacco and Vanzetti.

"BUT LABOR NEVER FORGETS ITS MARTYRS"

By MICHAEL GOLD.

I lived for four years in New England. I remember the dull, drab textile towns, where the workers lived in shabby frame houses next to the railroad tracks, and the bosses in fine mansions on the hill.

I remember Harvard College, where gilded youths swanked up to their classrooms in Rolls-Royces, and dwelt in $15,000 a year apartments on the Gold Coast.

I remember the decayed aristocratic odor that assailed one in certain high New England circles, where pride of family, and fear, narrowness, poverty, sheer stupidity dwelt in the same antique bodies.

I remember a certain strike in the little town of Plymouth, Massachusetts, where the Pilgrims first landed. It used to be a clean Puritan village, with austere lovely houses, and shaded streets, and old-fashioned gardens, and delicate old ladies who read the Atlantic Monthly and delved into geology.

It had been flooded by the new rising Mississippi of industrialism, and when I came that one shabby freezing January morning, I saw factories and slums surrounding the dying culture.

There was a strike in the cordage mills of the town, led by the anarchist Galleani. Two thousand exploited Italians earning $12 a week, living like cattle in miserable huts, had affronted the fine sensibilities of the old Atlantic Monthly ladies, and their sons, the mill-owners, by going on this strike.

I talked to some of these older Americans. They resented the strike as if it were a personal insult. They felt that foreigners had no right to strike—that they ought be grateful to the superior Anglo-Saxons for permitting them to live and work in a free country.

I remember how thoroughly cowed the Anglo-Saxons seemed. There were hundreds of police concentrated for some strange reason in the little town, and the newspapers were screaming with headline alarm—the usual loose stories.

Galleani was a dignified old man, with a full white beard, and the benevolent smile and greeting of a patriarch. The Italians looked up to him as to a father. The strike was spontaneous—the A. F. of L. had not started it, nor even the I. W. W. Conditions had grown so bad that the workers had marched out one morning, and then sent for Galleani, whom they all knew. That was all that was ever done about organization; the strike remained purely local.

Vanzetti was one of the leaders in this strike. I remember his tall, quiet young Italian with his stormy eyes, his air of simple courage and dignity. He worked day and night, he made speeches, he devised relief methods, he stood at Galleani's side when the police threatened to assault the old man.

It was a curious strike, a kind of family affair, the revolt of peasants who have been suddenly thrust into factories, and have no sense of organization.

It was a kind of Passaic on a smaller scale, and though it was lost, the Plymouth mill-owners never forgave the few leaders involved. There is always this bitterness in a New England textile strike; the industry is rotten from stem to stern. The mill-owners have the same dread of a strike that the Southern white has of a Negro revolt. They know that with so much corruption, decay and injustice lying about the smallest match may prove to be the brand that will start a conflagration.

Vanzetti was only an obscure and hard-working lieutenant in that strike; but he was the same faithful worker in other strikes; he was a type of immigrant the mill-owners hated, resented and feared.

Today they are having their revenge on him. They are determined to kill the brave, quiet worker who helped Galleani in the Plymouth strike, who did his loyal share of the work in other strikes, who never swerved or grew discouraged in his defiance of the immense, flag-wrapped, feudal mill-owning autocracy of New England. That has been Vanzetti's real crime.

Boston was once the hub of culture in America. It was there the abolitionist movement started, and that the first native literature and philosophy was brought to flower by Emerson, Thoreau, Holmes and others. Today President Lowell of Harvard is a symbol of all that has remained of that culture. This haughty, mediocre little man, living in a kind of cultural incest with other decayed specimens of his group, has nothing left in his heart but a shabby pride of family and a great poisoned hatred of the immigrant workers—who in the eyes of such as he, have ruined the ancient beauty of cultured Massachusetts.

It was fitting that he should be one of the hangmen of the workers, Sacco and Vanzetti. And it was also fitting that Governor Fuller should be another—this rich man who sees the profits of his state going down in a general industrial decadence.

For New England is slipping industrially. The textile mills are being moved south, where there is much cheap, docile Anglo-Saxon labor. The mill-owners blame the rebellious Italians and Slavs for this decline, and all of them say openly that Sacco and Vanzetti must die.

They have chosen the frame-up method for their revenge. It is a particularly American institution. Joe Hill, the brave singer of the I. W. W., was framed and lumberjacks were shipped off that way; Tom Mooney in California was picked off that way; they almost got Ettor and Giovannitti in Lawrence in the same manner; the frame-up has put out of the way hundreds of others of our unknown soldiers of the proletariat.

Maybe it is American Puritanism that is in itself in this queer roundabout murder method known as the frame-up. Italy gave Fascismo to the capitalist world; America has given it the frame-up.

The Great War was a crash of lightning that revealed all the immense hypocrisy of the capitalist order.

The Sacco-Vanzetti verdict is another such revelation. In its stark, cruel light the American workers can see plainly that there is no justice in this country—that there is only class war and class justice.

Most neutral observers who have read the evidence say that these men are innocent. But the mill-owners of Massachusetts say frankly:

"These men may be innocent of robbery, but they ARE guilty of being strike-leaders and rebels. Let them die!"

SACCO AND VANZETTI MUST NOT DIE!

The coolies shout this slogan in the slum streets of Canton. The London workers hurl it at the stolid British lions in front of Trafalgar Square. The blue-bloused gallant workers of Paris scrawl the message into the scars of frightened bourgeois riding in limousines. The sad-eyed hungry proletarian mothers carry red banners with this slogan through the squares of Berlin and Hamburg. In Peru, in Japan, in India, in Czecho-Slovakia, Australia, Africa, Soviet Russia, wherever there is a factory, wherever there is a peasant or a worker who has felt the lash of a boss, the cry rises and falls:

SACCO AND VANZETTI MUST NOT DIE!

The workers of the world remember the Haymarket murders; that memory is fixed for all time by the sacred day called May First. Now another Haymarket martyrdom is in the making, and for the same reasons. And the workers have sent an answer that will have reverberations as far-reaching as the Haymarket affair.

No, Massachusetts culture and judiciary will not be revived by this murder, gentlemen. Massachusetts will be hated, America will be hated by a world of millions. The South executed John Brown for his protest against Negro slavery. Eight months later the Civil War broke forth.

There will not be a Civil War in this country within the next eight months, nor maybe in the next eight years. But there will be a growth in a certain feeling that is not very good for you, gentlemen, nor good for your profits. Already a boycott on Massachusetts is proposed here; and a labor boycott in Eugene on American goods. Neither boycott may be effective. Nothing may be effective just now, as it was not in the Haymarket case, nor as it seemed to be in Russia in 1905, or in France in 1785.

But labor never forgets its martyrs. And the future of Labor is the future of the world. And Labor, like a giant with his back to the wall, is shaping in dangerous accents all over the world:

"SACCO AND VANZETTI MUST NOT DIE!"

What's What in Washington

COAN, DETECTIVE WHO TRAILED OPPOSITION SENATORS, NOW SPINS FANCIFUL "RED" YARN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 (FP). — The national capital had hoped that the last had been smelled of the noisome Blair Coan. But this handy man of former Attorney General Daugherty in perpetrating some of his blackest corruption, is back again, dragging another dead cat behind him. This time it is Blood Money, a book which exposes "the plot against civilization known as bolshevism."

A flashback of Coan shows him in the palmy days of Harding, Daugherty and the little greenhouse on K street, where Coan nearly wore a groove in the threshold. He was the back-alley politician who did Daugherty's dirtiest sleuthing. About that time two senators from Montana, Walsh and Wheeler, were making life miserable for Daugherty and his pal, Albert B. Fall. E. L. Doheny, Harry Sinclair, Edwin Denby and other pillars of Republicanism. It was all over a matter of graft in the Elk Hills and Teapot Dome oil lease cases.

Trailed Senators.

Coan was sicked onto Walsh and Wheeler. He got 'em, marled Daugherty, and Coan, aided by department of justice money and 20 agents of William J. Burns' bureau of investigation, slid out to Montana to "get the dirty" on the two senators. He tried to hang a 1918 Butte election scandal on Walsh and some Indian reservation charges on Wheeler, using all the well-known devices of perjury, bribery and fraud, but to no avail. Burns was fired from the department of justice by Daugherty's successor, it is said, when he found that federal detectives had been working under Coan spying on United States senators.

Sells "Blood Money."

Now Coan shows up with a book to prove that he is still sleuthing. Blood Money, on sale, of course, for real money, reveals that "Moscow is a huge psychopathic ward, dominated by egocentrics, who, in the United States, would be under observation by alienists or confined behind the bars of asylums for the criminal insane." Coan may even be anything for a job in Rodney's bolshevik bogey-hunting state department, to judge by the blurb, which continues: "Special attention is given to the far-flung relationships of the 'red' conspiracy. Its activities in the Orient, and especially in Mexico, Nicaragua and other 'hot spots' in this hemisphere are described."

There is no record that Coan made his startling discoveries in Russia, and so progressives are wondering where he got his latest dope.

The New Bribery.

The interesting case of Charles C. McChord is typical of a growing type of high-powered lawyer. It is chronicled of McChord that in the year after he quit the Interstate Commerce Commission he made ten times as much as he did in ten years of commission service. His salary was $10,000 a year, and so it figures out neatly that the Van Sweringen brothers, dizziest exponents of frenzied railroad consolidation, paid him at least $100,000 for twelve months' services, immediately after his resignation.

The question arises, did McChord make an undue sacrifice during his ten years with the commission, or did that service make him fat on much more valuable to the Van Sweringen speculators.

Railroad Workers in Soviet Union Protected Against Sickness, Unemployment, Old Age

NOTE.—Workers on the railroads of the Soviet Union enjoy many privileges. This is shown in the statement given by Alexis Amassow, secretary of the Railway Workers' Union, to J. Louis Engdahl, editor of THE DAILY WORKER, during the latter's recent visit to the Union of Soviet Republics. Secretary Amassow tells of the protection enjoyed by the Russian railroad workers against insurgent and sickness, unemployment and old age, and the many special privileges granted them that are unheard of in the United States. The question and answer follows:

Social Insurance on the Transport in U. S. S. R. QUESTION.—Are the workers insured in the event of sickness and old age, and are such agencies in existence for the payment of insurance benefits? Must the worker be employed at one place, and for how many years, to be entitled to an old-age pension (means the age), and what is the relation between the pension and the regular wages of the individual?

* * *

ANSWER. Social insurance is extended to all the workers of the railway transport, regardless of continuity of service, transference from one railway line to another, and so on.

Social insurance embraces the following kinds:

1. Insurance against temporary disablement.
2. Insurance against invalidity.
3. Insurance against unemployment, and
4. Other supplementary kinds.

Temporary disablement benefits are granted in amounts fully covering the loss of wages caused by sickness, injury during months of sickness the working ability, according to the findings of the Medical and Control Commission, has not been restored, the insured person is submitted to examination by medical experts, who determine the extent of disablement, and the corresponding group of invalids among which such a person is to be classed.

* * *

Social insurance on the transport provides for the following six groups as invalids:

1st Group: Persons who have completely lost their working ability, and are in need of constant care.

2nd Group: Persons who have completely lost their working ability, but are not in need of constant care.

3rd Group: Invalids who are compelled to give up their regular occupation, and are generally unfit for any regular occupation, being able to gain casual earnings by temporary work of a light nature.

4th, 5th and 6th Groups: Unemployment benefits.

The absolute amounts of the pension (in rubles) according to the different occupations and groups of invalidity, may be illustrated by the following figures:

Occupation	1st Group	2nd Group	3rd Group
Engine drivers	92 r. 48 k.	62 r. 32 k.	46 r. 74 k.
Stokers	57.53	38.35	28.77
Fitters	56.60	37.73	28.30
Clerks	32.55	21.70	16.28

Pensions to families losing their bread-winner are granted in the following amounts:

1. With 3 or more members in the family, two-thirds of the full pension.

2. With 2 or more members in the family, one-half of the full pension.

3. With 1 or more members in the family, one-third of the full pension.

Persons sustaining injuries, and also those losing their working ability by occupational poisoning, receive a pension in the amount of the actual regular earnings.

Persons who became invalids in 1918-1924, i. e. prior to the introduction of the law now in force as to the calculation of pensions, get their pension rates calculated on the basis of the actual earnings of a given occupation during July, August and September, 1925.

UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS.

Since April, 1925, the following rates of benefits were established:

For the 1st group, i. e., for skilled workers, 30 per cent and for the 2nd group, i. e., brain workers, 20 per cent of the wages in a given locality, or in rubles, for instance, in Moscow for the 1st group, 22 r. 50 k., for the 2nd group, 15 r. 00 k.

In a number of localities additional benefits were established for large families. Such additions in some cases reach 40 per cent of the basic benefits.

Among the additional benefits are:

(a) In the event of the birth of a child, one-half of the average wages in a given locality.

(b) For baby-nursing in the course of 9 months, one-fourth of the benefit.

(c) For the burial of an adult, an amount equal to the average monthly wages is granted, and for the burial of children under 16 years of age, one-half of the monthly wages.

These additional benefits are extended also to the unemployed.

During sickness the unemployed retain their title to benefits under the unemployment rates.

Unemployed women of the 2nd group, during pregnancy, are entitled to benefits under the 1st group.

All the insured transport workers, including invalids and unemployed, are getting all kinds of free medical aid.

Protection of Motherhood and Childhood.

Pregnant women engaged in physical labor are given a vacation of 8 weeks prior to and 8 weeks after childbirth; those employed in office work are given 6 weeks prior to and 6 weeks after childbirth.

Working mothers during the period of breast-feeding are allowed extra rest hours, at intervals of three hours, half an hour to feed the baby.

Pregnant and breast-feeding working women are not allowed to do night-work or particularly harmful work.

For the purpose of rendering practical aid in the matter of taking proper care of children, there exists: Maternity Consultation Offices, Motherhood and Childhood Homes, and Creches. The creches on the railway transport are maintained at the cost of the management, under the terms of the general collective agreement. There are 52 creches, with accommodating facilities for 1,261 children.

ANNUAL LEAVES.

Persons who have worked uninterruptedly for a period of not less than five and one-half months, are allowed a leave of two weeks every year. Furthermore, persons employed in the first group, a list of 71 occupations classed as harmful, e. g. engine drivers, stokers, telegraphists, telephone operators, foundry workers, etc., are entitled to an additional leave of two weeks. Adolescent workers, even if employed in unharmful occupations, are given an annual leave of one month, and those employed in harmful occupations are given six weeks.

Persons living under particularly unfavorable climatic conditions are giving additional leaves of two weeks.

SPECIAL CLOTHING.

In virtue of the Code of Labor Laws and by the terms of the General Collective Agreement, the management must supply special clothing to workers employed in occupations connected with exposure to cold weather, soiling of clothes, danger of scalding, etc.

The list of workers entitled to special clothing embraces 365 occupations.

In 1925-26 the railway administration assigned 11 million rubles on special clothing. Furthermore, uniform clothing was introduced for train crews. All such clothing becomes the property of the wearer after an established period.

PRIVILEGES.

1. The railway authorities maintain for the benefit of the workers about 4,000 bath houses.

2. Dwellings are provided in houses owned by the railways. For those receiving wages up to the 9th category, the lowest rates of rent have been established.

3. Fuel is distributed at cost, at the monthly rate of 2 cubic metres for families, and 1 cubic metre for single persons during the winter period).

In the summer period, fuel is distributed at the rate of 1 cubic metre for families, and half a cubic metre for single persons.

4. Free travelling is allowed to railway workers at the rate of 6 trips per year. This rate may be used by the workers as he sees fit (for himself and for his family). The tickets are issued for distances chosen by the worker, e. g., Leningrad-Vladivostok, or Odessa-Archangel, and so on. Family tickets are granted not only to blood-relations, but also to all dependents without exception. Furthermore, the railway workers are entitled to:

(a) Professional travelling cards good for 150 kilometres in 52 trips per year for families, and 24 trips for single persons.

(b) Travelling cards good for 150 kilometres in the same number of trips.

(c) Season and annual tickets for line workers who live away from their place of work.

(d) Ambulatory tickets for line workers travelling to consult the railway physician.

These basic privileges are retained for a period of six months by unemployed, invalids, and families of deceased railwaymen.

5. The People's Commissariat of Ways and Communications extends substantial privileges to railwaymen's cooperative building societies, e. g., reduced rates of freight on building materials, the securing of building materials through the auxiliary enterprises of the railways, monetary loans without interest, wages to workers engaged on such buildings, and so on.

Task of The Latin American Labor Movement

By J. NEVAREZ.
(Organizer Communist League of Porto Rico.)

The recent convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, held in Washington, D. C., is a direct defense of the Monroe Doctrine and the up to date U. S. imperialist policy pursued in Latin America, by the chief sponsors of the Pan-A. F. of L., such as William Green and Matthew Woll, thru their stiffling of all resolutions which dared to criticize present events in Latin America and the selected make-up of the delegations to this congress, many delegates representing no real labor movements, except of the Wall Street dictatorship. The particular introduction of a resolution embodying the Monroe Doctrine of Labor which "will not permit others to dictate to us our impose principles of tactics" (which infers nothing more than that the Yankee bureaucratic leaders of the Pan-A. F. of L. reserve for themselves the right to dictate to the Pan-American labor movement)—all these facts go to warn the workers of Latin America that they are not only faced with the necessity of struggle against the political and militarist aggression of Wall Street's government against their countries, but that the working class of the American mainland, with the aid of such flunkies as Santino Iglesias, are maneuvering under the veil of Pan Americanism, to get their grip on the organized labor movement in Latin America and betray it so that it will become helpless to struggle against imperialism.

Latin American Workers Must Fight Imperialism.

The workers of Latin America, with its more militant elements in the lead, must muster themselves to face the challenge of the "Monroe Doctrine of Labor." In fact the working class of the entire American mainland must be mobilized to challenge the attempt to shackle it with Monroe Doctrinisms. But for the workers of Latin America, it remains for the present to reject the false conception of Pan Americanism raised by the Pan-American Federation of Labor and its Matthew Woll cornerstone "Monroe Doctrine of Labor." The task can be achieved by the Latin American workers uniting their trade union forces and creating and strengthening an all embracing Latin American Federation of Labor, on the definite basis of struggle against North American imperialism and the so-called "Pan" A. F. of L. and the Woll theories of Monroe Doctrinism of or over labor.

Now the question arises what are some of the immediate concrete points upon which a Latin American Federation of Labor can naturally base itself, in order to become a real instrument of struggle in the hands of Latin American labor? Limitations of space permits us only to name our proposals which are the proposals of the All American Anti-Imperialist League, for a platform on which a militant anti-imperialist labor movement in Latin America must base its self.

Militant labor organized into a Latin American Federation of Labor must insist on the following:

1. Withdrawal of all United States troops from Latin American soil.

2. Complete and immediate independence for Porto Rico and the Philippines; Self-determination for all United States colonies.

3. Immediate termination of United States occupation and rule in Nicaragua, Santo Domingo and Haiti, and indemnity to the victims and to the families and dependents of victims of U. S. military and naval operations in those countries.

4. Abolition of the Platt amendment in Cuba; abrogation of special treaties forced upon Cuba and the "republic" of Panama which make these countries protectorates of Wall Street.

5. Hands off Mexico!

6. The internationalization of the Panama Canal Zone.

7. Unification of the five Central American republics in accordance with the clearly expressed sentiments of the peoples of these countries, which have been largely thwarted thru the maneuvers of U. S. imperialism.

8. Abrogation of all authority from President Coolidge or the United States government in the settlement of the Tacna Arica question; investigation and settlement by a Latin American committee to be named in accordance with recommendations of the trade union movements of the countries concerned, by the Latin American Union, the Ibero-American Council of Intellectuals and the All American Anti-Imperialist League.

9. For World Trade Union Unity.

The Task of Porto Rican Workers.

In concluding I desire to deal with the specific tasks of the militant workers in the Island of Porto Rico, which may in general way correspond to those facing the workers in other countries under American imperialism. In order to revive once more their new stagnant labor movement, militant workers in Porto Rico must accept the following line of procedure.

Workers Must Enter Unions.

1. In spite of the indifference of the pro-Yankee leaders of the Porto Rican Labor for the carrying out of practical steps towards the organization of the workers, the few militant elements, particularly the Communist League of Porto Rico, must bend all efforts to organize the workers in the Federation Libre, wherein the masses will be enabled to struggle and eliminate (first) the reformist-reactionary Iglesias leadership, (second) the open enemies against the exploiting trusts and corporations, and individual employers, demanding better wages and improved working conditions.

2. Militant workers must advance and popularize the call issued by the Nationalist Party of Porto Rico, for the calling of a constitutional assembly representing the broadest masses for the purpose of dictating the Constitution of, and declare the existence the Republic of Porto Rico, regardless of the pre-existence of the so-called "Insular Government" and the imperialist authority.

3. Practical unity with other Latin American Nationalist liberation and anti-imperialist movements, and with the militant working class organizations in the United States proper, which are struggling against American imperialist exploitation.

4. Practical measures on the part of the militant workers and Nationalists for the defence of the Republic of Porto Rico in this effort the militant workers and the Nationalists of Porto Rico will have the material and moral support of their brothers in the rest of Latin America as well as of the conscious and militant workers in the United States proper.

And in our concluding statement we call upon all militant workers in Porto Rico who understand the menace of Iglesiasism and are ready to steel themselves for struggle in the real interests of the workers in Porto Rico, Latin America, and of the World, to line themselves up with their organization which best represents the revolutionary aspirations of the working class of Porto Rico, as of the entire world, that organization is the Communist League of Porto Rico.

Supreme Sky Terror Hindered

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 9. The navy's plans for building a super flight-r-than-air ship, three times the size of the ill fated Shenandoah, are bogged for the rocks, secretary of the navy Wilbur indicated today. Irreconcilable differences have arisen between the department and the contracting firm and unless congress can straighten the matter out next session the idea will be abandoned. The hitch has come over the question of whether or not the Goodyear Zeppelin Company shall have a cost-plus contract or built on a fixed basis.

MASS FURY DELAYS MURDERERS' HANDS

ARREST PICKETS AT STATE HOUSE; UNIONS RAIDED

Police Terror Against Demonstrations

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Special to DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—Boston police continued their mass arrests in their vain effort to smash the picketing of the State House to protest against the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

John Dos Passos, novelist and poet, who is sending special articles to The DAILY WORKER on the struggle to free the framed-up workers, Michael Gold, editor of the New Masses, Bertram D. Wolfe, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, Sender Garlin, member of the staff of The DAILY WORKER, Rose Pesotta, Dorothy Parker, George Kraska, secretary of the local branch of the International Workers Aid, and Sat Kay, of the Young Workers League were among those arrested. Another vicious attack by the police accompanied by mass arrests broke up the second day's picketing line on Beacon street before the State House, where Governor Fuller is considering his latest contribution to the effort of the Massachusetts ruling class to fry Sacco and Vanzetti to death in the electric chair.

Bertram D. Wolfe, member of the Central Executive Committee, Workers (Communist) Party, was leading the picket line, carrying a placard denouncing the attempted murder of the two workers. A score of similar placards were being carried by others among the many marchers. The picketing continued for about fifteen minutes when the police arrived and began making arrests wholesale.

Sing International.

At the Joy street station the prisoners today, as yesterday, spent their time singing "The International," "The Red Flag," and other revolutionary songs while waiting to be bailed out. Efforts are being made thru International Labor Defense to secure bail for the prisoners. Fresh forces of pickets are pouring into Boston from other cities. An imposing demonstration is expected tomorrow.

The local organization of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued a statement on the picketing as follows: "The Workers (Communist) Party members participated in the demonstration with the members of the socialist party and the members of trade unions because it is the firm conviction of the Workers (Communist) Party that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent and that their only crime is their devotion to the labor movement.

"The electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti marks the beginning of an attack against labor and will no doubt be followed by fresh persecution of the American working class. The campaign to lower the standard of living will now proceed in full swing. This is also a part of the tar

Sacco's Wife Compelled To Pass Electric Chair On Way to See Husband

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—For the first time since Rosa Sacco, the wife of Nicola Sacco, now awaiting death in the cells of Massachusetts industrial experiment, Charlestown, has been compelled to pass thru the chamber of death on her visit to her husband. The commonwealth chair has been moved from its former position to a point directly opposite the entrance to the death chamber, so that Mrs. Rosa Sacco must pass it on her way to the death house. Prison officials have not made it possible for her to avoid the hideous spectacle that has darkened the stake with its burning faggots of witchcraft days.

AMERICA'S REAL EMBLEM By FRED ELLIS

REPRIEVE FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI UNTIL AUGUST 22; DANGER STILL EXTREMELY GRAVE; ONLY FURTHER DEMONSTRATIONS WILL FREE THEM

Engdahl at State Prison Issues Call

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, telephoning direct from Charlestown state prison where Sacco and Vanzetti were awaiting the order of the executioners at 11:50 last night gave us the first authentic information regarding the reprieve and also made a ringing call to the workers to continue the fight for the liberation of these two victims of capitalism. Engdahl said, "Fuller was afraid of the mounting protest over the whole world and has postponed the burning to death of Sacco and Vanzetti in the hope that the mass fury will die down. Our answer must be the further development of this protest wave. They are alive today because of the vigilance of the working class and only the further determined action of the working class can save them."

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

CHARLESTOWN STATE PRISON (11:50 p. m.), Aug. 10.—Sacco and Vanzetti and Madeiros have just been notified that a stay of execution has been granted until August 22. At eleven o'clock all newspaper writers at the State House were told to go to the State Prison. It was thought that the end had come and the final act of the ghastly persecution was about to be carried out. But the warden notified them

EXECUTION PLANNED TO LAST MINUTE; HOLMES HAS NO MERCY

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—Placing no faith in the "justice" meted out by capitalist courts, workers from all sections of the country are streaming into the city to demonstrate for the immediate and unconditional release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Mass demonstrations and mass protests alone will force Governor Fuller to grant Sacco and Vanzetti a respite. Firm in this belief thousands of workers from neighboring cities are pouring into Boston by train, bus, boat and automobile. Undaunted by the mass arrests of picketers and wholesale raids on unions the protest demonstrations are continuing.

A march on Boston can alone save the framed-up workers, it is stated, and leaders of the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti have issued appeals urging workers in streams into Boston to protest against the legalized murder of the two framed workers.

Arthur Hill, chief counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti, called on Justice Holmes of the United States Supreme Court at Beverly, Mass., late today. When he emerged from the conference he said: "I know of no human power that will save them." Justice Holmes declined to comment.

NAILED TO CROSS.

"For seven long years they have nailed me to the cross of their laws. Let me die in peace, without giving them another chance to crucify me," said Sacco, refusing to sign an application for a writ to the U. S. Supreme Court.

No amount of persuasion would make him sign, even as he had refused to sign a petition for reprieve to Governor Fuller months ago.

Vanzetti, calmer, was persuaded to sign the petition, and declared he hoped it would help "poor Nicky."

"But," he added, "I feel like Nicky that all hope is gone. I want to say farewell to you." And he offered his hand to his attorney, Mussman, and asked him to take out two books, "The Rise of American Civilization" and "Twelve Stories and a Dream," by H. G. Wells, which he had just finished reading, and on the fly leaf of which he had written farewell messages to the world.

The first move on the part of Defense Counsel Hill today was to file his bill of exceptions with Judge Anderson. These exceptions were based on two things—prejudice of Judge Thayer and the verdict of the jury.

"It appears from the record that the finding of the jury was plainly wrong," the bill read. "The defense took an interest of the facts in the case as well as the law."

Judge Sanderson said he would give his decision at noon tomorrow on whether or not to present the case to a full bench.

The first move to carry the case to the federal court was made today when associates of Hill conferred with the clerk of the federal district court about the form of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Warden William Hendry stated that he was ready to carry out the death sentence, that the electric chair had been tested by the executioner and that all electric wiring had been gone over.

Meanwhile, the prison is under heavy guard, with a special bomb squad of picked men from the Boston police department to

Davis Orders New "Red Raids"

POLICE FIRE INTO DEMONSTRATION FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI, CHICAGO

Sacco and Vanzetti Demonstrations and Strike Thruout Country

BULLETIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Police poured their revolvers into a crowd of workers who were participating in the half hour sympathy strike which has brought out 20,000 workers today. Six men were parading when the police ordered them to disperse and when the marchers hesitated, they charged the crowd firing their revolvers. 1,500 police have been stationed in the West Side.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Thirty motorcycle police, thirty mounted police and squads of detective bureau cars armed with machine guns and tear bombs broke up three impromptu demonstrations involving thousands of men and women on Chicago's West Side today, following the main procession which marched yesterday from Ashland Auditorium to the City Hall, and was also broken up. Two women and five men were arrested when the police charged the crowds.

By THURBER LEWIS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 10.—Surging thru Chicago streets in spontaneous demonstrations protest last night against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti ten thousand Chicago workers were gathering strength block by block when a corps of squad cars and 200 detectives, guns drawn, charged the crowd and broke the ranks of the parade with tear gas bombs. A half hundred workers were brutally thrown into patrol wagons held in reserve.

Demonstration followed a rousing mass meeting crowded by seven thousand in the Ashland auditorium. Cries of "strike! strike!" resounded thruout the meeting and were taken up on the street again following adjournment and the refusal of the crowd to go home.

Throngs began forming into parade and moved west on Van Buren street.

Gathering hundreds of recruits from sidewalks the parade continued east on Ogden Ave. to Madison street and headed for the loop district. Crying for a strike and loudly demanding freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti, the demonstration stretched from curb to curb and crowded for three blocks, stopping street cars and stopping automobiles.

In the meantime two dozen squad cars were zooming and straying thru the west side, organizing for a position to break up the demonstration. Finally at the Curtis street block from the Workers Party National Office the first squad car clanged into the crowd. This was followed by a dozen more. Detectives struck out right and left with clubs and revolver ends.

In spite of the brutal assault the crowd moved on. It was not until more than a dozen tear gas bombs had been thrown, stifling and blinding gas fumes ranging in pace that knocked many down, that the street was cleared. For hours after into the early morning squad cars and patrols raced madly about streets, sirens shrieking and terrorizing the entire west side working class quarter.

Workers Call For Strike

"No one has a right to say that the working class of this country will not move to save Sacco and Vanzetti," said James P. Cannon, national secretary of the International Labor Defense at the meeting. "If the workingclass can receive from Sacco and Vanzetti one-tenth the faith and courage that they have shown during seven years of unspeakable torture, they can yet be freed. This meeting

SECRETARY LABOR ASKS EMPLOYERS STARVE RADICALS

Announces Campaign To Fingerprint

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Steps were taken by Secretary of Labor Davis today for a nation-wide round-up of radical workers in this country.

He issued an appeal to business establishments, especially large industrial plants employing common labor, to cooperate in the drive to rid the country of unwelcome aliens.

Factories were asked to make a thorough check of employees and to make citizenship or legal entry into the country a requisite to employment.

Other government establishments will be called upon to join what is planned as the greatest drive to round up thousands of foreigners who have gained "unlawful" entry into the country. Careful check of enlistment applications made by aliens will be sought.

In Ford's Footsteps.

Secretary Davis said his plan follows one adopted by Henry Ford several months ago. Ford employs about 125,000 persons in his various here in Chicago is in spirit of the Haymarket martyrs and is a living evidence that the cause for which they died becomes stronger day by day."

Other speakers were Al Wechsler, secretary of the Chicago Sacco Vanzetti committee; John Gahn, editor of Industrial Solidarity; Dr. John A. Lapp, Ralph Chaplin, Sam Levin, manager of Chicago Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union; Wm. H. Henry of the socialist party and Antonio Pressi who spoke in Italian. Anton Johannasen of the Carpenters' Union, was chairman. A vigorous telegram was sent to President Coolidge asking him to intercede for Sacco and Vanzetti and a strong message to Governor Fuller condemning the execution as a judicial murder.

The spirit of the meeting was high. The speakers also appeared to the audience to take the approaching execution of Sacco and Vanzetti with too much equanimity, and were interrupted with cries of "speak for the strike." Cannon drew a tremendous ovation when he told of strikes in New York, the west and in the anthracite region. The dominating note of the meeting was for a general strike.

Arrest Twenty-Four.

At noon today twenty-four of those arrested were still held at various police stations.

Thirty-five thousand members of the Amalgamated quit work today at 10 a. m. and held demonstrations before all big shops. They will not return to work today. Albert Wechsler spoke to a thousand striking workers in front of the Alfred Decker Cohen factory at Harrison and Kilbourne streets.

Other meetings were held at other large clothing factories. A demonstration of 2,000 steel workers at Gary in Indiana was held.

The meeting was broken up by a large force police and four were arrested. They were Manual Gomez, B. Horizoff, E. Biendenkapp and Frank Beck.

Apologizes to Italians for Sacco Murder.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10 (FP).—Speaking before the Washington chapter of the Anti-Fascist League, Benjamin C. March, of the People's Reconstruction League, apologized for the impending murder of two Italian citizens by the State of Massachusetts and declared that two recent attorney generals, A. Mitchell Palmer and Harry Daugherty, were among the worst criminals in America. Palmer and Daugherty were parties to the crime of sending Sacco and Vanzetti to the death chair, he said.

Chairman Sichi wired Governor Fuller on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. Arturo de Pietro, of Il Nuovo Mondo, Italian labor daily, declared fascism to be inimical to America.

FIFTY THOUSAND WORKERS BEFORE DAILY WORKER SIGN IN UNION SQUARE

Fifty thousand people gathered at Union Square, New York, in a perfectly orderly demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti, Tuesday afternoon. About six o'clock the police pushed the crowd from the square. Long before then they had blocked all entrances to the park and turned unnumbered thousands away. Immediately after this crowd was driven into side streets, two impromptu parades were organized, both of which were smashed by police violence. Five arrests were made.

rorism against labor in preparation for the new war."

"The Workers (Communist) Party maintains that only the force of labor and the building of a strong powerful trade union movement into the development of a labor party will prevent further attacks against the working class. A thousand times more than ever before is the necessity of the militant trade union movement resulting in the arrest of officials and members.

Special attacks are directed against the Lithuanian Union, and are loudly exposed against the unions that are militantly fighting for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, but that have been instrumental in winning better conditions, higher wages and the shorter week, due to their struggles.

Attack On Needle Trades.

Judge Joseph Zoldok, in Municipal Court, showed additional animus today by declaring the "death marching pickets," who surrounded the State House Tuesday, guilty of loitering and sauntering, with the additional charge of obstructing traffic. An effort is being made to claim that the needle workers' unions are solely responsible for the picketing and thus prove an additional basis for attack upon these organizations.

Seven members of the Upholsterers' Union, quietly awaiting the arrival of their union officials at the headquarters, 82 Lovejoy street, were taken into custody in a raid today. They are Jacob Pollock, James Griffin, Ben Golden, Louis Amadello, Sam Banks, Louis Levine and Frank Frasson. Gerrouzz was badly beaten up by the police who charged that he had warned others of the impending raid. All Sacco-Vanzetti pro-test banners, used in Tuesday's demonstration, were confiscated. The police also tore a sign off the wall announcing a shop meeting tonight at six o'clock.

Question Workers.

The workers were thoroughly questioned at Police Station No. 5, and their names, addresses and descriptions taken. They were then allowed to leave. They were told: "We don't need you we will get you." Lofts also were searched, but nothing was discovered on them.

Jacob Miller, manager, and Wilham Seligman, executive board member, of the cabinetmakers' union, have been released after a night's grilling by the police. An effort was made to frame them up on the "bomb plot." The local officers were called in alleged "experts" from the New York police department to aid them in their third degree.

Raid Camp Nitgedaget

An earlier raid had been made on camp Nitgedaget, workers' summer resort, in which it is claimed that two sticks of dynamite were found. This is easily explained by the fact that considerable blasting of stumps in clearing woods and building roadways is being done at the camp.

Workers Phone Daily Worker Inquiring As To Action of Fuller

All yesterday afternoon and evening the DAILY WORKER was busy with telephone calls from workers who inquired us to the record of Gov. Fuller, at that time meeting with his executive council. Many workers phoned as many as two and three times, showing their intense interest in the outcome of the case.

* * *

Miller and Seligman were both photographed and fingerprinted before being released. The raids on the two union headquarters, two were accompanied with the wholesale arrests of all those distributing Sacco-Vanzetti leaflets.

More Strikes Called.

Additional strikes demanding the reprieve of Sacco and Vanzetti were declared today. Nearly 500 workers walked out at noon at the clothing factory of M. Segall, Jackson at 56 Orange Hill Road. These workers have just beginning to build an organization, electing affiliation with the Needlewomen's Clothing Workers' Union. Hundreds of workers also walked out at the plants of B. Rabin, 1 Brookdale, and Sol. J. Muchnick. They are affiliated with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

There was a tense atmosphere about the Mulberry street building when the nearly two score pickets arrived. Tuesday appeared for trial. Many put in the proceedings part of the afternoon laughed at the testimony of the police. The nervous court attendants immediately ordered them out of the courtroom but promised not to arrest some of the arrested pickets and bail to be profided.

Benjamin Kubby, William Murdoch and Grace M. Hutchins, the latter having just returned to this country from a tour around the world, including the Soviet Union, were declared guilty. They will be sentenced Friday. This was Murdoch's second arrest.

The cases of the others were put over until Friday. These include Bertram D. Wolfe, member Central Executive Committee Communist Party; Gus Sklar, organizer of the Workers (Communist) party; Harry L. Canter, Alfred Baker Lewis, Socialist party organizer, Benjamin Brown, Jacob Berman, Paul J. Douglas, chairman of the Boston Hands off China committee; Helen M. Douglas, Esther Berkowich, Mary Lawrence, Amelia Rosen, Dora Dale, Joseph Dalsh, Winfield Atkinson, Harry Livene, Samuel Wax, member executive committee Women's Trade Union League; Israel A. Rosen, Hyman Halperin, businessagent, Cloak Hangers' Union, 28; Morris Zimmerman, Louis Zion, John Pace, Sr., Ronald D. Lordon, Alice M. Gordon, David Levy, Louis Gilbert, Abraham Borodaky, Joseph Solomon, member executive board, Carpenters Union; Josephine Lucola, Elsie Pallor, Emma Gresman, Mildred Young, who was also arrested twice during the day, Joseph Tenebeck, Goldie Waldman, Annabel Ashbeck, Vahey Anagnian.

All Guilty.

Judge Zoldok ruled that they were all in the same boat and that they were therefore equally guilty. The charges of obstructing the sidewalk also added convenient.

Many of the placards carried by the pickets contained quotations from Thomas Jefferson as well as statements attacking Judge Webster Thayer.

President Lowell, member of Governor Fuller's commission, as well as Fuller himself, viewed the picket line for a few moments from the balcony of the State House.

Executioner of Sacco and Vanzetti

The executioner standing ready to throw the switch in Charlestown prison and kill two labor leaders. He is Robert Elliot of 132-10 91th Ave, Richmond Hill. He earns his living by legalized murder.

ALL WORLD AGHAST AT MURDEROUS DETERMINATION OF MASSACHUSETTS MILL OWNERS; COUNTLESS PROTESTS

Protest against the judicial murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by the mill owners of Massachusetts has spread from the labor movement of Europe, Asia, Africa and South America into governmental and professional circles. The whole world stands in horror at the brutality of the Massachusetts courts and state government, and the callous refusal of President Coolidge to interfere.

In the countries close under the thumb of American imperialism, like Panama, public officials try to prevent the people from expressing their contempt for the American dollar rulers and their murderous ways. In more liberal countries authorities join in the protest. In Uruguay, the chamber of deputies has adopted and cabled to President Coolidge their solemn denunciation of the slaughter arranged by Thayer and Fuller. American citizens abroad, too, are beginning to disavow guilt by joining together and wiring pleas for clemency to Fuller and Coolidge. Some of the protests against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti made by workers and others in various countries abroad are listed below:

URUGUAY'S DEPUTIES CABLE COOLIDGE.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Aug. 10.—The Uruguayan Chamber of Deputies has sent a telegram to President Coolidge asking that the death sentence may not be carried out against Sacco and Vanzetti.

As the mass movement of labor assumes alarming proportions the police are making every effort to control a situation that threatens to get out of their hands. United States buildings are under redoubled guard.

GERMAN POLICE CLUB DEMONSTRATORS.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Police attacked a demonstration in front of United States embassy here which was demanding that Sacco and Vanzetti be freed. The demonstration, which was a response to the call of the Rote Fahne for all workers to strike in protest against the death of the two innocent men, was shouting, "Down with capitalist justice and judicial murder!" when the green police charged. The German proletariat is determined to make "Dollar" Schurman, the United States ambassador, realize that the world proletariat demands justice.

GREEK WORKERS IN GENERAL STRIKE.

SALONIKI, Greece, Aug. 10.—A general strike to protest against the death of Sacco and Vanzetti has been declared in Saloniki. Marine, harbor, tobacco and rug workers will go out.

GENERAL STRIKE ON IN ARGENTINE.

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 10.—A twenty-four hour general strike which threatens to tie up the capital, began here at midnight. Americans are making appeals for protection altho the United States embassy is at present guarded by seventy policemen and an unknown number of detectives.

ARGENTINE TIED UP FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI.

TUCUMAN, Argentine, Aug. 10.—Demonstrating in immense crowds thru the streets, masses of workers here have compelled all business houses to close their doors, while no wheel is turning on the roads or in the factories, as the workers show their sympathy with the two men about to be murdered in New England. In many cities of the Argentine, cab and street car service has been halted and shops and factories have closed down while there have been riots here and there where the police have attempted to put down the workers.

AMERICANS IN PARIS CABLE COOLIDGE.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Several hundred Americans at a protest meeting headed by Henry Bana and Rabbi Mitchell Fisher, have cabled President Coolidge in an effort to make a final appeal for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Appeals signed by Madame Curie, the Marquis Luy de Lasteyrie, Alfred Breyfus, former minister of commerce, Louis Loucher, and former minister of finance, Faillaux, have also been sent to President Coolidge.

ECUADOR WORKERS DEFY POLICE.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Aug. 10.—Hundreds of protesting workers here refused to obey the orders of the police which forbade them to assemble, and as a result several were arrested.

The Labor Federation of Guayas has cabled to Governor Fuller protesting the death sentence against Sacco and Vanzetti.

PANAMA WORKERS' MEETING BARRED.

PANAMA, Aug. 10.—Permission to hold a meeting to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has been refused the Labor Syndicate here by Marco Galindo, civil chief of the federal district, and tool of American imperialism, on the grounds that such a meeting would be "censdire" of "the eminent persons" who have tried Sacco and Vanzetti in Massachusetts.

The Labor Federation is not affiliated with the paper organization, which is authorized by Washington and Wall Street to represent the Panama workers.

PHILIPPINE LABOR PROTESTS.

MANILA, Aug. 10.—35,000 Philippine workers thru their representatives in the Philippine Labor Congress have sent the following resolution to governor Fuller.

"The Philippine Labor Congress energetically protests against the Sacco-Vanzetti executions. We join the millions of workers all over the world in demanding their immediate release."

PARAGUAYAN PRESS DENOUNCES FULLER.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Aug. 10.—While this city is being flooded with handbills and posters denouncing the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, the press has united in demanding a commutation of their sentence and a clarification of the prosecution proceedings.

PROFINTERN CALLS ON WORLD PROLETARIAT.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 10.—The Executive Bureau of the Profintern appeals to the proletariat of all countries and invites them to protest sharply against the execution of the innocent Sacco and Vanzetti.

STOCKHOLM MASSES DEMAND RELEASE.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Aug. 10.—A delegation from the mass meeting held here yesterday has called on the United States minister, Leland Harrison, and presented a resolution declaring that the people of Sweden are convinced of the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti and demanding their immediate liberation.

POLICE CLUB BELGIAN DEMONSTRATORS.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 10.—Police attacked and clubbed a protest demonstration in front of the United States consulate here. The demonstration, which was being held under the auspices of the Belgian Communist Party, had handed the American consul a protest against the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti by the capitalist courts of Massachusetts.

CANADIAN WORKERS PROTEST.

MONTREAL, Aug. 10.—Thousands of workers and sympathizers packed two halls here in meetings arranged by the Canadian Labor Defense League to protest against the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Speakers addressed the meetings in several languages.

WARSAW POLICE BREAK UP DEMONSTRATION.

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 10.—Police prevented a demonstration to protest the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti in front of the United States embassy here. Mass meetings which have been called by the labor organizations, have sent resolutions to President Coolidge, demanding the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

SERBS, CROATS AND SLOVENES PROTEST.

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Aug. 10.—A demonstration to protest against the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti will be held in Belgrade today.

AMERICANS IN CANADA PROTEST.

MAGOG, Quebec, Canada, Aug. 10.—"Calling on Governor Fuller not to stain the hands of its commonwealth of Massachusetts with the blood of innocent men, Americans here have united in sending a protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

AUSTRALIAN TRADE UNION CONGRESS.

MELBOURNE, Aug. 10.—Heavy details of armed police have been detailed to guard the residences of the American consular officials in Melbourne due to fears of attacks from Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, said a Central News Dispatch from Sydney, Australia, today.

The All-Australia Trade Union Congress has cabled to the United States, vigorously protesting against the death sentences imposed upon the two workers.

PICKET EMBASSY IN LONDON.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Communists today completed plans for an all night vigil outside of the United States embassy in Grosvenor Gardens tonight as a protest against the impending executions of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

After a huge mass meeting this evening in Hyde Park the demonstrators will march to the embassy and take up positions as near to the building as the police will allow them.

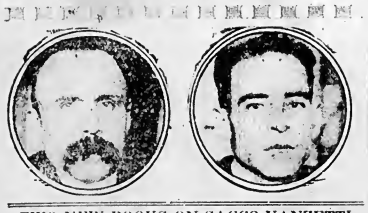
Speeches will be made from time to time during the night. Scotland Yard has made extensive arrangements. A cordon of police and detectives will be placed at the end of the gardens and all traffic will be prohibited. The rear approaches to the embassy will be constantly patrolled.

LAFAYETTE PROTESTS.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Marquis Luy de Lasteyrie, grandson of Gen. Lafayette, of American revolutionary war fame, today united with the French friends of Sacco and Vanzetti in protesting against the execution of the two men at Boston tonight.

In a cablegram to Governor Alvan T. Fuller, of Massachusetts, the Marquis said:

"As a grandson of Lafayette, founder of American liberty, I join my voice to the voice of France and Europe in requesting clemency for Sacco and Vanzetti."



Radical new-papers admitted that "only a miracle can now save Sacco and Vanzetti."

The Communist new-paper Humanite printed a cartoon of a flag with an electric execution chair and a skull and cross bones upon it, with the caption underneath: "The New Star Spangled Banner."

CAIRO'S LEGGATION GUARDED.

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 10.—A strong police guard was posted today around the American legation to prevent hostile demonstrations by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

Thousand Los Angeles Police Smash Meeting In Plaza; Many Strike

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—While the Carpenters' and Needle Trades Unions went out on protest strike, a thousand heavily armed police broke up the protest meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti which was held in Plaza Square under the auspices of the Central Labor Council, the Workers (Communist) Party and the I. W. W.

Twenty-six leading Communists and I. W. W.'s were arrested, charged with criminal syndicalism and held without bail, while Gitlow man, secretary of the Workers Party was beaten up.

The houses of all Communists are being searched and all party headquarters are occupied by police and closely guarded.

Los Angeles Police Jail Communists; Wreck Headquarters

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 10.—Malcolm Rowe, John Lindeman and Joseph Zack, staff writers for the Workers Party headquarters, 222 W. 2nd street, Saturday night, Aug. 6. The former was he turned over to the federal authorities for deportation, the press stated this morning. The two latter are Criminal Syndicalist suspects, according to police reports.

The raid was preceded by the wrecking of the paper, and he found headquarters to be an awful looking place. 2 a. m. the next morning he said damage done by police.

Grant Named Graft.

"Red Session Broken Up" says the "Times" in a long front page article full of lies. Need to say anything more—dealing, to some extent, with the truth in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. We learn that Judge Brown of the Massachusetts Supreme Court was "deafness" during the trial, and the name of Judge Grant, of Governor Fuller's advisory committee, appeared in the labor-baiting Times as Judge "Graft."

A man, who is forced to quit the L. A. Times for a living, was the first to buy the DAILY WORKER today, and the party who "Speed Graft" is afraid of "Graft" probably knew what he was doing. Who knows?

"Bomb Plot" Charged.

The police are said to have received an anonymous phone call yesterday to the effect that a bomb plot was being formented at the place raided as a protest to the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti." No bombs or guns were found, however, at the Party headquarters. The most dangerous weapons found were some "mental dynamite." Part of it was confiscated in order to provide free ammunition for police officers.

Drive Against Radicals Planned.

Federal, county and city officials have started a "clean-up" campaign against "Reds." Ammunition was placed at all public buildings. Also a boost prominent motion picture "extra" act" and chairman of the grand-stunt committee of the International Brotherhood Welfare Association, he was forced to walk from the steps of the court house today. He was looking for a job at the war veterans building, at which place movie extras are hired. So this ought to be a cause for Will Hays, czar of moralism, to take under consideration.

Police "Respect" For Bearded Men.

Jack has a fine beard. Every time a bad man was told to beat it—or got—he said. All bearded men are Bolsheviks, you know in the eyes of the police. They may make an exception, however, in the case of former Secretary of State Hughes.

JAIL SENTENCES FOR SUPPORTING SACCO, VANZETTI

Socialist in Role of Stool-Pigeon

Because they participated in a parade for Sacco and Vanzetti after the demonstration in Union Square ended last Tuesday, jail sentences and heavy fines were meted out to workers arrested.

Four workers, Isaac McCreery, Joseph Asschim, Agardini Salamini and George Poelis were sentenced to five days in the workhouse. Otto Schultz was released after he paid a $25 fine. They appeared before Magistrate Dodge in the 54th St. night court. Their cases were acted upon before Jacques Buttenkant, attorney for the International Labor Defense appeared.

Shortly afterwards Salvatore Bore and K. Klarockis were led before the magistrate. Bore admitted that he had shouted "Liberate Sacco and Vanzetti," thereupon he was placed under arrest. He was fined $10.

Klarocko told the court that he booed when Bore was arrested. As a result of that he was also taken into custody. He was released on a suspended sentence.

Samuel H. Freidman, a socialist party member who is connected with the editorial staff of Women's Wear Daily told Magistrate Dodge that "It was a Communist demonstration and I am a socialist." Algernon Lee, director of the Rand School, appeared as a character witness to prove his respectability. He was held for a hearing in the Tombs court.

N. J. Garment Workers' Resolution Denounces "Legalized Murders"

ROSELLE, N. J., Aug. 10.—Members of the United Garment Workers have passed the following protest resolution:

We members of the United Garment Workers of local 256 at the Labor Lyceum, Roselle, N. J., protest against the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti who the whole world knows are innocent.

IMPERIALISM

The International Struggle for Petroleum

By LOUIS FISCHER

"The scientific account of the most valuable book" says

THE MOSCOW PRAVDA

"The object of Fischer's investigation is the struggle of imperialist groupings and world oil magnates for the possession of oil wells, as well as the importance of under oil in the relation between the various oil combines and in diplomatic relations of capitalist countries with Soviet Russia. . . . Fischer's book avoids this great interest. What particularly recommends it is its popular style and its objectivity. We strongly recommend to our readers this very valuable book by Louis Fischer."

Internal Tammany Fight Reveals Graft.

In the drive of the Tammany Hall administration against its dissenting hang-overs from the Hylan administration the public is being treated to as rare an expose of graft as we have had for many a day.

The report of Mayor Walker's "investigator" of the health department, former Supreme Court Justice Charles H. Kelby, reveals the frightful manner in which Tammany Hall gambles with the very lives of millions of inhabitants of the city. The report is, of course, plainly partisan to the Walker administration, but its findings apply alike to all Tammany Hall administrations. It declares, in part, that:

> "The evidence of a general condition of corruption in the food inspection service of the health department prior to the present administration is overwhelming."

The most common form of graft in this department was the bribery of "inspectors" who granted permission to dealers to sell dangerous and adulterated food to the public. Some inspectors were known as "package men." This class, instead of taking cash money, took packages of food. But by far the larger number took cash in graft in the form of money in return for permission to sell unseasonous food. Another form of graft was practiced by inspectors, who entered stores and continually found fault with trivial irregularities until, in despair, graft was paid to get rid of them.

"The ramifications of the grafters extended in all directions. If certain dealers wanted to destroy a competitor, they simply paid the inspectors to close his place. Two instances of this sort are pointed out in the report that involved the closing for a considerable sum, of two retail poultry dealers on the eve of a Jewish holiday. The other Jewish dealers got the benefit of this graft.

Milk dealers who had had their permits revoked after repeated violations were again given permits on payment of from $250 to $500.

Thousands of cases could be cited to prove the wholesale corruption in this department of the administration alone.

Unsophisticated persons may read these exposures and imagine them to be the exception, but all who live in New York and observe the workings of any recent city administration, or even the state administration for that matter, know that the vast office known as Tammany Hall is built upon graft and graft alone. Everything from a license to operate a motor vehicle to a license to erect a skyscraper has its set price in the form of graft that must be paid. Tammany maintains its influence over its adherents and demands loyalty only on the promise of opportunities for graft.

The present exposures are due to the fact that the Walker administration is intent upon cleaning out all the hang-overs of the Hylan administration. Any other department of the city would be subjected to the same sort of expose with the identical results.

The revelations of the health department are particularly horrible, inasmuch as they affect the very lives of millions of workers, because most of the low, dirty bourgeois swine who pay graft to Tammany's inspectors maintain their stores in working class sections. If such a state of affairs existed in the establishments selling food to the plutocracy, we would hear a howl that would send the grafters scurrying for cover. As usual, the working class is the chief sufferer from this sort of thing.

Mayor Walker left last night for a trip to Europe, where he intends to meet King George, President Hindenburg and Mussolini. He could give the king and Hindenburg pointers on how to raise graft to aid in raising their budgets, without increasing taxes. As for Mussolini, he might be convinced by Tammany's "Broadway butterfly mayor" that there are other ways to raise funds besides plain pillage.

This report of the rotten conditions in the health department should arouse the workers of the city to a realization of the fact that Tammany Hall is one of the greatest menaces to human life and impel them to support labor candidates at the coming elections, who will fight against food pollution and all the other forms of graft that make Tammany a murderous, malignant power.

Lowden to Try to Salvage Ku Klux Indiana for Dawes.

That the candidacy for the republican presidential nomination of Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, is nothing more nor less than a campaign for Vice President Charles G. Dawes, is clearly indicated by the announcement that Lowden is to enter the Indiana primaries and seek the approval of the republican voters of that notorious Ku Klux state.

Indiana is a cesspool of graft and corruption reminiscent of the condition of affairs in the neighboring state of Ohio when the Daugherty machine was at the height of its glory in 1920, when its "favorite son," Warren G. Harding, was nominated for president.

The difference between Ohio in 1920 and Indiana today is that the Ohio graft did not become public until after the election, while the graft revelations of the ex-political boss of Indiana republicanism, Daniel C. Stephenson, now serving a prison term for the sadistic murder of a young woman, are public property.

Dawes, who is a candidate backed by a very powerful element of the republican party, would not risk the odium of endorsement by the Indiana republican machine, but still he needs the support of the Indiana delegates at the 1928 convention, so the game is to have Lowden, his stalking horse, run in the Indiana primaries, obtain the delegation and, at the proper moment during the national republican convention, turn them over to Dawes. By utilizing such political trickery Dawes will be shielded from the odium of Ku Kluxism, which is decidedly in bad odor outside a few benighted middle west localities, where the night-gown and hood is the emblem of the petty bourgeois political aspirations.

Thus one of the favorite Wall Street candidates gets the advantage of the support of the putrid middle class elements in the Ku Klux belt without becoming identified with them.

Details of Workers (Communist) Party Convention

TO ALL D.O's., EDITORS, AND ALL PARTY UNITS.

Dear Comrades:

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, with the approval of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, herewith issues the call for the Fifth Regular Convention of our Party, to convene on Wednesday, August 31st.

In accordance with the decision of the Communist International, all details for the technical arrangements, basis of representation, etc., have been prepared by the Committee for the Preparations of the Party Convention. All units should take note of the following information:

I.—Basis of Representation.

1. The establishment of quotas of delegates from nuclei to the conventions shall be based upon the average amount of dues paid during the months of February, March, April and May of 1927.

2. Representation from District Conventions to the National Convention shall be based upon the averaged number of dues paid in the respective districts during the months of February, March and April of 1927. For every 200 members in good standing during this period, there shall be elected one delegate.

3. Upon this basis the respective districts are entitled to the following representation:

District	Headquarter City	Number of Delegates
1	Boston	3
2	New York	15
3	Philadelphia	3
4	Buffalo	1
5	Pittsburgh	2
6	Cleveland	2
7	Detroit	2
8	Chicago	5
9	Minneapolis	1
10	Kansas City	1
12	Seattle	2
17	San Francisco	2
15	New Haven	1
Agricultural District		1
Young Workers League		3

4. From the nuclei to section, city and sub-district conventions there should be elected one delegate for every five members or major fraction thereof in good standing during the period of February, March, April and May of 1927.

5. From section conventions to city conventions there should be elected one delegate for each ten members or major fraction thereof in good standing during the period of February, March, April and May of 1927.

6. From city conventions and sub-district conventions to district conventions there should be elected one delegate for each 25 members or major fraction thereof in good standing during the period of February, March, April and May of 1927.

7. Nuclei shall send delegates to section, city or sub-district conventions where these are held in their respective territories. Isolated nuclei or such nuclei in those cases where only district conventions are held, may send delegates directly to the District Convention on the basis of one delegate for each 25 members or major fraction thereof.

8. Where there exist a number of cities without city central committees close together, there must be held sub-district conventions except where nuclei elect delegates directly to the District Conventions.

9. Except in cases of legitimately dissolved Party units, members within a city organization whose transfers from one unit to another were issued after July 1st, should vote in their previous units.

10. All elections in nuclei and conventions of all other Party subdivisions must be completed not later than August 20th.

11. All District Conventions should take place not later than August 21st.

12. In the New York District there shall be no sub-district convention.

13. The Young Workers League National Executive Committee and other existing sub-divisions (committees) of the Young Workers League parallel to the Party subdivisions (committees) shall elect three representatives to the respective conventions on the basis of two delegates for the majority and one delegate for the minority—where there exists a majority and minority. The delegates of the Young Workers League shall not be entitled to vote, however, when their votes are decisive in the respective conventions.

14. Comrades more than six months in arrears after August 3rd shall not be allowed to vote in the elections even though they are prepared to pay up their dues before the elections take place.

II.—Proportional Representation.

The system of proportional representation to be applied by the Party is as follows:

15. In accordance with Article 2, Section 1, of the Party Constitution: "No election of delegates to any conference or convention shall be valid unless 55 per cent of the good standing members in the Party unit participated in the Party elections."

16. Voting of the nuclei for the slates of the majority of the Polcom and the Opposition shall take place on the basis of voting for the Resolution of the Polcom Majority and the Resolution of the Opposition.

17. Where a nucleus is entitled to one delegate that slate which secures the majority of votes the delegate with one full vote.

18. For nuclei entitled to two delegates the attached table of votes shall apply, this table herewith worked out aims to cover all possible combinations of votes in the nuclei entitled to two delegates.

19. For all nuclei entitled to three or more delegates the following system shall be used: Take the number of votes cast for the slate receiving the majority; multiply this number by the number of delegates the nucleus is entitled to and divide this result by the total number of votes cast for both slates; adjust the result you thus get to the nearest Third. This establishes the number of delegates and voting power for the majority. The minority takes the remainder of the voting power and delegates of the nucleus.

Example:

The number of delegates to which the nucleus is entitled..... 3
Total votes cast in the elections 14
Number of votes received by majority 8
Multiply 8 by the three delegates 24
Divide the 21 by the total votes cast for both sides which is 14. This gives a result of 1 14-21 which, when adjusted to the nearest Third amounts to 1 2-3 votes and delegates for the majority. The minority takes the balance of the three delegates and votes which in this case amounts to 1 1-3.

20. From section, city, sub-district and district conventions to the higher conventions, the same system of proportional representation shall be applied as here with outlined for nuclei entitled to three delegates.

21. Only when a slate in the nucleus or any other Party subdivision has no full delegate shall it send to any convention a delegate to cast a ½ of a vote. When a slate in a nucleus or any other Party subdivision has more than one delegate, the ½ vote shall be added to those delegates' voting power of the same slate. Where there have been ½ of a vote they may send a delegate therefor or add it to the voting power of their delegation economy being borne in mind on every such instance

III.—General.

22. In every district there shall be elected a District Convention Arrangements Committee in which the majority of the District Executive Committee shall have a majority and the minority of the District Committee shall have an adequately representative minority. The Personnel of the minority representation shall be selected by the minority itself.

24. In these District Convention Arrangements Committees appeals may be made from decision arrived at. Whether these appeals shall be laid down before the Committee for the Preparation of the Party Convention or whether any of the disputed arrangements in the various districts shall be held in abeyance, will depend upon the endorsement of the appeal in question by any one of the two deputy chairmen.

25. The nucleus, secretary shall write in the word "voted" over the associated stamp in the book of every member after the voting has taken place.

26. That all District Organizers be instructed to make freely accessible to every member of the District Convention Arrangements Committee for use in the office, the complete lists of the membership and units.

27. All CEC members and candidates are entitled to be present and participate in the convention whether they are delegates or not.

28. CEC representatives of the majority of the Polcom and the Opposition shall be present at all District Conventions.

29. The city in which the National Convention will be held will be announced shortly.

Fraternally yours,
Committee for the Preparation of the Party Convention
Jay Lovestone, Wm. Z. Foster,
Deputy Chairmen.

Sentimental Talk About Justice and Liberty.

Most nauseating has been the banal twaddle emanating from liberals and socialists about the death of those metaphysical entities "justice" and "liberty" in connection with the Sacco and Vanzetti agitation. We are solemnly assured that "justice dies with Sacco and Vanzetti." that "liberty will be dead when they die." Such talk is imbecile and positively harmful. These same people will, when next the capitalist mad-dogs are on the trail of other workers, mouth the old meaningless phrases about justice and liberty and affirm that when the next atrocity against labor is perpetrated that these twin illusions of capitalist society will then be dead.

How sane people can talk of justice in this country where Tom Mooney has been rotting in prison for more than eleven years on framed-up evidence is beyond our comprehension. Have we not had a thousand examples during and since the world war that prove that there is only class justice in this country? Was it justice that tortured Sacco and Vanzetti for seven ghastly years before August 10th? Such insane talk only tends to perpetuate capitalist class illusions and is a positively detriment to the working class.

As for liberty it is nothing but a mockery. That pile of junk on Bedloe's Island symbolizes nothing but tyranny. Liberty in this country is a hag of ten thousand debauches. The torch in the hand of the statue symbolizes the instrument of destruction, the electric chair, that is used to burn the lives out of workmen to dare strive to realize some of that liberty they were assured exists in the United States.

Instead of lulling the workers into a false sense of security by perpetuating illusions about liberty and justice the revolutionist must expose these frauds and prepare the workers for the time when capitalist class justice is abolished, along with the capitalist system, and working class justice substituted therefore under the revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat.

DRAMA

Caesar Dunn's Farce Opens at Ritz Next Week

"Speakeasy," the new melodrama by Edward Knoblock and George Rosener, will be the opening attraction at Werba's Brooklyn theatre next Monday night.

Edgar MacGregor, who has confined his activities to stage direction, will this season enter the ranks of the producing managers, with a musical comedy called "Belle Jean." The book is by MacGregor and Neil Twomey.

Alexis Kosloff, of the Metropolitan Opera House, who will give his open air dancing and ballet extravaganza, tomorrow, Friday night, at the Starlight Stadium, will have the following in the ensemble: Alexander Gavrilov, Madame Strekalova, Nenia Makletzova, Rite De Leporte, Ruth Hazelton, and Valentia Kaschouba.

Robert V. Newman has a new musical comedy titled, "Morning Glories," which he will produce shortly. The book is the work of Ralph Murphy with the score by Harold Lewis and Charles Roseff and the lyrics by Morrie Ryskind and Mr. Murphy.

"Good News," the Schwab and Mandel musical comedy opened at the Chestnut Opera House Monday night in Philadelphia. It is scheduled to run there for four weeks, and then come to the Amsbassador theatre here.

Needle Trade Defense

Membership Books Ready.

The special membership books for the Workers Defense organization are now ready. These are being distributed to all those who have made pledges. From now on every one who becomes a member of the Workers Self Defense organization will receive a stamp with each payment. The Workers Self Defense is one of the most important undertakings of the Joint Defense and Relief Committee. An army of thousands must be built up to carry on the fight against the right wing bureaucracy in the Needle trades and the betrayers of labor. This army will be able to furnish the necessary expenses which are needed to carry the struggle to victory. Only through a strong Workers Defense organization will we be able to successfully carry on the fight. Every worker and sympathizer a member of the Workers self Defense, must become the slogan of all.

$8 Sick Benefit is Turned Over to The Defense Committee

The Joint Defense and Relief Committee has received from B. Alter, Secretary of Branch 611, W. C. a check for $8 with a letter stating that Brother Louis Strickoff, a member of that branch refused to accept his sick benefit, requesting it be turned over as a donation to the Defense Committee. No explanations are necessary.

Anti-Italian Bias Of Judge Grant Hit By Author's Letter

The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee made public as a late hour yesterday the following telegram to Governor Fuller from Alexander Kaderon, author, residing at 5 West 75th St.:

"The first signature to the report of your advisory committee is that of Robert Grant, formerly Judge of the Probate Court and Court of Insolvency of Suffolk County, Massachusetts.

"Now, what were the views held by Mr. Grant which should have disqualified him from membership on your advisory committee? I refer to a book entitled 'The Convictions of a Grandfather' which was published in New York City in 1912, by Scribner's.

"Beginning on page 267, Mr. Grant expresses a very marked prejudice against Italians. His "misfortunes," he wrote, "would seem to be fundamentally traceable to Italian misconception of the meaning of the brotherhood of man." Surely a man of seventy-five who at the age of sixty revealed so strong a bias against Italians must have found it hard to be fair to Sacco and Vanzetti.

REPRIEVE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI UNTIL AUGUST 22; STILL DANGER

when they arrived that a reprieve had been granted to Sacco and Vanzetti and also to Madeiros.

The power of labor had at last beaten thru the thick conscience of the most callous and brutal of American industrial and financial aristocracies. It did not mean that Sacco and Vanzetti were out of danger. Far from it. It meant that in the face of an outraged world, with enormous strikes, strikes that totaled millions of men in every nation, and with a growing revolutionary fervor both at home and abroad, the ruling class of Massachusetts felt that it needed a respite, a chance to make fresh plans, to find the best way out of a bad situation. It meant that those with power in Massachusetts want a little time, and hope in that time that interest will die out, labor will quiet down, and the execution can go on, as planned originally.

Sacco and Vanzetti beat the death chair tonight just forty minutes before they were scheduled to die. The reprieve was granted because the state supreme court will announce tomorrow at noon whether their case is to be admitted again into the courts.

When the reprieve was announced the armed forces began to melt away. They had little actual work to do, except to disperse one crowd of two thousand persons which attempted to gather near the prison early. By midnight most of the guards had been withdrawn.

Sacco and Vanzetti will be removed from the death house tomorrow morning and taken back to the Cherry Hill jail.

Madeiros will be transferred to some other cell at the state prison.

WEINSTONE CALLS FOR CONTINUED STRUGGLE.

William W. Weinstone, secretary of District 2 Workers (Communist) Party, issued the following statement upon receiving the news of the reprieve:

"Militant labor can congratulate itself on forcing the hand of Governor Fuller. The round in the struggle for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti has been won.

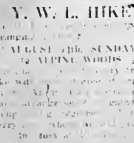
"But the struggle is not yet over. Labor must not rest with a reprieve. Sacco and Vanzetti are still behind the prison bars and still within the shadow of the electric chair.

"Labor through the country must increase its efforts ten-fold to free Sacco and Vanzetti. The danger of electrocution or life imprisonment is still present.

"The voice of labor must now ring out. No execution! No life imprisonment! No extension of prison sentence! Only freedom! Let the fight go on!"

ACCUSES THAYER.

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—The execution of Sacco and Vanzetti was postponed after a day of hectic conferences and court hearings. Arthur Hill, attorney for the condemned men, went into the State Supreme Court today with exceptions to the rulings of Judge Webster Thayer, who had refused to revoke the death sentence or hear a motion for a new trial.



Judge Sanderson announced that he would pass upon the exceptions tomorrow.

Hill hurried to the Governor's office and pleaded for a respite so that his clients could have the benefit of tomorrow's decision.

The Governor summoned Attorney General Reading, six former attorney generals, his personal attorney and the executive council.

Mayor Hylan Demands New Trial for Sacco, Vanzetti From Fuller

Former Mayor John F. Hylan sent the following telegram to Governor Fuller yesterday: "The mere fact that tens of millions of people throughout the world, representing all classes and ranks, maintain that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent should move you to at least grant them a new trial.

"John F. Hylan, Former Mayor of New York City."

Sigman Fake Elections Is Being Ignored By Chicago Cloakmakers

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—All cloak and dress makers are asked to attend a meeting to be held Thursday at the hall, Western and Division St. It has been called for the same time as the right wing will hold its "installation."

At a meeting of Local 59, held Monday evening, the membership passed a resolution condemning the fake elections of the right wing. They also went on record to hold a regular election.

In the discussion it was brot out how many the Sigman clique voted two and three times. In spite of that the total vote was low.

Salvatore Ninfo, right wing vice-president, appeared at the meeting, but was not able to influence the members to participate in the fake elections.

The financial secretary of the joint board, a right winger, has attempted to cash $500 check of the union to pay the Sigman thugs. The joint board has notified the Amalgamated Bank not to pay any money without checks being signed by the union's trustees.

On Thursday Sigman will install his Chicago officers. He has already arrived here. It will be a personal affair, not concerning the rank and file workers. The membership will attend the general meeting of the union that will be held at the same time.

Capitol Concert Called Off Due to Vanzetti-Sacco Demonstrations

WASHINGTON, August 10.—Due to demonstrations in the capital by sympathizers of Sacco and Vanzetti, the regular Wednesday night concert by the marine band on the capitol plaza was called off at the request of the state department today. Justice department officials warned against giving the concert, since it would attract crowds. All public buildings and homes of prominent public officials were guarded tonight. Four hundred policemen and justice department agents were patrolling these places.

INSTRUCTIONS DISTRICT CONVENTION ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE, DISTRICT No. 2

In addition to the instructions of the National Arrangements Committee, the District Convention Arrangements Committee has decided upon the following directions for the elections in District 2:

1. Elections in the units shall be held beginning Thursday, August 11, and continuing through Wednesday, August 17. The units are to hold their meetings on their regular meeting nights but if this is impossible, special meetings are to be called and the district is to be notified when these meetings are to be held.

2. Number of delegates for the units. The number of delegates from each unit to the section conferences in New York City shall be as outlined in point 1 of the National Arrangements Committee, which has been agreed to by the District Arrangements Committee to mean:

3. The basis for apportionment of delegates shall be good standing for February, March, April and May, irrespective of the time the dues were paid. Provided, however, all members who were more than six months in arrears shall have put themselves in good standing on or before August 3rd. To determine this, it will be necessary to check the membership books with the financial records of the secretary.

4. Discussion. The District Convention Arrangements Committee will attempt to supply speakers to as many units as possible. If either side requests speakers, speakers from both sides will be sent. Unless speakers have been assigned for both sides by the district, no outside speaker can participate in the discussion in the units.

5. Exemptions. Needle trades comrades who have been active in the strike or regularly unemployed as a result of the strike. Active needle trades comrades not in good standing who were active in the strike and otherwise unemployed as a result of the needle trades situation and who request exemption, shall have their cases taken up by the unit, which shall have the right to grant exemption to them. In the event that the unit refuses, the comrade may appeal the action to the District Arrangements Committee and the unit shall allow the comrade to register his vote.

6. Section conferences. Section conferences shall be held as follows:

Thursday, August 18, Sections 1, 2 and 4.
Friday, August 19, Sections 3, 5, 6 and 7.
Night Workers Section:
Morning Branch, Tuesday, August 16, 10:00 a. m.
All other units, N. W. Section, Tuesday, Aug. 16, 2:30 p. m.

All section conferences shall be in charge of the District Committee, members of the Section Committee to have the same right to participate in the section conferences as DEC members participate in the District Convention.

New Jersey and Isolated Cities. All units in New Jersey and outlying districts will send delegates directly to the District Convention. These delegates are to be elected at the city membership meeting. All units of ten or more average dues-paying members for the months of February, March, April and May will be entitled to one delegate—the basis of representation from these outlying units being the same as from sections to District Conventions, i. e., one for every twenty-five or major fraction. All units of less than ten delegates will have fraternal delegates direct to the District Convention, and the District Convention Arrangements Committee will appoint one delegate from each city to represent them at the convention.

All voting is to be recorded upon blanks provided by the District Committee, which will contain instructions as to how to fill them out.

The District has acted upon disputes and has assigned comrades. Such assignments and action will be referred to the units by letter.

The Silk Hats Worry Over Their Lynching

(By JOHN DOS PASSOS.)
(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—The dome of the State House shines jauntily in the sun of the blue sky this afternoon. Under it the official lynching party has been in conference all day.

At noon the Governor was conferring with seven ex-attorney generals of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Why such a constellation? Can it be that the Governor is losing his nerve? All day the yellow walls of the State House enclosed some thing mysterious—the Silk Hats are anxious. A ramble of millions of hoarse voices crying murder round the world goes sifting through the marble corridors, stirring dry sheets of legal documents. Outside in the sunlight dicks, bulls, plainclothes men shuffle their feet on the curbs, staring up at the Governor's windows, giving an occasional nervous look behind them at the sparse crowd that saunters round the edges of the Common. People of Boston are afraid to know about the terrible thing that goes sifting through the marble corridors, stirring dry sheets of legal documents. Outside in the sunlight dicks, bulls, plainclothes men shuffle their feet on the curbs, staring up at the Governor's windows, giving an occasional nervous look behind them at the sparse crowd that saunters round the edges of the Common. People of Boston are afraid to know about the terrible play for which their city is the stage.

They saunter and chat and go about their business, pretending that nothing is happening. "A lot of crazy agitators from out of town," they say one to another, staring at the silent file of picketers.

"Why shouldn't the two wops be framed and die? Better men than they have been framed before them."

And in the death cells at Charlestown three men sit on their cots, take a couple of steps back and forth across the narrow floor, clasp and unclasp their hands.

Gunman Madeiros wants to die. He feels good about his confession—that he hasn't blabbed on the gang. "I'm a rotten egg, anyway; don't matter about me, but it's a shame about the other guys," he says.

Sacco weak from three weeks of hunger strike waits to die calm in the fact that the world proletariat is at last showing its power. He has said goodby to Rose and sent last messages to kids. He has refused to sign a plea for habeas corpus proceedings before a federal judge. He's through with the agony of hope.

Vanzetti signed the paper without hope, but will not throw away the chance of justice. He feels a slender chance that echoing protest from all continents may save them where it failed to save Ferrer. He sits writing to the world slipping away messages that get no further than the fat gun of the prison warden. They are ready to meet the worst the law's torture machine can do to them.

And somewhere in the prison suite the man who's waiting to throw the switch that will burn them dead.

Meanwhile the lynching party is letting only rumors slip out from under their silk hats. Have they lost nerve or are they pulling protest by an appearance of reason? A few hours will decide matters either if the Supreme Court judges, Brandeis and Holmes, have the manhood to balk their class and traditions by issuing a writ of habeas corpus. Is the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to be the murderer of two innocent men? The few hours left are fast ticking out the decision.

plants. Satisfactory credentials of citizenship or legal entrance into the country are required by the Federal employment office.

Secretary Davis left this afternoon on a western trip. He will confer with President Coolidge at Rapid City, where he will lay his plans before the president.

Secretary Davis demanded complete co-operation by the employers in America with his new campaign to fingerprint all alien workers in America, for concentration in blacklisting and deporting any who fight the class war here.

Giant Jamboree to Strike a Blow at Woll-Sigman Gang

Now is the time to strike the final blow at the Sigman-Beckerman-Woll-Frayne and the other fakers who are using all the means at their disposal to crush the militant working class.

For months the struggle has been carried on in a most ruthless fashion. Workers were brutally beaten up by thugs hired into prison. The Joint Defense of Furriers and Chairmakers rose to the occasion and fought back at the reactionaries. Thousands of dollars were collected from the [illegible] from the pennies of the workers.

Sigman was the supreme agent and Woll became panicky and plotted with the bosses and police to have more and more workers arrested so that the demands upon the Defense Fund were overwhelming. The response was very good.

Reactionaries Retreating.

The courage of the workers has had its effect. Sigman, Shiplacoff and the other fakers have commenced fighting amongst themselves.

Strike the Final Blow.

A final Jamboree of all militants is being held in Starlight Park, 174th St. Bronx, on Sunday, August 28th, for the specific purpose of supplying the necessary dollar bullets with which to storm the last stronghold of reaction.

GOVERNOR SMITH CANNOT EVADE ISSUE OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

The Workers (Communist) Party through its District Executive Committee today issued a statement pointing out that the governor of the state of New York, Alfred Smith, who has been parading as the friend of labor during election periods, has kept an absolute silence regarding the case of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"Despite the fact that hundreds of thousands of workers have demonstrated through strikes and mass meetings their faith in the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti and have confirmed the approaching execution of these workers, Gov. Smith has kept an ominous silence. In this critical hour, when the lives of these workers are at stake and when the welfare of labor is involved, Gov. Smith prefers to keep silent. This silence can only be understood as support for the enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti. Silence means support of Massachusetts injustice. It means that the governor of the state of New York is taking his place side by side with Gov. Fuller and many others in their outrageous conduct against Sacco and Vanzetti. For the sake of his political ambition and to demonstrate his allegiance to the capitalist class of this country, Gov. Smith refuses to voice the protest of the electorate of the State of New York by calling upon Gov. Fuller to grant immediate and unconditional freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti.

In the coming election campaign the attitude of Gov. Smith will not be forgotten. The attitude of Gov. Smith, of the Union of Judge Thayer, of Rep. Johnston and the capitalist politicians of this country indicate that labor needs a party of its own in order to secure justice for the working class.

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY,
NEW YORK DISTRICT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS IN GIANT PROTEST FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

The strike of hundreds of thousands of workers in cities of all sections of labor and the mass meetings held in various halls in the city, ending up in a demonstration in Union Square, attended by 50,000 workers, is a powerful answer to Gov. Fuller and to his commission, and shows that the vast majority of people not only of this state but of the nation firmly believe in the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

These meetings and strikes called despite the intimidation and terror of the police, and the intimidating statement of Rep. Johnston of the Committee of Immigration and Naturalization, show that labor is ready to make every sacrifice for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. If Sacco and Vanzetti are murdered in the electric chair it will not for a single moment shake the confidence of the masses of workers in these two men.

But Sacco and Vanzetti are guilty of any crime, but Judge Thayer, Gov. Fuller Massachusetts justice and the capitalist class institutions are guilty of the crime of a vicious frame-up and of railroading these two workers to death.

The fight of labor continues. We do not yet surrender these workers to the hands of the executioners. The protests will go on up to the last minute. The voice of labor will be heard. If our protest is unsuccessful, the struggle will go on for justice to the working class. A thousand militant workers will take the place of Sacco and Vanzetti and the fight for the emancipation of labor from capitalist slavery and capitalist oppression will go on unabated. Labor will learn the lesson from this persecution that it must unite in powerful industrial unions, must build a mass labor party in this country, and must fight with greater energy and perseverance for the cause of the emancipation of the workers.

FULLER MURDERS FOR CLASS; AND PRESS REJOICES

Class Lines Stand Out In Sacco Case

By CARL HAESSLER (Fed. Press).

Class Lines Show Clear.—

CHICAGO, Aug. 10 (FP).—The history of the public opinion in the Haymarket anarchist case in Chicago is repeating itself in the judgements on the Sacco-Vanzetti case in Massachusetts. Society is dividing on class lines, the defenders of the capitalist system on the side and the workers on the other, with the drifting liberals inclined to favor the innocence of the judicial victims. In time all opinion will, as it is largely toward innocence, as it has done in the case of Albert Parsons and the other labor men hanged in 1887 because of a fatal bomb explosion whose perpetrator has never been traced.

Wages and Working Conditions in China

By EARL BROWDER.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The articles beginning today on Wages and Working Conditions in China by Earl Browder, are a preliminary to his story of the trip of the International Worker Delegation, of which he was a member, thru China, which will be followed by a detailed study of the Chinese revolution and the organizations of the Chinese toilers. These articles are preliminary to the appearance of a book which Comrade Browder is at work upon, to appear in a few months, which will be entitled "Workers and Peasants in the Chinese Revolution.")

THERE is so little data on exact wages and working conditions in China, that every little information that can be added to the store of information on the subject is of value. Therefore, in the following article I have condensed the most important observations made on this subject during a five-month visit covering the Provinces of Kwangtung, Kiangsi, Hupeh, and Hunan, during this time my colleagues and I made one trip of 25 days thru the interior of Kwangtung and Kiangsi, and later a trip of five days thru Hunan, most of which time was spent in the smaller cities and towns which are seldom heard of outside of China. Thus we obtained a picture of conditions thruout South and Central China, in the large cities as well as small towns, as they obtained in February, March, April and May of 1927.

CANTON (Kwantung Province) was our first point of investigation. This is a city of over a million population, the Southern gateway to China, the center of the National movement for years, and the only place in China where trade unions were legal before the middle of last year. Canton was the headquarters of the All-China Labor Federation from 1922 to the beginning of 1927. It is not, however, a modern industrial city, like Shanghai or Hankow, but almost entirely commercial and handicraft industries.

IN spite of the handicap of this fact, the workers of Canton were enjoying conditions better than we found later in any other place. Since we were there, it must be remembered, the coup d'etat of Li Chi-sen, lieutenant of Chiang Kai-shek, has placed power in the hands of the enemies of the workers; this fact is probably already showing itself in a worsening of conditions, but of the details of this we as yet know nothing. Medical work in Canton as it was in February.

THERE are approximately 230,000 workers in Canton organized in the trade unions. Of these about 150,000 are mid-tsing workers in the modern sense, the best living artisans, shop clerks, and coolies. These industrial workers constitute a sort of economic aristocracy, their wages and working conditions being much higher than the rest of the working class. They consist of, in the main, seamen, railway workers, chauffeurs, electric light and waterworkers employes, arsenal workers, the employes of a few small textile mills and machine shops, and modern printing plants.

THE ordinary, usual wages of workers in these lines is $30 per month (all Chinese is normally about the same as Russian, or $10 cent U. S., but Chinese currencies are almost universally depreciated about 20 per cent at this time.) The wages allows for no rest days. Strikes also worked the same as other days. The living cost in Canton for All workers.

The railroad workers get a wage somewhat above this average, because, although they also work on Sundays, they now get paid double time for this day. Chauffeurs get another special category, on account of shortage of skilled men they were receiving $50 (Chinese) per month. Almost all of these 150,000 workers have the 8-hour day, nominally, but "military emergencies" constantly cancel this "rule."

THE artisans thunderstruck workers constitute the main body of the Canton working class. The principal groups are, in the building trade, bamboo work, [illegible] wood [illegible], iron, metal [illegible], stone [illegible], workers, paper, [illegible] workers, [illegible] [illegible] among marble and precious [illegible].

They generally work 2 to 6 artisans in the shop with their own power, who also works alongside of them. These little shops are scattered along the business streets, the entire front being open, the men working next to the street where the prospective customers are passing along. They eat and live with their employer, working 12 to 16 hours per day, seven days per week; their only holidays are at New Years, when they have 5 to 10 days.

APPRENTICES work for 3 to 5 years for nothing but food and bed; at the end of their apprenticeships they begin to draw wages, $3 to $5 per month, which gradually increases, up to $20 per month, with a running at a smart pace, to carry very few highly skilled workers, of their more fortunate fellow citizens, getting more. The wage for several miles for from 3 to 20 cents. Artisans of average skill is paid $20. These coolies not only bear the burden of the day, but also the [illegible] of their physical loads, but also a terrific burden of taxation and middle-men.

In addition to his wage, the artisan is fed on a bowl of rice, twice or three times a day, with a piece of pork cabbage, and has a hole to sleep in, or a bench in the shop. The conditions of work of the artisans, especially in the interior of China and in the small towns, are ill-tinctly semi-feudal.

II.

THE coolies form a large and important part of the working class in Canton, as everywhere in China. There are several groups, such as rickshaw coolies, cart coolies, warehouse coolies, etc. They perform the labor that in other countries is done by animals or machinery; it is absolutely "inhuman," if that word can have any meaning, as it is almost impossible to believe that human beings can continue to live, bearing such burdens every day in the year, for 10 to 14 hours a day.

THE rickshaw coolies take the place of horses and automobiles for city transports, and spend hours on end trotting with their burdens. Their wages are from 12 to 15 dollars per month, with a running at a smart pace, to carry one passenger, or two if the fare is small enough. Their food consists of two coppers they pick up here and there from odd jobs.

I HAVE seen in Canton, great heavy carts loaded high with cans bearing the "Socony" (Standard Oil Co. of New York) label, being pulled thru the streets by gangs of men, women, and children, evidently families, [illegible] [illegible], gaunt and exhausted, straining with all their might at the traces and cursing and swearing at the [illegible] each one twelve hours' labor, to the greater profit of Standard Oil.

Coolies also [illegible] heavily with Rockefeller prizes his Chinese oil stocks, and why capitalists everywhere are determined that the "Godgiven" trade unions of China must be destroyed.

III.

THE clerks, in stores, shops, and ten houses, form another large group, in Canton about 35,000 are organized in the trade unions. There are still traces in Canton of the semi-slave, semi-feudal conditions under which the chief clerks still in most places in China. The same have, however, abolished many of the worst abuses such as corporal punishment, unlimited hours, etc. Gradually order and system [illegible] brought even into the lives of these miserable shop clerks.

IN Canton, after a long strike, the hours of clerks in the big department stores was limited to 10 per day. In small stores hours are 11 to 12 per day. In some of the [illegible] houses the hours are 12, because they keep open night and day and the Union will no longer permit the [illegible] shift that used to prevail, when the workers slept at odd moments when there were no customers, but had to be present at all times for work.

Almost all of them live and eat in the shops, their sleeping quarters consisting of a shelf under a counter, or beneath a stairway, and their food the inevitable bowl of rice, with a bit of pork on feast days. They begin work as apprentices with no wages, usually start with the fourth year, when [illegible] the small [illegible] [illegible] per month, [illegible] per month, [illegible] per month,

Ten Days Remain to Fight To Save Sacco and Vanzetti

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

SACCO and Vanzetti are still living, if the term can be applied to the terrible existence under which two heroes of the class struggle have been forced to suffer for seven agonizing years. They are still living because the hands of the Massachusetts hangmen were halted by the giant protest of the workers of the world. Our comrades are still breathing in their death cells not because of the existence of a spark of what is commonly known as humanity in the hearts of the capitalists of New England. Indeed it is doubtful if the annals of history can show another instance of an executive holding off a reprieve deliberately until a few bare minutes before the clock would tick the fatal hour. This fact alone puts the x-ray on the black, class-prejudiced heart of governor Alvan T. Fuller.

THE capitalists kill thousands of people daily in their exploiting penthroat the United States. Sometimes it is done violently; other times slowly. And it is done quite legally, because why should a capitalist government, run in the interests of itself make laws against itself. When little children are slowly poisoned by fatigue in southern cotton mills or adults die from the effects of poisons in factories, there is no danger that those responsible will face an electric chair. The capitalists are not particularly anxious to kill workers in electric chairs. They prefer to wear them out in factories, making profit out of them meanwhile. But when workers like Sacco and Vanzetti, or Tom Mooney or Bill Haywood, jeopardise their profits from human toil, they have no more scruple about snuffing out a human life than a dog would have in killing a rabbit.

IT was a splendid and encouraging sight:—millions of workers all over the world rallying as one to save two men they never saw. Two men who were only known in a small circle until the time of the frame-up. But because those two are workers, their comrades in every land stood by them. And the protests of labor in foreign countries had as much to do with halting the hangman as the protests of the workers in the United States. If Sacco and Vanzetti burn in the chair American capitalists and American goods will be as popular in Europe, Asia and South America as rattle snakes in a bed room.

* * *

THE Sacco-Vanzetti movement shows what tremendous power is wielded by the militant radical minority in the labor movement. The old bureaucrats had nothing to say, except for an apologetic appeal from William Green to Fuller. The Fullers know their Greens and do not take their appeals seriously. And the Greens are fast frittering away whatever influence they originally had with the masses thru their policy of co-operating with the capitalists and making war on the militants. Despite the absence of the bureaucrats, hundreds of thousands of workers thruout the United States participated in giant demonstrations and strikes. The capitalists will not think more of their labor lieutenants after this demonstration of labor solidarity.

RECENTLY, and here in New York particularly, the socialist bureaucrats blocked every effort at a united front on the Sacco-Vanzetti case. This conduct seriously impaired the power of the struggle to save them from the chair. But at the last moment, when it appeared that Sacco and Vanzetti were about to be offered up as a sacrifice on the altar of class justice the masses swept aside all those who would play with the lives of two workers and there has been more real solidarity displayed during the last week between 9/10 sections of the labor movement than at any time since the drive to save Tom Mooney.

THOSE who would indulge in false optimism now, about the results of the moves being made by the Massachusetts authorities, between now and August 22nd, would be dangerously sapping the strength of the protest necessary to free our comrades from the threat of death. Sacco and Vanzetti have no hope that a spirit of justice will prevail among the rulers of Massachusetts on the eleventh hour. That spirit of justice, like all other spirits, is a drug that kills those who rely on it. We have no confidence that there is anything else in the eleventh-hour stunt of Fuller and his confidants except a ruse to pull the guts out of the labor protest and to exhaust it.

WORKERS PARTY WIRE UNMASKS BOSS "JUSTICE"

Fuller Is Warned What Murder Means

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of American yesterday sent the following telegram to governor Fuller of Massachusetts:

In these last hours before the consummation of the monstrous crime of the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti we demand that you heed the voice of the multitudes of workers whose interest we represent. We address the capitalist governor of Massachusetts not as a friend but as a known and conscious enemy of our class.

If you are deaf to the protests of tens of millions of toiling men and women throughout the world, and if you have ears only for your smug advisors of the financial districts of Boston and New York, then we assure you that the significance of your hideous action will be socially and politically far deeper than you can dream. The execution of Sacco and Vanzetti will steel the hearts of the masses with loathing and hatred of the capitalist system which you represent.

In your action and that of Thayer and the so-called "advisory committee" behind whose secret and prejudiced actions you seek to hide. The working class cannot be deceived, but can only learn hatred and contempt for capitalistic courts and capitalist class justice. This judicial murder will open the eyes of millions of American workers to the nature of capitalist class dictatorship which stalks in the clothes of democracy. Like a blind bourbon you play with legal phrases and try to cover your shame with the report of a secret investigation by notorious class enemies of your victims. But the tens of millions of toilers of all countries know that their brothers, Sacco and Vanzetti, are innocent and that you participate in judicial murder.

Your action of class hatred will awaken, in turn, the class consciousness of millions of workers.

The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti is a challenge and a defiance to the working class whose opinions and feelings you hold in contempt. The challenge is answered in countless strikes and movements which will strengthen our class organizations for struggle against your class.

Sacco and Vanzetti who have bravely stood their ground through seven years of torture are innocent men and the exploited toilers know this. Your actions in the next few hours will be irrevocable. Your name will be known to coming generations as a symbol of shame and rearition. We demand that you do not proceed with this irrevocable crime. We demand that our working class brothers be freed.

BOSTON PICKETS CONTINUE FIGHT FOR FREEDOM OF SACCO, VANZETTI

Thirty-five Fined For Demonstrating In Front Of State House

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—Mass arrests have not dampened the spirits of the thousands of workers and intellectuals who have streamed into Boston to demand the immediate and unconditional release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Today thirty-five demonstrators rose as a unit and pleaded guilty to violating the city ordinance regarding loitering, paying $5 fines. They were arrested while staging a "death watch" in front of the State House yesterday in protest against the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

This was the second group of "death watch" pickets arranged, another 39 having been in court yesterday following the first demonstration.

Faulty Signals on "L" Result in 20 New Yorkers Hurt

Twenty persons were injured in a rear end collision of elevated train on the Front Street curve near South Ferry station during the morning rush hour yesterday. Scores of excited passengers were taken down ladders from the blocked tracks. A series of small fires, started by short circuits, followed the crash, which filled the street below with splintered glass.

Motorman Thomas Shine, of the Astoria tram, told deputy fire chief Henry Hahn that the signals at the Front Street curve were not working.

Davis Goes to Confer With Coolige On New Series of "Red Raids"

RUSSIAN PARTY STERNLY WARNS THE OPPOSITION

Trotsky Statement Leaves Loophole

MOSCOW, Aug. 11.—By issuing a statement repudiating part of their past errors Leon Trotsky, and their supporters, Gregory Zinoviev escaped expulsion from the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The statement, however, is not what is ought to be, in view of the grave breaches of Party discipline and the open covert relations carried on with the expelled elements in Germany. This fact is recognized by the Pravda, which today emphasizes the fact that by its decision toward the opposition the joint plenum of the Central Executive Committee and the Central Control Commission acted correctly and wisely, and declares that the highest criterion must always be the interests of Party peace and Party unity.

Realized Opposition Dangers.

The point at issue during the plenum was a just comprehension of the various phases thru which the opposition struggle against the Party has passed and the phase that it now enters. The latest phase of the opposition tactics represented a dangerous transition from a policy of opposition to struggle to a policy of a

Make the Victory Complete!

The gigantic power of the masses has robbed the arms of the electric chair of its victims for a short period of ten days. The merciless ruling class has faltered in its evil purpose before the mighty wave of protest of millions of workers throughout the world. But let not any worker be deceived by this strategic retreat, for it is nothing more. The capitalist class thirsts for the blood of labor's two champions, Sacco and Vanzetti. Only the mightiest efforts of labor will save them from the executioner's hand.

The DAILY WORKER has given itself completely to the fight for the freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. It has exhausted and will continue to exhaust every resource at its command to this end. It has become indeed "Labor's voice for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti." This voice must go on and grow in volume, if they are to be saved. But we are hard pressed. The demands of the fight and the demands of our own case before the Federal Grand Jury have strained our resources to the limit. We want to keep up the fight until Sacco and Vanzetti are free. We must keep up the fight. Will you help us do so by contributing on the occasion of the Sacco and Vanzetti reprieve, to the GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND, so that our paper may complete the job, it has so valiantly begun?

CASE OF TWO WORKERS BEFORE FULL BENCH OF STATE SUPREME COURT

Defense Asks Order to Force Judge Sanderson to Grant Writ of Error for Thayer's Bias

BULLETIN.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—That Governor Fuller and his Executive Council intend to murder Sacco and Vanzetti August 22nd was clearly indicated by a statement issued today by Eugene B. Fraser of Lynn, a member of the council.

"I believe," he declared, "that the council would be inclined not to grant the respite again." Commenting on the reprieve granted to the framed-up workers last night, Fraser said, "We felt there was a moral barrier, altho no legal one on the execution."

By J. LOUIS ENDAHL.

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—Ten days more of torture and then death; or, 10 days more of waiting and then freedom, and restoration to the ranks of the working class.

This is the alternative resulting from the reprieve until August 22, granted Sacco and Vanzetti by Governor Fuller.

Nicola Sacco says it is just 10 days more of torture; 10 days more added to the agony of more than seven years' imprisonment since they were arrested in 1920. Sacco continues his hunger strike.

Rosa Sacco resumes her daily visits to the Charlestown prison, where the cloth cover has again been placed over the electric chair in the death chamber.

UP TO WORLD WORKERS.

It is in the hands of the world's working class now, as before midnight on Wednesday, to say whether it is to be more days of torture, then death, or whether the ruling class finger that sought at Wednesday midnight to press the button carrying the current of death into the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti is to be defeated in its purpose.

It must be, "Close ranks for victory over reaction. Close ranks to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti."

Sacco and Vanzetti still live.

Long live Sacco and Vanzetti!

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—Three new legal moves, in the attempt to save from murder Sacco and Vanzetti, were made in the courts here today as an aftermath to a new twelve day respite granted the world-famous prisoners.

Judge George A. Sanderson in supreme court agreed that he had "the power and duty" to send to the full bench defense counsel exceptions to his decision in refusing a writ of error based on the prejudice of trial Judge Webster Thayer.

The it must have been known at the state house early Wednesday that Judge Sanderson was at least very seriously contemplating this move, Governor Fuller delayed until forty minutes before the time of execution before allowing a respite, so that Sacco and Vanzetti would be alive when the case came before the full bench.

Hendry Waits Longer.

In this act of intolerable cruelty, Governor Fuller had the complete cooperation of Warden Hendry of Charlestown prison, who, knowing that the reprieve was granted, held back knowledge of it still longer from the two innocent workers waiting in the shadow of the clectric chair. Waited until only thirteen minutes before the first of them was scheduled to be burned to death, before intimating to them that they had twelve more days to live.

Indignant public comment turns around the question as to whether or not Governor Fuller and Warden Hendry were planning a little illegal execution of their own, death by mental torture, hoping that the shock in their weakened condition would put an end to one of the serious problems facing the cotton mill government of Massachusetts.

Legal Battle Begins Again.

The legal processes from now on are very complicated, and not any too hopeful. The power that stayed the execution definitely arranged for last night, the power of labor in mass demonstration, is still the only power that affords the slightest chance that the lives and liberties of these two martyred workers will be saved.

Exceptions Filed.

But meanwhile, the first steps in the courts have already been taken, for whatever they are worth.

Defense exceptions were filed in Norfolk County Superior Court to the rulings of Judge Thayer in denying a new trial and refusing a stay and "reconsideration of sentence on the same ground" prejudice.

Both these appeals go to the full bench of the supreme court, five members having been summoned to Boston to sit on Monday.

At the same time an application for a writ of habeas corpus was filed in federal district court. It appeared only as a matter of record as Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes

SACCO CONTINUES HUNGER STRIKE; MRS. SACCO REVIVED FROM COLLAPSE

Both Workers Faced Death With Unexampled Composure; Vanzetti Glad He Will See Sister

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—Nicola Sacco today began the first day of his twelve day respite by refusing food. It was the 26th day of his hunger strike.

Bartolomeo Vanzetti, who has fasted for nine days, drank a cup of coffee and ate a little food.

Both men have been removed from the death house to the slightly more cheerful quarters, called the "Cherry Hill Section" of the state prison.

Mrs. Sacco, somewhat recovered following her collapse, went to the death house and pleaded with her husband to take food. He refused.

The prison physician said that he saw no reason for forcible feeding at present.

POLICE COME AS ROCHESTER STRIKE GOES SECOND DAY

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Every policeman, every law enforcement agency in Rochester has been called out as the second day of the protest strike of 20,000 workers demanding the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti ended with demonstrations in which strikers retaliated for an attack upon their parade by defending themselves and injuring one of the interfering cops.

As the lang Sacco and Vanzetti parade, on its way to a mass meeting in Convention Hall, came to passing the Eastman Kodak Plant stones and other missiles were thrown on the demonstrators. One of the marchers defended himself with a club whereupon a cop seized the man. The throng surged forward and the policeman was born under and severely trampled. "Reserves were immediately summoned and two strikers arrested.

Two other demonstrations which were not attacked by the police or their lackeys passed off peacefully.

Civil War in Nationalist CHINA

By EARL R. BROWDER

Browder has just returned from six months in China, as a member of the International Workers' Delegation, during which he visited over 40 cities and towns, during the period of the Chiang Kai-shek split. He spent two months in Hankow, in close touch with the leaders of the Kuomintang, the Left Wing Unions, the peasants, and other revolutionary bodies. He was also a delegate to the Pan-Pacific Trade Union Conference, and was the secretary of that body. He tells a graphic and authoritative story of the beginnings of the Civil War now raging in Nationalist China. The pamphlet has many documents, photos, etc.

Following is the table of contents of the pamphlet

No Bail for Fourteen Held Incommunicado In Los Angeles Raids

(By a Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., August 8. (by mail).—14 Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers had been jailed since Saturday night. They were as follows:

Sam Gloverman, Malcolm Bruce, Jenn Russell, Oscar Kinlund, Vasilopoulos, R. E. Dunbar, Tom Lewis, M. Hughes, Cranish Simisoff, Sidney Bush, Homer Bartchy, Mortimer Downing, James H. Fisher and a Comrade from Ariz.; Brien.

Arrested For Atheism!

All kinds of charges have been made against these 14 workers—from vagrancy to criminal syndicalism. The principal charge against the 16-year-old Bartchy is that of "having spread radical propaganda among school children and having fostered the atheist movement in the schools." He was expelled from the Roosevelt high school on this ground, a few months ago.

These workers are in jail incommunicado. No bail has been fixed so far.

The I. W. W. Hall, 1181½ So. Spring St., and the Workers (Communist) Party Hall, 922 W. 2nd St., have been closed by the red squad, according to the press.

Meetings Forbidden.

Radical meetings are forbidden; but the workers have decided to hold a parade on the east-side to-morrow afternoon, Aug. 9th, at 4 p. m. in the same day, there will be a mass protest meeting at the Plaza, organized labor IN. F. of L.t will participate, according to the master class press. We are also informed that shut guns have been cleaned, oiled and ready for use.

Case of Two Workers Before Supreme Court of the United States Supreme Court and Judge George A. Anderson of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals had ruled that under the legal points involved the matter was entirely in the hands of the state courts; that they would not issue a habeas corpus writ.

The petition for a writ of error was brought before Judge Sanderson of the State Supreme Court with a series of affidavits attached recounting conversations by the jurist and his unfair attitude on the bench in connection with the radical beliefs of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Their Master's Voice.

An investigating committee of Governor Alvan T. Fuller had touch of this evidence before it, weeks ago, but it will be remembered, this committee was made up of two college presidents and a judge. True to the class that employs them, they found that while the judge was indiscreet in conversations outside the court room, on the bench he was "fair and impartial."

Professor Charges Prejudice.

A new affidavit was brought here today by a Dartmouth College, the alma mater of Judge Thayer. It was from Professor James P. Richardson and told of an alleged statement regarding radicals by the judge. Judge Thayer, to days gone by was a defender for the Dartmouth college baseball nine.

Long Conference First.

Before Judge Sanderson agreed on the exceptions, a conference lasting over two hours was held in the judge's chambers, Defense Attorney Arthur D. Hill and Attorney General Arthur K. Reading were present.

When they left the judge's lobby the attorney general said an agreement had been reached on the mill of exceptions by which to go before the full bench, anticipating that it would be signed. The bill had been roughly drafted at the conference and was sent to the attorney general's office for a final draft, to be returned to the judge for his signature.

Ask Order For Writ.

The bill goes before the full bench on the question of whether Judge Sanderson was right in declining to issue a writ of error. If the full bench sustains him in his action the fight for Sacco and Vanzetti before the supreme court would be concluded as far as the writ of error is concerned. If however, the full bench decides he should have issued the writ of error a precipt will be issued ordering Judge Sanderson to grant the writ af error and hearings will begin before a single justice, probably Judge Sanderson.

Case Also In Dedham.

Meanwhile, the situation became further involved with the filing of exceptions at Norfolk County Superior Court, Dedham. Attorney Hill planned to go to the Worcester home of Judge Thayer to discuss the bill of exceptions. The bill may reach the full bench of the supreme court at the same time as the other bill, making it possible for the full bench to handle the whole question at one sitting.

The governor's respite was endorsed by the executive council, although two councillors were unmoved to have been against another delay, and in favor of going on with the murder.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

DE VALERAITES TO PARTICIPATE IN DAIL EIREANN

Some London Rumors.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—Belief prevails in political circles here that the Cosgrave administration will resign immediately after the Dail convenes, and that Liberal leader, Johnson, will assume the presidency of the council, forming a new Free State government, in which the National League Party will be represented.

Oath an "Empty Form."

It is stated that the Republicans will not be represented in the new government, but that the followers of Eamonn De Valera will be pledged to maintain the new administration in power.

The Fianna Fail issued a statement explaining its decision permitting its members to take the oath of allegiance to the Free State as it is the thing, if I don't previously had refused to do. The statement said the party regards the oath as an "empty formality which is not binding."

DUBLIN, Aug. 11.—The Republican deputies in the Dail Eireann, led by Eamonn De Valera, today, for the first time since the establishment of the Irish Free State, took the oath of allegiance to the Free State Government and the British Crown.

It was the first time the Republican leaders had admitted allegiance in any way to the Free State government.

In a statement issued previous to the swearing in of the oath, the Fianna Fail had declared that the action of the Republicans in taking the oath of allegiance is "an empty formality which is not binding."

The action of the Republicans was generally regarded as a political move toward unseating President William T. Cosgrave and his cabinet.

Labor-Republican Compact.

It was reported that the Labor Party leaders have agreed to support the Republicans in a campaign to have removed from the Irish Free State constitution the requirement that members of the Dail subscribe to the oath of allegiance.

The Cosgrave government is expected to meet with defeat tomorrow on a motion for adjournment, and the new government is expected to assign all cabinet portfolios immediately.

General elections are forecast for the near future.

Cheer N. Y. Delegates.

Delegations of workers arriving from New York to aid in the fight for the freedom of the framed-up workers were lustily cheered as they passed thru the main streets of the city.

Fear World-Protest.

When asked if the last minute Fuller respite was due to the fear on the part of government officials of an explosion of Sacco and Vanzetti would result in serious international complications, Rose Baran, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee before leaving for New York said, "There can be no doubt that the pressure which compelled Governor Fuller to halt the execution was due to the nervousness of the U. S. state department. The fact that millions of workers in every European country demonstrated and protested must have had the effect of spurring our European embassies to report to the government that the execution of our innocent comrades will result in serious international complications."

Airship to Steamer.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—An attempt to deliver mail to the steamship Leviathan when she is 500 miles out to sea will be made by navy aviators on Aug. 24, the Navy Department announced today. The test is regarded as supplemental to the ship-to-shore flight which Clarence Chamberlain made from the giant ship recently.

NICOLA SACCO

BARTOLOMEO VANZETTI

Sacco Continues Hunger Strike; Both Calm

BOSTON, Aug. 11. Sacco and Vanzetti still live.

Through the bars slitted windows of Charlestown prison they glimpsed today the pallid light of another day. It was a day they had not expected to see, and one which they did not know they were going to see until a scant thirty minutes before they were to have taken the short march to the electric chair.

Fiction writers often feature "an eleventh hour reprieve." The twice-daily respite given to Sacco and Vanzetti by Governor Alvan T. Fuller has literally that. It was 11:30 p. m. when Warden William Hendry stalked down the corridor in front of their cells and announced that the governor and his executive council had granted an opportunity to their counsel to make one last fight before the state courts to save them from the burning chair in the room beyond. They were doomed to die a few minutes past 12 o'clock.

A Well Protected Killing.

Outside the prison were more than 1,000 police and state troopers, heavily armed.

Behind a "deadline" were bristling machine guns and floating floodlights. That is a precaution to the fears and the precautions against trouble that the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti entailed. In Boston itself and far beyond, in New York, Chicago, London, Paris, Berlin, Moscow, all over the world, were innumerable thousands waiting word of their deaths.

The men had been guarded for the death chair within the news came. They wore the gray prison trousers and blue and white shirts with short sleeves. All were resigned to their going. Sacco, weak from his 25 days of hunger striking, lay on his cot, his eyes closed. Vanzetti, stronger and more philosophical, rested quietly. Madame was in Sacco's cell. Occasionally Vanzetti would break into a low song which his own companions in the adjacent cells joined.

"Until August 22."

"Boys," said Warden Hendry, "the governor has given you a respite until August 22. Now I want you to be men, and I want you to eat."

"I want you to be men."

No one commented at the time on the jeering irony of that request from the blood stained warden to the men who have stood unflinchingly defiant thru seven years of hell.

There was silence in the cells for a few moments after the warden made his announcement. Then a sigh from the weakened Sacco, as his companion, Vanzetti, spoke.

"I am glad," said Vanzetti, simply, "I want to see my sister before I die."

Mrs. Sacco Collapses.

The news of the respite was received quietly enough by the men who were resigned to death. But to their families, and to the hundreds of faithful friends who have flocked to Boston to protest their execution it was different. There were cheers from those who had been arrested earlier in the day for picketing the states house in their behalf. They went to court today with light hearts to answer charges of vagrancy and loitering, while there's life there's hope.

Mrs. Sacco was in a state of collapse when the news was brought her. She had bade her husband goodbye at the prison yesterday and hurried away to the home of friends. Her small daughter, Inez, who is seven, born after her father's arrest, cried most of the evening because, the friends said, she "felt" something was happening.

FIGHT FOR LIBERATION OF SACCO AND VANZETTI MUST GO ON SAYS INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—The International Labor Defense, thru its secretary, James P. Cannon, has issued the following statement on the new developments in the Sacco-Vanzetti case:

"The fight will go on. The laboring masses will reply to the respite with a wider and more intense protest movement and a more determined spirit. The workers of America and all civilized people the world over will protest with greater indignation against this new and more brutal instance of the 'cat and mouse' game. Sacco and Vanzetti have been suspended between life and death for seven years. Governor Fuller now prolongs this agony for twelve days more. History knows no parallel for the deliberate prolonged torture inflicted upon innocent and idealistic men.

"For our part we will work with all our power and energy in these twelve days to help the movement for Sacco and Vanzetti grow in volume and intensity.

"Our local organizations in two hundred cities are already organizing a new series of protest meetings and demonstrations for Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

"We are advocating protest strikes of the workers everywhere and predict that the strike movement will now take on a volume which will render the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti impossible."

LONDON COSSACKS Needle Trade Defense RIDE DOWN WOMEN AND INJURE MANY

Scores Are Trampled in Sacco-Vanzetti Parade

LONDON, August 11. Scores of men, women and children were injured in front of the United States embassy here when London mounted police charged four and six abreast into the thousands of marchers who were gathering at the embassy.

As the horses came on, the front ranks of the masses were crushed back upon those behind and the charging crowds trampled one another or were trampled by the hoofs of the English Cossacks as they charged. 35 of the women were forced to the brink of an excavation and shoved in, many being seriously injured.

The parade began after a mass meeting at Hyde Park where A. J. Cook, leader of the Miners' Strike and other speakers addressed the crowd who pledged themselves thousands to repay like with like to the United States murders Sacco and Vanzetti.

At the conclusion of the speeches the crowd formed far marching and with red flags flying and singing the International, the thousands began to march down Park Lane to the Grosvenor Gardens, where the American embassy is situated.

Thousands of spectators watched from the sidewalks and all traffic was halted in the streets as the process on poured along. Hundreds of police, containing men and women in evening dress, had to wait half an hour until the masses had filled the Grosvenor Gardens.

There they were met by mounted police on guard and squads of mounted foot police who charged into the jammed crowds, trampling women and men. Shrieks were heard from the injured and cries of "There are children here" but the police completed their charge, leaving numbers of the injured on the square, jammed into doorways in an effort to escape the brutality of the Cossacks, or escaping down side streets.

The crowd at first dispersed, but regathered before midnight and the police again charged it while the men showed fight and miniature battles were begun on the sidewalks.

Calling for an anti-American boycott in the world-wide drive for the freedom of the framed-up workers, A. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation declared:

"I warn you and I warn Americans, that if they murder these two men, we shall get even with them. I ask you to take off your hats and pledge yourselves to get even. I am not anti-American, but anti-capitalist. We must boycott America.

"British justice is no different from American justice. I am more concerned with the results of this execution, if it takes place, than with the murder itself. If America kills these two men, it will be murder, and we shall reply and we shall repay."

Millions Strike To Put Pressure on Legal Murderers

SKETCHES OF LIVES OF SACCO, VANZETTI

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—Nicola Sacco is 32 years old. He was born in Torremaggiore, Italy, where he remained until he was 17. Came to America, became shoe cutter, worked for Milford shoe company from 1910 to 1917; went to Mexico to avoid draft, returned four months later; worked at Stoughton, Mass. Survivors: Wife, Mrs. Rose Sacco, son, Sante, fourteen, daughter, Inez, six, born four months after Sacco's arrest; all live in Malden, suburb of Boston. Father Michaele, and brother, Sabino, in Torremaggiore. Mother died in 1920, and he was contemplating return to Italy to comfort father in old age when arrested.

Bartolomeo Vanzetti is 39, unmarried, born in Villa Falletto, Italy, came to America 1908, worked as restaurant dishwasher and pastry cook in New York, worked in Cordage mills at Plymouth, Mass., blacklisted after a strike there and began to peddle fish; only known relative is sister, Signorina Luigia Vanzetti, of Turin, Italy, hold there when steamship company refused to take her to see brother.

Fuller Retreats Before World Blame, Paris Says

PARIS, Aug. 11. — "They May Live" was the flaring headline over the story from Rome that the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti had been delayed, printed in an extra edition of the Communist newspaper Il Humanite early today.

The newspaper added: "Governor Fuller has retreated before the world-wide reprobation. This waking chosen will now prevent the execution of two innocent men."

Communist Deputy Vaillant-Couturier, wrote in an editorial: "Sacco and Vanzetti must not go to the death chair. We must snatch these two innocent men from the Massachusetts prison."

Toronto Workers Held For Protest Meeting

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—5 men and 2 women were arrested here for demonstrating in front of the United States consulate with placards reading "Stop this judicial murder," "Release Sacco and Vanzetti" and they were accompanying a committee of workers who handed the American consul a resolution demanding a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Class War Defense Is Ready for New Fight

LONDON, Aug. 11. — The English branch of the International Class War Prisoners' Aid Society, which has arranged a majority of the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations staged in London, began today to draw up plans for a new campaign following the news that the Massachusetts governor had granted the two prisoners a respite.

The secretary of the organization told International News Service that the society's efforts to obtain the release of the two radicals would not be relaxed.

"We are glad to see that our seven years' fight against the murderous tyranny of the American capitalists is bearing fruit," the secretary of the society said. "The world wide demonstrations have assuredly influenced the American authorities. These demonstrations will continue."

Buffalo Infested With Police and State Cops

BUFFALO, Aug. 11.—With state troopers and armed guards patrolling all points of vantage, the Buffalo authorities are in readiness to break up any demonstrations which may take place here for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Governor Holds Sacco-Vanzetti Resolutions

RENO, Nevada, Aug. 11. Governor Balzar of Nevada, has disclosed the fact that he has been intercepting resolutions from workers and sympathetic organizations here demanding the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti. This obediant tool of the western bosses has refused to be a member of the proposed committee of governors to investigate the Massachusetts proceedings. He has wired governor Fuller that he entirely approves of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Barbers' Union Urges Green to Call Strike

McKEESPORT, Pa., Aug. 11.—At a meeting at the Maltas Temple here, local 522 of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America passed resolutions declaring the convictions that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent and demanding the immediate release of the two men.

A further resolution demands that president William Green of the American Federation of Labor call a general strike on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. Copies of the resolutions were sent to governor Fuller and to Green.

A Socialist Murderer

Above is Burgomeister Seitz, Socialist mayor of Vienna, who not only tried in a speech to dissuade the workers from overthrowing the capitalist government there, but organized a large armed guard to kill them when they persisted. He keeps the guard, as a kind of personal gunman squadron, to defend the clericals, who in turn rule for fascism and the League of Nations.

He not only crushed the workers revolt in Vienna with his "loyal and equal militia" but prohibited demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Newark Strikers Want Sacco, Vanzetti Free

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 11. — Representatives of the 35,000 Newark workers who struck in protest against the recent injunction issued by Acting Justice Nathaniel Hall here, and passed resolutions condemning the proceedings of the Mac-chusetts courts Judge Thayer in refusing the Sacco and Vanzetti retrial and demanded the immediate and unconditional release of the two men.

Franciscans Appeal for Sacco and Vanzetti

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Aug. 11. — An appeal for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti from the Massachusetts prison has been sent in reply to a cable received by Bishop Ricard of New York, by the members of the Franciscan [illegible] order in Washington, D. C.

Belfast Workers Hold Mass Protest Meeting

Belfast, Ireland, Aug. 11. — A mass meeting to protest the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti was held here this evening.

Russian Party Sternly Warns Opposition

[illegible] the opposition [illegible] against the anti-Soviet and anti-Party forces which are watching for the moment when they will be able to act openly against the revolution.

Tried to Unravel Error

The opposition claims the Party sessions did it utmost to help the opposition emerge from the swamp in which they had placed themselves. Nevertheless the Party decided that peace is still lacking. The whole Party points out the silent sniffle enemy of the opposition's declaration which continues to dwell [illegible] under such points for a renewal of the struggle against the Party. Further no opposition elected [illegible] in the leader of the opposition.

The Party will watch most intently how the leaders of the opposition will in practice fulfill their promises. If their declaration meets a similar fate as declarations of October 16th, so much the worse for the opposition. In any case the Party will be able to assure its unity despite the leaders of the opposition.

Opposition for Defense.

The full text of the opposition is signed by Avdeev, Bakaev, Zinoviev, Evdokimov, Kemenev, Lindin, Muralov, Peterson, Pataikov, Rakovsky, Smilga, Sokolnikov and Trotsky and is published in Pravda as follows:

"Leaving above the polemical form of the questions put to us, we reply to the gist of the matter. On question number one we stand unconditionally and absolutely for the defense of our socialist country from imperialism. We are naturally unconditionally and absolutely for the defense of the U. S. S. R. under present guidance of the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

Qualifies Statement.

"At the same time we preserve our conviction that even during war the Party cannot renounce the right to criticize and correct the Central Committee's tactics should they prove wrong. Our proposition is that the resolution on international questions must introduce, among others, the following slogans: 'De-

Montevideo Tied Up by A Huge General Strike

MONTEVIDEO, Aug. 11.—Street cars heavily guarded by soldiers of the regular army were the sole sign that any wheels were still moving during the Sacco and Vanzetti general strike here. All commercial establishments were closed, cafes did not appear on the streets, and no newspapers were published.

At a huge meeting of the workers in the afternoon, speakers reviewed the whole Sacco and Vanzetti case and told how the two innocent men had been railroaded to the death house by the Massachusetts class courts.

Borah Refuses to Ask Secret Sacco-Vanzetti Files Be Made Public

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 11. Senator Borah of Idaho yesterday refused to sign a petition to President Coolidge, Secretary of State, Kellogg and Attorney General Sargent demanding that the files of the Attorney General on the Sacco and Vanzetti case be immediately made public. Borah refused on the grounds that it was too late to stay the execution of the doomed by publication of the evidence in the department of justice files. But he promised to join a movement for the publication of such evidence at a later time.

Other prominent politicians signed the appeal.

Granite Cutters Strike In Big Quincy Protest

QUINCY, Mass., Aug. 11.—All granite cutters of Quincy and vicinity went out on a protest strike for Sacco and Vanzetti yesterday. Over a mass meeting held in the afternoon the cutters were called out and organized in an emergency basis to be able to break up any demonstration in which the aroused workers might participate.

Warsaw Police Arrest Four Before Legation

WARSHAW, Poland, Aug. 11. Warsaw police are having their hands full arresting curious persons who try to get a look at the heavy guards thrown around the American legation here. Four arrests were made yesterday. Protests continue to be received by the United States consulate, altho the fascists are doing all in their power to prevent demonstrations of any kind.

Porto Rican Workers Wire Fuller Protest

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Aug. 11. At a mass meeting held in the Plaza Colon here resolution was sent to governor Fuller demanding that he release Sacco and Vanzetti.

The editors of five San Juan daily newspapers have united in protesting to governor Fuller to prevent the executing of Sacco and Vanzetti which they characterize as an "irreparable judicial crime."

Defends Expelled Group.

"In regard to the second question we recognize that the dogmatic Communist movement has threatened to [illegible] tect dissension and the formation of two parties. Changing the decisions of the Comintern regarding the inadmissability of organizational connection with the expelled Trotsky-Master group, we simultaneously emphatically suggest and will use all our efforts to attain, inside the Comintern, a revision of the decision to expel this group, as among those excluded from the Party are hundreds of old revolutionary workers, closely bound to the working masses, attached to Lenin's work and truly sincerely to defend the U. S. S. R. to the end. The reuniting of a second Party in Germany would involve [illegible] incalculous dangers. We consider it imperative to take all measures possible to avoid this danger. We suggest that the Central Committee of the Communist Party introduce the following measures thru the E. C. C. I.:

(1) Provided the press organ of the Urbahns group be closed and that group agrees openly to obey all decisions and resolutions of the Comintern, congresses they may return to the Comintern.

(2) All those who accept these terms will have the right to defend their views in the general Party press and in general in the ranks of the Party and the Comintern.

Denounce Second Party Idea.

"As regards the third question we emphatically denounce all attempts at the formation of a second Party. We consider the idea of a second Party within the U. S. S. R. an absolute peril to the revolution. We will fight with all forces and all means against all tendencies toward two parties. As absolutely and emphatically as we denounce the policy of dissension we shall comply with all resolutions of the Communist Party and its Central Committee. We are willing to do absolutely everything to bring about the annihilation, in all elements of the Party, of fractions formed, due to the fact that under conditions of perversions of our stand inside the Party regime we were compelled to fight to make our actual views, which were incorrectly stated in the press and read by the entire country, known to the Party."

10,000 STRIKE IN NEWARK FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

Police Disperse Big City Hall Parade

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 11. — Thru eleventh hour appeals and without any strike call [illegible] 10,000 workers affiliated with the local union in Essex County went out on strike Tuesday morning as a protest against the legal execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Barbers Local 87, Electrical Local 52 and the Painters Local 377 officially authorized their workers to down tools as a protest against the [illegible] of famous local murder.

Rank and file members from the building trades, cooks and waiters, laborers and other unlisted trades answered the call of the local Sacco and Vanzetti Conference. Hammond, Who Faced Death Sentence Like Coward, Despises Courage of Sacco and Vanzetti.

John Hays Hammond was one of the first to congratulate Governor Fuller for his decision to burn Sacco and Vanzetti to death in the electric chair. Probably this member of the civic federation, mining speculator and engineer who is one of the stalwarts of predatory American capitalism, feels a deep hatred in his craven heart when he compared the defiant attitude of Sacco and Vanzetti, these two workmen who face death, with his own attitude when he, himself, was sentenced to death in the Transvaal in South Africa after the Jameson raid.

Through the intervention of friends John Hays Hammond was saved from a sentence of death imposed upon him; his sentence was afterwards commuted to 15 years' imprisonment and finally he was released on payment of a heavy indemnity. Hammond's conduct was loathsomely cowardly. Instead of defiance, Hammond devoted his time to whining and grovelling and fairly shrieked for his friends to come to his aid. His idea is that the under-dog must always crawl instead of fighting, and when one of the suppressed class dares to show courage it reminds Hammond of his own past.

Hammond, a member of the ruling class, might conceivably have been innocent of the crime charged against him. But he is far too class conscious to concede for a second that workers who dare challenge his class might be innocent. Like the rest of his class he figures that they ought to be exterminated anyway whether guilty or innocent of the crime charged against them. On general principles Hammond, Fuller and the rest of the murder gang favor wholesale murder of class conscious workers.

The Respite Is for the Murder Conspirators.

Before the monster wave of international protest on the part of the working class and sympathetic elements from other walks of life the miserable conspirators plotting to burn to death Sacco and Vanzetti have hesitated. To gain a respite for themselves they had to grant a respite to Sacco and Vanzetti.

It was not Fuller's respect for so-called justice that caused him to grant a stay of execution to these tortured victims of class vengeance. It was the fact that he and the rest of the malignant ruling class of this country feared the consequences of the summary execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. The wave of indignation was rising ever higher and the Massachusetts gang of vultures knew that the execution at the hour set would have been the signal for such outbursts of mass fury as this country had never witnessed.

But even in their respite to Sacco and Vanzetti they played their familiar roles of fiends incarnate. They forced these workers to remain in ignorance of their immediate fate until a few moments before the time set for the execution. The lights in the prison were dimmed at the usual time in the evening and then began the long wait for the hour of midnight. When, a few moments before, Sacco and Vanzetti heard footsteps and the clash of iron bars swinging outward they must have thought the end had come. This is monstrous. But the execution is only postponed if the Massachusetts murderers have their way. The respite was more for them than for Sacco and Vanzetti because they hope that during the next ten days the movement for liberation will die down and that then they can wreak vengeance upon these workers for daring to try to organize slaves in the mill towns of that benighted state as a sinister warning to other workers.

But the workers must take advantage of this respite of ten more days to increase a thousand-fold their demonstrations. In the United States, in spite of the mass arrests and terror that exists in some places, the workers must fight with every weapon at hand against the consummation of the murder plot against Sacco and Vanzetti.

The American workers must again appeal to the workers of all other countries to mobilize their mass power before the American embassies, launch the boycott of American goods, make it impossible for the plundering plutocracy of yankee imperialism to flaunt their brazen wealth in the faces of the European workers and peasantry. Send the bloody monsters back where they came from and let them know in no uncertain terms that if Sacco and Vanzetti die at the hands of the capitalist class of this country, that capitalist class will pay dearly for its criminal folly.

Already despised of all nations, known throughout the world as Uncle Shylock, the capitalist class of this country will cover itself with undying infamy unless Sacco and Vanzetti are freed.

As to Fuller and his contemptible executive council and his consultants, college professors, ex-attorneys general and all the rest of the array of murder conspirators nothing will ever rehabilitate them. Already they have tortured Sacco and Vanzetti with the agony of a hundred deaths. No matter what they as individuals may or may not do, their names will remain synonyms of infamy. They may think that by torturing Sacco and Vanzetti and attacking labor with the weapon of the frame up they can forever uphold the system that gives them this power, but they are mistaken. Fuller, Thayer, Lowell, Stratton, Grant and the rest of them will be pilloried as murderers as long as they live and the time will come when the children of these men will blush with shame to hear the names of their degenerate sires.

The Signal for a Drive on Foreign-Born Workers.

James J. Davis, secretary of labor in the Coolidge cabinet, who is also a product of the notoriously venal Pittsburgh political machine controlled by Andrew W. Mellon, and the direct servant of the steel trust, is utilizing the world-wide interest in the Sacco and Vanzetti case to launch a drive against the foreign-born workers in the industries of this country.

The dispatch from Washington relating Davis' new drive against labor stated that "bombings and other radical demonstrations consequent on the Sacco Vanzetti case are going to have a serious effect upon the immigration laws at the coming session of congress." Then follows an outline of Secretary Davis' proposed campaign. His first step is to induce employers to boycott aliens "who are in this country illegally" from getting work. The term "illegally," as employed by Davis, covers every foreign-born worker who objects to industrial despotism and tries to organize a union or affiliate with one in order to better his condition or the condition of his fellows. It does not mean simply the handful who are guilty of entering the country in violation of the immigration laws, but all who, having complied with all regulations regarding entry, may later come to hold ideas not acceptable to the masters of industry.

Like the rest of his tribe of labor haters, Davis indulges in the dirty trick of connecting "bombings" with "radical demonstrations." This propaganda only adds proof to our contention that the bombings were the work of agents provocateur in the employ of the capitalist class and calculated to pave the way for a wave of unrestrained attacks against labor. It also emphasizes the fact that the Sacco and Vanzetti persecution is directed, not so much at the two victims of the frame-up, but at the whole working class.

Davis is prepared to suggest legislation at the next session of congress that will enable the government to register and fingerprint all foreign-born workers in the country. The employers are unanimously for this system because it enables them to maintain a record for their blacklists of workmen who dare strive to improve their condition through organization.

This renewed agitation for registering and fingerprinting foreign-born workers is only the first step toward the regimentation of the whole working class, so that each worker in industry will be properly recorded and his record filed for any use the employers or the government may desire to make of it. The workers in industry will be classified the same as criminals are listed in a rogue's gallery or in the army.

All American labor must be alert to expose and smash this new conspiracy against the working class, otherwise every worker will have to carry a government card and on request be forced to present it to any one of the horde of plug-uglies and gangsters who will be on the government pay-roll to aid the industrial magnates keep their slaves in subjection.

This brazen threat should cause increased activity and support for the Councils for Protection of Foreign-Born Workers that are organized thruout the country.

Registration of workers is also a part of the preparation for an imperialist war, that the United States government is preparing for at break-neck speed. The war-mongers want their lackeys in the government at Washington to have everything arranged so that industrial conscription can be established at any time it becomes desirable.

The fight against such legislation as is proposed by Secretary of Labor Davis must be developed to gigantic proportions for it is a fight against the two-fold evils of industrial conscription and against the preparations of the war-mongers to again drench the earth in blood in order that the Wall Street gang may grow still more rich and powerful.

President Sigman and His Little Coney Island

By A. T.

Here I am, 1,500 miles from New York, at Storm Lake, Iowa.

Entering the Citizens Bank, I interviewed the president, Mr. Schiller. In the course of our conversation I asked him if there is any place where one may be entertained. He informed me that across the lake there is a very fine amusement place, known as Casino Amusement Park. Not only do the residents of the town go there for amusement, but the farmers of South Dakota, Nebraska, and from the entire corn belt, spend their vacations there. I inquired if he knew who the owner of this amusement park is. With a wry smile upon his lips he told me that it is a Morris Sigman, the president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Thinks of Chukmakers.

Immediately I thought that this Mr. Schiller was picturing a host of thousands of cloak and dressmakers who were constantly battling for an opportunity to live like human beings, and here was their president, the proud owner of the Casino Amusement Park—or perhaps he thought, what kind of money is it which permits its president to engage in such an enterprise as the Casino Amusement Park? Mr. Schiller informed me that in the course of seven or eight years Mr. Sigman had developed the park from practically nothing. Originally, Mr. Sigman had purchased about six acres, for which he paid $14,000, but every year he has put up additions to the park, new buildings, various improvements, and has also bought additional land.

"It is my opinion," continued Mr. Schiller, "that Mr. Sigman must have put in, during the past seven or eight years, about $50,000."

After I saw Casino Amusement Park, I was sure that Mr. Schiller was very conservative in his estimate, as the park is worth a good deal more.

Small Mortgage.

"Undoubtedly, this must be a good century," I remarked.

"No," answered Mr. Schiller, "for the past few years farming in this section has not been very profitable, and it must cost an enormous amount to keep the place going. But in spite of all this, Mr. Sigman is continually adding to it all the time. His entire mortgage on the Casino Amusement Park is only $5,000."

This last statement was very surprising to me. We have known for some time that Mr. Sigman had a farm, and it was always rumored that the farm was heavily mortgaged. Now it appears that the farm is an amusement park worth many thousands, and the entire mortgage is only $5,000.

I left the Citizens Bank. My head was in a whirl. How was it possible for the president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to amass such a fortune in such a short time. Other ideas crept into my head, but I pushed them aside. In a daze, I walked down to the lake. While standing there, I was greeted in a very friendly manner by one of the residents. In answer to my question about the amusement park, he told me that an enormous business must be done there, for new additions were constantly being built. "At one time it was a 'regular place'," he said, slyly winking an eye, "but the residents of the city began to talk about it, and now the place is a good deal quieter." As we were talking two fishermen approached us, and overhearing our conversation, remarked that the casino must belong to some crazy New York millionaire.

A Gold Mine.

I stepped into the motorboat and was taken across. The owner of the boat remarked that the Amusement Park must be "a regular gold mine." I remember the place where there was nothing there," he said, "but since Mr. Sigman owns it, it is now by leaps and bounds." These few words were [illegible] to get out of [illegible].

As I alighted from the motorboat, I noticed Mrs. Sigman approaching. It is not easy to describe Mrs. Sigman she is a woman of average build, a brunette with chestnut-colored hair, and her face and eyes reflect an open hostility tempered with craftiness. I was reminded of a theory propounded by a German professor that when husband and wife remain together for any length of time, the wife's physiognomy gradually changes, so that she acquires her husband's looks.

Afraid of Reception.

I did not spend much time interviewing Mrs. Sigman, for I was actually afraid that I would be given the cold reception offered to my fellow-workers in our midst, and that, as a result, my investigation would come to naught.

The Casino Amusement Park is situated in the very center of a farming community. Its investment interests me.

The first building one notices is the large casino. This building has many stages. In one of them, which has just been newly added, is housed the skating rink, large enough to accommodate 500 people following their favorite dance hall, which is much larger and can easily take care of 600 couples; further on is the billiard room and the bowling alley. Across the entire front of the building is a large sign, announcing "Dancing, Dancing, Food, Drinks, and Lodging Accommodations." Nearby is the restaurant building, a hall that can comfortably accommodate a couple of hundred diners.

Large Bath House.

Somewhat further away and near to the edge of the lake is a large bath house, where those who go in swimming may change their clothes. From the bath house, six diving boards stand into the lake. Apparently, quite a number of people make use of these accommodations.

The main attraction at this Little Coney Island is the carousel. While the older people are spending their time in playing billiards or at the bowling alley, and the growing boys and girls are dancing, the children enjoy the carousel.

Child Labor.

The majority of the workers at the Casino Amusement Park are young school children. Adults are employed only at the bowling alley and in the billiard room; for all other kinds of work, the young school children are exploited. The highest wage paid is $50 per month, which, needless to say, is paid to the adults. As to the school children, Mr. Sigman gets away with paying them as little as possible.

Of course, this is not quite the proper attitude for the president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to adopt, and when we examine the Show Card, which is carried on a background on which is also mirrored that the union label is also used, it can readily be seen that Mr. Sigman does not employ union labor of any kind, or any rate the cook only is and make a point to see to it. And after all, why employ union labor when one can do with it?

Leave Conscious.

Well, let me [illegible] to knock. Let us continue our stroll. A little further away, close to the large bath house, is a [illegible] where one may buy all kinds of fishing tackle and fishing lines. Mrs. Sigman explained to us that this is also operated by them, or is a concession leased to some other.

Further on, in the dense woods, there are [illegible] cottages. It is impossible for me to count them, but I [illegible] a good deal more than the [illegible] and [illegible] the laziness of the [illegible] and also [illegible] the fact that I did not wish to arouse suspicion in the mind of Mrs. Sigman, [illegible] was highly watchful of me.

I [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] of Mr. Sigman's Casino. It is [illegible] a good deal more capital [illegible] invested in it. By my watch I [illegible] that all of this could be owned by Mr. Sigman. How is it possible for one who [illegible] President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to [illegible] amass such an enormous fortune? I know that the Union officials, [illegible] in Pennsylvania, are [illegible] by the [illegible] but [illegible] a considerable [illegible] [illegible] carousels here, no [illegible] [illegible] bowling alleys, no [illegible] [illegible] bathing park. One can [illegible] imagine the [illegible] of this enterprise's [illegible] service.

Where Did It Come From?

Again and again the question came to me: where did it come from; how is it possible for one to amass such a large fortune? There was just one possible answer. This could not be owned by Mr. Sigman alone. Perhaps there are a number of partners; perhaps the banker, Mr. Schiller, and Mr. Sigman, when he told me that there was just one mortgage of $5,000 on this property, [illegible] to satisfy my curiosity and to set my mind at rest, I determined to go to the county office.

I remember the [illegible] boat. My head was [illegible] with wild thoughts, all the time I was repeating to myself, it cannot be that the man who is president of our union, our International Garment Workers' Union, would stoop to this kind of investment. When all is said and done, it requires a particular type of mind to engage in the pool room game, or to run a shooting gallery, or operate a bowling alley.

Visits County Office.

At last we reached the shore. I jumped out of the boat and began to walk in the direction of the county office. I passed a number of different posters, announcing "Cliff Dwellers and his Minneapolis Orchestra," "Some Artists, Ice Follies," "All Dancers Big Revue," "Radio Broadcast." Will Be Brought Down to Earth." "Casino Amusement Park." But let us not [illegible] look at all the announcements, the [illegible] boards and signs which tell of the [illegible] attractions provided for by Mr. Sigman in his Casino Amusement Park.

I asked at the [illegible] office to [illegible] me a statement of the real property owned by Mr. Sigman, and was handed the following, in certified copy, signed and [illegible] in our possession:

Actual Proof.

Here were the actual proofs of truth of our statement that Mr. Sigman the banker and the other citizen had described to us. They were also [illegible] that in the beginning Mr. Morris Sigman had purchased 5.96 acres, more, offers to sell to the County, and that he was continually adding [illegible] to his holding. It is quite evident that $5,000, provided that the Commissioners, the rest of the grounds must have assume and pay off the outstanding [illegible] been a good deal more, as the above obligations figures are the assessed values only.

Here it is set black and white that [illegible] the Commissioners are the assessed value is $24,492, and this [illegible] applied to the land only. That and [illegible] no [illegible] not take into consideration the amusements, the numerous cottages, [illegible] the bath house, the bowling alley, the skating rink, [illegible] for 500 people, the shooting gallery, [illegible] the billiard room, the bowling alley, the carousel, the loop-the-loop, the restaurant, the bath house and the [illegible] many other contraptions, [illegible] to mention. Taken all in all, the value of the entire Casino [illegible] at a [illegible] more conservative [illegible] $50,000, and $150,000. And on this [illegible] only the one mortgage of $5,000, [illegible] owing to Mr. Schiller, the president of the Citizens Bank.

A Fortune.

Again I have to come back to the same question: where did [illegible] from? How is it possible for the President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to amass such an enormous sum? Can it be that all this could have been built up on a 5-cent fare?

It is a well known fact that [illegible] official of any union [illegible] opportunities to [illegible] workers [illegible] for himself, or [illegible] such a large business, or [illegible] a business venture on his own account. It arouses suspicion in the minds of his constituents, and he is in duty bound to show from what source he was able to get his start, and allay the suspicion of the members. Surely, Mr. Sigman, the president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, also owes that duty to the members of his union, and to the labor ing mass at large.

TORY FALL DUE IN IRELAND; SEE LABOR VICTORY

Thomas Johnson May be Next President

DUBLIN, Aug. 11.—Eamonn De Valera and the Fianna Fail deputies today went through the formality of accepting the oath of allegiance that will enable them to take their seats in the Dail Eireann tomorrow. They were introduced by Thomas Johnson, leader of the labor party, and Captain William Redmond of the National League group.

This action is believed to seal the fate of the Cosgrave government, which is expected to resign in the next twenty-four hours.

The plan of the new political combination is to elect Johnson chief of the cabinet council, which automatically makes him president. The price the labor party is paying for Fianna Fail support in the Dail is an agreement to open negotiations with the British government to have the present form of oath either removed entirely or amended. The whole political situation is regarded as so unstable that a new general election is likely to be called within a short time.

No Allegiance To Britain.

The attitude of the Fianna Fail, to which the laborites now subscribe, is set forth in the official statement as follows:

"The Fianna Fail deputies hereby give public notice in advance to the Irish people and all whom it may concern that they purpose to regard the declaration of allegiance to the British sovereign as an empty formality and repeat their only allegiance is to the Irish nation and that it will be given to no other power or authority."

It is understood that there will be no republicans in the proposed new cabinet, although Johnson and De Valera have committed themselves to retain the existing form of government.

Blueshard Terrorism.

The political crisis was precipitated by the passing in the Irish senate on Wednesday of the public safety bill, providing for the suppression of all illegal organizations, including the Fianna Fail, and the deportation of all undesirables.

"CONTINUE FIGHT FOR LIBERATION," SAYS ROSE BARON

Warns Not to Relax Protest Rallies

Warning American labor against relaxing its struggle for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti and urging a mightier protest than ever as the only means of saving the framed-up workers, Rose Baron, secretary of the Emergency Committee, upon returning from Boston declared:

"The forced action of Gov. Fuller and his Executive Council in granting an eleventh hour respite for 12 days has already been recognized by militant organized labor and its thousands of liberal-minded sympathizers as a most decided victory for the Sacco-Vanzetti liberation movement.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee warns it hundreds of thousands of New York sympathizers not to be lulled into a false sense of security. This is but the first victory of a series which must be won before Sacco and Vanzetti are liberated and restored to the ranks of the working class.

Need More Soon

"Announcements will be made shortly as to the plans to be pursued within the next day or so. Mass demonstrations must continue. We must show the Fullers, the Thayers, and the Massachusetts capitalistic and legal hierarchy that if their hell cannot be our comrades in the face of the national and international mass protest.

"We are hoping beyond words at our first success.

"I appeal to all New Yorkers of all grades of labor and political opinion to rally to the aid of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, and make what is now a temporary victory a permanent one. This will result in the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"In Boston the New York delegation gathered at various convenient points of the city waiting for the word to march on to the prison. I cannot describe our happiness when the news of the respite reached us."

Jamboree Is Being Discussed Among The Workers Here

All militant workers are anxiously waiting for Sunday, August 28th, when the Jamboree will be held at Starlight Park.

Many attractions will keep the workers entertained for an entire day and at the same time raise funds for the Defense and Relief Committee for the Furriers, Cloak and Dressmakers.

In shops all over the city it is a topic of conversation. Appointments are being made to meet at the park and spend a day of enjoyment.

City Housing Plans to Be Put to Referendum

The housing program of the city administration will be acted upon soon at a special meeting of the aldermanic branch of the municipal assembly, it was announced yesterday. The plan calls for the leasing by the city of land adjacent to parks and other public improvements.

The bill as already passed the board of estimate will remove the present limitations. It will put to a referendum at the full elections.

Police Guns and Bombs Smash New Chicago Protests

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—At the same time Governor Fuller was debating a respite for Sacco and Vanzetti last night Chicago workers held huge rallies at nineteen points throughout city in a monster demonstration protest organized by the International Labor Defense.

As on the night before several thousand police detectives were on duty with riot guns and tear gas. Most of the nineteen street corner rallies were broken up by police charges conducted with the same brutality as those made Tuesday and Wednesday.

This Is What Has Saved Sacco and Vanzetti So Far

Millions of workers striking and assembling in demonstrations all over the world to protest the electrocution of their innocent comrades in Massachusetts stay the hands of the executioner. This is a photo cross section of a crowd of 50,000 demonstrating in Union Square, New York.

BOOKS

"SACCO-VANZETTI ANTHOLOGY OF VERSE." Edited and published by Henry Harrison. 32 pages. 25 cents.

Another fiery Sacco and Vanzetti protest, in the form of a verse anthology edited by Henry Harrison made its debut in time for the gigantic demonstration at Union Square Tuesday. Judging by the rapidity in which this publication sold, its popularity will not be gainsaid. There are verses by such poets as Ralph Cheney, Lucia Trent, Henry Reich, Jr., Benjamin Musser, David P. Berenberg, Mary Caroline Davies, Henry Harrison, and a number of others. Every conceivable phase of the Massachusetts frame-up, from its very inception is treated in the pamphlet. There is Miss Trent's "How Your World Trembles".

". . . In another world is an iron door,
Two men stare at a sullen floor."

And there is the one addressed to the people of Massachusetts. Mary Pater describes Mrs. Sacco from the feminine point of view, telling how women feel losing their men In such a way.

In his inimitable style Reich gives his version so:

"Now Pilate has decreed that they shall die.
The law is served; the court has been sustained.
The state is heedless of the anguished cry
For freedom that has risen unrestrained.

On new Golgotha now the cross is set
To slay these Christs. The time Is drawing near" . . .

"Not that it matters whether these two men
Are dead or not; for clocks will scream at seven
Just the same, and whistles clamor when The twilight falls," sings Henry Harrison.

A short, well written preface reads: "This time justice is not blind. She is winking this time. How can she help chuckling up her sleeve? She is thinking of what Marie Antoinette once said of the starving people. If they haven't bread, let them eat cake. And justice is saying this time of two plain men: If they can't stand it, let them sit down on the chair! Justice must have her little joke. . . .

". . . It has long ceased to concern the fate of two men. It now concerns humanity" . . .

When these lines were written the date of doom for Sacco and Vanzetti was fixed for August 10. It has now been postponed to August 22nd. The real murderers, the ruling class of Massachusetts, may go on unpunished and that proud state may disregard the bloodstain it has placed on its bourgeois conscience. But should Sacco and Vanzetti die in the electric chair this would only be one more count in the indictment of labor against the exploiters of the working class. And justice will continue to smirk until the social revolution sweeps this rotten system off the earth. Then real justice can prevail untainted by the class hatreds that are bred in a society where the many are robbed for the benefit of the few.

This little book of poems is a valuable contribution to the struggle in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti and should command a wide sale.

THE NEW DECALOGUE OF SCIENCE. By Albert Edward Wiggam. The Bobbs-Merrill Company.

THIS book is a mass of contradictions. We could liken it to a string of beads with a few very few—pearls in its entire length. These pearls are not of the first water either. Can we take the book as a sign of the feeble-mindedness—or scramble after the fleshpots—that is weakening the intellects of bourgeois scientists? At any rate, we can take it as an indication that, while he may be a biologist of sorts, Albert Edward Wiggam is hopelessly mediocre when he attempts to apply what he knows to the problems confronting society today. His whole book is written in the form of an address to "His Excellency, the Statesman Executive Mansion." Imagine any one with a modicum of brains expecting to get results by reasoning with Cal Coolidge or "Nervous Nelly"! Or perhaps the author had in mind a president of the Woodrow Wilson type. In that case we would advise him to read a certain book of Wilson's dealing with the impotency of any "Executive Executive Mansion."

Which will lead the average reader of this review to ask what Wiggam's book is about anyway. Nothing, I am sorry to say, of any great import to anything or anyone, save possibly Wiggam's pocketbook. In this reviewer's opinion it is not worth a working man's time to wade thru the mass of absurdities the author palms off as political wisdom. The gist of the thesis is that man is, what he is because of his germ plasm, chromosomes, genes, and not because he has been born to the purple or into an environment where the means of existence of himself and family are at the mercy, the whim of a few aristocratic and economic lords and masters. In other words, fellow working stiffs, if you eat with a knife instead of a fork, say "ain't" instead of "isn't", live at least a modest income instead three-

Wages and Working Conditions in China

BY EARL BROWDER.

V.

Conditions in the Interior.

THE conditions described above are in Canton, a great city, the most modern in China aside from Shanghai and Hankow, where the trade unions have been able to work openly for several years. What then must the conditions be in the interior? We had an opportunity to see at first hand when we began our overland trip to Hankow, which lasted twenty-five days. A few typical towns along the route will give a picture of the general conditions.

NAMYUNG is the last town on the Pei Kiang, or North River, northern Kwangtung Province, near the Tayu mountains bordering Kiangsi Province. It is reached by boat, drawn by ropes and pushed by poles against the current, for six days from Shiuchow, the present terminus of the railroad eventually to continue to Hankow. The men and women who perform this labor are strongly organized in the Water Transport Union (originally the Seamen only), and their union controls all transport on this river. They are therefore among the better-off. They receive 40 to 60 cents a day, working from dawn until dark, and sometimes till ten o'clock at night, stopping twenty minutes twice during the day for food.

ARRIVED at Namyung, we are lodged as the guests of the city in the public gardens on top of the great old city walls which in former times protected the commerce that flowed here from the North thru Meiling Pass from Kiangsi. These walls, typical of Chinese cities, are still in good repair, but in the era of modern artillery useless for anything more serious than lodgings for guests. In the quaint tea houses perched over the city we met a dozen trade union leaders, who spent hours with us answering our interminable questions.

HERE we learned a peculiarity of most Chinese inland towns. A sort of rough division of labor has, in the course of time, developed between them, so that one town makes a specialty of one line of business, another town of another line, so that almost in each town will be found one industry predominating over the others. Namyung is a tobacco town, a market center for the tobacco raised thru a large district, where it is dried, packed and shipped to the big cities to be made into cigarettes.

THESE tobacco packers and shippers in Namyung number 1,200, of whom 500 are women. Their work is seasonal, lasting only six months in the year. How they live for the other six months we could not learn, but when they have work they spend fourteen hours per day at it, for which they receive, for men 40 cents, for women 20 cents. The secretary of the union came to us directly from work, and therefore did not show up until after 10 o'clock at night. He would begin again next morning at day break. He told us that the struggle with the employers at the moment was to force them to pay the 40 cents and 20 cents per day in silver instead of depreciated coppers.

CLERKS in Namyung are all paid by the year. Apprentices get only "food and lodgings." The fourth year they begin at $20 per year. From that point they slowly progress upward. When we insisted upon knowing what was the very highest wage being paid to any clerk in town we were told $100 per year.

Hours, daybreak until 11 p. m.

Artisans, upon completing apprenticeship, begin to receive wages at $4 per month. The average wage is $8 per month, with "food and lodgings"; the hours are fifteen per day.

VI.

FROM Namyung we walked over the mountains by Meiling Pass to Nananfu, a distance of 120 Chinese li (about forty miles). Throut this distance we constantly passed groups of carriers, loaded with great bundles, bales and boxes, transporting the commerce between two great provinces exactly as it had been done for the past two thousand years. Only the character of the commodities has begun to change—again I saw oil cans bearing the "Socony" label. The carriers are about equally men and women. We are told that they earn 50 cents per day, but can get no detailed information.

NANANFU was the first town we had visited in the newly conquered Nationalist territory. It was the first point in Kiangsi entered by the Nationalist armies last July when they began their triumphant march northward. Here we heard the story repeated from that time on up to the Yanktsekiang. Following the Nationalist armies had come a sweep of trade union organization and struggles to ameliorate the terrible conditions of labor. Everywhere it was the same tale of feverish organization activities, strikes, and a few meagre gains which, however, had tremendous significance for the workers. Above all, they realized for the first time, they "had something to say" about the course of events. This was the enfranchisement of the Chinese masses, the greatest result of the revolution so far.

THE trade unions of Nananfu had about 2,500 members in the city, and 13,000 in the district. The special industry of the town is bamboo and timber, the next in importance being tailoring. The bamboo and timber workers, engaged in felling and transporting raw materials, not in fabricating commodities, work unlimited hours on piece work. They earn $1 per day on the average; we could not get a satisfactory explanation of why these workers can get so much more than the average wage of their district, more than twice as much as the general wage. Tailors, formerly paid 25 cents per day for 11 hours, have cut the hours to 10 and raised the wage to 28 cents, with increase of food. The shop clerks seemed to have made the greatest proportionate gains: formerly, apprentices began without wages, and worked up to a maximum of $60 per year; after several strikes, they now begin apprentices at $10 first year, $20 second year, $30 third year. When we arrived, 20 per cent of the clerks were obtaining more than $100 per year, 50 per cent received from $60 to $100, while only 30 per cent were getting less than $60, which was formerly the maximum. Following are brief tabular notes on other trades in Nananfu:

Carpenters, formerly 25 cents, 11 hours; now, 35 cents, 10 hours.

Confectionary workers, minimum $80 year, maximum $150 year; hours, daybreak to dark.

Wine and rice shops, 30 cents per day, hours unlimited.

Cooks, $2 to $8 per month; hours 11 to 15.

Jewelry workers, 25 to 40 cents per day, with allowance for food formerly 10, now 15 cents per day; hours 11 per day.

Drug clerks, 60 cents per day and food; 12 hours.

Porters, young, able-bodied, 40 to 50 cents; old, 20 cents per day; 10 hours (formerly 11 hours).

VII.

PASSING several other cities, not essentially different from Nananfu, we come to the city of Kianfu (as the maps spell it, but the inhabitants call it Jih-an).

This is one of the largest cities in a great Province of 25 million people, on the Kan river, half way between the capital, Nanchang, and the Kwangtung border. The city, however, large as it is, has not a trace of modern industry except the electric lighting plant employing 21 men.

THUS was also the first city we had found, where the shop clerks were still in the medieval guilds together with their employers, instead of being in the modern trade unions. Yet in spite of the very backward social and economic structure, this was the most advanced spot politically throut of the rest of the province.

THE trade unions, in alliance with the peasants of the district, were under the leadership of the "Left" Kuomintang, which controlled the city at a time when Chiang Kai-shek still had his fingers tight around the throat of the rest of the Province.

One explanation of this, is the fact that here trade unions and Kuomintang had been established illegally in 1924, and the leadership had been steeled in two years of civil struggle under the rule of Sun Chuang-fang.

WAGES in Kianfu, under the military rule, had been especially miserable, running from 400 to 2,000 coppers per month (equivalent to $1.40 to $6) and always paid in coppers, which are constantly depreciating.

The first gain made by the trade unions was to establish wage payments in silver, and raise the minimum to $5. The average wage, when we arrived, had been raised to $7 per month, plus food and lodging, with three meals per day instead of two. Corporal punishment by employers had just been abolished by the trade unions. In the six months the unions had existed openly, they had conducted strikes in 80 per cent of all establishments in the city, to obtain these gains. (To be continued)

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., Aug. 10.—Two miners were instantly killed, two others probably fatally injured, and a fifth workman is entombed following the collapse of a sandstone roof above where the men were working in the Sweetwater coal mine near here today.

THE NEW GOLGOTHA

(Poem from Sacco and Vanzetti Anthology of Verse.)

By HENRY REICH.

Now Pilate has decreed that they shall die.
The law is served, the court has been sustained.
The state is heedless of the anguished cry
For freedom that has risen unrestrained.

On new Golgotha how the cross
To slay these Christs. The time is drawing near
And shall we yield them up, and shall we yet
Abandon them? Dear Comrades do not fear!

A doom is on us and a tempest black
That one time rent the temple curtain wide.
And shall we, in this mighty hour, turn back,
And shall we let these two be crucified?

Oh, save our martyrs! Do not falter now!
Strike! Strike! Toil not another hour
Until these men are freed! This be your vow!
This be the vindication of your power!

VENEZUELAN LABOR UNION CALLS ON GREEN

The Venezuelan Labor Union, Federación Obrera Venezolana, asking pardon for Sacco and Vanzetti, was modified on account of the faith of the United States delegation, headed by you, in Governor Fuller's sense of justice, which has proven a mockery, in the name of Latin-American workers, we ask you to add your voice as president of the American and Pan-American Federations of Labor to that of the world, which proclaims their innocence. Yours for pardon of our tortured brothers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti."

The Venezuelan Labor Union, Federación Obrera Venezolana, sent a telegram to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asking him to raise his voice for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The telegram follows:

"In view of the fact that the resolution introduced at the Pan-American Federation Congress by the delegations of Guatemala, Dominican Republic, Nicaragua and Venezuela, bearable reading; but what he states on one page is invariably contradicted with the next dozen. We have said that his major premise is that men are what they are (socially and economically) because of things inherent in the germ plasm. How can we reconcile this major premise with the assertion (page 256) that "things are going to happen with a quarter million of these young men pouring continuously thru our colleges, provided that the colleges are left free!

After this are we going to concede that Albert Edward Wiggam possesses much acumen? Or, the contrary. If we possess any intelligence ourselves we are going to conclude he is a muddle head who hasn't the slightest idea of what he is talking about.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

NICOLA SACCO has no faith that the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, about to decide on the latest legal move of defense counsel, will render him justice. He feels that the Judges intend to send him to the electric chair. He is on the verge of death as a result of a long fast. The warden of the jail threatens forcible feeding. The chair must have its victim.

IN the meantime the world protest against this outrage against two innocent men grows in intensity. It is good to hear of the British workers massing in their thousands in Trafalgar Square and marching on the American emissary to protest against the execution of two innocent workers in America. And in France where the press of practically all shades of opinion denounce the Sacco and Vanzetti frame-up in strong and caustic language. The action of the French press is forced by the national anger of the workers and peasants. And it is the Communist Party of France thru its great journal L'Humanite which is chiefly responsible for crystallizing public opinion on this historic case.

IF the Massachusetts hangmen expected to pull the guts out of the Sacco and Vanzetti protest movement by going thru another piece of legal hocus-pocus they are greatly mistaken. All signs indicate that it will grow in effectiveness between now and the date set for the execution. The cowardice exhibited by governor Alvan T. Fuller in holding off a reprieve until the last moment is rankling in the breasts of all American workers and other sympathizers with the condemned pair.

• • •

THE bride of the fight to free Sacco and Vanzetti from the beginning has been borne by the left wing of the labor movement. While other elements in the population have made valuable contributions to the cause, it is the economic action of the workers and the threat of further economic action that caused the execution to halt at the switch.

IT is interesting to note that the allegedly liberal New York World, which has espoused the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti, has refused publication to some articles written in behalf of those doomed men by Heywood Broun, one of its chief columnists. Broun's column has been missing for the past two days and in the issue of Friday, August 12, a letter appeared at the head of his column's position on the feature page, by editor Lobitzer explaining that Broun expressed his views on the Sacco and Vanzetti case with "the utmost extravagance," that the World then instructed him to select other subjects for his next articles, but since Broun continued to write only on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, the paper omitted all articles submitted by him.

THIS action is typical of the kind of support given to the case by even those capitalist papers that were in favor of a new trial. Heywood Broun is not an extremist but he is farther to the left than the editorial page of the World and those who own the World are strongly in favor of the capitalist system and do not want to see any reflection cast upon its judicial arm. What they object to in such cases is the feeling it is certain to develop among the masses that capitalist justice is more cockeyed than blind. This is why Heywood Broun's column felt the axe.

ONE of the most important pieces of news of the day is the action of the Irish republicans in deciding to take the oath of allegiance to the king of England in order to enter Dail Eireann for the purpose of overthrowing the Cosgrave government. This is a possible the belated decision. I have written several thousands of words advocating a combination between the Labor Party, the Communists and the militant Republicans against the Free State reactionaries with this end in view. The position of DeValera was that his conscience would not permit him to take an oath that he could not conscientiously live up to. Excessive purity is a nuisance and particularly in politics.

• • •

DE VALERA now has taken the oath and quite properly announces that he considers it only an empty formula. Probably before this article appears in print the Cosgrave government that was barely escaped putting thru a "Hanging Bill" since the death of Kevin O'Higgins, will be thrown on its ear and a coalition government of some kind in its place. Those who expect any radical departure from those who may take Cosgrave's place will be disappointed. Tom Johnson the Labor Party leader mentioned for new government leader, is a conservative of the James Ramsay

"CONTINUE FIGHT FOR LIBERATION," SAYS ROSE BARON

Warns Not to Relax Protest Rallies

Warning American labor against relaxing its militancy for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzett and urging a mightier protest than ever as the only means of saving the framed-up workers, Rose Baron, secretary of the Emergency Committee, upon returning from Boston declared:

"The forced action of Gov. Fuller and his Executive Council in granting an eleventh hour respite for 12 days has already been recognized by militant organized labor and its thousands of liberal-minded sympathizers as a most decided victory for the Sacco-Vanzetti liberation movement.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee warns its hundreds of thousands of New York sympathizers not to be lulled into a false sense of security. This is but the first victory of a series which must be won before Sacco and Vanzetti are liberated and restored to the ranks of the working class.

Next Move Soon.

"Announcements will be made shortly as to the plans to be pursued within the next day or so. Massed demonstrations must continue. We must show the Fullers, the Thayers, and the Massachusetts capitalistic and legal hierarchy that it dare not execute our comrades in the face of the national and international mass protest.

"We are happy beyond words at our first success.

"I appeal to all New Yorkers of all shades of labor and political opinion to rally to the aid of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, and make what is now a temporary victory a permanent one. This will result in the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"In Boston the New York delegation gathered at various convenient points of the city waiting for the word to march on to the prison. I cannot describe our happiness when the news of the respite reached us."

STOP HIM! SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI!

JAIL HEADS OF BOSTON UNIONS TO HALT STRIKE

Released After Strike Was Ended

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

BOSTON, August 12.—Release of Jacob Miller, business agent, and William Seligman, chairman, of Capmakers' Union, Local No. 7, arrested on the eve of the supposed electrocution last Wednesday night, of Sacco and Vanzetti, has revealed the dread with which the Boston ruling class faced last Tuesday's strike movement.

"If I keep you here the general strike will not be a success," was the statement that superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley made to me," said Seligman.

Feared Strike Not "Bomb."

"The fear of the strike movement was the real reason for our arrests, and not the effort to connect us with the so-called 'bomb plots' in New York and other cities, as has been so widely published in the capitalist press thruout the nation.

Seligman and Miller were arrested Tuesday morning, the day of the strike for Sacco and Vanzetti. They had left the union headquarters at 20 Haywood Place, which has been continually watched by police and detectives for many days, for a condition meeting with some of the manufacturers. The were followed by the police to the Busch Cap Company, on Washington Street, where they were seized as they were about to enter the building.

Grilled By 16 Detectives.

They were first taken to Police Station No. 4 (La Grande Street). Later they were removed to the main police headquarters. Here they were taken into separate rooms, each being grilled by eight detectives taking turns in questioning them.

They were questioned about their intention to strike that day (Tuesday)

Help the Daily Worker Keep up the Fight for Sacco and Vanzetti

The cruelty of the Spanish Inquisition bears no comparison to the mental torture being inflicted upon the two victims of the hatred of the ruling class, Sacco and Vanzetti, in their race with death. The capitalist class has granted them a brief respite only to allay the burning indignation of the proletariat, and to furnish an opportunity for the institution of repressive measures intended to intimidate the working class and prevent further agitation. The temporary victory gained by the workers has made the ruling class even more determined to accomplish its evil purpose. The struggle promises to be harder than ever.

The DAILY WORKER, which has taken the lead in the fight for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti, must redouble its efforts to mobilize public sentiment for the fight which is ahead. But the fight has been exhausting. Our own case has aggravated our financial burden. We want the comrades to help us maintain the fight, at all costs. If we recognize the fact that only the mass pressure of the workers gained the brief respite of ten days, and saved Sacco and Vanzetti temporarily from the jaws of death, then we must recognize also that greater pressure must be exerted to free them. At this crucial time, no comrade should fail to do his utmost to help The DAILY WORKER, so that it may continue to carry on the fight until victory is won.

Say Chen Quits Hankow Because of Slaughter Of Unionists by General

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Eugene Chen, foreign minister of the Nationalist government at Nanking, about whom the Nationalist government's ties with European and United States governments have raged, has resigned his post, according to advices reaching the British foreign office today.

It was reported that Chen quit because of the military domination of General Tang Shing-chi.

Twenty-six more labor leaders have been shot at Hankow, according to reports current in the city. Forty-four others are under arrest. General Tang and the right wing of the Kuomintang are establishing a reign of terror against organized labor.

Widespread dissatisfaction is being shown by the rank and file of the labor unions, who have elected to office trusted fighters for improvement in the conditions of the workers, and now find them slaughtered by the government.

Royalist Leaders Loses Out When Greek Cabinet Smashes Over Finances

ATHENS, Aug. 12.—Greece is without a cabinet today, the coalition ministry having resigned yesterday. The government crisis resulted from a disagreement over financial policy. When it was seen the difficulties could not be bridged the resignations were tendered and accepted today. It is expected that the cabinet will be reorganized without M. Tsaldaris, the royalist leader.

LISBON, Aug. 12. — Masses of workers and sympathizers crowded the bulletins here all night in an effort to get news of the Sacco and Vanzetti reprieve. Cheering broke from the hundreds of watchers as the result of the stay of execution was made public.

U. S. Units Increased; Told To Be Ready for "Instant War Service"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 12. — In line with the speed-up system which is being introduced into American armament and for which the Geneva conference prepared the public mind, the war department yesterday announced the reorganization of the regular army in order to provide three more infantry and two more cavalry units "in event of war on short notice."

"Three infantry and one cavalry division will be held in readiness for instant war service," the report states.

The active mobilized divisions will be stationed within easy striking distance of Canada and Mexico.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

TO EMPLOY BARBAROUS METHOD IN LATEST TORTURE OF FRAMED WORKER

Executioner Kept In Boston As Fuller Plans To Go Ahead With Murder

See Little Hope In Court Action; Workers Continue Program For Mass Protests

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—Plans for forcibly feeding Nicola Sacco—by an extremely painful method which may result in his death—were discussed today as the framed-up worker entered the twenty-seventh day of his hunger strike.

Nasal feeding—the method that prison authorities threaten to use—is in keeping with the barbarous torture inflicted by the Massachusetts industrial czars on the two workers during the seven years of their imprisonment.

Thru a tube which prison authorities will insert in Sacco's nostrils milk or the white of eggs will be forced into his stomach. The nasal method of forcible feeding is extremely painful and is likely to result in Sacco's death.

NEW PLANS FOR MASS PICKETING IN BOSTON DESPITE TERRORISM

Ask Borah to Open Department of Justice Which Contain Frame-Up Evidence

(NOTE—This special telegram sent yesterday afternoon from Boston to The DAILY WORKER was mysteriously slow in reaching its destination and failed to appear yesterday.)

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 11.—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti left the death house today. They were returned to the Cherry Hill wing of the Charlestown prison.

The mighty thunder, the lightning flashes of world labor's protest snatched them back from the electric chair, in which the ruling class had condemned them to die.

The giant crashes of working class insistence that "Sacco and Vanzetti must not die" shot thru the golden dome of the Massachusetts state house, and Governor Fuller and his advisory committee, sitting beneath it, in session for many long and tedious hours thru Wednesday afternoon and far into the night, changed their minds.

Twelve Days to Fight.

But it was the brain of the industrial autocracy of Massachusetts that spoke, deciding that the sentences of death imposed on Sacco and Vanzetti be respited for 12 days or until midnight on Monday, August 22, 1927. But this only means 12 days more of the most energetic struggle on the part of workers in all lands, if working class protest weakens, then Sacco and Vanzetti are doomed, as there is no hope in the continued debate before the courts resumed today. Defense forces today opened the renewed attack on the federal government, demanding the opening of the Department of Justice files that contain the testimony that will prove the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The attack has already been started thru United States Senator Borah, with the help of Senator LaFollette. Since justice Holmes has closed the doors of the United States Supreme Court at Washington, this move is the only one that can be made at the nations capitol. There is the possibility, of course, even if the files can be opened, that the papers condemning the United States Government as a party to the frame-up of our two comrades, have been removed from the records. It is here that Senator Borah can best serve as an agency for getting the testimony of the Department of Justice agents involved. Two of whom have already confessed in sworn affidavits, that "there are papers in the files of the government that prove the complete innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti." The appearance of Senator Borah in the Sacco-Vanzetti case recalls that Borah appeared in 1906-7 as the prosecutor in Odaho of Moyer, Pettibone and Haywood, in the attempt to railroad these officials of the Western Federation of Miners to the gallows in his own state more than a score of years ago.

Develop Mass Protest!

No stone is being left untumed to build the fight mountain high against the would-be assassins of Sacco and Vanzetti. Appeals are being sent out today to the nations workers to continue and develop their mass protests. An extensive program of picketing is being mapped out for Boston, to be renewed at the earliest possible moment in spite of the mass arrests of pickets on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Thirty-seven pickets arrested Wednesday were declared guilty yesterday and fined five dollars each. Bertram D. Wolfe and George Kruhm, both members of the Workers (Communist) party, were held for trial today, when the court will also attempt to dispose of three arrested Tuesday.

Reign of Terror.

In the meantime the reign of terror continues. Six workers who came to Jail in the "Death Watch" at the prison were arrested as "bomb suspects." They were taken to the Joy Street police station where they were severely grilled. Their names are Philip Palumbo, David Rislin, Luigi Bove, Antonio Pelegreno, Orlando Baldasso and Salvatore Pratulo. The officials are trying to make much out of the fact that they carried copies of The DAILY WORKER, special attention being given to the cartoon by Fred Ellis, entitled "An Evening Affair."

Enrico Unterelli, tailor, Watertown, was fined $20 in Waltham Court today for distributing Sacco-Vanzetti defense circulars among workers at the Hood Rubber Company.

TOUR OF SPOTS FAMOUS IN SACCO-VANZETTI FRAME-UP WILL BE DESCRIBED BY ENGDAHL

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, who was one of the members of the party which visited localities famous in the Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up, with Edwin James, nephew of William and Henry James, has written an article on the tour which will appear in Monday's issue of The DAILY WORKER.

Among the places visited by J. Louis Engdahl are South Braintree, where the crime was committed on which Sacco and Vanzetti have been framed, Bridgewater, where the robbery was committed for which Vanzetti was accused, and Brockton where the two workers were arrested.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY SMASHES REPORT OF MAJOR GODDARD, "GUN EXPERT"

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—Smashing completely the report of Major Calvin H. Goddard, "gun expert," whose "evidence" has been used by Governor Fuller, William Thompson, formerly chief counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti, has issued a statement refuting in detail the report of the major.

The statement reads as follows:

"Some time before June 3, 1927, a newspaper man from New York called upon me and stated that he was familiar with the work of Major Goddard, that he had with him certain publications explaining Major Goddard's methods which he desired me to inspect and asked me to consent to an independent examination by Major Goddard of the recalled mortal bullet and the Fraher shell. At an early part in the conversation I offered to show this gentleman the photographs of the bullet and shell made by Mr. Turner, a well known expert of this city. He glanced at the photographs, pronounced them of no value as compared with the methods of Mr. Goddard and spoke in terms of contempt of Mr. Hamilton, the defense expert, who had made careful micrometer measurements of the markings of the bullet and shell.

Testify For Sacco.

"The two defendants' experts who had made the most careful investigations and were principally relied upon, were Messrs. Hamilton and Turner. Prof. Gill of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology also had made two findings for the defense, one Sept. 25, 1923, and the other Oct. 31, 1925.

"In the first, Prof. Gill had and he did not pretend to have had the same experience or to possess the same skill in this line of work as Mr. Hamilton, with whose work I have been familiar for fifteen years, and, in the case of any discrepancy in thousandths of an inch his measurements are more likely to be right than not some, and I am absolutely convinced from my own measurements that the so-called mortal bullet never passed through the Sacco gun."

"In addition to this Prof. Gill had several times assured me he regarded Mr. Hamilton as a man of integrity. He later wrote me offering to appear as a character witness for Hamilton, should I further if needed."

"In view of these facts, fortified by my own observation of the skill and character of Messrs. Hamilton and Turner, I felt there might be some reason other than what appeared on the surface of the contemptuous tone in which the newspaper man referred to both of them, and therefore I told him I would not, at least until further advised, cooperate in my experiment by Major Goddard, but that, on the other hand, I would put no obstacle in his way.

"I added that although Mr. Ehrmann and I did not believe either the Fraher shell or the mortal bullet produced by the government as exhibits at the trial were fired through Sacco's pistol, we had, for some time, been in doubt as to the genuineness of those exhibits.

Made No Objection.

"I found nothing more about Major Goddard until about noon Friday, January 6th, when Prof. Gill telephoned me he and Major Goddard were going out by Dedham at 2:30 o'clock to experiment with the bullet and shell. He did not tell me Mr. Ranney and a newspaper reporter were present or that Major Goddard previously had been in conference with Mr. Ranney. I accordingly made no objection to the proposed experiment.

"About half an hour later I was apprised of these facts by the Boston Herald. Having a court engagement, I could not go myself, but succeeded, with great difficulty, in getting in touch with Mr. Ehrmann, who was able to reach Dedham in time to witness the experiment. Major were present Mr. Buxton and Mr. Cullen of the Boston Herald.

"Mr. Ehrmann reported to me he and Mr. Buxton and Mr. Curvin were not impressed by the bullet test; but that the similarity between the fine marks on the so-called Fraher shell and the shell first fired through Sacco's pistol were somewhat striking. As the range similarity already had appeared on enlarged photographs made by Mr. Turner, which were fully discussed at the hearing before Judge Thayer, I was not disturbed by the result of the experiment, although I was disturbed by the circumstances under which it was made.

"Mr. Ehrmann also reported that Prof. Gill, whose remarks were taken down by a stenographer, after witnessing the experiment, expressed doubt as to the correctness of his former view. This led to an exchange of letters between Prof. Gill and myself, to which it is unnecessary for present purposes to refer further.

Not Untrustworthy.

"I then called the matter to the attention of Messrs. Thompson and Hamilton, both of whom assured me they were familiar with Prof. Goddard's methods, which were untrustworthy except when checked by careful micrometer measurements, such as had been made by Messrs. Turner and Hamilton in the case. Mr. Hamilton sent the originals, three letters written by Mr. Goddard to Mr. Hamilton under date of Oct. 28, Nov. 5 and Nov. 20, 1924. In the letter of Oct. 28 Mr. Goddard says:

"'I am seriously considering the devotion of my entire time to work of this character within the next year or two and would greatly appreciate an opportunity to talk with you on the subject.'

"In the letter of May 3, Mr. Goddard says:

"'I am very anxious to get your advice as to what lines of study to follow in preparing myself for the work I contemplate. I feel you could save me much wasted effort, and would, therefore, greatly appreciate your opinion.'

"In the letter of Nov. 20, Mr. Goddard says:

"'In thinking over our conversation of the other night I realized I failed to ask you how you secure your measurements in one-thousands of an inch when you are making microscopic study of arms and projectiles. I think you mentioned the name of a special type of microscope with which I am unfamiliar.'

Calls it Stunt.

"In a letter to me of June 9, 1927, Mr. Hamilton says:

"'If any one is to make before the governor and his committee some experiments or microscopic displays then I should be present, or some one who can intelligently detect any effort to pull a misleading stunt. These stunts can and are being done.'

"At my argument before the governor I was assured by him he had not paid any attention to Mr. Goddard's report, and I was given a similar assurance by the committee therefore made no argument about Mr. Goddard's method or his conclusions.

"June 6, 1927, Mr. Goddard called at my office with the newspaper man to whom I have referred. Mr. Ehrmann was present and immediately afterward he and I made careful notes of what had been said. The newspaper man again appeared to wished to explain his conduct. He said Mr. Buxton at the Herald urged him to notify me not to accompany to Dedham June 7, and that he had promised to do so. He had relied upon Prof. Gill to admitted he had not asked Prof. Gill to notify me that Mr. Ranney was to attend, and that a stenographer was to be present.

"He admitted, in answer to my question, that at the time he left me he had expressed the opinion to me that Hamilton was a crook. He confirmed the correctness of my original memorandum of his statement of my attitude toward the proposed experiment, as above stated.

To Get Publicity.

"Mr. Goddard then said that to secure publicity for his experiment he had at Bridgeport, some years ago, certain photographs taken by a government expert, and had formed from that a preliminary opinion adverse to Sacco. He said that while he could not declare, he might have communicated this adverse opinion to Mr. Ranney before Mr. Ranney's conference with me at the experiment. He said he had not been paid anything by anybody for interesting him. At the time case for making the experiment.

"He added his only motive was to elucidate the truth, and also to get such interesting information for himself and his methods as he could get by connecting himself with the case. He repeated this statement several times. I asked him whether, in 1924, when he sought Hamilton's assistance in preparing himself to be an expert, he doubted Hamilton's moral integrity, and he said he did not at that time, but that his doubts had arisen subsequently.

"I then called his attention to the opinion of Prof. Gill and Mr. Turner, based upon an experience of many years, that Hamilton was a man of strict integrity, always supported with certain persons whose largely from his extreme ability and from his success in cases of this character as against other less qualified experts, and I added that in the course of my connection with Mr. by him in the presence of other experts of any suspicion of his integrity.

Lack of Fairness.

"I further added I never even had heard any suggestion of dishonesty made against Mr. Turner, whose photographs were an important part of the defense evidence in this case.

"In answer to a direct inquiry by me, Mr. Goddard said that if he knew Sacco and Vanzetti were guilty it would be a matter of indifference to him whether they had had a fair trial or not.

"Toward the end of the conversation reference was made to the differences between the three straight lines placed for identification on the alleged mortal bullet and straight lines placed for identification on the other bullet test from the body of Parmenter and three from the body of Beradelli.

Mr. Goddard stated that the edges of the markings on No. III were considerably more ragged than the others, but said he could not explain the cause of this difference. He said he had no opinion as to the genuineness of the exhibits. Mr. Ehrmann explained to him some of the reasons for our doubts as to the genuineness of the exhibits."

WM. G. THOMPSON

I confirm the statements in this letter.

HERBERT B. EHRMANN.

Militia Man Mixes Into Sacco-Vanzetti Frameup

Needle Trade Defense

On Sunday, August 28th, 50,000 workers will gather at Starlight Park, East 177th St., Bronx, to enjoy the richest day of their lives. Young and old, big and small, will be there to participate in the greatest carnival ever held by the radical movement in America. This park is the Coney Island of the Bronx. Every feature of the Island is to be found in Starlight Park, including free bathing.

The Giant Coaster.

One of the best known features of the park is the Giant Coaster. It consists of miniature railroad tracks running on steep grades to the high platforms. It is not necessary to describe the wonderful thrills to be experienced as the coasters descends the steep grades. There are numerous other thrilling features which will be controlled on that day by the Joint Defense and Relief Committees, Sam Nessin, manager, who is placed at conspicuous places.

The feature of the evening will be a special performance of the opera "Carmen" by a famous company of stars accompanied by a special symphony orchestra.

Jail Heads of Boston Unions to Halt Strike

and of the number of times they had visited New York recently. They were told that they were under suspicion in connection with the subway bomb blasts in New York. But in the next breath the detectives assured both leaders that they were not trying to "get" them. They were putting questions as to their connections with the left wing.

The reputation Lewis Union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, Sehgman told detective Kelly.

Can't Fool Kelly.

"You can't fool me," replied Kelly. "I know all about the left wing and the right wing."

They were also questioned by superintendent of Police Crowley who insisted that they were the leaders of the general strike. They also got the credit for engineering the picketing at the State House.

"Never mind, I know," was Crowley's reply to the statement of Seligman that they had nothing to do with the picketing. The picketing was a small organization, and that it would be impossible for this union alone to declare a city-wide strike movement.

After being questioned they were returned to their holding and ticket cells in the La Grande Street Police Station. Here they were pestered again by detectives who suggested that it would not go hard with them if they would tell all they knew.

"Better come out with the truth," was the suggestion made to them continually.

Workers Strike Just the Same.

While Miller and Seligman were thus being held incommunicado, the union's lawyer, Morris Ernst, was conferring with the police in an effort to get them inside on bail. In the evening, however, they were released.

In spite of the imprisonment of their officials, however, the Capmakers, under the direction of Sam Weisman and Joseph Kersuni, walked out en masse in the Sacco-Vanzetti strike, held a mass meeting at their union headquarters and decided to go on the picket line at the State House.

The Capmakers' Union has been one of the leaders in the left wing struggle in Boston. Two of their four protest meetings against the tactics used by the right wing in the needle trades have been broken up by a socialist alliance with the police. A local socialist attorney has been especially active in provoking the police to attack meetings held by the capmakers.

TO EMPLOY BARBAROUS METHOD IN FORCIBLY FEEDING FRAMED WORKER

Sacco lifted a frail hand above his blanket as he lay on his cot in state's prison today and waved away guards who came to offer him breakfast.

Downstairs in warden William Hendry's office various methods of forcible feeding were discussed. The warden consulted with Dr. Joseph I. McLaughlin, the prison physician.

Dr. McLaughlin found Vanzetti sleeping this forenoon and did not disturb him. Sacco was able to get up from his cot to talk with the physician.

"I advised him to eat," said Dr. McLaughlin, "but he said he never would eat again until he was freed."

Dr. McLaughlin admitted that forcible feeding of the starving worker would be done if it becomes necessary. He said that Sacco was in a very weak condition but would not be forcibly fed today.

Will Continue Hunger Strike.

Vanzetti was obliged to support Sacco last evening when the pair went to the barber shop for an interview with Attorney M. A. Musmanno, of Pittsburgh, a defense lawyer. On the walk from the death cells to the Cherry Hill section of the prison, Sacco walked beside Vanzetti but stumbled when going up the steps at the end of the wall.

Sacco was on a self-imposed fast for thirty-one days in Dedham jail. The present hunger strike was begun in protest against the recent action used by Governor Alvan T. Fuller in conducting the review of the celebrated case.

Meanwhile, defense lawyers across the city were engaged in an intensive study of law books in preparation for the drive for a new Sacco and Vanzetti hearing before the full bench of the state supreme court on Tuesday.

Push Legal Defense.

Defense motions have been made for a new trial, for a stay and request of writs of error, writs of error and for writs of habeas corpus in both state and federal courts. All motions have been denied. Exceptions to Thayer's rulings go to the full bench of the state supreme court, called for a special sitting on Tuesday. At the same time the full bench —which will consist of Judges Henry K. Braley, Edward P. Pierce, James B. Carroll and William Cushing Wait —will hear exceptions allowed by Supreme Court Judge George A. Sanderson to his denial of a writ of error. All court moves are based on the prejudice of Thayer.

The session next Tuesday will make it the third time that the supreme court has been called on to pass on the question of exceptions to denials of motions looking to a new trial. Each time the supreme court full bench has sustained Judge Thayer in his death sentence on the framed up workers.

Robert G. Elliott, the official executioner at Sing Sing, said the man who had been scheduled to throw on the switch in the death house for the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti at state's prison, Charlestown, in the early morning of August 11th, had been advised by the warden of the Massachusetts state prison to remain in Boston until after the execution, or until the execution is postponed indefinitely, it was learned here today from authoritative sources.

Elliott's home is at 132-10 Ninety-fourth avenue, Richmond Hill, New York.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—Luigi Vanzetti, sister of Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the shoemaker under sentence of death in the Massachusetts state prison, today booked second class passage in the liner Aquitania, which sails Saturday.

"I am going to Boston as soon as I reach America," she said. "I am certain my trip will end in triumph. I will tell every one in America who is not alert that none of our family would kill or rob."

NEW PLANS FOR MASS PICKETING IN BOSTON DESPITE TERRORISM

An indication of the feeling among the masses of Boston's population today was the recent development in the Sacco-Vanzetti case was shown late this afternoon incidental to the departure of the huge bale loaded with the delegation sent here as "death marchers" by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee of New York. The delegation left the headquarters of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee in Hanover Street, going first to the offices of the Boston Globe. But it was quickly surrounded by an approving throng, as reporters interviewed members of the delegation and photographers snapped pictures.

The action has thus insured that the financial district stopping in front of the National Shawmut Bank, one of Boston's largest financial institutions. Here the streets were filled. The streets in Post Office square were also blocked as the six detective Kelly, from New York City, were putting questions as to their connections with the left wing.

The reputation Lewis Union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, Sehgman told detective Kelly.

The Paris Congress of the Amsterdam International

tions coal supplies encumbent upon them," the French by reference to the inflation.

The questions of reconstruction and rationalization occupy 10 pages. We are here told that as early as 1910 Messrs. Oudegeest and Jouhaux had the proper recipe for the salvation of the world's economy in their pockets. It only lasted rather long before the capitalists would consent to make use of it.

To what extent the policy of Amsterdam brought about an improvement in the questions of reconstruction and rationalization (for this is surely the main point, if the query is not impertinent), is a matter on which no words are lost. Nor would it be easy to prove. The loss of the eight-hour day all along the line, the defeat of the British miners, and other like occurences can surely not be looked upon as "proper steps for the purpose of bringing about better conditions" for the workingclasses.

In the realm of social politics the achievements of Amsterdam are equally great. Not even so important a man as Oudegeest can deny that no progress has been made in the matter of the eight-hour day. At any rate, the I. F. T. U. had called upon the workers > "to meet the offensive of the employers on the eight-hour day in favor of the right of co-operation and co-decision."

That this must not be effected by inciting a ruthless class-war is obvious in view of the general attitude of Amsterdam in questions of reconstruction.

Let us still see what the report has to say on the subject of Amsterdam's fight against war, reaction and fascism. Proud reference is made to the fine decisions of Rome and the Hague in 1922. That no action was taken on the very next occasion, that of the French and Belgian occupation of the Ruhr in 1923, is put down to the fact that the competent factors were "still too weak."

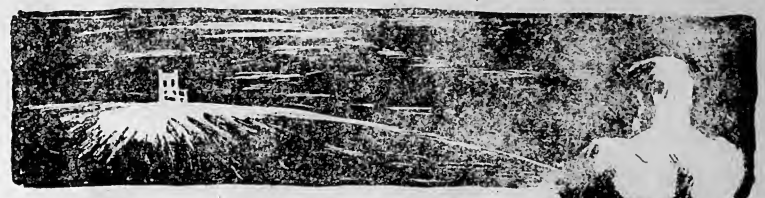
> "In 1924 the Pan-American Federation of Labor appealed to the I. F. T. U. to prevent the rebels opposing President Obregon in Mexico from being supplied with ammunition from Europe."

To cover up the fact that Amsterdam does practically nothing against the danger of war and has obviously no serious intention of ever doing anything in future against it, the report approaches the League of Nations with a suggestion in time articles, worked out by Oudegeest, Jouhaux and Thorberg, "for the control of the international traffic in arms by means of a mixed committee." Surely nothing more ridiculous could be imagined than a mixed committee of the war-mongers for the control of the traffic in arms.

While shamefully ignoring the fact that the rogues formerly leading the Italian Trade Union Confederation went over into the fascist camp with, D'Arragona at their head, the report boastfully states that

> "no occasion is neglected of protesting in the press reports of the I. F. T. U. (which are read by nobody) against the misdeeds of the fascists."

As a matter of secondary importance it is stated that there is no possibility of helping the Italian trade unions at present, in the first place for lack of funds and secondly in view of the futility of opposing the fascists.



The report then goes on to speak of a series of questions of lesser interest. We may, however, content ourselves with an extract in regard to the most important problems of the international trade union movement. Any trade union member who is not utterly blind as a result of the idly red-rust twaddle about the alleged crimes of Moscow and the Communists against the labor movement, must ask himself of what use such a body as the I. F. T. U. can possibly be to the workingclass. To no question of the labor movement does Amsterdam give a definite answer, nay, what is worse, the international problems are not even brought upon the tapis. In their complete incapacity to see what is happening in the labor world, the reformist gods of Amsterdam sit on the throne of their bogus international and talk twaddle about the stupidity of the working masses and the Communist opposition, which makes it so hard for Messrs. Jouhaux, Oudegeest and Sassenbach to lead the workers into the promised land of a reconstructed capitalism in which they shall be allowed to collaborate in increasing the capitalist profits indefinitely. It is not to be expected that at the Paris congress the trumpets will sound and shake down the walls of Amsterdam with their clarion peal. On the contrary, the few members of the opposition will hardly be allowed to say a word, and if they do so their remarks will be drowned in the general tumult. On the other hand, the well-satisfied society of augurs will tell each other that all is well, and the chosen leaders will remain the chosen leaders. In secret, meanwhile, they will call each other names, seeing that all know that, once the imperialists start to attack one another again, each of them will once more stand by his national exploiter under the parole of "Gott strafe England" or whatever else it may be.

It is only by the liquidation of the Amsterdam spirit in the labor movement and by the destruction of that reactionary clique of leaders, which calls itself the I. F. T. U., that the trade union section can rise again, regain its strength, and become a militant international proletarian army. That is the unmistakable teaching of the report of the Paris Congress of the I. F. T. U.

A Dangerous Point in the Fight to Save Sacco, Vanzetti

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

LIBERAL papers that is to say those publications that try to paint the capitalist tiger in as peaceful a color as possible, are showering praise on Governor Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts for granting a reprieve until the 22nd of August to Sacco and Vanzetti who were sentenced to die in the electric chair on Aug. 10. The governor is represented as a humane person and more of a statesman than a politician. This is a lot of drivel. But it is more dangerous than drivel delivered on ordinary occasions. This is no ordinary occasion. The lives of two militant workers are hanging in the balance. We must not be deluded by balderdash about the magnanimity of a capitalist government, officered by different flunkies, that has kept Sacco and Vanzetti in the shadow of the death chair for seven years.

Governor Fuller's official statement, purporting to give an impartial review of the Sacco-Vanzetti case in all its ramifications, was the blasted report of a partisan. The couched in more temperate language than the diatribes issued from the bench by Judge Thayer it was none the less vicious, and because of its diplomatic wording more likely to convince many people that Sacco and Vanzetti's constitutional rights were strictly observed.

What those gullible people ignore is the class character of the judiciary of Massachusetts as well as of all other states, which is a gigantic machine for crushing labor opposition to the capitalist state. The fact that the New England money barons have not killed Sacco and Vanzetti inside the past seven years is a tribute to the solidarity displayed by the workers of the United States and of the world in protesting against the judicial murder. All this legal rigmarole is an effort to convince the masses that Sacco and Vanzetti are about to be executed, not because of their radical opinions, but because of the commission of a specific crime.

No greater evidence of Governor Fuller's inhuman hatred for those two labor leaders could be had than his delaying the reprieve until the last moment. Imagine the sensitive pale victims in the death chambers, expecting that every approaching footstep bears a messenger of death. And when that messenger comes, he comes with a reprieve, which means twelve more days of agony, with another awful night at the end of it. Hundreds of brave men die only once while cowards die many times a day. But life can never again mean the same to Sacco and Vanzetti. And their survival after seven years of torture is testimony to the powers of endurance of a human being. Surely no fiend in human form could think up greater punishment than has been meted out to Sacco and Vanzetti for the past seven years. Yet this is what some people call "a square deal."

If the state supreme court which meets in Boston next week decides adversely on the exceptions taken by the defense to the rulings of Judge Thayer, there are no more legal avenues thru which the condemned men can hope to escape.

Justice Holmes of the United States supreme court has ruled that even in the face of Judge Thayer's prejudice (Holmes is careful to qualify his statement by saying that he does not mean to imply that Thayer was prejudiced) he has not the power to issue a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. Nothing short of want of legal power on Thayer's part would permit Holmes to issue such a writ, he says. And because of this legal fiction a prejudiced judge has a legal right to send two innocent men to jail!

The department of justice refuses to divulge the secrets of files which hold evidence of a frame-up between the Massachusetts officials and officials of the D. of J. in the opinion of those conversant with the case from the beginning. Here is another link in the chain of evidence which goes to prove that Sacco and Vanzetti are the victims of open-shop labor-hating forces of New England.

The Rebels

No drums roll and no banners flaunt
Where go the rebels pale and gaunt
They wear the noose and crown of thorn
And by each one a cross is borne—
John Brown and Lovejoy steadfast go,
And shrouded ones are moving slow
On bloody feet. Gene Debs is here
And Socrates is striding near,
Then Jean Juares and Liebknecht pace
Beside the Anarchists. Each face
Is lifted and each voice in song
As countless others join the throng
Of all the dead in Labor's cause.
They march and march without a pause
And they shall never stay their march
Nor down again their flaming torch
Until the workers get their meed
And all the human race is freed!

HENRY REICH, JR.

—Drawing by Fred Ellis.

In these few dark days that are left before the clock in Charlestown prison strikes the hour and the minutes which peli drom for Sacco and Vanzetti would labor must increase its pressure a hundredfold.

The protest of labor recently saved workers from the hangman of Hungary.

They have saved scores of workers in many countries of Europe that were marked for death because of their loyalty to labor.

Here in the United States they saved Tom Mooney from the electric chair tho they were not strong enough to force official hands to open the prison gates.

They saved Moyer, Heywood and Pettibone when they were charged with the murder of the governor of Idaho.

They can save Sacco and Vanzetti.

These few remaining days must be world-shaking days.

Sketches from the Class Struggle In Other Lands

The Red Flag Over the French Barracks

EVERY year when the 14th of July comes around Imperialist France holds a celebration in honor of the storming of the Bastille during the French Revolution, but almost as much of the ancient revolutionary spirit of the day remains in these official celebrations as in our Independence Day. Patriotic speeches by fat bourgeois deputies, ceremonies at the tomb of the "unknown soldier," military parades to rouse enthusiasm for the next war, the bourgeoisie, grown prosperous from the profits of the last war, and already looking forward eagerly to the profits of the next, thronging the fashionable restaurants along the boulevards—and instant suppression and arrest for any attempt on the part of the French militants of today to give Bastille Day its true significance.

In Paris, this 14th of July, the police broke up the demonstration of the military organization of veterans of the World War, headed by Henri Barbusse. In Blois, the bourgeoisie were scandalized to discover an immense red flag floating over the barracks of the town when they awoke on Bastille Day. There was consternation among the officers, every soldier thought to be tainted with Communism was hauled up and cross-examined, several arrested and imprisoned, and three, whom an officer found singing the Internationael in company with civilian comrades were held for court martial. The other soldiers in the barracks are demanding the release of their comrades.

From the Days of the German Revolution.

The Berlin workers recently had a grim reminder of the days of the Noske counter revolutionary terror in 1919, when thousands of workers were executed by order of Noske, the social democratic police chief who directed the job of smashing the revolutionary movement of the masses, when the reformists, the Wells and Greene of that period, stepped in to save the rule of the bourgeoisie.

In the course of excavations for a new car line in Berlin, workmen recently unearthed a number of skeletons, together with fragments of cloth and buttons from naval uniforms. The presence of bullet-holes through the skulls of the skeletons taken in conjunction with that is known of the history of these days, is considered clear indication that these are the victims of one of the mass executions of revolutionary soldiers and sailors carried on by the monarchist officers, whom the workers had disarmed, and Noske and his other social democratic friends had armed again.

As soon as the discovery was made public, a number of witnesses appeared, people whose fathers and brothers and sons had disappeared during the days of the Noske terror without leaving any trace. Others who had been present at the execution, have placed themselves at the disposal of the German Communist Party, to help in getting the truth before the workers of Germany. Every day men who were in the navy at that time have been coming into the offices of the Rote Fahne to describe the murder of their comrades. In 1918-1919 the sailors were one of the most revolutionary elements in Germany, and the special object of Noske persecutions.

This latest reminder of the treachery of the German social democrats to the cause of the working class has not helped to increase the credit of social democracy with the German workers.

A Call to Murder.

A recent issue of "Rennaisance" the counter-revolutionary Russian journal published in Paris by Peter Struve, openly glories in the assassination of Voikov, Soviet ambassador to Poland, and urges others to follow the example of the assassin. Appealing to its readers for contributions to a fund for the family of Koverda, Voikov's assasin, "Rennaisance" continaes:

"Let the combattants know in advance that their families will be taken care of.

"Then their souls will be calmer, AND THEIR HANDS WILL BE STEADIER."

As direct call to murder, as has ever been made, is the comment of l'Humanite, organ of the Communist Party of France.

Disorderly Conduct A Story

By EDWIN ROLFE

NIGHT like a black coffin envelops the city. People hurry in the dark, trying to get within the pale rays of the gas-lamps that are scattered irregularly thru the night. All with stooped shoulders, all with drooping head and leaden, shuffling dragging feet. No clear rhythmic steps can be heard. They whose feet and heads and hearts have not been deadened by long hours of daily toil, ride in taxis.

At one corner the lamp shines down on two figures of almost the same height. A boy and girl. Each less than twenty in years. The girl is speaking.

"So I tol' him I ain't gonna spit the 'cogne' at' he stand from now on this ain't yer home any more. Well B-Bible . . ."

"So dotja ay begins'?"

"Apologize? To her? I tol' him he could go to hell!"

There is a moment of silence. The youth looks nervously down at his worn shoes. The girl gazes sharply at his face which is white as the unnatural lamp-light. Finally

"Kate."

"That name. You aren't got no place to live tonight?"

"No."

"Got any money?"

"No. They all want to do is all from me but."

"Looked me out?"

Nothing, period of silence passes. Then

"Kate."

The girl is now dropping.

"Ya know, I wish I could take ya home with me . . ."

Her face brightens.

"But I sleep in the same room with the kids, Tom an' Henny an' . . ."

They begin to walk. It grows colder. She takes his arm. He puts the fingers on his coat sleeve gently and suddenly realizes that they are cold—icy cold. He rubs them—to try to warm them. But they remain as icy as before. Soon he feels her trembling.

"Kate, yer shiverin'."

"That's alright Bob. It's only the cold."

"Let's walk over to the square. We can sit down on a bench in the park."

They walk on. Their steps are quick now. They are fleeing from cold. The streets have emptied their human burden into the houses long ago. Very few lights shine thru the dirty-curtained windows. These too go out, one by one. Only the street lamps keep blinking—maledictly in the darkness.

They reach the park. Even here there is no sign of life. The bums have migrated long ago, and are now being slugged by the bullies of cops in warmer cities.

They sit down on a bench. She wraps her coat more closely around her and lays her head against his shoulder. He places his arm around her and covers her cold fingers with his own scarcely warmer hand.

The chimes of a church nearby toll out the hour of twelve. From somewhere victrola-music floats down to them. "In the middle of the night-light with yo-ooou . . ." Kate shivers. Bob laughs sardonically.

"They oughta add'in a warm house," he says.

Kate's answer is an inarticulate sound stifled in her throat.

"Bob, ya aint gonna start out with me the whole night?"

"Yes, honey, I am."

"But your folks . . ."

"The hell with 'em! They're all alike! 'Build a wall around the bible an' stay inside the wall,' the ol' man said to me yesterday! Damn em! What good did the bible ever do them, or me, or anybody?"

"Don't argue with me, Bob. I don't disagree with ya."

Bob laughs. "That's all right, honey, I forgot. But listen, don't ya think we'd be warmer if we laid down on the grass?" We could cover ourselves with my overcoat . . ."

Kate hesitates wants to say no but changes her mind.

"Alright."

Slowly they arise. He lifts her over the iron fence that supplements the "keep off" signs, and Ladies over after her. Arm in arm they walk over to a little island of grass surrounded by low bushes clothed with threadbare leaves that somehow keep as much cold away from the spot as Kate's threadbare coat keeps from her body. At last, where the grass and fallen leaves are thickest they lay down to sleep. Kate pulls her arms out of her sleeves and throws the coat around herself, spreading Bob covers her legs with the jacket and throws the overcoat over her body and head and shoulders.

The night grows colder.

So cold that patrolman Reilly passing by slowly within his four by six gas-stove warmed beat, and does not see them the pass by his nightly inspection tours.

So cold that the young man and woman flesh and blood lying huddled so close on the ground feel no sensual pleasure or ecstasy in such close contact.

All is stifled by the intense cold.

In the morning, patrolman Reilly decides that it is time for him to go his round thru the park. It is very early. The sun has not yet risen above the skyscrapers in the square. A sort of semi lightness hazily illumines the park.

Patrolman Reilly does his coat and walks out of his booth into the empty square. As he walks thru the paved lanes in the park, he lets his eyes wander freely. No one searches—Sarkoff'd be here after a night like—the steps short. The spot of bushes with the pile of gray-black ocrete showing thru the chinned twigs becomes visible.

Curious, he lifts his bulky body over the fence and begins to approach the bushes. Maybe it's a murder—someone's dead body lying on the ground wrapped in black cloth cold, rotten bundles. Patrolman Reilly finds Murdered girl . . .

He reaches the spot. Creep thru the bushes where Bob had broken thru the night before. He treads heavily up to the gray-black overcoat. He sees the sleepers, close together on the ground.

Patrolman Reilly is disappointed. Visions fade. He kicks Bob heavily on the shoulder.

Bob awakes with a start that raises Kate. He sees the heavy blue pants, the brass buttons.

"We were only sleepin'."

"Sleepin' me eye! Git up, you two!"

Kate begins to cry. Bob, scared himself consoles her, pats her shoulder.

Patrolman Reilly marches thru disheveled, distraught, to the police station.

The Pomp of War --- An Incident

By HENRY GEORGE WEISS.

"I was early morn, and sad, forlorn we breakfasted mired in clay.
For thru the night, a ghastly sight, poor Jock had passed away;
And we munched our bread, and Dan he said, as he rinsed a mess-tin out.
"Sure, Sherman was right, and a fight's a fight—but what is it all about?
That's the thing that's bothering a helluva lot of us!
Oh, we shed our blood and wallow in mud, and fight, and think, and cuss!
There's Jock gone "west," and all the rest of the pals we loved gone too,
And we bury our dead and munch our bread—and tomorrow it's me or you!
"There's a chap who lies where the heavy flies are crawling across his face.
I ran him thru—low—with a bayonet twist—so—in a very awkward place.
I'm thinking he laid without water or shade and died by the inches there;
And I didn't care then how he died—or when—but I'm thinking now I care!"
And Bill he rolled with a shuddering hold a tailor made cigarette;
And he said with a grin that rather caved in, "There's a sight I can't forget.
We silenced the gun, and the crew, everyone, (the ones that lived, I mean),
Were all loaded up with an issue of Krupp—and so we brot back the machine.
And one was a kid; but I did what was bid; and when I raised my gat
He only did glare with a frightened stare as I shot—Well, enough of that!"
And I—I sat, and an old gray rat peeped out from a sewer pipe.
Oh, he was a fat, a jolly rat,—and I thot of the bodies ripe!
I thot of the meals on a thousand fields, I thot of the mangled dead,
And I thot "Fight and rot" is the motto we've got, and we print it with flying lead!

PROGRAM.

THIS mammoth production of the Goldwyn Goshamighty Pictures has taken six years to produce. A hundred thousand (100,000) people were employed 3,000 horses; 100 sheep and a director.

Pointing a great moral lesson, this super production has been approved by Church dignitaries of all sizes.

PROLOGUE.

"In the thousands of years that humanity has suffered, it has turned to religion for relief. One good turn deserves another.

PART I.

"In the Spring a Young Girl's Fancy Turns Peculiar"

The scene is a factory interior. Anita is in LOVE. She raises her head from the machine and looks at the open window. Outside little Cupids are darting among the branches. Anita presses her hand to her heart. She sighs.

"All the World Loves a Lover"

Girls at the adjoining machines nod knowingly. Anita is in LOVE. The face of the hard-boiled forelady cracks into a smile. They all look out of the window. They see the cute little Cupids. Ah, LOVE! Hot stuff. Anita looks at the timeclock. Five thirty. Hot dawg!

"Ain't He Swell!"

The girls rush out of the factory gates. Some of them have young men waiting for them. The Cupids in the trees are now shooting arrows frantically. The girls from Anita's department look at her. She has rushed into the arms of John. John is poor but handsome. Life IS like that.

"Keep Off the Grass"

Anita and John walk down the street arm in arm. Then he shyly puts his arm around her waist. They look into each others eyes. They are full of LOVE! They enter a park. A cop (Irish) looks at them. He smiles. It grows dark. They drag a park bench back of a tree. The cop sees them. He smiles. By the light of the moon he watches the lit the Cupids flitting thru the trees.

PART VI.

"Six Months Later"

A shabby room. Six children are tugging at their mother's skirt. Is it . . .? Can it be . . .? It's Anita alright! At the table John is a picture of despair.

"Let Us End It All!"

John proposes they shoot themselves. Anita is horrified. Then she thinks. (Close-up of Anita thinking.) Her forehead is deeply wrinkled. Finally . . . she nods to John. Sure . . let's!

"When Do We Eat?"

The children begin crying. Mamma! Poppa! Anita points to an empty bread-box. John empties his pockets. A small bible falls from his pocket. They look at each other.

"Let's Try Religion!"

Anita looks John right in the eye. Let us PRAY! They had been too busy to pray. But they are out of work. Now they have time. They are about to pray. Suddenly a ray of light penetrates the dirty window by brute force.

"For Christ's Sake!"

They see the light. Slowly, Anita falls to her knees. John kneels. The children kneel. They pray to hear hell. While they pray there is a knock on the door. They all turn haingrily.

"Everything comes to Them What Waits Long Enough"

John goes to the door. He steps back astonished. It's a small package! He grabs it and rushes back to his family. They gather round the package as he opens it. It is a sample package of BRAN-FLAKES! (Close-up of package.) There is wild rejoicing. Now they like bran!

"The Lord Doth Provide"

They all kneel in thanksgiving. They would have starved to death at twelve o'clock. They are saved. Now they won't starve until five!

THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

Is being made ready to electrocute our Comrades Sacco and Vanzetti. An execution is also prepared. Governor Fuller and Judge Thayer are determined to go thru with this monstrous crime and murder two innocent men. The workers of America as well as the rest of the world have called strikes and demonstrations protesting against this crime. What have you done? As a workers' child, a member of the workingclass, it is up to you to show your solidarity with the rest of the workingclass and help too. The Governor Fullers', the Judge Thayers', and the rest of the capitalists are united against the workingclass. The workingclass, including the children must unite against the capitalist class. In this way and this way only can we free Sacco and Vanzetti.

Send your letters to free Sacco and Vanzetti to Governor Fuller thru the Children's Section. Several thousand letters might help save Sacco and Vanzetti.

RED GUARD SONG

By A YOUNG PIONEER

The White Guards are attacking.
Plundering and sacking.
Have not fear, or Comrade.
The Red Guards, they are near

Do you see the Red Flag flying?
Do you see the comrades dying?
As they battle against the White Guard.
As they battle to be free.

Do you hear the trumpets calling?
Do you see the White Guards falling?
For they cannot face the army
Of the class that must be free.

The White Guards have retreated
The White Guards are defeated.
Crushed and cowed and beaten.
So the dying age must go.

Hail, Hail, the new day dawning!
Hail, Hail, the bright new morning!
Comrades, we must not linger.
Great tasks confront us yet.

Solidarity to Free Sacco-Vanzetti

Dear Comrades: I have read about the Sacco-Vanzetti case. It seems to me an awful puzzle. If the workingclass were organized right and if they would all realize that if they stop dividing themselves into different groups, on account of quarrels, Sacco and Vanetti could be outside of the jail within 24 hours. All they need is a general strike for a few hours and it would save all the hard labored dollars for expenses. I'm only twelve years old and if all those laborers in the unions were only 12 years old, I'm pretty dogsome sure that Sacco and Vanzetti would have a dinner with us tomorrow.

The Myth About the Progressive Amalgamated

By a Clothing Worker

MANY illusions are abroad about the glorious fighting tradition of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, its progressive policies, etc. Mr. Hillman knows better, so do some of the insiders. It is but 12 years since Nashville, Tennessee, where the A. C. W. A was started. It took about that long to unravel before the masses the game that was sent afoot and then played between a few, amongst whom was what is now known as Hart, Schaffner & Marx and his office employe, Mr. Hillman. We must admit the game was played quite cleverly. There are but few who know the story and it makes quite interesting reading.

Hillman's abilities were recognized by his boss quite early, and having in mind the establishment of modern garment factories with cheap labor in Chicago, with the middle west as its chief market, Hart, Schaffner & Marx found Mr. Rickert, then President of the United Garment Workers, affiliated with the A. F. of L. in their way. The U. G. W. led by Rickert was playing the game of the New York bosses and Mrs. Schaffner found it necessary to use the union against his competitors nationally and locally picked out his able and trusted office clerk, Hillman, to do the job.

Mr. Rickert by his arbitrary and brutal methods at the convention played into the hands of the opposition let then by a group connected with Hillman's boss and out of it came the A. C. W., formed, around the set of employers led by the first trust in the clothing industry, the firm of Hart, Schaffner & Marx. The opposition to Rickert returning to New York found a sell-out agreement signed by Rickert with the New York bosses, kept the tailors on strike thus forcing the New York bosses to give further concessions, all of which was gravy for Hart, Schaffner & Marx. Mr. Hillman then became President of the new union and an agreement was signed in Chicago. Thus the modern big clothing manufacturers got a valuable ally against the smaller fellow who had intrenched himself previously on the market and who had to be disbursed. Even the big Rochester manufacturers and Nash, in time began to see the game and signed up, "through diplomacy" with the new union. The liberal Hart, Schaffner & Marx kept on supporting Mr. Hillman administration and used it to play its policies in the clothing market.

A major part of the strategy was to pull the masses of radicalized clothing workers away from Rickert & Company. Circumstances were such as to facilitate this. The whole split maneuver bore the character of rebellion against the A. F. of L.

bureaucracy. It called for not recognizing the surrender Rickert made to the New York bosses and continuing the struggle for better conditions. The strategy of the firm of Hart, Schaffner & Marx left plenty of room for militancy on the part of the new union, particularly against its competitors in some of the eastern markets. Amalgamation of all needle trades unions would have facilitated the extension of Hart, Schaffner & Marx policy over the whole needle industry. This slogan also helped give the appearance of progressivism to the Amalgamated. Mr. Hillman on the basis of this pseudo-progressivism surrounded himself with a staff of radicals, who were willing to swallow his "statesmanship." Hillman allowing these radicals some freedom within limits in order to use radicalism to camouflage and bolster up his policy.

The stand with the Russian American Industrial Corporation, based strictly upon class collaboration lines and recognition of Soviet Russia in the strict capitalist sense was utilized for the same purpose.

[illegible] was quite [illegible]. The way [illegible] helped [illegible] the Amalgamated [illegible] Hillman had any difficulty [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The Paris Congress of the Amsterdam International

By FRITZ HECKERT

EARLY in August the Fourth Congress of the I. F. T. U. (International Federation of Trade Unions) will take place in Paris. The publication, a few days back, of the written report of this session enables us even now to form some idea of the significance of the coming event and of the entire constitution of the Amsterdam International. To put it plainly, the report is an appalling document of the hopeless situation into which the I. F. T. U. has got, thanks to the mentality of its leaders. Very naturally, the god-sent leaders of the "West-European trade-union movement" will not concur in our opinion. For in almost every line the report reflects the pride and satisfaction of Oudegeest and his clique in the wonderful achievements of the working class under their leadership.

The membership movement, both in the individual countries and as a whole, speaks in very different accents, which, however, give food for thought to any sober observer. In the years under review the membership receded from 16,530,000 to 13,500,000, although the accession of four new sections had allegedly caused an increase of 165,000. There was thus a net loss of 3,200,000 members.

Nor is the state of affairs any better in regard to the financial resources of the I. F. T. U. The report says nothing of the fact that there have in this connection already been very serious differences of opinion within the Amsterdam management, the English in particular being dissatisfied with Oudegeest's administration of the funds. But why should this matter, which has already raised much dust in public and does not reflect to the credit of Oudegeest and Sassenbach, be dished up again in the report? In 1924 the business year started with a balance of 30,000 guilders on the credit side, but in 1925 this amount had shrunk to barely 1,000 guilders, while the financial report of 1926 shows a deficit of 71,000 guilders. While in 1924, 168,000 guilders were collected in subscriptions, and in 1925, 164,000, the subscription revenue in 1926 figured at only 126,000 guilders, against an expenditure of 200,000. The great deficit, however, is by no means to be attributed to expenditure in connection with strikes, but is merely a deficit of administrative expenditure. Added to this, the report still tells us two remarkable facts, the one being that prior to 1924 the staff numbered 48, not including the three secretaries, while at the close of 1926 it only numbered 20, and the other that certain countries are desirous of paying smaller subscriptions in future.

Of the 126,000 guilders subscribed in 1926, Germany alone paid 54,677, Great Britain 37,118, and France 2,028, the balance being divided among the 20 other states which are affiliated to the I. F. T. U. Thus, as any one can see, the I. F. T. U. is practically nothing but a combination of German and British trade unions.

Interest, however, also attaches to that part of the report which speaks of the cultural propaganda and information activity of the I.F.T.U. We here learn that it is practically only in Germany that the publications of the I. F. T. U. find a market, though even there not very many copies can be disposed of. This greater German demand may be explained by the party orders of the trade-union leaders to account of the union funds and the subsequent gratuitous distribution among the subordinate organs. The English have but little interest in the printed matter distributed by Oudegeest, and the French have none at all. Thus of Sassenbach's "celebrated" work on "25 Years of the International Trade Union Movement," 2,000 copies were sold in Germany out of a total of 3,000 offered for sale, whereas in England the sales effected only figured at 90 out of 2,000 and in France at 10 out of 2,000.

A similar state of affairs to that in the I. F. T. U. is that in the international professional secretariats, among which that of the transport workers, numbering 2,148,000 members, is locally the best off. Other secretariates with more than one million members each are those of the metal workers (1,750,000 members) and the miners (1,950,000 members). It is with some satisfaction that the report in various places makes mention of the fact that the session of the advisory council of October, 1925, succeeded in re-appointing Fraŭ Hodges in place of Cook as leader of the miners' secretariate. This is a somewhat painful passage in the fair report, seeing that Hodges has now so openly become a yellow leader.

In studying that part of the report which treats of the "relations with the non-affiliated organizations," we shall have no difficulty in observing that for the Amsterdam leaders the criterion in regard to the various organizations is not the question whether the organization in question is or is not based on class-warfare against capitalism, if the organization is in favor of a working community with the capitalists, it will be welcome; if, on the other hand, it favors the proletarian revolution, it must be opposed.

For people like the ultra-conservative and avowedly counter-revolutionary Green, the leader of the American Federation of Labor, there are no-limits. No concession would be too great if only Green would join. As yet, this here is dissatisfied with the I. F. T. U., for (firstly) it affords no strict autonomy to all the affiliated countries, (secondly) it still embodies a resolution in favor of socialisation, and (thirdly) the subscription fees are too high. Nevertheless, Amsterdam has much gratification in welcoming the resolutions of the American Labor Union Congress, makes further offers, and declares Green's attitude to be the outcome of a misunderstanding. The report expresses surprise that Green should "yet consider the affiliation of the A. F. O. L. to the I. F. T. U. impossible."

If the tone adopted by the servile Amsterdam spokesmen in their dealings with the Yankees is abject, they way brave and gallant as regards China. During the Shanghai strike of 1925, Amsterdam received a request from Shanghai for the initiation of a relief action, while at the same time the English suggested that a delegation be sent to China to study the labor conditions there. The outcome was that

> "The Executive of the I. F. T. U. has come to the conclusion that there can be no question of sending a delegation. At the same time it is considered fruitless to institute an inquiry of the kind at a time of continuous civil war." So much for the question of a delegation. In regard to the relief action, meanwhile, it was decreed that

> "Whereas no reliable information could be gathered as to the cause and extent of the conflict and as to the organizations affected, their membership, etc., the International Federation of Trade Unions was not authorized to institute a relief action" (p. 36 of the report).

Many pages of the report are devoted to Moscow, the E. I. U., and the Russian trade unions. The entire correspondence between the I. F. T. U. and the all-Russian Federation of Trade Unions, and part of that with the Anglo Russian committee was supplied for the purpose of proving that Moscow is the worst of all evils and Amsterdam the brave knight fighting for the unity of the international trade union movement. Many words and much hypocrisy. We need but read the reports of the sessions of the executive committees, and we shall find that the resolutions in regard to the relations with Moscow contain not only one contradiction after another, but also the shameless maneuvers of Oudegeest against trade union unity. A glance at page 57 will show why the West-European workers must oppose a matter of "their trade unions with those of Russia."

> "The policy pursued by the Russian Federation of Trade Unions in this period and particularly in 1926, has once more convinced the I. F. T. U. that its own task of having nothing to do with the Russians have been altogether right. The attitude adopted towards the leadership of the British Trades Union Congress both during and after the coal-miners' strike is obvious proof of the fact that the Russian Trade Union Federation denies the right of self-determination in the trade union movement of the individual countries. It has never been more patent than during the mining dispute that the Russian Trade Union Federation interprets the word "unity" only in the sense of "subjection to Moscow's doctrines."

The self-sacrificing fight put up by Russian trade unions for the victory of the British miners is therefore taken as confirmation of the accuracy of the Amsterdam policy of preventing unity with the Russians. A previous admission on the part of the famous labor leaders of Amsterdam. This suffices for any worker to recognize the said leaders, and he cannot fail to know their meaning when they attempt to make their alibi in the following terms:

> "Their (the Russians') great membership and the consequent influence exercised on the resolutions, afford the Russian trade union movement the guarantee that their wishes would enjoy consideration, in so far as they are in keeping with the principles and policy of the International Federation of Trade Unions."

Fully a dozen pages are devoted to the British miners' strike. The preceding paragraph shows plainly in what spirit this subject, too, is treated. The question is never raised as to whether the Amsterdam tactics, the attitude of the British trade union leaders, or the attitude of the foreign miners' sections were not also partly responsible for the defeat of the miners. There were only two disagreeable things during the conflict, the "splitting" and "trade-union undermining" attitude of the Russians, and the resultant conduct of the strike under the leadership of Cook. The report even has the effrontery to say some words in praise of the shameful business of the five per cent loan granted the British trade unions through the "co-operation" of Oudegeest and Sassenbach. At the same time it does not forget to express its doubtful displeasure at the fact that the English also turned for help to trade unions not affiliated to the I. F. T. U.

Thus, owing to the help of the Russian trade unions, the British miners' fight could have broken down a few months earlier, which would not have enhanced the fame of the strike-breaking international. The fact showing the aid received by the miners from the Individual countries is highly interesting. For trade union member—Holland, grave 1.8 cents, Denmark 6c, Switzerland 7c, Sweden 15, Germany 15, France 6.6. The Germans seem still to have to pay for their previous defeats, by having to give to the Reparations

The Effects of Rationalization in the U. S. A.

By JOSEPH ZACK

FOR the workers in capitalist countries this word "rationalization" has a terrible meaning. It means the most ruthless and scientific policy of exploitation. In plain English one may call it speed up and efficiency. It means the replacement of the skilled by machinery, by semi-skilled and unskilled. It means women and child labor. It summarizes the labor policy of the ruling class in the modern imperialist stage of capitalism.

The July, 1927, issue of "Labor Review," published by the U. S. Department of Labor, which surely cannot be accused of proproletarian sympathies, in the compilation of its figures shows some of the effects of post-war rationalization upon the working class. The figures show that out of four workers employed in 1923 only 3 were employed in 1927. And this applies to the basic industries, to those industries upon which the economy of this country depends, and which indicate whether we have "prosperity," or whether we are headed for depression. Employment in the basic industries has decreased 11 per cent in a period of 4 years, between 1923 and 1927.

Now let us view the present prosperity from the basis of wages. There has been a decrease of 1.58 per cent in wages paid to skilled labor alone. Mind you, there has been a general increase in employment of 11 per cent. Of those 11 per cent skilled labor alone received in 1927, 1.58 per cent less than it did in 1923. Little is said in this issue as to the per-capita wages paid to the laborer in the unskilled, which has been much greater.

While under post-war rationalization the number of unemployed inevitably increases and wages decrease, retail prices of food have a tendency to go up and increased 56 per cent, 6 per cent between 1913 and 1927.

But what is most characteristic, those actually on the job employed produced much more than ever before in American history.

Between 1919 and 1927 the output per worker per working hour increased 31 per cent. That means that 66 workers in 1927 produced as much as 100 workers did in 1919. In the language of the "Labor Review," "expansion of output per person has been particularly large during recent years, amounting to 10 per cent in the two years from 1923 to 1925." (Labor Review, 1927.)

For example is characteristic of the general national situation now prevailing. The Bethlehem Steel Co. employed in 1923, 62,250 men. In 1925 it employed 2,152 less than in 1923. Those 60,098 men produced 10 per cent more in 1925 than the 62,250 did in 1923. (See editorial N. Y. Evening Post, Jul. 6, 1925.)

The "Labor Review" (June, 1927) states that increases for this increased output by less workers can be ascribed to "increasing utilization of machinery and power, introduction of various sorts of labor saving devices and methods, elimination of waste," etc.

Anyone visiting Pittsburgh, Gary or Detroit knows very well that "elimination of waste" and "labor saving devices and methods" mean. He knows that in terms of human endurance they mean the shortening of the labor-life of the worker and his speed-up for the human scrap heap at a comparatively early age.

That the workers have been objecting to this intensification of exploitation is evident from the number of strikes disturbing the peace of this great land, in spite of the anti-strike policy (class collaboration) of the trade union bureaucracy. In 1926 alone there were 1035 cases of strike disputes throughout the country. New York heads the list with 216, Pennsylvania had 162; Massachusetts 113; New Jersey 81; Illinois 72 and Ohio 68. The rest are scattered among the other states. 372 strikes centered about wages; 166 strikes about recognition of the union; 166 strikes about general unsatisfactory conditions; 166 strikes had their origin in the closed and open shop question and 63 strikes were the result of unsatisfactory hours.

It is evident that capitalism has entered upon the phase of ever greater exploitation of the native labor element. The effect is a steady decrease in employment, a steady decrease in the total wages paid for a steady increase in personal output per worker. The sum total of the present situation is that fewer workers produce more and more and get less and less, while the streets are thronged by unemployed mute of the American industrial army.

Consumption of manufactured goods is almost equal to what it was in 1923. This together with exports which now substantially exceed the total exports of Great Britain, war savings and artificial lagging by the extensive instalment buying schemes to keeping domestic consumption of manufactured goods at the 1923 level and helps to smooth over the devastating effects rationalization would otherwise have upon an unorganized proletariat. The entire fabric of American capitalism however, is more and more dependent on exports of goods and capital, which constitute for the imperialists aggressive policy of the U. S. government at present time.

Rationalization of the American industry is by no means of unlimited scope. It is only possible with highly developed industrial organization and the financial power of the other imperialist powers and most of all establishing financially and otherwise its hegemony over the world intensifies its exploitation of the proletariat. It would appear unreal to some, but the fact is that the real wages of the American workers are now lower than 20 years ago and for millions of workers they are considerably less than pre-war. The splendor of modern industry created succeeds to camouflage this fact to a considerable extent.

Considering the world proletariat as a whole the American workers hold a more privileged position than before the war because low standard of living dropped much less than that of the European brother. But considering his pre-war standard and to speak of the war period which was much brighter he is worse off. In the main however, the American bourgeoisie succeeds to unload upon the workers by intensification of exploitation most of the standard of living.

There is a small section of the upper strata of the skilled that even improved its standards of living, the same can be said of the organized building trade labor. In certain cases, in the skilled there has been an attempt to bribe the worker by concessions. To generally speak of bribery of large sections of the upper stratum, however, cannot be borne out by facts. There is no such large sections of even the organized proletariat whose standards of living in the form of real income in comparison to pre-war has decreased than the ones increased and we are headed for much more in that direction.

On the whole we must say that the American worker reacted also towards the left, to added pressure against his standard of living, the big steel, coal and railroad strike movements, the amalgamation movement, the La Follette movement, which registered the discontent politically of the lower classes in general, the big left wing sentiment in the needle and garment industries, the 1925 strike disputes in 1926 in face of all the discouragement of the official trade union leadership, Passaic and the response it got, and the left wing influence in general, which altogether out of proportion to our regained strength, shows that there has been a deep-seated tendency towards the left, particularly since the war, and not to the right. Even historically peaking the whole A. F. of L. has been reared on the basis of continually intensified exploitation and the displacement and decline of the standard of living of even the skilled workers, who resisted partly successfully, thru the kind of organization the A. F. of L., in the main still is today.

Rationalization has saturated the world market with its increased output. It has filled up the gaps the world war created in the world markets, but It has also enormously weakened the buying power of the population in the great capitalist countries, particularly in Europe. The stabilization thus created is coming to a close. Capitalist world economy is confronting a crisis of great magnitude in which the revolutionary proletariat backed up by Soviet Russia is liable to become the decisive factor. Capitalism has a double front, a scramble for foreign markets and war with Soviet Russia. An armed struggle amongst the capitalist powers with Soviet Russia flanked by the revolutionary proletariat will weaken the system sufficiently to crash it. Hence the orientation more and more towards war with the Soviets as the spear head of the revolutionary proletariat. Capitalism cannot be stabilized without defeating the Soviets and let there be no illusion that when war comes the U. S. A. will play the first fiddle in it. The next world war will much more likely be a class war than anything else.

NATIONAL OFFICE CALLS FOR MORE EFFORT FOR DAILY WORKER

TO ALL PARTY UNITS:—You are now proceeding with the election of delegates to section, city, sub-district, district and national conventions. The interest of the entire membership in the problems and tasks confronting the Party is very keen. This is as it should be. Every Party member must show the highest concern for and interest in the development and welfare of the Party.

Amongst our major tasks is the need for even greater interest in the building up of The DAILY WORKER. It is unnecessary for us to emphasize to you active Party members, to you comrades who are doing your best, the increasing importance of our need for strengthening The DAILY WORKER. The services rendered by The DAILY WORKER to the American proletariat are inestimable. The services of The DAILY WORKER, for example, in the campaign to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the death chair of the reactionary capitalists, have been immeasurable. There is no struggle of the American workers in which The DAILY WORKER does not come forward as the most aggressive, determined and fearless champion.

The road The DAILY WORKER has to travel is a very difficult one. Recent months have seen intensive efforts of our enemies to crush The DAILY WORKER. The campaign of prosecution against The DAILY WORKER has not only not yet ended, but has only begun.

We must answer the reactionary capitalist clique, blow for blow at first. This means that The DAILY WORKER must first of all be kept alive. This means that every Party member must redouble his efforts to secure financial and all other forms of support from the American workers for their only daily in the English language—The DAILY WORKER.

We, therefore, request that ways and means of helping The DAILY WORKER be given special consideration at the election meetings or conferences of every Party unit and subdivision.

Rush your help to The DAILY WORKER without delay!

With Communist greetings.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

GREAT BRITAIN is preparing for actual war with the Soviet Union. The developments have gone beyond intrigue with border states, assassination plots and attempts to foment civil war. In last Saturday's issue of the Herald-Tribune, Harold E. Scarborough, that newspaper's correspondent in London, has an article, which gives in more or less detail the military preparations now being made by England for the war that is considered inevitable.

IT is reported that Soviet troops are massing in Turkestan but this British story is merely an excuse to increase the Indian army. When Lord Birkenhead, speaking in the house of lords on March 30th last, declared that the strength of the Indian army must be measured in relation to wider contingencies he had in mind an attack on the U.S.S.R. And the former "Labor Peer" Viscount Ihlidine, suggested that a part of the home army be transferred to India.

• • •

IT is now stated that the Indian army will be placed under direct control of the war office, a development making for greater imperial efficiency and permitting the British government to switch the force to any point where it considers the strategical requirements demand its presence. The first move of the British in a military sense is forecast for spring. Troops are expected to move from Iraq and perhaps thru Persia. And it is said that France is watching the British movements with a sympathetic eye. So that we have the testimony of the capitalist press itself that war against the U.S.S.R. is imminent.

THE Soviet Union is a thorn in the side of world capitalism. Its destruction would open up a vast field for unhampered capitalist exploitation and would be the signal for an attack on labor in all countries that, if successful, would reduce the workers to a condition of servitude never before experienced in the history of man. This war is looming on the political horizon and no effort is more urgent on us than that of making its possibility into the minds of the masses and point out what it means to them.

• • •

THE latest accession of defense counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti that the struggle to save those martyrs from the gallows will be carried to the fall bench of the United States supreme court if the decision of the Massachusetts supreme court is adverse, may mean nothing to Sacco whose long protest fast has brought him to the threshold of death. BRITAIN STRIVES TO USE INDIA AGAINST RUSSIA

Dangers Worry Tory Bandits and Forgers

CALCUTTA, India, Aug. 14.—The British tory government is devoting a maximum of energy to building up a military force in India for the purpose of endeavoring to strike at Russia through Afghanistan and other parts of the Near East. It is proceeding with great caution because this is one of its most vulnerable points and may prove fatal to the empire. The task it has mapped out for itself is to build up a mighty army under the domination of the 68,000 white troops in India. The standing army includes besides these troops 164,000 natives of India.

Internal Difficulties.

Britain is faced with the problem of overcoming the strong objections to using the army of India outside the borders of the country. The force is supported by the Indian government and the masses will object to the increased taxation necessary to create the sort of offensive force that will be required for this sector of the conspiracy that is being hatched against the Soviet Union.

Then there is the further grave danger of arming a large percentage of the population which may, at a critical time, turn their arms against the mercenaries of Britain.

A Seething Mass of Discontent

Using India as a base of operations against the Soviet Union also has other disadvantages for the imperialist bandits, not the least of which is the fact that the country through which troops will have to pass would deeply resent it and some of them at least would take measures to repel the invaders. In this regard Britain is playing with fire because the natives of India would easily revolt against invading other countries with similar traditions. Not being so well developed as to understand the niceties of the distinctions that is made between Christian nations when they fight each other, the lords of tradition still play a big role among the natives, most of whom are Mohammedans.

The Soviet Union is aware of this danger and is taking necessary military precautions, particularly in Turkestan. But then, again, there is that formidable weapon of the revolution—propaganda—that will be used to the fullest advantage in case of open hostilities to undermine and incite mutinies among the native soldiers who will be able to understand that the Soviet Union is their friend and the friend of all oppressed peoples of the earth.

MOSCOW, Aug. 14.—The Chinese correspondent for Pravda reports regarding the Hankow-Nanching uprising and says that there is thus far only fragmentary information available regarding the actual state of affairs. SACCO AND VANZETTI ARE DOOMED TO DIE ON THE NIGHT OF AUGUST 22! STRIKE ON THE MORNING OF AUGUST 22!

APPEAL OF CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

Sacco and Vanzetti are to be electrocuted, and the hand of death rapidly approaches, only a few days, only a few hours away.

The business of the working class is to save Sacco and Vanzetti. The governor of Massachusetts has declared a reprieve of twelve days, hoping by that means to dull the alertness of the working class and to prepare a more quiet "peaceful" slaughter of Sacco and Vanzetti. The twelve days' respite must not deceive the working class. It is intended only to deceive, only to quiet down the magnificent demonstrations of working class brotherhood and solidarity which were swelling throughout the country and which were already hinting of the fact that when the working class speaks with all of its might it must be heard. The business of the working class now is to intensify ten-fold the demonstrations and strikes which have compelled the butcher of Massachusetts (and the big financial masters of America, who give Governor Fuller his orders) to make the temporary retreat of the twelve day postponement of the death of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Strikes Are the Order of the Day.

The workers must not let themselves be deceived by the big capitalist newspapers—even those which are trying to create an impression of "fairness" in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Every capitalist newspaper, without exception, is trying to create an atmosphere to make easier the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. They are printing flaming headlines which are very shrewedly implanting the idea of "bomb plots" as associated with the names and defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. Still more shrewedly and diabolically; is the filthy and cruel lie of an "impartial investigation" by notorious class enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti is discussed in hypocritically respectful terms. The contempt and hatred of the masses by the prostitute capitalist press shows through their efforts to create the superstition that the ruling class people of Massachusetts are acting on the basis of legal "possibilities" and not upon the basis of their own interests and fears. Already one powerful capitalist newspaper, engaged in paving the way for the quiet murder, even while it pretends to be a "friend" of Sacco and Vanzetti, distributes the most famous liberal writer for daring to write some of the truth on this case. Not one of the capitalist newspapers has yet dared to print the truth of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. All of them may be expected to flood the country with the necessary lies at the last minute, to quiet the workers—and to frighten them with "bomb plots" of provocateurs.

Workers! Don't trust the capitalist press! Rely on your own strength to free Sacco and Vanzetti!

The flood of strikes which swept the country during the last few days before the reprieve—those were the cause of Butcher Fuller's hesitation to kill Sacco and Vanzetti! More strikes a hundred times more and bigger strikes must be made in order to carry Sacco and Vanzetti out of the death house and out of the prisons of Massachusetts!

Workers! Organize mass meetings! Organize street parades!

In all parts of the world—Europe, China, India, South Africa, Australia, South America—the made in ordered pouring out on strike to save our heroes, our brothers, who are in the death house of Massachusetts! But the workers of the United States must show their spunk even more than any others. We must not be left behind. Ours is the first duty. Take up the question in your trade unions. Take it up with your shopmates—fight away now, today! Talk strike get your shopmates with you, and walk out! Compel your boss to

INCA REVOLT IN BOLIVIA GROWS; JAIL COMMUNISTS

Rich Oppressors Flee; Peasants Get Arms

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Aug. 14. — The revolt of the Incas is spreading. This is primarily a class war, for the Indians, seventy per cent of the population of this country, are the oppressed serfs and slaves of the thirty per cent white descendants who own all the land and mineral and forest reserves.

The city of Sucre, nominally the capital of the country, is cut off and surrounded by the 50,000 tribesmen and poor peasant who have with clubs and slings, defeated the troops sent against them. The entire first division of the army has been mobilized, but is not making much headway. The 200,000 Indians in the department of La Paz have not risen yet, but are very uneasy, and smarting under intolerable wrongs.

Rich Fear Communists.

Rich hacienda owners, e.g., they while there is time to flee.

In congress, the minister of the interior stated that the Indians had secured fire-arms from somewhere, and if they got any more, the result "would become a catastrophe" as there are no better shots in the world than the Incas.

The minister of the interior was charged that Communists were organizing the Incas for resistance, and has ordered the arrest of Luis Navarro of Tupaca and Hilario Fernandez.

The Incas are living as much as possible under the tribal conditions they had before the Spanish came and broke up what has been described as an almost perfect society, on the basis of the technical equipment of the people at that time. A state of primitive Communism seems to have existed, for which the Spanish substituted slavery, without, however, being able to destroy the memory of that more happy time, nor the tribal forms thru which it was governed.

The present landowners and oppressors are the descendants, for the most part, of the conquerors, and the present oppressed Inca population is the remnant of the powerful Inca state of freemen.

Engdahl Article Here Too Late to Print

MACHINE GUNS TO BREAK STRIKE OF TEXTILE WORKERS

Spontaneous Uprising Met by Militia

(By Federated Press).

HENDERSON, N. C., Aug. 13.

One thousand striking cotton mill workers are facing machine guns in this textile town because they have refused to accept abysmally low wages.

A spontaneous uprising brought hundreds of workers, both men and women, out on strike at the Harriet No. 2 of the Cooper Cotton Mill (!), a week ago. Within a few days Mills 2 and 3 were completely tied up, and the Henderson cotton mill workers' union, which had been practically wiped out in the general textile slump of 1921, was reorganized. More than a hundred workers joined the union.

Mill owners appealed to the governor for troops. Two companies of the National Guard were sent to the scene. The company officials refused to meet with the union committee, but posted notices that the mills would open on full time with non-union help.

UNIONS PLEDGE SUPPORT TO HUGE NEW YORK CITY PROTEST MEETING

Nation-Wide Demonstration Gains Strength; Seven Days Left to Framed-up Workers

Twelve Thousand Gather On Boston Common For Sacco and Vanzetti; Hapgood Arrested

BULLETIN.
(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—A large demonstration held on the Common this afternoon to demand the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti was broken up when mounted police rode into a crowd of more than twelve thousand workers and dispersed the meeting. Powers Hapgood, young militant mine union leader, was placed under arrest charged with violating a city ordinance and Olsinio Carcotta was severely beaten and placed under arrest for "resisting an officer."

Fearing a huge mass demonstration for the framed-up workers, Boston police informed the Socialist-Labor Party, under whose permit the meeting was to have been held, that no "radical" meetings could be held on the Common today. The permits of the Workers (Communist) Party and of the socialist party had already been taken away.

As Powers Hapgood arose to tell the twelve thousand workers that the meeting had been banned by the police, Boston cossacks riding thru the massed workers rode up to the platform and arrested him.

By three o'clock more than ten thousand workers had gathered in the Common to demonstrate for the immediate and unconditional release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

After the meeting had been dispersed by the cossacks workers continued to pour into the Common where they formed small groups. They did not leave until after six.

Hapgood was placed under $50 bail, while Carcotta was placed under $200 bail. Both cases will come up in court tomorrow morning.

With seven days of life left to Sacco and Vanzetti in their reprieve, organizations thruout the country are making plans for huge demonstrations to snatch the two framed-up workers from the electric chair to which the Massachusetts oligarchy seems determined to send them.

Unions thruout New York City have already decided to support a mass meeting at Union Square next Friday afternoon, the Sacco Vanzetti Emergency Committee announced. The last mass meeting at Union Square arranged by the Emergency Committee drew more than fifty thousand demonstrators.

Unions Pledge Support.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Amalgamated Food Workers, Shoe Workers' Protective Association, Marine Transport Workers' Union, International Seamen's Club, United Council of Working Class Housewives and the International Labor Defense are among the organizations which have pledged to support the demonstration at Union Square.

Half a million leaflets will be distributed by the Emergency Committee in its campaign for mass protest demonstrations.

Following the Union Square protest, a monster united front open air mass meeting will be held at the Mall in Central Park Saturday unless the Tammany administration refuses to grant the Emergency Committee a permit. Nightly meetings, thruout the city, are also being held under the auspices of the committee.

Nation-wide Protest.

The New York meeting are only part of the nation-wide protest demonstration that labor organizations are arranging to save the framed up workers, as the days [illegible] up. INTERNATIONAL RED AID WARNS WORKERS OF WORLD THAT SACCO AND VANZETTI STILL FACE DEATH

MOSCOW, Aug. 14. FENG MURDERS 26 COMMUNISTS IN NEW DRIVE

Prepares to Hold Fake Kuomintang Plenum

SHANGHAI, Aug. 14.—Twenty-six Communists, arrested in Kiukiang and accused of political activity against the traitor government of Wuhan, were beheaded on specific orders of the subordinates of Feng Yu-hsiang. Among the executed were the leaders of the local Kuomintang and the labor union organizations.

"General" Feng Yu-hsiang has begun the "cleaning" of Shensi District section of the Kuomintang. All city and district sections of the Kuomintang have been "reorganized." Where the opposition to the military machine does not submit to the threat of terror they are simply murdered with only the most cynical farce of a drum-head court-martial hearing. In this way the traitors hope to prepare for the plenum of the Kuomintang that is to be held tomorrow.

The activity of the workers' and peasants' unions, women's and students' organizations and other public organizations have been suspended. Feng Yu-hsiang's prescription states "the existence of the Communist Party is absolutely prohibited; Communist leaders must be eliminated from all official posts and expelled from the Kuomintang.

Feng, the so-called former "Christian general", has already proved himself to be as base and bloody as Chiang Kai-shek, the first of the military adventurers who deserted the cause of the revolution and went over into the camp of the big bourgeoisie and the imperialists.

Chinese Rising Against Wuhan Gains Power

whether this rising will be only a heroic episode or will be the beginning of the decisive stage of the Chinese revolution.

Must Attract Peasant Masses.

Much depends upon the courage and energy of the leaders and also upon the efficiency of the Chinese Communist Party and especially upon the fact whether the rising will be capable of attracting large peasant masses.

The rebel army already counts 20,000 bayonets and the majority of its commanding staff are Communists.

On August 5th, the last revolutionary detachment left Nanchang. At this moment the rebel army is advancing under forced marching, its direct aim being the occupation of the eastern part of the province of Kwantung. The army, on its march, has to overcome the greatest military difficulties, as it encounters fierce enemy divisions under one of the minor military adventurers.

Will Fight Li Chi-shen.

Further on the rebel army has to hold and break the resistance of the army under Li Chi-Shen which was recently and with all speed dispatched to the Kwantung-Kiangsi frontier.

The Nanchang uprising was, of course, not exactly unexpected by the Wuhan government, but certainly the latter never imagined that such terrific force and effective organization would be displayed.

Provoked By Reactionaries.

The present central committee of the Kuomintang in deciding upon a break with the Communists and unleashing the terror against them certainly knew that they would have many difficulties with the workers; but it did not expect that after the Hunan and Hupeh proletariat, the Kiangsi proletariat would also assume such a hostile attitude. In the provinces of Hunan and Hupeh and Kiangsi there is great indignation in large circles of the Kuomintang against the policy of the central committee. This discontent is constantly growing and in many places is taking definitely organized forms.

Wide-spread Disturbances.

As to the working class in general the Wuhan government is still unable to strangle the strike of the working men at the arsenal and are afraid to launch the terror order against them for fear of the army divisions refusing to act, or possibly going over to the side of the workers. The events in Kiangsi prove the powerful working class movement under way there. The railroad now working on the Nanchang-Kiukiang railway are strongly supporting the uprising and take a most militant attitude against the traitorous Wuhan government.

Reports received from the peasant movement in Hupeh, Hunan, Kiangsi and Kwantung show, that the attempt at suppressions the movement is not strangled. In the southeastern part of Hunan the peasants are showing great activity. Next months after the harvest, when the time to pay rents arrive, will certainly be decisive.

ORDER EXILE FOR "RADNIK" EDITOR; I. L. D. CALLS AID

Zinich, Communist, Is Hated by Capitalists

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—The national office of the International Labor Defense was notified today that Stephen Zinich, Communist South Slav editor and organizer must be turned over to an immigration officer on Tuesday, August 23rd, to be deported from this country. The order came from the Immigration Service of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Zinich was arrested a few years ago on the charge of having illegally entered the United States from Jugoslavia, where he had been forced to flee from the barbarie persecutions of the fascist government there. Instead of finding in the United States the traditional right of asylum, Zinich, who immediately joined in the activities of the American labor and radical movement, as editor of the "Radnik," Jugoslav Communist weekly (now daily), was seized by the immigration service authorities and slated for deportation to his native land where imprisonment or worse certainly awaits him. International Labor Defense immediately assumed charge of the case and aroused a strong sentiment, especially among Jugoslav workers, in favor of preventing the deportation. The action of the Immigration Service is the latest development in the case.

Try to Save.

"Every legal measure will be used by us in the short time left to halt the deportation of Stephen Zinich," said James P. Cannon, national secretary of International Labor Defense. "The sudden action of the immigration authorities is one of the first reactions to the tremendous resentment of protest among the workers of American workers that has been organized for Sacco and Vanzetti. Our declaration that the proposed execution of Sacco and Vanzetti is a deliberate finger of pole by agents of the capital and labor movement is being proved by such facts every day. Zinich is one of the many victims of the working class who has aroused hatred and fear in the capitalist class by his militant activities in the labor movement. We appeal to all labor to help keep Zinich in the United States and in the labor movement in which he is a part. All labor organizations must recognize the great importance of the Zinich case and support the work of the International Labor Defense to prevent his deportation."

Changing Tactics

EAMON DE VALERA, Republican leader of the Fianna Fail, is expected to strike a blow at the Irish Free State when, with forty-four members of his party who with him took the oath of allegiance to King George, he enters Parliament for the first time since his election and votes the Cosgrave government out of office.

Needle Trade Defense

New Union Label Drive.

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 11.—Armsful of union label literature are available for trade unionists who are preparing for the nation-wide union label campaign from August 22 to September 10. The union label trades department of the A. F. of L. is supplying the literature free of charge.

Unemployed Asked for Sentence.

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 14.—Because he had been sleeping in alleys and eating out of garbage cans for months, Frederick Jefferson, an aged Negro, asked to be sent to jail. Asked whether 29 days would be enough, Jefferson pleaded for a longer sentence and was given six months on a charge of vagrancy. He thanked the judge for his kindness.

Many have heard of skee ball, but few know what it really means. On the boardwalk of Coney Island one can notice many signs on booths all saying the same. Skee-Ball take a chance." And the stores are always well filled. After a little pushing you can see what the crowd is there for. You see a log board fixed to the floor and at one end are young men the wrong balls, aimed at a hole situated at the other end of the board. For every successful throw a number comes out, and those who have the biggest scores win prizes. The skee ball is not only a game where one gets prizes, but it is also highly exercise. The Skee Ball is held by the popular Daily Worker Night Park, and on Sunday August 28th it will be run for the benefit of the Defense.

Lump Donations.

Seventy-two dollars were collected at Camp Kinderland by A. Block. A committee was elected to carry on the further activities of the Joint Defense. Over 50 vacationists pledged themselves to a voluntary tax of $1 weekly for the Defense. At Camp Nitzedaliget, Block raised $348.55.

Trumbenickes near Nitzedaliget sent in a check for $46, collected last Saturday and Sunday during the concert rendered by the Freiheit Gesangs Verein. At present the trumbenickes are selling shares on a beautiful picture at 15 cents. This money will be turned over to the Joint Defense.

Other Collections.

Twin Cities Demonstrate.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 14.—The Twin Cities are being swept by mass protests for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Minneapolis held a huge demonstration today. Street meeting are held here every night, with an average attendance of more than five hundred. A monster demonstration was held at St. Paul Saturday.

Paul Crouch and Walter Liggett, who addressed the meeting at Minneapolis today, demanded that the Department of Justice files be opened. Hundreds of telegrams of protest have been sent to President Coolidge.

STRIKE TO SAVE SACCO, VANZETTI SAYS WORKERS PARTY

be afraid of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Strike!

We must warn the workers against the danger of a cowardly evasion which might possibly be tried by the capitalists and their politicians. They may attempt to quiet the working class while they call the "mob," by commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment! The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party warns the workingclass of America against being deceived by this cowardly and beastly device of trying to stop the protest against the unjust punishment of Sacco and Vanzetti by merely "granting" Sacco and Vanzetti a living death within the walls of the penitentiary. The workers must indignantly reject this hideous and contemptible proposal. We have not forgotten how the capitalists gang in the political flunkeys succeeded in deadening the whole activities of the workingclass in the case of Brothers Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, by commuting Mooney's sentence to a life time of torture along with Billings in the penitentiaries of California. Workers, don't accept this swindle again. It is necessary to warn you, especially because certain men in the labor movement who hold official trade union positions, but whose real function is to serve the capitalist class and the capitalist institutions of "justice," private property, the exploitation of labor, and the capitalist state. Some such men are now engaged in paving the way for the capitalist politicians to imprison Sacco and Vanzetti for life in the event that the mass agitation against the death sentence becomes too strong to resist without throwing out a sop to you, whom they call "the mob." It is necessary to warn you against such decisions as the recent public statement of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who, although he knows that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent, suggests that these heroes of the workingclass be kept in prison for life, instead of being electrocuted. This is what Mr. Green suggested when he demanded the sentence of death be "commuted to life imprisonment." The voice of the workingclass must swell louder than the voice of its misrepresentative who is now temporarily the official head of our Federation of Labor! The workers must demand that Sacco and Vanzetti be immediately and unconditionally freed. No cowardly evasion! Death for Sacco and Vanzetti. And no life-time of torture for Sacco and Vanzetti! Give Sacco and Vanzetti back to the workingclass! That is the demand of labor.

The workingclass struggle has been successful in drawing into this an unusual number of outside organizations, whose policies have helped to swell the tide of protest. At the same time the workers have to beware of certain weaknesses of these elements who became of their class associations are too ready to relax the fight, to believe in excuses, lies and evasions, which the big capitalist politicians, of the state house and the courts put forth in order to quiet and kill the movement of protest. With all of their good intentions, the middle class elements do not understand, and at time themselves fear the mass movement of millions of workers which can turn the balance for Sacco and Vanzetti. THE ACTIVITIES OF THE MASSES OF THE WORKINGCLASS IN THE SHOPS, IN THE TRADE UNIONS, AND ON THE STREETS ARE THE ONLY HOPE FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI. These mass activities must be supported by all honest and sincere enemies of judicial murder. These mass activities are what has kept Sacco and Vanzetti from the death chair up to the present time, and this is all that can win them freedom! The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party fully endorses and recommends the militant and clear-sighted workingclass policy which has been followed by the International Labor Defense in this respect. The workers everywhere should use their pressure upon all organizations and groups taking part in the defense, to compel all of them to stiffen up their policies in accord with the fearless and determined attitude of the workingclass. The workers should join the organization which has followed the clearest, bravest workingclass policy in this case—the International Labor Defense.

Not Isolated Incident.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party warns the workingclass of the United States that the determination of the capitalist class to destroy Sacco and Vanzetti is not an isolated incident. It is a grim warning and it is a part of a whole, general offensive against the entire labor movement of this country, and is the logical accompaniment of the offensive of the imperialist government and capitalists upon weaker nationalities such as the peoples of Nicaragua, Cuba, Haiti, etc. The capitalist class announces the forthcoming murder of Sacco and Vanzetti not because individual capitalists hate two individual workers so intensely, but because the capitalist class hates and dreads and fears the militant workingclass which Sacco and Vanzetti represent. They burn Sacco and Vanzetti in the electric chair as an act of hatred intended to terrorize the great masses of toiling men and women of this country and of Europe, South America, and the rest of the world, from whom the American capitalist class exploits and hopes to exploit even more in the future.

Already the police, as agents of the capitalist class, have brutally assaulted hundreds of workers, who had committed no offense but had peacefully asked that the murder of two innocent men be prevented. Already every open shop organization has coupled up its encouragement of the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti with intensified efforts to break up the trade unions and leave the working class as a whole defenseless. Already the reactionary agents of the employers are striving to increase their power for the arbitrary deportation of workers from America who happen to have been born in other countries. Every company union faker, every open shopper, every scab herder, every yellow flunkey of the bosses, every stool pigeon and every reactionary is mobilized for the death of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Sacco and Vanzetti will be burned to death in the electric chair on the night of August 22nd! Every workman in the United States must strike on the morning of August 22nd! And now today—mobilize the workers of your shop and your union. Call mass meetings. Demonstrate on the streets! Now! Today! The time is short. The working class must raise its voice to a roar many times louder than ever in the past! No, mere words! Strike, must be the answer of labor.

Strike for Sacco and Vanzetti!
Demonstrate for Sacco and Vanzetti!

All out onto the street! No slackers—all out!

Sacco and Vanzetti are to die on the night of August 22nd! Strike for Sacco and Vanzetti on the morning of August 22nd!

UNITED FRONT OF LABOR GROUPS IN CLEVELANDSTRIKE

Huge Demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 14.—The greatest labor demonstrations that have occurred in this city since the Hocky May Day of 1919, were held in Cleveland's Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 9 and 10. The International Labor Defense and the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee have been carrying protest meetings for several weeks, culminating in a big meeting at the Square on Tuesday, Aug. 9, at which an announcement of a strike on Wednesday, Aug. 10 was made.

Leaflets Get Trod.

Leaflets were distributed at all the factories and Wednesday was the occasion of a spontaneous outburst of solidarity such as Cleveland has not seen in many years. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers came out 100 per cent. Italian cement layers, plasters, bricklayers and street workers struck. From 12 o'clock noon to 11 at night, the Public Square was the scene of splendid demonstrations in favor of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Thugs Over Sixty.

Just about 11 p. m., the newspapers had an extra on the reprieve. Wild enthusiasm greeted the reading of the report by Frank D. Amter, who was addressing the crowd of 5,000 workers. Duty flew into the air and went up—it was a wonderful scene of jubilation that the workers of the world had succeeded in stopping the hand of the executioner for at least 12 days, during which time he hit will go on. Comrade Carl Hacker, who was chairman of the meeting, made the announcement during the long meeting, that he had been ordered to leave the building in which is located the office of the International Labor Defense, of which he is secretary. In the same building is the office of the American Plan Association, which cannot tolerate it to be on the same premises as the International Labor Defense.

The demonstration was held under the auspices of the International Labor Defense, the Cleveland Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers Communist League, and was endorsed by several unions and fraternal organizations. The speakers were of the International Labor Defense, the I. W. W., Anarchists, the Workers (Communist) Party, the Young Workers Communist League and a few liberals.

This united front which called a strike on Wednesday met with the opposition of the Cleveland Federation of Labor, which announced that it had not called the strike and "might issue a statement," after a session on Wednesday. A statement was not forthcoming, and speakers at the demonstration did not hesitate to denounce the officials of the Cleveland Federation of Labor and of the A. F. of L. who at this critical moment either issued an appeal of the character of that of William Green's, or failed to take any action whatever, like Harry McLaughlin, president of the Cleveland Federation of Labor.

THE New York World has gotten itself into a nice mess for refusing to accept Heywood Broun's articles in defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. What angered the plutocrats particularly was Broun's reference to Harvard University as "Hangman's House." President Lowell of Harvard was head of the fake governor's commission that was supposed to bring in an impartial report on the case. Now Broun is going to write and speak for this cause as he sees fit ing he will have a larger audience than even the one supplied by the World.

HANFORD MACNIDER, assistant secretary of war, assails the American Legion for the criticism made by several people of its selection of Paris as a meeting place. Paris is supposed to be a wicked hung but the gallant legionnaires are not afraid of it. A few years back they took a comparatively quakerish western city and turned it into a Sodom. We are of the opinion that the swivel chair veterans will experience less discomfort in the night-life quarters of Paris than they will from the French workers should Sacco and Vanzetti be burned by the Massachusetts executioners.

THE only vocal effort made by the DeValera republicans on their entrance into Dail Eireann was a speech on the government's finance bill delivered by one of their number. He spoke in the Gaelic language. So did the government spokesman. The speeches were not understood by ten per cent of the deputies. This is one kind of patriotism.

Wall Street Paper In Panama Insults Nicaraguans More

PANAMA, Aug. 14. A short time ago the Panama Star and Herald published an editorial of advice to Nicaraguans that for sheer wanton insult and patronizing qualities has never been excelled in Spanish American journalism.

The article blames all Nicaragua, woes on her "predilection for revolution" and entirely overlooking the fact that the present Diaz government came into power by a revolt, indeed by American money and marines, calls on all Nicaraguans to obey the dictates, and to "regain all revolutionists as traitors, to be crushed, and not as patriots." The article winds up, "Coffee raising is better business than revolution."

LENINGRAD AND MOSCOW SUPPORT LINE OF PLENUM

Opposition Totally Bankrupt in Every Way

MOSCOW, Aug. 14.—The meetings of the active members of the Moscow Party organization on the report of Comrade Rykov and the Leningrad organization on the report of Comrade Bukharin approved unanimously all the decisions of the united plenum of the Central Committee and the Central Control Commission of the All-Union Communist Party. At the meeting of the Moscow Party activists the resolution was unanimously adopted with the exception of one contrary vote and one abstention, out of a total of three thousand present.

Approves Stern Warning.

The Moscow meeting declared that it adhered entirely to the plenum's decisions expressing correctly the line of Leninism on the basic questions of the international and home policies. This resolution especially emphasizes the fact that the utterances of the leaders of the opposition before the plenum on questions of the defense of the country and the economic reconstruction of the U. S. S. R. showed the complete ideological bankruptcy of Trotskyism. It wholly approved the decisions to administer a strong rebuke and give warning to Zinoviev and Trotsky.

Will Be Last Warning.

The resolution considers this decision as the last attempt at the most painful solution of the internal Party struggle by a detailed desire to establish Party unity. The resolution warns that all efforts to break this truly last attempt to make possible an honorable peaceful approach to the Party for the opposition cannot be explained otherwise than deliberate determination and a desire to break with the Party.

Only one member of the opposition, Ivan Smirnov, took part in the debates on Rykov's report. His efforts to defend the opposition provoked only laughter and indignation.

The meeting was a brilliant demonstration of the real and absolute unification of the party and the Leningrad Approves.

The passing of the active members of Leningrad also on their Bukharin report, and on the three debates on the report and all decisions against six opposition leaders, including the Zinoviev group, was the occasion of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Leningrad, which met immediately after the Moscow meeting, to declare its full support of the Party's decisions and the Party's line. The Leningrad Committee also declared that the so-called "declaration" of the Party Bolshevik. The meeting is considered the final blow to the opposition, which has now been completely isolated from the Party. The meeting declared that the opposition has now ceased to exist as an organized group and that all fractionalism and all disagreement with the decisions of the Party decisions.

Wages and Working Conditions in China

By EARL BROWDER

HERE we made special inquiries as to the exact numbers of the various trades among the artisans. All Chinese figures seem to be more or less approximations, but we were assured that the following were based upon trade union admittance fees (40 cents), and the monthly fees (20 cents per month) paid by the members. The figures given were: Rice workers, 1,400; Boatmen, 1,200; Tailors, 1,100; Dyers, 1,000; Shoemakers, 1,000; Masons, 800; Hosiery workers, 500; Shoemakers, 260; Barbers, 120; Printers, 40.

VIII.

FARTHER down the river, 150 miles, is the city of Changsha. A smaller city, but with about the same social and economic conditions, only here the right wing Kuomintang held power and suppressed the trade unions.

Wages were about the same, having been raised by strikes to an average of $7 per month (daily rates from 10 cents to 40 cents per day, varied not according to occupations but to length of service, etc.). The "specialty" of this town is the preparation of drugs, and the Pharmacists' Union has 400 members, out of a total membership in the city of 3,000.

IN Nanchang, capital of Kiangsi Province, the section of Chiang Kai-shek was rampant. Trade union leaders were in hiding, and their headquarters were guarded by soldiers of a "left" army to prevent their destruction by soldiers of the official garrison. Wages and working conditions were the worst we had seen. The artisans were receiving 10 to 15 cents per day; the hosiery industry employing a large number of women, was paying 15 cents per day without food; 40 per cent of all workers were unemployed.

AT Kiukiang, on the Yangtse-kiang, we again found traces of modern industries again. The principal groups and their wages, were ascertained to be as follows:

Railwaymen, 2,300 employed, maximum $15 month, average $10.

Chinese-owned factories, 2,700 employed, 30 cents per day.

Foreign enterprises, 2,400 employed, 50 cents per day.

Artisans, 20,000 employed, 10 cents to 20 cents per day.

Clerks, 3,000 employed, $3 to $10 per month.

Coolies, number not given, 15 cents per day, without food.

IX.

At Hankow, Headquarters of Nationalist Government.

HANKOW is the capital city of Nationalist China. It is the industrial and commercial center of China, having the most modern industry and developed working class of any city except Shanghai, which is in many respects a foreign city. As might be expected, therefore, the labor movement here is the most highly developed.

There are 300,000 trade union members in the Wuhan cities (Hankow, Wuchang, and Hanyang) which make up one economic center, separated only by rivers, and which we usually speak of when we speak of Hankow. Properly, the collective name is Wuhan.

In order to have a definite idea of the conditions of these 300,000 workers, it is necessary to examine in detail a few separate groups. For this purpose I have chosen the textile workers, as representing those workers most thoroughly brought under the conditions of modern machine production; and the rickshaw and cart coolies, who are the least directly influenced by modern methods in their work. These two groups may be taken as the two extremes of the working class in Wuhan. Conditions of artisans here are much the same as elsewhere.

THE rickshaw and cart coolies are very thoroughly organized. There are 20,000 members of the union; of these, 17,000 are public rickshaw pullers, the others being Private rickshaws, 3,000; carters, 5,000; carriages, 800; automobiles, 600; lorries, 1,000; bicycles, 400; car repairers, 700; car manufacturers, 700.

THE basic group is the public rickshaw pullers, whose earnings set the standard upon which other coolie wages are set. The secretary of the union informed me that an extensive investigation by the union (since the union raised fares) has shown average gross earnings by these men of 2,000 cash (the large copper coin is 20 cash, therefore 100 coppers, which were worth at that time 160 to the Chinese dollar). Out of this, the man must pay rent for the rickshaw, license, tax, and "squeeze" for one or two middlemen, totaling 1100 cash (equals 55 coppers). He has left as his net earnings, on the average, 45 coppers, or 900 cash, which are worth 36 cents Chinese silver (equals 36 kopecks Russian, 11 cents American, or 7 pence English).

Out of this he must support himself and family. As a result, cash living conditions are unspeakably miserable and vile.

THE Textile Workers' Union of Wuhan has 57,000 members, these figures being taken from the membership fee records, which all pass thru one office. They are organized in 11 branches; six branches represent as many cotton spinning mills, one branch to each mill; one branch for a weaving mill; two branches for two silk weaving mills; and two branches of artisans working in scattered small shops, one of dye workers and the other of hosiery workers. The number of artisans amounts to 7,500.

WHEN the mill is running at capacity the workers earn an average of 50 cents per day in the big mills. When I visited the big Dee Yee mill, however, business was slack, with the result that the number of spindles for each worker was reduced, so that they were earning 20 cents per day. This Dee Yee mill is the largest, Chinese owned and operated, and employs 9,500 workers. Like all the mills, it is 100 per cent. unionized and works under contract with the union. This contract has gained the workers the following benefits:

UNION headquarters: A fine modern building just outside the factory is set aside for the union headquarters. Here is as up-to-date union offices as could be found in the world.

Union Pickets: These are the armed guards for the union and labor movement generally. Five hundred of them receive regular military drill; a body of 60, the personnel changed every three months, give full time to this duty, being paid by the mills.

Education: Each month the employers pay $4,000 into the educational fund of the Hupeh General Labor Union, to be expended for the education of the textile workers.

Hours of Work: Work only six days per week but get paid for seven days. A day's work still remains 12 hours minus a stop for lunch of 30 minutes.

Protection of women: At childbirth a woman worker gets six weeks' vacation with full pay. Special rooms are provided for feeding children.

THESE workers are strongly organized and highly disciplined. They are fully conscious of their power, and are studying the industry with a view to taking over direction of production. They say they know production cannot be increased under present private exploitation, but they are sure they could increase while at the same time cheapening cloth. They are moving slowly, as they themselves expressed it, in order not to embarrass the Nationalist government, which as yet hesitates before the nationalization of the mills.

X.

Some General Observation.

WAGES and working conditions are distinctly better in Canton, where the unions have been at work for some years. Yet even here, only a beginning has been made toward a living wage. In the newly-conquered territory (provinces) is being rapidly made, wages having been increased 20 to 50 per cent. in the course of half a year, still leaving Canton in the lead, however. In the territory controlled by Chiang Kai-shek, the trade unions are being crushed, and much of these gains wiped out. It yet remains to be seen how long this condition can last.

ONE specifically revolutionary feature of the trade union development is the taking over of buildings for union administration. Thus, in Canton we visited the railway union headquarters, and found it housed in a splendid building with gardens, formerly the private residence for the chief engineer, provided at the expense of the railway. When Chiang Kai-shek's lieutenant, Li Chi-gen, carried out his counter revolutionary coup d'etat he was compelled to install another group of workers there when he crushed the union; altho this other group were corrupted body yet it is a tribute to the depth of the revolution that even these traitors are forced to pay formal adherence to the principles of the trade union movement and the rights of the workers. In all cities the trade unions are gradually taking over buildings more commensurate with their own importance.

A beginning, small as yet, is being made in the introduction of representative trade unions in administrative bodies in industry. This has already been done on the railroads running out of Hankow.

Everywhere the working class is beginning to develop its own armed forces under the name of Trade Union Pickets. The work done by Trade Union pickets in taking Shanghai before the entrance of Chiang Kai-shek's troops is well known. Not so well known, however, is the fact that the same kind of bodies are growing up everywhere with startling rapidity. This is one of the great guarantees for future progress.

STEADILY, and with increasing momentum the Chinese working class is consolidating its power. As it does so it is improving its wages and working conditions. But already it fully realizes that this task includes another one, namely, the complete reorganization of the economic life of China.

For the Chinese workers it is no longer a debatable question as to whether China shall be developed as a capitalist country, or whether it shall be proceed upon the road to socialism. It is the latter path upon which they have firmly set their feet.

ALREADY, in spite of their terrible obstacles, their property and misery, they have made progress which is going over direction of technically more advanced countries, who, misled by the traitors of Social democracy, hesitate before their historic tasks, while the Chinese workers press forward with a tenacity, a courage, a determination, that win for them the admiration of conscious workers all over the world.

LATIN-AMERICA EXPECTED TO BOYCOTT U. S. GOODS AS RESULT OF SACCO-VANZETTI CASE

(By Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14. — When the state of Massachusetts, through its executioner sends thousands of volts of electricity crashing into the hapless bodies of two Italian working men, it will not have settled the Sacco-Vanzetti case so far as Washington is concerned. Not that every official in the national capital from Secretary Kellogg down would not like to write "finis" on the celebrated case. But like Banquo's ghost, the spirits of Sacco and Vanzetti will not down, so far as America's foreign relationships are concerned. In fact, the Sacco-Vanzetti case is merely entering a new and far graver phase.

Swift messages leaped across the Atlantic, when Fuller's decision was announced, warning ambassadors and ministers to redouble the guards about their embassies and legations. And that is just the beginning of the fear, of the "consciousness of guilt" which will write itself across the visage of every American diplomat on foreign soil. For Europe and Latin America are convinced through and through that the two anarchists either are innocent, or have suffered enough punishment. The first opinion is adamant among the ranks of workers, liberals and intelligentsia. The second conviction is held even by the most conservative foreigners, who feel if Sacco and Vanzetti are guilty, their crime was strongly political and has been expiated.

European contempt of American materialism and dollar-worship will be intensified by the murder of Massachusetts famous victims. A spirit of loathing disgust will be raised before Americans, all of whom will have been felt to have shared in the act of electrocution. But hard-faced American business men can stand that. That's all in the game, they will say with a shrug of the shoulders.

But Mr. Babbitt is going to sit up when the Sacco-Vanzetti boycott hits his pocketbook. The boycott has been threatened for years; already it has affected American trade. Particularly in Latin America will it be serious. A three-cornered commercial fight of world-wide significance is being waged from Mexico to the Argentine between America, Britain and Germany, with Italy and Spain minor factors. American exporters are by [illegible] supreme in these markets, [illegible] from August 10, 1927. Latin American workers and liberals refuse to touch any product marked "Made in U. S. A." American trade will drop with a suddenness which will jolt America's business men for the first time into a realization of the seriousness of the Sacco-Vanzetti case after Sacco and Vanzetti are gone.

President Green of the American Federation of Labor was offered an opportunity to make a magnificent gesture in the Sacco-Vanzetti case when a committee appointed at a Mexico workers' meeting called at his office to ask him to send a resolution to Governor Fuller condemning his role. Green however was out of the city.

"Governor Fuller's decision probably dooms Sacco and Vanzetti to death, but it doesn't settle the world-wide controversy as to their guilt, or whether they had a fair trial," comments the Washington News in an editorial appearing in all Scripps-Howard newspapers.

"What the world demands," continues the editorial, "was a new trial in open court, before a jury of peers of the indicted men and an impartial judge. What it finds, set from Governor Fuller and his commission of eminent citizens was a trial in star chamber and a public statement of a decision based on secret hearing of the evidence.

"Governor Fuller hasn't helped a vicious situation. He hasn't vindicated Judge Thayer. He hasn't increased respect for the laws, the courts and judicial procedure of Massachusetts. The world doesn't yet know whether or not Sacco and Vanzetti had a fair trial or whether they are guilty or innocent."

Canadian Loan Marks a New Step in American Penetration of Canada

News that Canada is contemplating the floating here of a new American loan of $100,000,000 has caused a stir in the American money market and a hasty review of Canadian obligations. Canada has internal obligations amounting to $90,000,000 maturing here this year, and her credit rating is extremely good.

Talk About Heywood Broun

Heywood Broun was well-known as a writer for the New York World, which boasted of its reputation as a liberal paper, fair to all sides.

The arbitrary censorship placed over Broun's articles, condemning the death decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, is but one other example of the bias and prejudice of the capitalist press, even the most "liberal."

This incident shows that the capitalist press cannot be trusted to tell truthfully and fairly the news of any important class issue, like the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

There is but one paper, which can be fully trusted to tell the truth of the case. That paper is the Daily Worker.

Our Daily Worker Army should utilize this splendid example of the real character of the capitalist press in the drive for Five Thousand New Readers.

Tell the story to your fellow workers and win them for the growing Daily Worker Army.

Mass Strikes and Demonstrations Will Save Sacco and Vanzetti.

The decisive week in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti is here. The fate of these two workers rests not with the hyenas of Massachusetts who have already proved to the world that there is no monstrous torture they will not inflict upon these innocent workers, who fell victims of the wrath of the scab-herding open shoppers of the decadent industries of that state.

It is indeed sickening to view the childish respect still held by some "liberal" defenders of Sacco and Vanzetti for the "due processes of law." In this regard it is necessary plainly to state that the Boston defense committee has shown a pitiful lack of realism when it placed such fond hopes upon Fuller, the labor of Massachusetts and his "advisory commission." Lowell, Stratton and Grant. It further errs when it concentrates its forces exclusively upon picketing the state house and indulging in other similar performances that create sensationalism for the newspapers, but are certainly not to be compared with the necessary task of mobilizing the mass power of the working class in the United States and thrown the world for action to force the assassins to take their bloody talons from the throats of Sacco and Vanzetti. The great mass demonstrations in this country of the type of the Union Square meetings, the mass meeting in Boston Common, the titanic demonstration in Chicago where the workers faced armed policemen in the streets for the right to protest, the hundreds of smaller mass demonstrations did far more to save Sacco and Vanzetti than anything else. We do not say other agitation is not necessary. It has its place, but that place is decidedly secondary to the mobilization of the mass power of the working class. In this regard the International Labor Defense has shown in its taking the lead in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti, that it is the organization best fitted by training and by its working class character to serve as the rallying point for such struggles.

There are many indications that this week will see greater demonstrations thruout the world in behalf of these two tortured victims of capitalist vengeance than occurred before August 10. For a few days the European "liberal" press and certain spokesmen of the working class fell into the trap set by Fuller and his council that granted the respite. They claimed victory and stated that they were convinced that after being taken from the death house they would escape the electric chair. Only those familiar with the fiendishness of what passes for justice in this country can perceive the depths to which the Fullers, Thayers and the rest of the capitalist lackeys will sink to terrorize the working class.

The very method of granting the respite was carefully timed so that the victims would suffer the maximum torture before they were notified of the action.

Again Sacco and Vanzetti will march (or be carried) to the death house unless the mighty voice of labor rises in thunderous protest.

American imperialism, extending its ravages thruout the world, can be fought on a world-wide scale and the workers of Europe, with their revolutionary experience, with their powerful organizations, can help to shake the complacent murder crew in the state house at Boston by jarring the capital at Washington with interfational demonstrations.

Prepare for the strike in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti next Friday!

Give the mass movement such an impetus that on the 22nd the hand of the executioner will no longer threaten to destroy with shattering bolts of electricity the bodies of these two workers who are being victimized as a warning to other workers not to dare strive to improve the condition of labor.

Wall Street Replies to Premier Baldwin.

Baldwin, premier of the decadent British tory government of murder, provocation and forgery, made a special visit to Canada, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, in order to try to persuade the Canadian ruling powers to abandon their policy of doing business with Wall Street instead of with Lombard Street.

Today his political wishes as expressed in Canada have come to naught as inexorable economic supremacy enables Wall Street to reply to Baldwin in a tone that makes his "diplomacy" sound weak and hollow. As far as astuteness goes, Baldwin may be as clever as any premier Britain has had, but Britain hasn't the economic power to back up the maneuvers of her diplomats. On the other hand, if Baldwin were half-witted his "diplomacy" would appear successful if Britain maintained her once dominant economic power. Wall Street's reply is seen in the financial pages of the newspapers. It is in the form of a hundred million dollar loan that will be floated to enable the government of the Dominion of Canada to refund loans maturing this year. Most of the loans being refunded were floated originally by the British bankers of Lombard Street, so the financial movement means that Britain loses and Wall Street gains. Prior to the war virtually all Canadian financing was handled through London. But the weakness and uncertainty of the London market makes the handling of large scale foreign loans difficult and in most cases impossible.

Politically Canada is listed as a British dominion, but economically it is the forty-ninth state of the union, and even the present government of Canada is more loyal to the United States than to Britain.

This ever increasing penetration of Canada by Wall Street makes imperative the closer unity of the workers of the two countries for a joint fight against the mighty power of Wall Street. In this fight the Canadian workers have a two-fold task; to carry on a fight against the political vassalage of Canada to Britain, independent of the fight of the MacKenzie King outfit which only represents the interests of Wall Street, and at the same time carry on a determined fight against Wall Street.

Boston Prepares for a Lynching

By MICHAEL GOLD.

I WAS one of those who picketed the State House in Boston on the day set for the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Dorothy Parker, Gilbert Seldes, and myself, were grabbed and hauled off to the police station by the same pair of cops. As we were led through the streets there was a great crowd of onlookers following us to the police station.

THERE were no sympathetic calls from that crowd, only a sullen quiet.

But there were some hoots—directed not at the police, but at us, the picketers. Also there were voices that shouted, openly:

"Hang them! Hang them!"

Harvard Lynching Bee.

LET no one be fooled by the reprieve until August 22nd. It does not mean liberty for our comrades. The state of mind in Boston to-day is that of a lynching bee. Legal forms are being gone through as a concession to the outside world. They mean nothing. Massachusetts, at least the bourgeois portion of it, is in the throes of fear, blood-lust and hatred—that peculiar tangle of emotions and mass-psychopathy known as the "lynching mood." Massachusetts is determined to kill Sacco and Vanzetti.

IT is a Ku Klux Klan mob led by well-spoken but inflamed respectables in frock-coats—Governor, judges, Harvard president, all the rest of official dom, ministry and Chamber of Commercedom.

Martial Law.

THE city is practically under martial law. The entire state militia has been brought to Boston, and waits in the armories. The police are on 24-hour shifts, and are equipped with machine guns, tear bombs, and armored cars. No meetings on the Sacco and Vanzetti case are allowed. If you wear a beard, or have a dark foreign hair and eyes, or carry a brief-case at night, or in any way act like a man who works with his hands, or has not had a Harvard education, you are picked up on the streets for suspicion.

IT is dangerous to be out on the streets after midnight. A group of us, after a hard day's work at headquarters, went searching for a restaurant about 12:30. We were followed by a patrol wagon, no less, until we safely found that restaurant.

DETECTIVES dog one everywhere. There are always two or three in front of one's hotel, or sitting next to one in the restaurant or drinking Coca-Cola at the next stool in the drug-stores.

HELEN BLACK and Ann Washington Craton were picked up on the street and questioned at a police station for looking like Workers and carrying a suspicious cardboard under their arms, which upon investigation proved to be a Sacco poster which they were told to destroy.

SIX Harvard workers came in an auto to present at the demonstration. They were arrested on the street in their car and are being held on suspicion of being bomb-throwers. The only reason the cops arrested them, evidently, was that two of the Italians needed a shave.

Boston Is Nervous.

THE city has lost its head. It is quivering with nervousness and fear. It jumps like a startled cat every time a pin drops. Along Washington Street great crowds stand constantly before the newspaper bulletin boards and read the hourly bulletins on the Sacco" and Vanzetti case. They whisper, they fidget, they regard each other with worried eyes. It is like the war days, when George Creel's skilled liars were scaring everyone with the news that the Kaiser's airplanes were about to bomb New York, Boston and Chicago.

YOU walk in among those crowds, mostly made up of clerks and professional people, and you will hear no words of sympathy for Sacco and Vanzetti—the sympathizers are as cowed as a lonely unbiased Northerner at the lynching of some poor friendless Negro in the South.

The Yellow Press.

WHAT you do hear is deep whispers, mutterings, and ominous mob-rancors.

THEY ought to kill them! We don't want that kind of people running our country!" I heard a husky young Harvard ex-football player snap out to all within earshot at one of the boards.

SOME of these people resent Governor Fuller's having granted a reprieve. They actually think he is too soft.

THERE is not a newspaper in the city that has the courage or even the desire to speak the mildest liberal word on the situation.

I USED to work on a newspaper in Boston, and dug up some old friends who are still reporting or writing editorials on various papers. They told me they have never seen this show, for usually Boston is calm in a mood such as the present.

EVERYONE is in a state of tension, and anything can happen," the newspapermen say. "If this were the South the respectable mob would be storming Charlestown jail to lynch the two Italian workers."

LET no one be fooled by the new legal aspect of the case. The Massachusetts supreme court will probably add the weight of its prestige to the "legal" respectability of the lynching. The danger is just as strong as it was last week. Our comrades are to be executed. Massachusetts has set its mind on this. Only intensified large-scale demonstrations during the next eight days will save Sacco and Vanzetti.

Little Thots on Great Men

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

COOLIDGE is almost as completely off the front page as if he were only vice-president. After exhausting all the tricks of his publicity agent to endear him to the masses he suddenly came to the conclusion that Al Jolson could sing better mammy songs if that was what the fat boys on Wall Street wanted. The president did not look any better in a cowboy suit than he would in a coat of paint and a sheaf of corn stalks. And the the relics of cowboy days applauded, and felt Calvin was acting like one of themselves, it is doubtful if they would vote for him.

DIGNITY as indigenous to the presidency as an air of prosperity is to an insurance agent. A knight of the glib lips who wears a couple of dime flashes can make a customer sign on the dotted line when another expert in production for the under-taking business would only get a glass of near beer for pains, simply because he did not want or did not care to carry the gaudy decorations of his savage ancestors on his fingers. A president with his little right toe or is it his right little toe? perhaps hashfully out thru his shoe, would never get the editor's vote and the loudest hum on the Bowery would scorn him.

* * *

THERE is nothing a publicity agent will not descend to in order to get his client on the front page. Yesterday we were treated, in most of the metropolitan papers with the picture of an actress dressed in a scarf, deftly hung, who claimed that she was robbed by an admirer that a certain subway would be bombed and warning her to keep away. The sucker, whose name sounds somewhat familiar, is now in jail. In all probability it will develop that he is the lady's publicity agent. This is an example of how far a good publicity agent will go, provided our guess is right.

COOLIDGE had the wrong kind of a publicity man. Jack Hempsey lost one fight because of a puny manager and a publicity agent is to a president what a manager is to a fighter. If I had been the president's publicity man, I would take him to some gulch in the wide open spaces and seriously tell the world that my client was spending his time thinking and would have his say when he that the time was ripe. This would have the nation developing brain fever and the aspirants for presidential honors in G.O.P. ranks would be tucked away in their respective madhouses by them. He would have the nomination by default.

PRESIDENT Harding was not noted for his brilliancy but he was dignified and only H. L. Mencken and other stylists poked fun at his English, tho he broke into the dictionary with a sound whoop. It was Harding that made "normalcy" what it is today. Harding was going strong when he died and we did not know that he shot craps, played poker and cavorted emotionally outside the beaten track until the book "Revelry" appeared. Then we wondered that he did not take a job as bartender. But tho he may have lost his dignity on occasion he did it decently and among his peers. The eyes of the masses whose minds are filled with bourgeois prejudices don't want to see their great men go around in their shirt-sleeves. It simply won't go at the polls.

* * *

A MAYOR on a great industrial city has a different proposition on his hands. Practically every mayor in New York and Chicago for several years has been a good singer. Johnny Fitzgerald of Boston rarely made a political speech except when quoting the bible against Jim Curley and the latter was worsted because he would sing "That Dear Little Mother of Mine" coming home from picnics. And in those days pienics brought out the vote. The mayor of New York is more famous for his composition: "Will you love me in December as you did in May?" than for his knowledge of geography, and in all probability if he cares to be mayor again a great proportion of the metropolitan population will give it to him for the song.

MAYOR Hylan was popular for a different reason. He got a stranglehold on an issue that was unalterably against an ordinary foe but what could Hylan do against Jimmy Walker, the song-and-dance man? In Chicago Mayor Dever was dignity personified but he was elected because all the other candidates were more dignified. But when William Hale Thompson returned from California with his cowboy hat and a hand that could slap a back two blocks away, Chicago went wild for him. Perhaps it was Bill Thompson's hat that gave Cal's publicity man the idea of rigging his entry out in a whole suit.

* * *

WOMEN are supposed to be impersonally sensitive—another bourgeois delusion. But a suitor who would approach his woman smelling garlic and onions would not be more reckless of his immediate future than the presidential aspirant who would give an exhibition of vocal dipsomania at a patriotic stag party or allow himself to be seen taking off his trousers in a Pullman.

* * *

THE business of being president of the United States is a nerve-wracking one. If Coolidge held it for the four more years of rapid-changing facts from fisherman to farmer and from cowboy to bullfighter he would be in line for a job as a painted wild man at a side show.

* * *

NEEDLESS to say Coolidge did not decide that five days in the white house were numbered merely because he ran out of costumes. He already given no best guess as to why he will follow his predecessor from the ring. He was convinced that he could no more carry the West than he can win out in Leningrad. His finesse stunt that would enable him to appeal to the tax-payers with a money-saving platform was knocked for a loop of torpidness and the third term tradition did the rest. Still there is something in Coolidge making a clown out of himself in South Dakota.

THINK OF THE SUSTAINING FUND AT EVERY MEETING!

DRAMA

Picture of "The Russian Revolution" Maket Hit at Cameo Theatre

The Cameo Theatre began the presentation last Saturday of a picture entitled "The Russian Revolution" which packed the house early in the afternoon and brought forth more applause than any picture I have witnessed since the days when it was considered the height of patriotism to raise the roof whenever American marines were shown marching to take ship to France to make the world safe for democracy.

There was plenty of enthusiasm at the Cameo last Saturday and I venture to predict that "The Russian Revolution" will have a financially successful experience there.

The picture opens with scenes of the early days of the war when the ruling classes of Russia were sending the workers and peasants off to the front to fight the Central Powers. Hundreds of thousands of splendid human types were sent to the slaughter, while the Tzarist aristocracy were amusing themselves at home and indulging in the debaucheries so characteristic of old Russia.

Gradually the tide of discontent arises. Tales of disaster come from the front. The Germans advance and the peasants who are driven from their homes spread discouragement as they flee from the enemy. Hunger stalks the land. In the meantime there are murmurs of revolt among the proletariat.

1917 arrives and with it the March revolution. The Czar is forced to abdicate. The next to renounce a right to the Romanoff throne is the Grand Duke Michael. Czar Nicholas cuts a sorry picture as he pretends to lead the Russian army.

Prince Lvov and his associates take the helm, but not for long. Their rule was reversed with no more favor by the masses than that of the Czar. There was no basic change.

Next came Kerensky the "man of many speeches." His time was short. He was a tool of the allied powers and continued to send the young men of Russia to be slaughtered in the interests of imperialism. He escaped in disguise of the Winter Palace dressed as a woman when the Bolsheviki finally overthrew the time ripe to seize power.

What a storm of applause broke loose in that theatre when the pictures of Lenin and Trotsky were flashed on the screen. Kerensky got two claps and hundreds of hisses.

The picture, briefly tells of the struggle of the Bolsheviki since they gained power, in behalf of the workers and peasants, against the counter-revolutionary forces of the numerous white guardists that were engaged by the foreign imperialists to crush the young workers republic, down to the time when the allied blockade was raised and the imperialists decided that for the time being, that the Soviet Union could not be taken by a frontal attack.

The photography is good, and there are real thrills in the scenes which show the masses of Leningrad rushing the Winter Palace and again when the sailors on board a French warship led by Marty refuse to fire on their Russian comrades. What workers but instead heeded the call and declare for the proletarian revolution.

This picture is worth seeing and we heartily recommend it. What few defects it may have are overbalanced by its merits, not the least of which is its propagandistic value.

There is also in the picture, a fine exposition of the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," which instead of being a boring, stodgy affair, is a very interesting and clever piece of work.

The photography is good, and there are real thrills in the scenes which show the masses of Leningrad rushing the Winter Palace and again when the sailors on board a French warship led by Marty refuse to fire on their Russian comrades. What workers but instead heeded the call and declare for the proletarian revolution.

This picture is worth seeing and we heartily recommend it. What few defects it may have are overbalanced by its merits, not the least of which is its propagandistic value.

There is also in the picture, a fine exposition of the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," which instead of being a boring, stodgy affair, is a very interesting and clever piece of work.

The picture briefly tells of the struggle of the Bolsheviki since they gained power, in behalf of the workers and peasants, against the counter-revolutionary forces of the numerous white guardists that were engaged by the foreign imperialists to crush the young workers republic, down to the time when the allied blockade was raised and the imperialists decided that for the time being, that the Soviet Union could not be taken by a frontal attack.

Deterding Sheds Oily Tears for the Russians.

Sir Henry Deterding, who has recently been waging a campaign of moral indignation against the Soviet government because he could not pillage Russia of all her oil, has found a new javelin to hurl at the unrepentant heads of the Bolsheviks. His indignation now concerns itself with the plight of the Russian people who haven't enough kerosene because too much of this commodity is being sold to the competitors of Mr. Deterding. He is not at all concerned about the competition, but he weeps over the poor Russians who haven't enough kerosene. Mr. Deterding also cites statistics to show that there was more kerosene available for "home consumption" in 1911, 12 and 13 than there is per year at present. Since these figures are taken from official Soviet reports they are correct. But what do they really mean?

In the United States, for instance, the consumption of kerosene was greater twenty years ago than it is today. Does that mean that people have no lights in their homes? No. It simply indicates the development of electricity and other means of lighting. The same is true of Russia. Thousands of workers and peasants who never knew any better system of lighting that kerosene, now have electricity.

In a very few years the great hydro electric enterprises will furnish millions with electricity and the use of kerosene will fall almost to zero.

Mr. Deterding of the British Royal Dutch Shell and Mr. Walter Teagle of the New Jersey Standard Oil trust will have to get better arguments than the decline of the use of kerosene in Russia if they expect much sympathy in their highly moral campaign. Such coarse propaganda will cause millions of Americans who are not members of the Workers (Communist) Party to be convinced that Messrs. Deterding and Teagle are not at all concerned about the welfare of the Russian people, but only want all the oil they can get out of Russia. If they had their way the Russians would be lucky to get tallow to make candles, say nothing of oil products, because the highly moral oil magnates might need all the kerosene to sell to other customers.

As one argument after another against recognition of the Soviet Union is blasted the enemies of the workers' and peasants' government—the great oil thieves and others—become ever more idiotic in their furious attempts to discredit the revolution, until their arguments finally become so ridiculous that they serve as propaganda for recognition.

DEMONSTRATION IN CENTRAL PARK TO BE HELD SATURDAY, AUGUST 20

Preparations to hold a monster demonstration in the Mall of Central Park on Saturday, August 20th, are now being worked out by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

A huge mass meeting in Union Square will also be held on Friday. A series of neighborhood meetings in various parts of the city are other features of the liberation campaign.

Rose Baron, secretary of the Emergency Committee, announced Friday that she will apply to the Department of Parks for permission to hold a meeting in the Mall of Central Park on the afternoon following the Union Square mass demonstration. Walter R. Herrick, commissioner of parks, is on his way to Europe in company with Mayor Walker, but efforts have been made to communicate with his secretary, John M. Hatt, in order to get permission to accommodate the vast crowds which will join in making the coming activities the largest in the history of New York.

When asked why she chose Central Park as the place of the Saturday demonstration Miss Bron said, "Tuesday's meeting at Union Square has convinced us that only Central Park offers the space necessary to handle our sympathizers without obstructing traffic and at the same time causing as little discomfort to the demonstrators.

"Our experience at Union Square proved that Sacco-Vanzetti sympathy can mobilize a meeting of more than 100,000 of the police and the city officials do not obstruct our plans. I sincerely hope that the Department of Parks will not do anything to deny tens of thousands of the citizens their guaranteed right of free assemblage."

To Intensify Drive

The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee for the coming week intends to carry on its organized protest with a greater intensity than that which marked last week's activities.

Neighborhood meeting which are expected to be held in the five boroughs are as follows: 110th St. and Fifth Ave.; 137th St. and 7th Ave.; Sheridan Square at the corner of Grove and Washington Place; 175th street and Lenox Ave.; First Ave. and 116th St.; Rutgers Square, and 10th St. and 2nd Ave.

In the Bronx meetings will take place at 161st St. and Prospect; 174th St. and Weeks Ave., and other points to be announced tomorrow.

In Brooklyn these nightly meetings will take place at Hopkinson, and Pitkin Ave., Stocking and Hawemeyer streets; Pennsylvania and Sutter avenues; Pulaski and Tompkins Aves.

The dates and hours at which these meetings will be held are to be announced by the Emergency Committee shortly.

Miss Ibrea, secretary of the committee, stated that her organization had mobilized a "flying squadron" of 32 speakers who will cover the meetings. As several meetings are to take place on the same night, the speakers will be rushed from meeting to meeting in automobiles which have been placed at the disposal of the committee by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

In a statement which was issued late in the afternoon Friday, Miss Bron appealed to all sympathizers of the two condemned men not to slacken up in their activities as the danger of execution was still greater than ever before. Miss Baron said:

"The fight to liberate Sacco and Vanzetti must go on with greater intensity than ever before. Our comrades are still enduring the agonies of Charlestown prison. They are still menaced with the refined cruelty of the greatest of America's technical executioner, the electric chair. I urge all Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers to double their heroic efforts to aid in the release of these innocent workers."

Plumbers' Helpers Hold Semi-Annual Elections

The semi-annual election of the American Association of Plumbers' Helpers was held last night at the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Ave.

Those elected are: C. E. Miller, president; M. Patches, 1st vice president; M. Singer, 2nd vice-president; Anthony Semega, 3rd vice-president; Joel Gilbert, treasurer; M. Jacobs, financial secretary; Charles Mauro, recording secretary. Nine eight trustees.

This constitute the executive committee.

It was announced that an extensive organization drive would now be started.

BROUN TO SPEAK AND WRITE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

Having quit his job on the New York World because "the editors of that liberal publication objected to my opinions on Sacco and Vanzetti," Heywood Broun, columnist and novelist, has promised to aid the struggle for the freedom of the framed up workers, in his capacities as a speaker and a writer. Both Broun and his wife, Ruth Hale, volunteered to address meetings arranged by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

Object to Articles

Broun's notions about Sacco and Vanzetti differed considerably from those of the World's editorial writers. Broun believed that Sacco and Vanzetti were framed and he said so. The liberal editors of the World concerned themselves with the "fair name of Massachusetts," eulogies on Fuller and his murderous crew, and polite pleas for the imprisonment for Sacco and Vanzetti "in the name of humanity and justice."

Ask Him "To Lay Off."

After Broun had written the article in which he named the facts in expressing his opinion of the legalized murder of the framed workers he was asked by the liberal editors of the New York World "to lay off" that Sacco and Vanzetti case.

Broun refused to lay off the Sacco and Vanzetti case and wrote a third article, which was rejected by the liberal World. He wrote a fourth article, which was also rejected.

Friday's issue of the New York World therefore carried these liberal sentiments penned by Ralph Pulitzer, son of Joseph Pulitzer, and owner of the New York World:

Pulitzer's "Liberalism"

The World has always been true to allowing the fullest possible latitude to individual opinion in those of its special writers who write under their own names. Straining at the interpretation of this privilege the World allowed Mr. Heywood Broun to write two articles on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, to which he expressed his personal opinion of the alleged extravagance.

The World then instructed him now that he had made his own position clear, he could write articles for his new readers. Mr. Broun, however, objected to write on the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The World thereupon, exercising its right of final decision as to what it will publish in its columns, has omitted all articles submitted by Mr. Broun.

—RALPH PULITZER.
"Editor, The World."

Although Broun's contract with the World calls for a fat salary until 1931, he has declared that he will not write another line for the paper.

World Has Articles.

When asked by a representative of The DAILY WORKER for the rejected articles, Broun said: "I should like to give you the articles, but they are too fine. Besides, they are in the hands of the New York World."

Broun was a fellow-student of John Reed at Harvard in 1910.

U. S. CAPITALISTS FLOOD WORLD WITH U. S. DOLLARS; EXPECT WORKERS TO DEFEND THEM

The detailed report of the U. S. department of commerce showing American foreign investments totaling $788,584,075 the first half of 1927 again calls attention to the startling rate at which the American investment empire is annexing economic provinces. Another important statement is that half of the Foreign Policy Ass'n. which places the total American foreign investment at the end of 1926 at $13,000,000,000.

American investment almost the first half of 1927 exceeded any similar period in the history of the country, the previous record being 625% or 656.6 the first half of 1922. It exceeds by more than $200,000,000 the total for the first 6 months of 1926, which was $477,547,000 borrowed by foreign governments and municipalities, the balance going to foreign corporations.

Analysis of American investment in foreign corporations the first half of 1927 shows a trend toward foreign banking and utility corporations. American investors put $80,449,375 into 14 banks in Austria, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Jugoslavia and Latin America, totaling $96,750,000 in all foreign utility corporations representing chiefly an extension of the General Electric power trust to other lands.

Since 1919, according to the department, foreign securities publicly offered in the United States have totaled almost exactly $8,000,000,000, of which $6,000,000,000 has been new capital. These figures show the growth of American as a creditor nation and contrast with the pre-war period when the country was a debtor nation to the extent of $1,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000.

The department of commerce figures do not include foreign securities sold privately in this country. "American purchases" of foreign securities already outstanding, or direct American purchases of foreign properties. These other phases of the extension of the American investment empire are included in the $13,000,000,000 total of the Foreign Policy Ass'n., which was prepared by Max Winkler of Hertzog, Grisconi & Co.

Investments Keep Down Wages.

Winkler estimates that in the last 5 years American foreign investment has been growing at an average rate of more than $2,000,000,000 a year and that for the 4 years 1923-26 the total was $8,230,754,000. His figures show the present distribution of American capital through foreign securities publicly offered in the United States as follows:

Foreign capital flotation in U. S.	Amount
Europe	$1,300,000,000
Canada	2,500,000,000
Cuba	1,000,000,000
Mexico	1,022,000,000
Central America	148,000,000
South America	1,230,000,000
China, Japan, Philippines	140,000,000
Miscellaneous	175,000,000

American capital is leaving the country because a surplus would force it to serve the people at low interest, which would insure a high real wage for labor. It is investing countries where it can demand a high return at the expense of cheap labor. And it expects American workers to defend its right to exploit this cheap foreign labor.

GOVERNMENT INVESTIGATES RUMORED MERGER OF U. S. STEEL, DUPONT, GENERAL MOTORS

By HARRY UNDERWOOD

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (FP).—Half of Washington was awakened the other half puzzled by the sudden decision of the federal trade commission to investigate the "close financial relations" between the three giants of American industry, United States Steel, International Mercantile Marine and DuPont de Nemour.

But that, the Coolidge administration would call a basic fact in its relations with big business, is held distinctly unbroken. Wall Street, in its stock speculations, reflects the uneasiness over the commission's probe while the Coolidge crowd, it is pointed out, that there is no hint of anti-trust prosecution. The department of justice has taken no action, and is not expected to. The commission, under the law of self-motive directs the chief economist to "make an inquiry into the relationships, direct or indirect, tending to bring these three largest corporations under a common ownership and control or management, with information as to the probable economic consequences of such community of interest."

If the duPont-U. S. Steel-General Motors merger, already monopolistic, the world's greatest industrial combination, continues to expand, taking in chemicals and dyes and establishing a close agreement with General Electric, the giant of the power field, it will dwarf the agencies of political government. Already the three-headed octopus has taken the lead in initiating a benevolent dictatorship over its worker-subjects through elaborate welfare and insurance devices, calculated to choke off any demand for state-administered social legislation. Government, to this titanic combine, is merely a device for maintaining law and order so that it can operate its plants and roll out profits. Undreamed of hitherto in the history of industry.

Earnings Fabulous; Workers Speed Up.

General Motors, soon to be complete master of the auto industry, has just reported profits for the six months of $129,000,000, at the rate of more than a quarter billion a year, the largest ever accumulated in peace times. Steel reported profits of $91,000,000. DuPont's earnings, through control over munitions, auto paint and chemicals, are fabulous.

With General Electric, they will soon compose the super-government of the United States, in the eyes of some of the organized trade commissioners. Although realizing that they are as powerless to prevent this development as the government was in the Standard Oil cases, still they feel that in which two or three great combinations of capital will rule America directly and without camouflage.

JOHNSON THREAT TO DEPORT SACCO FRIENDS ILLEGAL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (FP).—Radical working men will face another period of deportation delirium if the sentiment in Washington in any circles come to a head. An unfortunate act by some demented person wholly unrelated to the Sacco-Vanzetti case will set those bloodhounds on the trail for radical blood.

The first victims will be radical workers who are not formally enrolled as United States citizens. Chairman Albert Johnson of the house immigration committee warns that their mere participation in Sacco-Vanzetti meetings may "end their chances for citizenship and result in their deportation."

Johnson is well known in Seattle and along the Pacific Coast as a blatant enemy of foreign-born workers. At the labor department, officials declared that participation in Sacco-Vanzetti protest meetings was not a sufficient ground for deportation. Assistant Secretary of Labor Husband told Federated Press that the only ground for deportation was indictment of violent overthrow of the government, or membership in a society advocating such overthrow. Attendance at a Sacco-Vanzetti meeting would not justify deportation and the only danger to foreign-born workers lay in their possible arrest for infraction of some local law and the later investigation of their beliefs and membership.

While Johnson's statement are without basis in law, there is a danger that foreign-born workingmen may be arrested and railroaded through to deportation because of their lack of familiarity with the English language or their inability in many case to get counsel. Competent attorneys could obtain the release of victims of Johnson's opinion but in many cases foreign-born workers arrested in defense places have no way of getting their case to the public. Vigilance on the part of foreign-born workers' councils and other bodies should now to guard against unlawful deportations inspired by Chairman Johnson's lawless threats.

Perfectly Good Tory Can't Serve Oil in Mexico; Disqualified

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 13.—President Coolidge does not regard former Governor Thomas E. Campbell of Arizona as available for appointment as ambassador to Mexico or to any other post. It was announced here today, because Campbell already is serving as Commissioner General for the United States to the Seville Exposition.

Meanwhile the president has made no decision about filling the post formerly occupied by James R. Sheffield. Neither has he chosen an ambassador to Cuba nor some one to succeed major general Leonard Wood as governor general of the Philippines.

Home Town of Kaiser Fights to Avoid Flag Of German Republic

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—For the first time since the revolution, the flag of the German Republic was waved over all official and many private buildings throughout Germany, the occasion being Constitution Day.

The city of Potsdam, former residence of the ex-kaiser, had objected to the supreme court against being forced to display the republican colors.

Museum Stunt By Flier

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—Baron Koenigswerke, prospective Trans-Atlantic flyer, arrived at Templehofer field with his plane this afternoon and placed the plane on exhibition. The aviator charged an admittance fee for the privilege of viewing the plane in which he intends hopping across the Atlantic, announcing that the proceeds would be used to help finance the flight.

UNION FURNITURE GIVEN TO SIGMAN BY AUTHORITIES

Once again calling upon the police authorities for aid, the right wing of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Friday took over the office furniture of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Joint Board that was stored at the Workers' Cooperative House, 7-9 Bond Park St.

A squad of police together with several sheriff's men up to the cooperative early in the morning and as Patrol No. 1 containing Sigman gangsters, who were not ejected at the same men who terrorized cloakmakers in the market on many occasions, were on hand to help the police if necessary.

Give Out Summons.

Summons were given to the cooperative officials which directed them to turn over the furniture to the sheriff. When Charles Nemeroff, member of Local 10, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, objected to the procedure, he was brutally beaten up and then arrested. He was released after the furniture had been "legally" taken away.

The right wing has deposited $28,000 with the sheriff's. After 72 hours the furniture will be turned over to the Sigman clique.

Coolidge Ranges Self Definitely With Gang Killing Sacco, Vanzetti

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 13.—Again enunciating his decision not to interfere with the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by the millowners of Massachusetts, President Coolidge has refused to send any message to Governor Fuller. He had been urged to follow Wilson's example in the Mooney case, and for reasons of shame, if he could not see the justice of the two workers' case, relieve them of the danger of electrocution.

Prison Conditions in Tombs Hit in Report

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Failure of New York City authorities to remodel Tombs prison was condemned by state department of correction in a report.

"The situation at best is one of the worst in the state of New York but the department of correction is helpless to completely remedy it until additional prison facilities are provided," the report said.

Chinese Jail Contractor When Building Falls

SHANGHAI, Aug. 11.—A building contractor was arrested today as a result of the collapse of a market in the native city yesterday when 61 persons were killed. The latest casualty report showed 224 injured, of whom 81 were in serious condition. Beams supporting the building collapsed.

U. S. NOW DOMINATES LATIN-AMERICAN TRADE AS BRITISH EXPORTS DIMINISH

U. S. Trade Leaps Ahead.

How trade and foreign investment go hand in hand in the expansion of commercial empire is shown in a discussion of the growth of American capitalist interest in South America by Max Winkler of Bertron Griscom & Co., investment bankers. Prior to the war, according to Winkler, American investment in South America totaled only $400,000,000 and commerce between the United States and South America averaged only $328,000,000 a year. But the growth of the investment figures to support trade with South America to a yearly total in excess of $1,000,000,000.

This phase of the growth of the American commercial empire throughout Latin America resulted from the said. It is shown in more detail in the Chicago Journal of Commerce by P. M. Atkins. His figures show how, when the war practically shut off European manufactured goods from South America and dried up English and German investment funds, the United States assumed the lead.

72% Increase.

Atkins finds that exports from the United States to Latin America increased from $328,822,000 in 1913 to $856,522,000 in 1926 or 158.5 per cent while imports into the United States from Latin America rose from $443,455,000 to $1,013,328,000 or 128.5 per cent. If we take into account price changes it appears that the physical volume of U. S. exports to Latin America has increased about 72 per cent since 1913.

British exports to South America, on the other hand, have increased only 2.5 per cent in value, meaning an actual decrease of at least 25 per cent in volume, while German exports to South America have increased about 22.1 per cent in value compared with 1913, also involving a shrinkage in volume.

Britain Loses as United States Wins.

Atkins sums up the position of the United States in Latin American trade in a table which shows for 1924 the rank of the United States in the total imports and exports of these countries and the percentage of the trade held by the United States in each case.

U. S. Now Dominant in Latin America

Atkins points out that since 1924 the position of the United States both in imports and exports of Latin America has been further strengthened.

Civil War in Nationalist CHINA

By EARL R. BROWDER

Browder has just returned from six months in China, as a member of the International Workers' Delegation, during which he visited over 40 cities and towns, during the period of the Chang Hatchek split. He spent two months in Hankow, in close touch with the leaders of the Kuomintang, the trade unions, the peasants, and other revolutionary bodies. He was also a delegate to the Pan Pacific Trade Union Conference, and was the secretary of that body. He tells a graphic and authoritative story of the beginnings of the Civil War now raging in Nationalist China. The pamphlet has many documents, photos, etc.

WOMEN

UNITED COUNCILS OF WORKINGCLASS WOMEN HOLD CONFERENCE

By ELLA ZELNICK
(A Baker Woman).

Being present at the conference, which was held on Saturday, the 25th of June, of the United Councils of Workingclass Women of New York, and representing the just newly organized Baker Women Council No. 1 of the Bronx as delegate, I wish to say that I never before was present at such a splendid and interesting conference. There were delegates from all the Cloakmaker and other progressive organizatinns.

The report, which was read by our secretary, showed up that the workingclass women, besides their work in the home, have made it their duty to be organized and fight for a beautiful and better life.

Organize Bakers' Wives.

The U. C. of W. W. have in the past organized various trade councils and also have taken a great part in the various strikes, besides helping financially. They have also taken an active part in the recent baker strike which had gone on for ten weeks, with Pechter and Messinger. They have organized a Baker Women Council (wives of the bakers) which no other organization had succeeded in doing.

The baker women, who were considered greenest, joined the councils to fight their enemy, the greedy exploiters of their husbands. If all the women could see the meetings which we held over Friday evening they would see the great progress that the baker women have made in this short time. They call all their sisters also to organize into councils.

Women Pickets.

An incident: A baker came to his wife and told her that a strike was going on with Pechter and Messinger, and that the two big firms had procured injunctions against the baker union, and had made it difficult for the bakers to carry on the strike alone. Therefore the picketing must be carried on by the women. He begged her to go to the baker union, where picketing work would be assigned to her by the U. C. W. W.

To this she answered her husband: "What do you call this, I should go picketing? What have I got to do with this?" etc.

Finally, but not without great labor, the baker persuaded his wife to go to one of the meetings, where she heard many of our comrades speak. This meeting and the speakers made an impression on her. Now the baker says that he seldom sees his wife. She is steadily occupied with meetings. This same woman is now one of our splendid fighters against our enemies—the bosses, important Part of Labor Movement.

Such facts we hear of often. All this is done with the help of the U. C. W. W. We see today that this organization is an important part of the workingclass movement, and that it takes a great part in every workers' battle.

Most important of all is a resolution passed at the conference to carry on educational work among the councils. It was one of the most important points discussed.

In the name of the Baker Women Council I of the Bronx I give thanks to the United Councils of Workingclass Women, which have taken an active part in the past battle against the two greedy baker bosses, who were endeavoring to fasten themselves to the baker workers' backs like parasites, but found the blood not to their liking—Pechter and Messinger.

The conference ended with a wonderful banquet.

POVERTY AND PROSTITUTION FLOURISH AROUND THE CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

On a certain well-known street in the "city of brotherly love" a restaurant, newly-opened; equipped with an attractive white curtain strung across its front window, has this sign painted in clean letters on the glass: "Blank restaurant. This is no Bluff!" A large hand points conspicuously to three slogans, initiated into the nature of this particular quarter of the city, this rather surprising sign is either a joke or a tragedy, according as you wish to look at it.

Throughout this neighborhood, lining the shabby, dingy streets so characteristic of the old parts of Philadelphia, are numerous store windows with one thing in common: a curtain, generally white and clean, covering the whole front. Sometimes a worn-out sign of "Restaurant" or "Dinner," or sometimes a few dusty soiln bottles or a fly-specked basket of fruit lend a fiction which deceives nobody. Sometimes the white curtain speaks for itself, undisguising and unashamed. For these places are neither restaurants nor stores nor anything else but brothel houses, with the white curtain serving as their identification mark. Here at certain hours of the day you may see bleached-hair, carmine-lipped girls peering out from behind the curtain or openly soliciting on the doorstep.

Love Not All Brotherly.

This is the heart of the tenderloin of Philadelphia. This red-light district covers not a few streets but a very large quarter of that unique, huge rambling town, that city of over two millions which is in reality just an immense village, that city so prim with its thousands of streets of little, red-brick houses each with its white, well-scrubbed stoop, all alike, that city of Quaker traditions and modern industrialization, renowned for the strictness of its Sunday blue-laws and the corruptness of its politics, which is Philadelphia.

There are big streets and little in the tenderloin. There are busy avenues of hotels and restaurants and there are narrow, dingy back-alleys, where the figure of vice are falling in decay and the brick-paved gutter is littered with filth. In these latter, generally Negro families live. Negro workers try to scrape up their children respectively to the midst of the vice, gambling, drink and prostitution which run rampant on all sides.

Not in loathing, hatred does one see here, but in dull acceptation of it as something ugly, dull, cynical to. Wrecks and rags of humanity. New proletariat" thieves, drug fiends, cadillerys, pimps, thugs, dope fiends, prostitutes, paupers, these are the people that live here. This is the place where manufacturers and politicians agree to come to operate the strike-breakers and gangsters they need for their occasional dirty jobs.

In the midst of this hotbed of vice and crime is a little green park a beautiful little square with well-kept lawns, shade trees and a graceful fountain. This square is known as the "Bum's Retreat." Every available bench is crowded with the tenderloin loafers, resting their pitiful, diseased bodies while they exchange their cynical philosophies of life.

This neighborhood abounds in "Men's Hotels"—35 cents a night up"—all conveniences, hot water, electricity, gas, not to mention bedbugs, lice, syphilis and other attractions thrown in. These places rub elbows with cheap beaneries, advertising beef-stewe for 20 cents, full five course dinners for 40 cents, with pool-rooms, brothels, and lurid chop-suey joints flaunting ultra-oriental carvings, myrrh-scented lights, fantastic names and high prices.

"Jesus Saves", Everyone Else Is Too Poor.

Here, too, are the gospel missions, with bibles reposing on crocheted doilies in their windows, with gilt-painted slogans such as "Jesus Saves," "God Pardons Sinners", etc. Here, in winter the bakeries overcrowd the otherwise deserted meeting-rooms, ready to be christians or anything else for the sake of getting out of the cold. Many of summer evenings you may see a little hand organ set up in the street, hymn books and collection plate brought out and a few bloodless evangelist males hold a little church service there all by themselves. They wear thick, black unbecoming dresses, like mourning and devilous bonnets and under their chins. Now and then a passer-by lingers, listening dully as they intone, "Throw out the Life-line; someone is sinking today!" Their doleful hymns, their prayers mingle unnoticed with the honk of passing automobiles, with the hiccups of the drunkards lolling on the curb-stones, with the weird Chinese music issuing from a near-by laundry, with all the other voices of the hectic, teeming tenderloin streets.

Argentine Masses Wild With Joy as Sacco and Vanzetti Win Reprieve

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 14.—With all stores closed and windows barred and the streets deserted except for an occasional cab, Buenos Ayres during the Sacco and Vanzetti general strike presented the appearance of a city of the dead.

But tho the city seemed dead, news that Sacco and Vanzetti had been granted a stay of execution which was flashed from the special designed signal apparatus on various newspaper offices, brought forth crowds of cheering, happy people to the bulletin boards. Shouts of "Long live Sacco and Vanzetti" filled the streets.

As the throngs began again to circulate thru the capital.

In the interior, where excitement had reached a pitch which led to outbreaks yesterday, the eager listeners received their first information over the radio.

New Ford Model Ready.

DETROIT, Aug. 14.—Production of the new Ford car will start within the next few weeks it was announced today by the Ford Motor Company. The new model has been perfected and is now in the testing stage, it was said. The new automobile is capable of attaining a speed of 65 miles per hour and can be driven for hours at an average speed of more than 50 miles per hour without discomfort to driver and passengers and without harm to motor and other equipment, it was stated. Thousands of Ford workers were laid off while the leisurly testing took place.

Ten Days in the Workhouse

By REBECCA GRECHT.

We had expected such a sentence, as we sat in defferson Market Court that morning, waiting for our group of pickets arrested in the fur market to be called. After the demonstration in the courtroom, spontaneous, unorganized, the indignant reaction of the hundreds of workers who had just passed the outrageous edict of Judge Ewald, and were impelled to cheer our comrades as they were led away to serve their five and ten day sentences the sword seemed around that the rest of the pickets would now get ten and fifteen days.

Immediately, on the faces of the comrades, men and women, waiting their turn, could be seen a firm, determined expression, a spirited glint in the eye. The whisper passed along, "Comrades, we must force to be paid! All to the workhouse!"

There were sixteen in our group, six women and ten men. The policeman who had arrested us while we were picketing on 7th Ave. between 28th and 29th streets made a sorry figure on the witness stand. He could only mumble a few words about our "congregating", "walking there and four abreast," in a dull monotone as if he were repeating a lesson by note. Nine men were sentenced to 15 days in the workhouse, and one man to seven months 30 days for picketing and six months for "disorderly conduct" in the courtroom of the women. Four were given the choice of 10 days in the workhouse or $25 fine. One woman was sentenced to 30 days for picketing, and one to six months. She, too, had been caught "red-handed" participating in the demonstration in court. The other groups received similar sentences.

It seemed wonderful why the difference in the sentences existed—up to us and to the men. Had the judge been overcome by a sudden sense of chivalry? Was he disturbed by the thought that public opinion might resent too harsh a treatment of the "weaker sex"? Or did he think that going as his choice of a fine would let the court attendant, a friend of his, award him for his painstaking labors in the hot and stuffy courtroom?

Whatever the reason, he misjudged us. We, who had come to the aid of the apostle of law and order, dominated by reaction, understand the modern, militant woman worker? No doubt of it, we, who have for bloodless years, males held a little church service there all by themselves. They wear thick, black unbecoming dresses, like mourning and devilous bonnets and under their chins. Now and then a passer-by lingers, listening dully as they intone, "Throw out the Life-line; someone is sinking today!" Their doleful hymns, their prayers mingle unnoticed with the honk of passing automobiles, with the hiccups of the drunkards lolling on the curb-stones, with the weird Chinese music issuing from a near-by laundry, with all the other voices of the hectic, teeming tenderloin streets.

We were taken up to the jail. There, in a narrow cage-way less than three feet wide and 30 or 40 feet long, outside dark and airless cells, about 35 of us were packed in together, with barely room to turn around. We thought of cattle herded into pens. The nation attempted to force twelve more in, but we protested, and another place was found for them.

We remained there more than two hours. At four o'clock we were taken to Welfare Island. Like vicious, dangerous animals we were herded into to the police wagon. There were two compartments, like cells. Built of iron, surely, unventilated, with a tiny, barred opening at the top—that let in no more light than one can pull a penny. In ours, no more than five feet square, at least twenty comrades were crowded.

To be sure, every precaution had to be taken to prevent our escape. Were we not of that dangerous variety known as the "red-handed woman"? Amazons that we were, we might finger nails or our teeth we might—who knows—bore a hole thru the iron door and let ourselves out with the aid of our shoe strings.

But we were not worried. Scarcely able to breathe, jolted from side to side, growing hungrier all the time (we had not eaten since early in the morning—some, not at all) we found one relief. We sang. Working class songs, revolutionary songs, songs of suffering, of hate, of freedom. What power lies in them! Every melody, every word, seemed to give us more strength, make us more buoyant.

We sang until we reached the island. The police wagon stopped at last before the entrance to the Workhouse for Women. And in a few minutes we were within the wall of New York City's House of Correction.

Several matrons greeted us with virago looks and angry authority. Who were we? What were we? Why did we come after 4 p. m. to be locked in? We didn't we pay the fine? Then the instruction came to get ready for fingerprinting and for the doctor's examination.

At that, let it be confessed, we grew cold. We didn't mind being fingerprinted. But we knew what seeing the doctor meant. Our united protest that we were strikers, not prostitutes, met with the regrettable fact that we were no different from all the others who came in. Then we decided, among ourselves, that under no circumstances would we permit a physical examination. We acquainted each other and refused to see the doctor. Let them use force if they cared, against the 17 of us.

In groups of 8 or 10, then, we were put into another room. Our fingerprints were taken, the color of eyes and hair noted, weight and height marked. But there was no doctor around.

Again began the same insistent and angry questioning, quite deliberate, it seemed. Why didn't we pay the fine and go home? What matter if the women were we, any way? We prefer the workhouse to home.

We tried to explain to them that it was not the money in question, but a matter of principle, that we strikers could not and would not be intimidated, that we would not justify the outrageous actions of the police and the court by accepting the alternative of a fine.

In the midst of our explanation, a matron hurried in with the cry, "Everybody home. The union's representative is here to bail you all out." We looked at one another in amazement. What had happened? Were the cases being appealed—so quickly? Who was responsible for this action. We wanted to know who had spoken and exactly what he had said. Otherwise we would not go. The matron looked at us with impatience. "Aw, you're keeping me here all night. Are you coming home?" she shouted angrily. "The union is ready to pay the fine of $25 for each of you. Come on, I've got a date tonight." Then the instruction came to get ready for fingerprinting and for the doctor's examination.

And we did. Seven went home. The rest, in unison, shouted a No! so emphatic and spirited, that even the matrons were convinced we meant it.

Their strategy apparently had failed. Hunger no longer. From the bundles of food which had been sent in by friends, we made a hearty meal. Then we were separated.

Now that we were staying, our grievances began to pour in. There was no bathroom. We were compelled to use the toilet in the open corridor, and the prison officials, men, could see us. Our underwear, our identification marks, were pinned in a strike, of destruction after us workers, in spite of our protests. And bed bugs, lice, syphilis and other attractions have been thrown in. These places rub elbows with cheap beaneries, advertising beef-stewe for 20 cents, full five course dinners for 40 cents, with pool-rooms, brothels, and lurid chop-suey joints flaunting ultra-oriental carvings, myrrh-scented lights, fantastic names and high prices.

The Hankow Situation

(By ANNA LOUISE STRONG)

HANKOW, (By Mail).—It's a joke to think of the things folks are writing about Hankow—the wild lines it is supposed to be, ready to declare foreigners alive. I have picked my way with another girl into all sorts of official headquarters in the native city. I have been lost in the middle of an arsenal, and had a few hundred bare-back sweating workers mob me cheerfully along toward the port. I was with.

The lies about nationalization of women have started again. A duly credited missionary, said to be the editor of the China Review to have been fired by nearly every board in China is getting out carbon copies of an announcement presumably made at a missionary prayer-meeting by a letter from Hunan, that "by a new law all girls over 16 must be married within one month or the government will provide husbands for them." Also that women in abbreviated bathing costumes have been enrolled to march with the Hankow armies. Such ghastly rot!

New Marriage Law.

The fire behind this smoke is that a new marriage law has been passed by the Chinese Nationalists, giving to women the right of divorce for cause. Hitherto a man could divorce his wife at will and without alimony by returning her to her parents. Now he must support her if he turns her away until she gets another husband or finds means of self-support. Now the woman, who before had no right of protest when her husband took another wife without her consent, can refuse to live with him if he does so. Also she can sue for alimony.

There is a woman's Union appointed which takes a semi-official function in fighting for women's rights. There is an apparent authority and ease of a man committing suicide, often being forced by the Women's Union to walk through the city dressed with a placard announcing him as a wife-beater.

Organization to Remain.

I cannot overlook the fact that the wards of good respectable idealists around Shanghai are rejoicing in the split between Hankow and Nanking, as "a getting rid of those evil Communists." Such people explain Hankow to "evaporate," just as the others expect Nanking to do so. To any guess that neither will evaporate but that Peking will be taken and that therafter there will be a real meeting of the Kuomintang executive for the first time since the split and create a new unity.

Quite likely they will expel the Communists, as I hope the heart of the reform exploitation. Quite likely the workers and peasants will be madly disillusioned, and will get few immediate results.

But one result will be felt all through central China the experience of workers and peasant organization. For this they will have to thank none but Russia.

LABOR RALLYING FOR SACCO-VANZETTI STRIKE

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Supreme Court of the state of Massachusetts meets today to decide whether Sacco and Vanzetti shall die in the electric chair on August 22nd or shall have a new trial. As these lines are written Sacco is on the thirtieth day of his hunger strike and the prison authorities are considering forcible feeding. It would appear from all indications that a bitter determination to execute the two condemned men exists among the ruling classes of this country.

* * *

THE legal hocus pocus that has been indulged in recently by the Massachusetts governor and the judicial arm of the capitalist commonwealth, as we pointed out, was only for the purpose of appearances, to create the impression that the two doomed workers were given every possible consideration they were entitled to under the law. But this law is a noose to strangle those who threaten the capitalist state. It is not a question of justice but one of expediency.

* * *

THE mighty demonstrations that were held all over the world not only threw a scare into the ranks of the most reactionary sections of the ruling classes but even those capitalist publications labelled liberal felt that their expressed sympathy for Sacco and Vanzetti might tend to encourage greater militancy on the part of the workers, so they have recently been soft-pedalling on the case. The New York World, which a short time ago conducted an editorial campaign demanding a new trial for the condemned workers has now switched the issue to an editorial campaign against the Communists who are given credit for the world-wide protest demonstrations. The Communists are entitled to the major part of this credit.

* * *

It cannot be repeated too often that only the power of the masses expressed thru strikes and other forms of mass protest can stay the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti and free them from either the chair or a living death in prison. Polite representations from liberals and pacifists, expressed fears for the "honor" of the state of Massachussetts, and such nonsense has no effect on the hardboiled pluto who heads the capitalist system in this country. They fear the spirit of rebellion among the masses which one day will put an end to such crimes as the one perpetrated on Sacco and Vanzetti.

* * *

ONE of the most contemptible actions that any section of the workingclass movement could be guilty of was that of the Boston section of the Socialist Labor Party, when it refused to hand over its speckling permit on Boston common, last Sunday, to the Sacco-Vanzetti defense speakers; the police having refused the latter permission to speak. On the previous Sunday both the Socialist and the Workers (Communist) parties gave up their permits and had their seasonal permits cancelled by the police in retaliation. The S. L. P. true to its craven conduct during the war, would rather enjoy the opportunity to bask in the smiles of the Boston police department while discussing the evolution of the "tool of industry" than throw in its lot with other sections of the workingclass movement in a struggle to save two proletarian lives from the electric chair. Words fail to express the contempt that those fake radicals deserve from the workingclass.

* * *

AS those lines are clicking off the typewriter a German junkers airplane is flying towards us with Chicago as her destination. A few days ago, I saw a picture of a German Uzoat in the movies sinking British, Italian and Greek merchant vessels to the immense satisfaction and pleasure of the audience. Ten years ago, if either of those two incidents took place there would be cursing and shooting. Ten years ago the Germans were "Huns" and "baby-killers." Today Germany is the backbone of civilization. But should the German and American ruling classes get into grips again over foreign markets or colonies we would be taught to hate just as vigorously as they were taught since spring 1917 until long after the armistice.

CHIANG FORCED OUT AS HEAD OF NANKING REGIME

Peasant Uprisings Still Threaten Wuhan

SHANGHAI, Aug. 15.—Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, commander of the Cantonese forces in the northern drive who at the time of his greatest successes betrayed the revolution into the hands of the capitalists and imperialists is now down and out. Since the treachery of the Wuhan government and Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang, a strong demand for unity between the Nanking government of Chiang and Wuhan has grown up within his own group. This has culminated in forcing Chiang to retire.

Owing to desertions to Wuhan and to defections because some of the troops refused to fight Chiang's anti-Communist campaign, his army was weakened and was steadily losing ground before the forces of Marshal Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian warlord and bandit.

Feng and Wuhanites stood aside and permitted Chiang to face defeat and then agreed to step in only on condition that Chiang quit, thereby leaving only the Wuhan counter-revolutionaries in the service of imperialism in the field against Chang Tso-lin. Feng has shown the master class that he is just as vicious against the further development of the revolution as was Chiang and so the first traitorous general has to take a back seat.

Peasant Uprisings Continue.

Meanwhile the uprisings of peasants, under the leadership of Communists, continues in a number of provinces and the Wuhan counter-revolutionary gang fears the spread of dissatisfaction to their own armies abandoning its attempted Trans-Atlantic flight.

It's sister ship, the Europa, had given up the attempt some hours before.

Every Party Member Must Help Assure Holding of Important Convention

To All Party Units.

DEAR COMRADES: In agreement with the Communist International the Party has decided to hold its fifth regular Convention on August 21st.

Because of the impending war danger, the offensive against the Party by the government and the trade union bureaucracy, the general attack being launched against the workers by the imperialist clique and the need for the consolidation and unification of the Party to meet the important tasks now confronting it, this Convention takes on the most important character which any of our conventions has assumed to date.

No Convention will be possible unless every Party member buys an Assessment Stamp. To delay holding the Convention or not to hold it will deal a serious blow to the welfare of our Party. It will be impossible, however, to hold a Convention as scheduled unless every member of our Party does his or her utmost to help hold the Convention. This means that every Party member must immediately purchase a Convention Assessment Stamp. Not only will a Party member not be in good standing unless he purchases his Convention Stamp, but if he fails to do that he will be interfering with the progress of the Party in the most serious way.

The Unit secretaries must not hold up the funds collected thru the sale of Convention Assessment Stamps. These funds must be remitted to the National Office without the slightest delay.

Comrades, if you have not yet bought your Convention Assessment Stamp, buy it immediately. You cannot vote otherwise.

If you have not yet remitted the funds collected thru the sale of the Convention Assessment Stamps, send them immediately to the National Office. Failure to remit these funds is as harmful as failure to purchase Convention Assessment Stamps. Act quickly.

Fraternally,

Jay Lovestone.

ELBERT H. GARY DIES SUDDENLY IN FIFTH AVE. HOME

Was Head of U. S. Steel Corporation

Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, died yesterday morning at 5.30 o'clock at his Fifth Avenue home in this city, according to the official announcement at his office. The news of his death was withheld for several hours, until after the stock market opened Monday morning and the holders of steel shares had time to prepare for a bearish movement to pull down the market price. The result was just a slight downward trend and immediate recovery with United States Steel taking the lead in a new upward drive.

Noted Labor Hater.

Gary, who with the backing of the House of Morgan, organized the United States Steel Corporation in 1901, and has been the recognized head of it ever since, was one of the worst enemies of labor in the country and the leader of the latest "open shop" drive against labor unions. A ruthless exploiter of labor, he became the chief spokesman for the open shoppers.

PREPARE GIANT WALK-OUT; SEE NO HOPE IN COURT ACTION; PROTEST MEETINGS HELD THRUOUT COUNTRY

Report Sacco Takes Food After Threat to Apply Barbarous Method of Forcible Feeding

Following the appeal of the Workers (Communist) Party for a nation-wide strike at 10 a. m., Monday, August 22nd, to save Sacco and Vanzetti from death in the electric chair, scores of unions and other labor organizations have indicated their willingness to join in a giant walk-out.

Officials of the Italian Chamber of Labor, the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Local 918, of the Journeyman Barbers, announced that the question of strike action would be considered shortly in their organizations.

Among the unions that participated in the walk-out of more than half a million workers in New York City last week were the International Printers' Union, Harbor Boatmen's Union, Ship Yard Workers, Clothing Workers, Garment Workers, United Hebrew Trades, Pocketbook Workers' Union, Journeymen Tailors' Union, Journeymen Barbers' Union, Waist Makers' Union, Carpenters' and Executors' Union, Fur Workers, Plasterers' Union, Cement Workers' Union, Rod Carriers' Union, Painters' and Decorators' Union, Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Laundry Workers' Union, Metal Workers' Union, Shoe Workers' Union, Paper Box Makers' Union, Bricklayers' Union, Chamber of Labor Unions, Amalgamated Power Plant Workers, Architectural Iron Workers' Union, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, United Textile Workers of America, Marine Transport Workers' Union, Typographical Union, Local No. 7.

Bigger Than Before.

The enthusiasm with which organizations are pledging themselves to join the strike to save the framed-up workers indicates that the new walk-out will exceed the last in strength. The International Labor Defense, the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee, the Architectural Bronze and Structural Workers' Union are among the organizations which have already endorsed a strike. Numerous other organizations which have already indicated their willingness to join the walk-out are awaiting meetings of their executive committees before officially endorsing it.

The Marine Transport Workers' Union, an organization affiliated with the Industrial Workers of the World, indicated its willingness to join in a united protest Monday against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Urges Students' Strike.

In urging the strike the Student Sacco-Vanzetti Committee, appealed to all students to stay away from their classes and to demonstrate for the immediate and unconditional release of the framed-up workers.

Many Attend Protest Meetings.

In the meantime reports from all sections of the country state that protest meetings are being enthusiastically attended by record crowds of workers. Plans for a monster demonstration at Union Square, in New York City, are being made for the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

An Ex-Soldier Jailed Because of Sympathy For Sacco and Vanzetti

In tomorrow's issue of the DAILY WORKER, J. Louis Engdahl, will tell the story of the jailing of Morris W. Turkin, an ex-soldier, who came from Schenectady, New York, to Boston to join in the "death march" last Wednesday night around the Charlestown Prison, where the frame-up gang had planned to put Sacco and Vanzetti to death in the electric chair. It is an interesting view of the terror that clutched at the hearts of the murder crew in Boston as they planned to put the two workers to death in spite of the world protest of labor.

In its call for a strike the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party declared:

"Twelve days' respite must not deceive the working class. It is intended only to deceive, only to quiet down the magnificent manifestations of working class indignation and solidarity which were swelling throut the country and which were already hinting of that fact that when the working class speaks with all of its might it must be heard. The impudence of the working class now is to intensify tenfold the demonstrations and strikes which have expelled the butcher of Mussolini and the leading financial masters of America, who gave the orders [illegible] to make the [illegible] of the [illegible] twelve days [illegible] before the [illegible] were the cause of Luther Swift's hesitation to kill Sacco and Vanzetti. The International Labor Defense is urging a strike to [illegible] in the workshops.

"We are advocating protest strikes [illegible] and pro- [illegible] that the strike must will [illegible] the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti impossible."

Expect Nothing From Courts.

[illegible] headquarters of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee are [illegible] with preparations for mass activities for the coming week. The officials of the Emergency Committee have no faith that the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court will render a favorable decision today when it passes upon the granting of a writ of error.

New Danger Signals in the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

Make This Execution Impossible!

The International Labor Defense declares:

"Sacco and Vanzetti have been suspended between life and death for seven years. Governor Fuller now prolongs this agony for twelve days more. (Six days more remain as this issue of The DAILY WORKER appears.) History knows no parallel for the deliberate prolonged torture inflicted upon innocent and idealistic men.

"For our part we will work with all our power and energy in these days to help the movement for Sacco and Vanzetti grow in volume and intensity.

"Our local organizations in two hundred cities are already organizing a new series of protest meetings and demonstrations for Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

"We are advocating protest strikes of the workers everywhere and predict that the strike movement will now take on a volume which will render the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti impossible."

By JAY LOVESTONE.

SOME people tend to look upon the Sacco-Vanzetti case as an isolated, special example of the miscarriage of justice in the American democratic court system. We Communists take the very opposite view. We look upon the Sacco-Vanzetti case not as a miscarriage of justice, but, on the contrary, as a crass example of the carrying out of justice by capitalists against workers, by the exploiting class against the exploited. To us justice is not an abstraction. To us justice is part and parcel of the whole system of the capitalist, class society of today.

More than that. The Communists do not look upon the Sacco-Vanzetti case as an isolated incident of reaction which is an exception to the rule of the trend of events. To us, the Sacco-Vanzetti case is only a symbol, a high-water mark of the sweep of capitalist reaction now crushing the American workers.

Sacco-Vanzetti Case Part of Whole Offensive.

STRIKINGLY clear manifestations of the fact that the Sacco-Vanzetti case is an integral part of a whole offensive against the working class by the black capitalist clique, are evidenced in the preparations now being made for an attack on those workers who are unskilled, semi-skilled, deprived of political rights, and most proletarian section of our working class. The writer has in mind the repeated threats and intensified preparatory measures that are now being resorted to for a big drive against the foreign-born workers. Within the last three days there have been three ominous instances indicating that such a campaign is in the making.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case is clear-cut, naked, so crass an example of pure American lawlessness as applied by the imperialists that even the most purblind can see the mockery, hypocrisy and terror of the whole game. It is very many years since an event in our working class struggles has stirred up so much interest abroad as well as at home. Naturally, among the great masses awakened and inspired in the United States to protest energetically against the Czarist brand of justice as handed out to Sacco and Vanzetti are great masses of foreign-born proletarians. The extremely ire of our capitalists has been aroused. Two foreign-born workers must be executed. The thin veil of the dignity of capitalist justice has been torn to shreds. The "safety of society" must be assured. The weakest section of the working class must be taught a lesson. This means

Strikes and Demonstrations Only Hope for Sacco, Vanzetti

Sacco and Vanzetti Must Rely Upon The Daily Worker—Help Us Continue the Fight!

Heywood Broun, the noted columnist of the New York World has been forced to sever his connections with that so-called "liberal" paper, because of its refusal to publish his articles on Sacco and Vanzetti.

Yet "The World" carries today, as everyday the following hypocritical pledge on its editorial page:

> THE WORLD, as established by JOSEPH PULITZER, May 10, 1883:
> "An institution that should always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty."

Many radicals and liberal-minded readers have followed the columns of this paper faithfully with full confidence in its impartiality and broadmindedness. The Heywood Broun incident should prove to them, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that no impartiality, no broadmindedness, nothing but class prejudice and hate, can be expected from any capitalist paper.

This incident should inspire every class conscious worker to renewed efforts to help The DAILY WORKER, particularly at this time, when it must shoulder the main responsibility for mobilizing public sentiment behind Sacco and Vanzetti, as they face again the danger of death in the electric chair.

Elbert H. Gary Dies In Fifth Ave. Home

who was the real boss of the convention of that year. His favorite candidate was Major General Leonard Wood, who died last week. Wood had acted as the chief strike-breaker during the steel strike when United States troops occupied Gary, Indiana, the city named after the dead steel magnate, and was highly esteemed by Gary. But Wood's strike-breaking activities made his candidacy impossible, because of the general hatred of labor for him. His next favorite was Frank O. Lowden, but Lowden was exposed as having paid a thousand dollars apiece to two Missouri politicians for bribing certain voters in that state, so he was out of the running. Finally the notorious crook and grafter, Harry M. Daugherty recommended Warren G. Harding to Gary as a "dark horse." He was acceptable to Gary and subsequently was elected, as Gary had his man in the White House.

It was the influence of Gary that was responsible for the vicious anti-labor character of the Harding administration, a policy still followed by the Coolidge gang.

Challenged by Steel Strike

Gary was one of the shrewdest capitalists during the war and used his position to gouge tremendous profits out of the government, meanwhile indulging in lavish promises about the wonderful benefits that would befall the American workers if they would only be contented and not strike during the war. When the steel workers, in 1919-20 tried to realize some of those promises, Gary used his influence with the government and his private army of thugs and gunmen to try to break the strike. This was the greatest challenge to his vicious exploitation of the steel slaves during his career.

The sabotage of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor under the late Gompers did as much to break the strike as did the actual unions of Gary and the government.

Successor Unknown.

The death of Gary immediately gave rise to the question of his successor as head of the steel trust. Many influential Wall Street observers seem to think that one of the DuPonts will succeed him, especially in view of the recent great merger of the steel corporation, General Motors and the DuPont powder concern. Others speculate on the possibility of Charles M. Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation succeeding Gary.

But no matter who comes in the condition of the steel slaves will remain as it is until they have the organized power to fight the octopus.

Gary Cycle Cossacks Ride Down Sacco and Vanzetti Meeting

GARY, Ind., Aug. 16.—Motorcycle police rode into crowds of workers who were assembled here to the number of four or five thousand in answer to a call from the Lake County Sacco-Vanzetti Conference for a mass protest meeting against the murder of the two innocent men.

As the police were arresting the speakers and one of them, Fred Biedenkapp had been pulled from the box, the order to charge was given the cops. Cries arose as the heavy guard of motorcycle and regular cops and an automobile full of plain clothes men burst into the assembled crowd. Clubs were swung in a way that was reminiscent of the days of the steel strike. Before the masses had dispersed three workers and all the speakers had been arrested.

Because of the intense feeling for Sacco and Vanzetti among the steel workers the police had prohibited the meeting. Among the speakers arrested were Norman Beeh, a Chicago university student, Fred Biedenkapp, Manuel Gomez, and B. Ruoff. The speakers were attacked with disorderly conduct and meeting to riot and were fined one dollar and costs.

Don't Forget the Sustaining Fund!

DANGER SIGNALS IN THE SACCO-VANZETTI CASE

that a new attack must be launched against the foreign-born workers. The preparation are in full blast. Here are two here them.

The High Crime of Workers Thinking

1. Congressman Albert Johnson of Washington, Chairman of the House Immigration Committee, has issued a stern warning to all foreign-born workers that if they will participate in any meetings or demonstrations in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti, they will thus "lend their chances of becoming American citizens" and "become liable to deportation."

Mr. Johnson goes on to say, "Aliens domiciled in this country should remember that if they partake in anti-government demonstrations here they are liable to deportation under the 1919 act." Here we have it: the government is planning to murder two workers; other workers protest. In this case, it happens to be that the workers to be murdered by the government are foreign-born. It also happens that some of the workers who protest against this murder are foreign-born. Millions of native workers are likewise protesting, but the first onslaught is to be made against the foreign-born workers, because they are in a weaker position to resist the attack. Once the weaker sector of the working class front is broken or even pierced then the next line will be stormed—the line of the native workers. These elementary points of strategy dividing the enemy—habd good in class war as well as in other forms of war. Already we see "red" raids in Los Angeles and native workers being jailed and held incommunicado.

2. The murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti, the enemies of the working class, never stop at mere warnings no matter how stern and severe these warnings be to the workers. It is not enough for them to attack the workers for holding certain opinions. Actual steps must be taken to cripple the workers who hold these opinions. Therefore, Commissioner of Immigration Hull has come forward with the declaration that he will call on Congress to appropriate funds to enable the Immigration Service to make a thoro round-up of foreign-born workers and that "when the undesirables have been hunted down they will be deported." Immigration Service inspectors, Department of Justice agents, and secret service agents of the iron-jury and post office are now watching the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations. Obviously, hunting down workers is a favorite sport of the American capitalists. The deportation machinery is being oiled and its swift workings are already visible.

Trying to Starve the Workers Out Of Militancy.

3. It taxes time, however, to ferret out the workers holding certain opinions. It takes even a little more time to hunt down and deport these workers. Our capitalists are efficient. They do not believe in boiling time. Particularly when it is necessary to persecute the working class so they keep in mind their old maxim that "Union is enemy". Secretary of Labor Davis has taken the great American "public" into confidence and has declared that in the meanwhile steps are being prepared to starve those foreign-born workers who refuse to be docile industrial serfs, who refuse to applaud the hangmen of the American proletariat as the heroes of the day. Secretary Davis openly declares that letter have been sent to employers, asking them to aid in the enforcement of the immigration laws by refusing employment to all foreign-born workers who cannot show that they entered this country by "legal methods." This is nonsense. It is plain camouflage. Our multi-millionaire and open-shop Secretary of Labor Davis will fool nobody when he speak of legal methods. He is simply attempting to starve those workers who have opinions which in the eyes of our ruling class are dangerous to the maintainance of capitalist exploitation and tyranny.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case should prove a great antitoxin to the bacilli, to the devastating germs which have been spread in the ranks of the American workers for generations regarding the purity, the integrity and the blessings of American democracy. The sharp offensive launched against millions of our best workers in the United States scarcely before Sacco and Vanzetti have been strapped to the death chair should prove a powerful, the rude, antidote to the poison of bourgeois liberalism, propagated in the ranks of our working class by the socialist party and President Green and his venal labor bureaucracy.

The Communists have had no illusions or misgivings as to the whole Sacco-Vanzetti affair. The Communists are only more aroused, more determined, more energetic than ever before. To mobilize the greatest masses for a counter-attack, to call a halt to the offensive of the capitalists. Our furry has shown increasing signs of vitality and increases in size as the insurgent, driving forces, and a leader in the Sacco-Vanzetti campaign in the campaign for the protection of the foreign-born workers, in the campaign for the organization of the unorganized, in the movement for a united front of the working class—a labor party. No interests of the workers are too small for us to fight for. Our Party, the Party of the Communists, has no interests other than the interests of the working class. The unlimited brutality, the unmasked terrorism, the vile threats of the exploiters will not terrify us. We will go forward with united, steeled ranks to lead the workers until they win and destroy every vestige of capitalist exploitation, of imperialist tyranny in the United States.

20,000 Demonstrate In Detroit to Free Sacco and Vanzetti

DETROIT, Aug. 15. — Over twenty thousand workers jammed the Cadillac Square in the greatest demonstration witnessed in Detroit for years demanding freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. Eight labor speakers addressed the huge crowds from three platforms. The shouting and applause was plainly heard for many blocks around.

Although the meeting was scheduled for eight o'clock, the huge square was already filled by 7:30.

Only a few hours before the meeting the local capitalist daily papers carried headlines to the effect that the demonstration would be stopped by the police. This issue of the daily papers was sold before the huge automobile factories and unquestionably added many thousands to the huge crowd of workers, many of whom came direct from the shops. A tremendous cheer greeted the auto worker which arrived at eight o'clock with the banner bearing the slogans of the final struggle to free Sacco and Vanzetti.

The meeting was opened by the chairman of the Sacco Vanzetti committee, Mike Patton of the Electrical Workers Union. William Reynolds and Jack Robinson mounted the two additional platforms simultaneously and explained the purpose of the meeting amid thunderous applause, after which the speakers of the evening were introduced. The meeting was under the immediate supervision and auspices of the Detroit Federation of Labor with the cooperation of delegates from scores of labor organizations of Detroit.

The speakers told the great crowds that the case of Sacco and Vanzetti is now in the final court of appeals, the working class of the world. Applause upon applause greeted the announcements of the strikes and demonstrations taking place in the leading cities of America and of the world. Especially loud and deafening mined was the applause for the organization of the auto workers to prevent further frame-ups and executions of labor leaders that are bound to follow in the impending struggles of American labor.

The following speakers representing their various organizations addressed the demonstration in relays from the three platforms: Arthur Rohun, national secretary of the Automobile Workers Union, E. Baker, District Organizer Workers (Communist) Party and member of Machinists Union, Soraine Bereshe, organizer Watters' Union; Phillip Raymond, secretary, organizer of the Automobile Workers' Union, Jack Robinson of the Press-men's Union, Dave Miller of the British Workers' Club, Walter Trymbul, of Musicians' Union; Paul Dennie and two Italian speakers representing the Italian Sacco Vanzetti defense committee.

In spite of the predictions of the daily papers, the demonstration was peaceful and no interference by the police took place. The demonstration was originally announced and advertised by the International Labor Defense and at the next regular meeting of the Joint Sacco-Vanzetti Committee held Monday evening August 8, it was unanimously endorsed and taken over by this committee.

The Joint Defense Committee on which the Detroit Federation of Labor is represented secured a permit for the meeting. Scores of banners and signs were displayed and paraded through the demonstration.

Paul Crouch to Speak At Minneapolis Meet For Sacco and Vanzetti

MINNEAPOLIS, August 15.—Sacco-Vanzetti protest demonstrations are being held throughout the entire state, Sunday, August 21, 1 p. m., thirty-six hours before the time set for their execution a monster protest meeting and picnic will be held at Picnic Grounds, 33d St. South and River Road, West. Paul Crouch, just released from the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks at Alcatraz, Cal., will be the principal speaker.

Meetings are also being held at Chisholm and Ely, Minn. Demonstrations are being held nightly at Bridge Square, Minneapolis.

DEMAND JUSTICE DEPT. SHOW THEIR PART IN FRAME-UP

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, August 15.—Insistent demand that Governor Fuller extend the Sacco-Vanzetti reprieves until the senate can investigate the relationship between the department of justice and the seven-year persecution of the two workers is voiced again by the People's Reconstruction League through Benjamin C. Marsh, its executive secretary.

"The 11-day postponement of the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti," declares the league, "is only a little more than a 9-day wonderful exhibition of the money hand control of executives and courts, and doubtless intended to lull the people into acquiescence."

"The Sacco-Vanzetti case commands world interest because it epitomizes the struggle within every nation between the few of the ruling classes enriched by wealth fraudulently if not corruptly secured through control of the legislative, executive and judicial branches of national and state governments on one hand, and the millions of dispossessed on the other. This situation is marked in this land of the free where one per cent of the people own 50 per cent of the wealth and 90 per cent own 10 per cent; where one individual has as much income as 10,000 working men and women.

Symbolizes Injustice.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti case symbolizes the injustice of our courts and department of justice. The federal department of justice has used illegal methods of barbarism which would shame the czar and his secret police. The execution of these two men without a new trial under fair auspices, or even with such a trial before the senate can investigate the relation of the department of justice to the case of these two men, would rankle for decades.

"The acquittal of these two men, without the investigation of the department and its secret service, would be barren. Congress cannot evade its duty to preserve the civil rights of Americans, and of alien residents here as well."

Latin-America Demands Clemency.

From Latin-American labor movements a cry for clemency is renewed. The Pan-American Federation of Labor makes public three cables, one from Ricardo Trevino, secretary, of the powerful Mexican Federation of Labor, another from the Railroad Brotherhood of Cuba and a third from the Peru Labor Federation.

The previous cables reads: "We have wired to the president of the United States the following message: Mexican Regional Confederation of Labor, representing 2,000,000 members and women of the Mexican organized labor movement, earnestly requests you to extend to him the necessary of Massachusetts so that they may initiate a petition in favor of lives of Sacco and Vanzetti."

The Italian ambassador has called again on Assistant Secretary of State Castle to "express" the high degree of feeling in Italy over the impending murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. He is understood to have urged very strongly the importance of annulling the death sentence.

Detroit I. L. D. Picnic Will Be Great Sacco And Vanzetti Meeting

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 15. — On August 21st, the Detroit City central Organization of the I. L. D. will turn its annual picnic into a great demonstration to free Sacco and Vanzetti.

Detroit's monster demonstration on August 10th was initiated and run by the I. L. D. the technically it was under the Detroit Federation of Labor auspices. Now the I. L. D. will rally its forces of members and sympathizers for a great open air demonstration on the eve of the proposed murder of the two brave fighters.

Two nationally known speakers will address the meeting. The usual features of a picnic, Dancing, games and Refreshments, will be present in abundance and well arranged.

Kolchak Officers Will Stand Trial For Cruel Murders

SEMIPALATINSK, July 16 (By Mail).—The trial will begin, at the end of this month, in Semipalatinsk, of ex-General Annenkoff and ex-General Denissoff, formerly chief of Annenkoff's staff.

The charge against Annenkoff is that, from the beginning of the revolution, he fought at the head of detachments which he organized himself to overthrow the Soviet power. Besides, Annenkoff is charged with having committed mass murders of representatives of the Soviet power and private citizens during all his counter-revolutionary activities. The same charges are preferred against General Denissoff.

While retreating with Kolchak's army, Annenkoff committed numerous acts of violence on the population of the places he crossed. After crossing the Chinese frontier, Annenkoff was arrested in March, 1921, by the Chinese authorities at Urumchi and put into prison. After his release, Annenkoff settled in a Chinese town, where he became a stud-owner.

In 1926, Annenkoff and Denissoff illegally crossed the Soviet frontier but were arrested by the Soviet authorities. The two generals confessed to the crimes they are accused of.

STELTON, N. J., Aug. 15.—"We call upon all other young people's organizations of the United States of America to protest and use their power and influence to prevent a brutal miscarriage of justice and to insure the rights and privileges to be enjoyed by all of the American people," the children of the youth movement of Stelton, N. J., workingclass colony, resolved at a Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting.

Plan of Amalgamation For Locomotive Unions Put Forth at Altoona

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 15 (FP).—Consolidation of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen is favored in a resolution passed by representatives of 22 lodges which met at Altoona. Both brotherhoods were represented. "Unnecessary working of train crews Sundays and holidays" was protested and standardization of safety appliances on locomotives approved, in other resolutions.

Dictator Exiles Portuguese Rebels; Suppresses Papers

LISBON, Portugal, Aug. 15.—The Carmona cabinet tonight decided to expel to the colonies all the military participants in Friday's revolution.

The revolution originated in Lisbon and Oporto, and the demand was made that the fascist government be reconstructed.

Army officers, headed by Captain Rodriguez, Captain Netto and Lieutenant Sarmento, delivered the ultimatum in this regard to General Carmona, dictator. Carmona immediately ordered the arrest of the officers. Sarmento opened fire with his pistol.

It is indicated tonight that Sarmento has fled to Spain. He and he confreres in the attempted coup d'etat have been dismissed from the army ranks.

A journal in Lisbon has been suspended.

LISBON, Aug. 15. Apparently the Carmona tyranny has succeeded in suppressing the latest revolt—this one, as usual, being an outbreak of wronged army officers, former adherents of the government.

Commandant Colonels Gamaro, Lieutenant Sarmento, and Captain Netto Rodriguez are in jail charged with treason after giving Premier Carmona the scare of his life by walking into his party night before last and demanding that he should not promote the extremely unpopular Lieut. Col. Passos E. Sousa, now minister of war, to be also vice-president of the cabinet. Some of Sousa's orders for summary and undignified punishment of his personal enemies among his "brother officers" have been overruled by the higher cabinet officers. Sousa's new position removes this check upon him, and led to the incident, which almost became an uprising yesterday.

It is said that when Carmona demurred at taking any suggestions of this sort, Lieutenant Sarmento drew a shot at him with a revolver, but Carmona escaped.

The group of dissatisfied officers went back to the barracks, and issued a call for revolution, that were arrested before the equally dissatisfied populace could rally to their support.

short, lived as a result. But the thing dead many lives and often lost at the finishing end, the majority of them manage to reach a ripe old age, and look better physically at 70 than the average wage slave looks at 40.

THE passing of Gary from the steel trust caused only a slight ripple on the exchange. Steel stocks fell a fraction and then rallied. The big business ability was credited with the major part of the success attained by the industrial octopus, the wheels of that industry will continue to revolve today just as normally as if the death in the Gary home was that of Mr. Gary's poodle. The steel industry is run by the hundreds of thousands of workers employed in it. If all the presidents and stockholders in the United States passed away things would go on just the same.

"Hands Off China," Recognize Soviet, Czech Coop Urges

PRAGUE, Aug. 15.—A public meeting of women cooperators held in Brunn on 24th of February after a report by Comrade Krokova, adopted a resolution which was sent to the British Cooperative Women's Guild, and which draws the attention of British women cooperators to the fact that the British government is paving the way for another world war through its military intervention in China and its aggressive policy against the Soviet Union. The resolution invites British women cooperators to organize protest demonstrations, and to demand of the British government: (1) cessation of military intervention against revolutionary China; (2) withdrawal of the warships and troops sent to China; (3) protest against the brutality, pillaging and murders of the reactionary troops in China; (4) establishment of friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

The resolution adopted at the end of May by the district council of Czechoslovakian cooperatives in Volesky contains the following statement:

"The peril of new imperialistic struggles, which are bound to become more terrible than the recent world war, is at the present time greater than before. The present international situation is similar to the situation which preceded the outbreak of the world war.

"We do not believe in the pacifist declarations of the capitalist and in their 'disarmament demand,' we know full well what is behind the phrases about universal disarmament of the industrial state, the supposed suppression of militarism.

"The present war between the Chinese militarists and the Kuomintang army, which is supported by the Soviet Government, is a war between the oppressed and the oppressors, between the exploited and the exploiters. The Soviet Government is the only government which has declared itself ready to help the Chinese people in their struggle for liberation. The Soviet Government has declared itself ready to withdraw from China all the troops which were sent there to protect the Russian concessions, and to hand over these concessions to the Chinese people. The Soviet Government has declared itself ready to withdraw from China all the troops which were sent there to protect the Russian concessions, and to hand over these concessions to the Chinese people. The Soviet Government has declared itself ready to withdraw from China all the troops which were sent there to protect the Russian concessions, and to hand over these concessions to the Chinese people.

"We call upon the working women of all countries to demand that their governments withdraw their troops from China, and that they recognize the Soviet Government. We call upon the working women of all countries to demand that their governments withdraw their troops from China, and that they recognize the Soviet Government."

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 15 (FP).—Jack Evans, coal digger from South Wales, was a principal speaker at a picnic of 4,000 striking miners held under the auspices of the Miners' Relief Committee of Western Pennsylvania. Brophy urged the spreading of the strike to a general nation-wide fields as the move on which success depended.

HEIR TO COOLIDGE?

Herbert "Starvation" Hoover, who began his career by helping to feed Boxers in China, deprived the farmers of a just price for their product during the war, simultaneously deprived the city workers of real food, starved the Hungarian workers' republic out of existence, made friends with Mussolini, made an ass of himself talking about the "economic vacuum" in Russia, regarded the Mississippi floods as gymnastics as opportunity for a business in land loans. His man is spoken of very highly as candidate for republican nominee for president in 1928.

Dawes Has That Wall Street Look

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—With the double murder in the Charlestown state prison's electric chair postponed from August 10 to August 22, Washington is turning to breathe its favorite stenches from the miasma of Republican swamp politics. During the world-wide demand for justice to Sacco and Vanzetti, the politicians have been busy, too, not demanding justice, of course, but planning and plotting over a job control of the next administration.

They have not yet been able to decide finally whether Coolidge is just a veglal trickster with his "I do not choose" or whether he had really been hauled out of the presidential running as a liability to the G. O. P. With the exception of Lowden, none of the would-be successors to Cal's job have publicly announced their covetousness. But the political camps of Hoover, Dawes and the lesser lights have been as busy as beavers rounding up strength for their favorites.

Hoover Looms as Next President.

Shrewd political commentators see Dawes as a good second to Hoover.

Dawes has one bad drawback. He smells too much of Wall Street, of bankers and finance control of government. Wall Street rules, not carefully, but they payouts who have given their reputations stenching. Theo Roosevelt was the rough rider of the Spanish war and Coolidge the idol of the Boston police strike breaker; the Red Cross man and the economic efficiency expert. But Dawes has come to the real rulers to make a satisfactory display.

Charles Evans Hughes, of State fame, is generally regarded as the G. O. P. dark horse in case no three of the other leaders can be nominated. He is not an active candidate, but he can be "drafted" and if there's any of that to be done, he certainly won't refuse. Even the great majority of Republican politicians are only too keen to be rid of.

Herbert Not Idle Analysis Shows.

Analysis of Hoover's strength shows him with New England in his pocket thru his St. Lawrence waterways-power scheme. The east is prone to allys to and if the reported alliance with Parsons Sleep is confirmed the deal will certainly gold its vote for him in the republican convention. The southern delegates, office-holders and corruptionists, swing one fourth of the convention votes. With Hoover's flood relief reputation and Lowden's record help, this solid block of votes is reasonably safe for the secretary of commerce. The Pacific coast is regarded as Hoover, too, along with the mountain states. Only the old-time party doubtful and after Hoover is confirmed in Washington there is that if the farmers could stomach Coolidge still, they can take Hoover easily enough in stride.

Blankets of Silence

THE capitalist press has adopted a new policy in its treatment of the Sacco-Vanzetti case

Already the news of the proposed legal butchery has disappeared from the front page.

The capitalist press hopes to quench the flame of mass protest by a policy of cold silence.

The strategy of the capitalist class will succeed only if the workers permit themselves to be drugged by the prostitute press.

Under these circumstances the drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker, the only American daily newspaper, which is carrying on a real fight for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, assumes a vital importance.

Now as never before we must push our efforts to secure new readers. Now as never before we must convince thousands of workers to read the only paper which gives the truth about the case, the only paper which is attempting to mobilize public sentiment in such a way as to effectively prevent the carrying out of this dastardly crime against the working class.

Gary Passes—but Garyism Remains.

Elbert H. Gary, who died yesterday morning, was for years the most powerful individual in American industrial life, not merely by virtue of his chairmanship of the colossal trust known as the United States Steel Corporation, but because he and his associates were responsible for a labor policy that became definitely associated with his name and known as Garyism.

The blight of Garyism fell heavily upon the American labor movement after the world war and was a reflex of the position of supremacy of American capitalism. Emerging from the world war as the most powerful and arrogant capitalism in the whole world, American capitalism blazed new trails in systematic exploitation. The labor policy of the industrial group around Gary was decisively and viciously anti union. After the great steel strike which, but for the overt treachery of the official American Federation of Labor bureaucracy, would have been successful in establishing a powerful union in the basic steel industry and would have given tremendous impetus to the organization of the other great basic industries, Gary headed the open-shop drive against labor, and developed the present-day labor policy of the dominant industrialists. That policy, briefly stated, is that the American industrialists are so powerful, so invincible, that they can afford to dispense with even the mildest semblance of labor organization. As opposed to Garyism is the official policy of the American labor bureaucracy—Gompersism—as carried out today by the Green, Woll, Sigman, McGrady outfit. Gompersism is that policy directed toward convincing the owners of industry that they need labor leaders to hold the workers in subjection and prevent the labor movement developing along militant lines.

Gompersism says to the master class: "You need us to aid you against the possible development of radicalism in the ranks of labor."

Garyism replies to Gompersism: "We are powerful enough to crush labor without your assistance! We don't even need labor lieutenants!"

Other industrialists, particularly some of the railroads, have attempted to overcome labor organization with company unionism. But certain labor lackeys, of the type of William H. Johnstone, convinced them that the labor "leaders" could abandon trades unionism for company unionism through "peaceful transition."

The policies known as Garyism are being inaugurated in the mining industry of the United States. For a time John L. Lewis and the officials of the United Mine Workers of America waged a fight against this trend. For instance, the mine strike of 1922 was waged for the purpose of convincing the mine owners that they could not get along without Lewis and his gang. As soon as the mine owners were willing to deal with Lewis he brazenly betrayed the rank and file demands. The same performance was repeated by Lewis in the anthracite strike of 1926.

Against both Garyism and Gompersism stands the vanguard of the working class, the Communists, who strive to mobilize the workers for a determined fight against these twin blights, either of which spells defeat and betrayal for the working class.

By relentlessly unmasking the criminal treachery of the labor lieutenants of the capitalist class we pave the way for a real fight against the open shop, the twelve-hour day, the yellow-dog contract and other features of Garyism.

Gary, as an individual is dead, but Garyism still remains and can only be exterminated by the mass power of the working class organized into powerful industrial unions and supporting a political party of labor that also appeals to the exploited and oppressed farmers. In his life Gary was an enemy of society, a class-conscious member of the ever decreasing group of powerful magnates who dominate all of American industry. The reptile press will spill tons of ink and waste millions of reams of paper to publish eulogiums to this exploiter and oppressor of the workers, but we will explode such illusions by emphasizing the fact that all of the millions amassed by this industrial colossus were wrung out of the broken and bleeding and baked bodies of the countless thousands who slaved in the modern inferno before the blast furnaces, in the rolling mills, the tin mills and other branches of the octopus known as the steel corporation.

Gary as an individual played such a small role in the steel corporation at the time of his death that there was but the slightest fluctuation in the stock of the steel corporation. The idea that such corporations are run by powerful individuals is exploded by the fact that the industry goes on just the same the day after he died as it did the day before. Not a wheel slowed up because of his demise, which proves that it is not the Garys and their kind who are the real force in industry, but the workers with hand and brain who make possible all industry, all progress.

The workers, in the course of the struggle, will eventually come to learn that they can get along without Gary and all the other captains of industry much better than they can get along with them, and, as the foremost fighters in the front ranks of the working class, the Communists not only emphasize the immediate tasks, but we strive to direct the movement toward that point where the working class, the class that built all the industries will own and administer them under a workers' and farmers' government.

Los Angeles' Drive Against Labor.

Los Angeles, aside from its earthquakes, is also noteworthy because of its viciously reactionary character in general. For years it has been the hot-bed of the vilest aggregation of scab herders in the whole world. It fears any demonstration on the part of the working class. Its vicious attacks upon the radical movement in an effort to crush the agitation in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti is part of its perpetual drive against labor. It is not that the powers that be in that benighted city are particularly opposed to the Sacco and Vanzetti agitation more than any labor activity but because that agitation impels the working class to action, that the raids were conducted against the headquarters

The War Menace Against the Soviet Union and the German Reformists

By S. PEREVEZNIKOV.

During the last months there was a number of forts pointing to the actual menace of a new imperialist war. The raid on the Soviet embassy at Peking, the blowing-up of the Arcos safes in London, the rupture of Anglo-Soviet relations, and murder of the Soviet ambassador in Warsaw and the semi-acquittal of the murderer all this unmistakably points to the possibility of a bloody solution of the conflict between the country of the toilers and the capitalist world.

And by no means negligible part in this conflict falls to the lot of Hindenburg-ridden Germany. Her convenient geographical position, her famous "knowledge of Russia," her great experience in the conduct of wars in the East, as well as the need of protecting the rear of the future eastern allies of England all this prompts the imperialists to seek not only the neutrality, but also the open participation of Germany on their side.

It is quite obvious that the German working class cannot remain aloof to the development of events in this connection. Considerable portions of it are still swayed by the reformists. In spite of the long chain of open betrayals and cynical backsliding on the part of the reformist leaders, tens of thousands of workers are still in the ranks of the social-democratic party, while the leadership of the free trade unions is still in the hands of the reformists.

In order to lead the masses in the fight for the interests of the bourgeoisie, it is essential for the latter that the war should take the character of a crusade, that they should see in it a struggle for the liberation of the workers. Hence, that they should continue to believe in peace even at a time when economic awakening only when the gang begins to run around them to rear. On the other hand, it would be essential to present the enemy as the aggressive party in the war and guilty in its outbreak. Without such ideological preparation [illegible] the masses have ceased to believe in the peaceful intentions of their own government. The imperialist war danger has ceased to be a subject of popular discussion. The reformists, particularly in Germany, have also ceased to be a factor in the preparation for war.

It is this participation in the preparation for war and the open betrayal of the working class that is the chief difference between the present situation and that of 1912-14, when the social-democracy, although in principle the same social democracy was able to mobilize the masses against the war with words opposed to war.

At the moment of the Locarno conference, when the reformists in the leading circles of the German social-democracy and the German reformist unions signed the guarantee of the status quo and the "spectre of war" only to refer to the League of Nations in which the German bourgeoisie is represented and to which the social-democrats pray that "there could be no talk of any imminent menace to peace" ("Vorwaerts," May 28, 1927).

During this entire period the menace of war, "Vorwaerts" stated upon the next task of working up public opinion against the Soviet Union. After a friendly dance in the Reichstag with the government for its "nervous and intolerable behavior," the organ of the German reformists went on to insinuate against the USSR:

"On the other hand," says "Vorwaerts," "we need not believe Russia to be a poor lamb, so tame and quiet that she will not disturb the water. The Russian methods of espionage and plotting have become a world-wide calamity."

In other words, there is no menace of war, and the blame for the present situation is to be placed not on the British conservatives, but on the "Russian methods." Thus the German social-democracy reacted to the rupture of Anglo-Soviet relations. The same spirit of hostility to the workers' republic, and of anxiety to wholewash the world bourgeoisie and to absolve it of the charge of preparing for war, pervades the comments of the social-democratic press in connection with the murder of Comrade Voikov. In "Vorwaerts" of June 7 we read that the murder of the Soviet ambassador was "an act of individual terror, of individual vengeance," and on the following day the reformist newspaper took up the defense of the Polish government against the "attacks" of the Soviet republic. "The Soviets have no grounds to saddle the Polish government with responsibility for the murder," says "Vorwaerts." And it goes on to pour on the idea of the responsibility of the British tories in the assassination of Soviet representatives.

"The assertion that British diplomacy was acting by means of murder and assassination is nothing but the raving of a feverish imagination." ("Vorwaerts," June 10, 1927.)

On the other hand, the shooting of an imperialist agent, a mere case of self defense of the proletarian state against imperialist plots, turns in the reformist into a scare of fury. After mourning the shooting of "the envoy of Tsarism," which it devotes a leading article under the melodramatic headline of "Tsarism," the organ of the reformists sneers about the "revolutionary" and a la [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TOUR OF SCENES IN CASE SHOW FRAME-UP OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

(This article was delayed one day in transit.)
By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—"I hope Sacco and Vanzetti will be freed. I hope the workers of the world will unite, and thru their protest, save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti."

These words uttered in Italian, and then translated into English, came from the lips of Adeline Fruzzeli, the widow of Giovanni Fruzzeli, one of the first victims of the Wilson-Palmer deportations, who was sent back to Italy in June, 1919, where he died shortly after.

Mrs. Fruzzeli lives with her two sons who run a gas filling station at Scotland Village, one of the many crossroads in eastern Massachusetts thru which ply the heavy traffic between the great industrial centers of shoes, wool, textiles.

The voice of Mrs. Fruzzeli utters the cry of outraged and bludgeoned working class motherhood of Massachusetts, of New England, of the United States, utters it in a voice of pain, much older, but uttering the same cry as the voice of Rosa Sacco, who goes daily to the Charlestown prison, in Boston, to visit her husband, Nicola Sacco, condemned with Bartolomeo Vanzetti to die in the electric chair a week from this Monday midnight.

During this week, it is the thundery of America's working class womanhood taking up the cry of Mrs. Fruzzeli and Mrs. Sacco, that should merge in a mighty, crashing demand for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, a cry irresistible in its strength.

It was under the guidance of Edward Holton James, member of an ancient New England family that has not lost all of its revolutionary spirit, who is a nephew of William James, professor of philosophy at Harvard University, that I visited the places in the vicinity of Boston that have been brought into the limelight by the Sacco-Vanzetti case, now more than seven years in the cells of Norfolk County and the state of Massachusetts, and clamoring at the doors of the federal government itself. Mr. James was sentenced to 75 days in jail for trying to tell the truth about the Sacco-Vanzetti case on Boston Commons, Sunday, August 9. But that has not dampened his ardor in continuing the fight for the liberation of these two persecuted workers.

Visit South Braintree.

We visited the shoe factory in South Braintree, where the payroll holdup used in the frame-up against Sacco and Vanzetti took place; also Bridgewater, where another hold-up was attempted that was pinned on against Vanzetti, and for which he was convicted and received a sentence of 15 years in prison. We spent some time in the Manley Woods, where it is pointed out that an automobile was planted in order to aid the prosecution in its frame-up. We travelled the roads over which the "bandit" cars are alleged to have sped on their way, seeking an escape; also to the Kelly (the Three K's Shoe Factory where Sacco worked, and to their cottage where he lived, and then on to the great shoe town of Brockton, where they were arrested.

Two deep impressions stand out from the seven-hour tour of these scenes of payroll robberies, that swept the section in Massachusetts, as well as the entire land, in the years immediately following the close of the war. One impression is that of flying automobiles, "bandit cars," that swept over unimproved country roads dodging the main highways that pass thru the larger population centers. Experienced hands must have been upon the driving wheels of the cars, both in the South Braintree and in the Bridgewater hold-ups, in addition to well-trained eyes to pick the right direction at every frequent bend revealing new forks and cross-roads.

Proof of Frame-up.

In this connection it must be remembered that neither Sacco nor Vanzetti has ever owned an automobile, they have never had their hands upon the steering wheel of a car, nor have they the least knowledge of how to drive one, and they have little knowledge of the geography of the territory where the hold-ups were perpetrated.

My other impression is of the face patient and toil-worn of Mrs. Fruzzeli, the mother of 10 children, whose husband, Giovanni, was deported to Italy to die after living and working in this country for 25 years, like tens of millions of other foreign-born workers seeking to earn a livelihood for themselves and their families in American capitalist industry.

Fruzzeli's only crime, so far as I could learn was that his name appeared upon the subscription list of the "Comitato Sovversivi" (The Subversive Committee), edited by Luigi Galleani, at Lynn, Mass. Galleani gave his name to the "Galleani terror" of anarchists, by which Sacco and Vanzetti are said to have belong. Of. It was against this Galleani group of anarchists that Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer levelled his bitter attack before the committee on rules of the House of Representatives, on June 1, 1920.

Take "Bomb Scares."

Fruzzeli, Galleani, Coacrio and others who lived in this neighborhood were deported. Agents of the Department of Justice have confessed, however, that they government couldn't get its hands on sufficient evidence to deport either Sacco or Vanzetti. It is claimed that following Galleani's deportation that Carlo Tresca, of New York, took over the leadership of this group. But in spite of every attempt made by the government, during the past eight years to connect this group with the bombings in Wall Street and Washington, with the much-advertized batch of bombs taken in the mails in New York City in May, 1919, Boston, with other "bomb scares," none of the members of the group has been arrested and placed on trial, charged with any connection with these incidents. Carlo Tresca was in Boston last week to join in the demonstration of protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Where it was impossible to depart Sacco and Vanzetti, where it was impossible to charge them with "bomb plots," the government found it possible to frame them up on a charge of being implicated in payroll holdups and, with the thinnest thread of testimony to lash them in the electric chair, where they hang in another week to send them to death.

South Braintree Visited.

The bullet holes are still to be seen thru the stained, wired glass windows of the shoe factory of Slater and Morrill. They are the sole reminders of the shooting that took place here in South Braintree, April 15, 1920, more than seven years ago. Those shots, however, have been heard around the entire world because the government, instead of seeking out the real criminals, the members of the Morelli gang of freight car thieves and payroll bandits, who have been active in Braintree, used the incident to frame up the two workers, Sacco and Vanzetti.

The theory of the "fatal bullet," that is one of the bullets removed from the body of Berardelli, the murdered payroll guard, was fired from the gun that Nicola Sacco was carrying when he was arrested on the night of May 5, 1920, in Brockton, has been thoroly shot to pieces. No reputable gun expert has been found who will swear to this testimony, and Judge Thayer, himself, passed on as a fact to the jury that brought in the death chair verdict.

Bandit Car Wastes No Time.

We saw the spot where the bandit car was parked, a little to the east downhill from the factory, awaiting the appearance of the bookkeeper and his guard with the two bags containing the $15,000 payroll. They appeared, two bandits began shooting, the car immediately began moving uphill, the money boxes were thrown into it, the two bandits jumped into the car, and they were off, over the tracks of the New Haven Railroad, and down the Holbrook Road leading to Holbrook, dropping a ruin of tacks on the road as they went. It will be remembered that on the identification of Sacco and Vanzetti as the murderers, 95 witnesses testified for the two workers, only 59 for the prosecution. The testimony of every material witness of the state of Massachusetts, as to identification, has been completely shattered.

Perhaps the individual, so far as I could see as we covered the ground, who could have proved the best identification witness for the state, was Mario Vangie, the gate tender of the New Haven Railroad, on duty at the time only a short distance from where the shooting and the robbery took place. Le Vangie did not come forward until long after the shooting, as an identification witness.

At the gate house, he was brought toward noon by the bandit car that drove up to the crossing just as he was lowering the gate. He said that a man inside the car forced him, at the point of a revolver, to let them thru before the advancing train.

Le Vangie identified Vanzetti as the man, when it has already been proved that Vanzetti does not know how to drive an automobile, and has never touched a steering wheel.

But Le Vangie's testimony was further discredited by the testimony of McCarthy, a locomotive fireman of the New Haven, who testified that three-quarters of an hour after the bandit car had passed, he heard what is something akin to a report, by them that before the advancing train.

Le Vangie identified Vanzetti as the man, when it has already been proved that Vanzetti does not know how to drive an automobile, and has never touched a steering wheel.

But Le Vangie's testimony was further discredited by the testimony of McCarthy, a locomotive fireman of the New Haven, who testified that three-quarters of an hour after the bandit car had passed, he heard what is something akin to a report, by them that before the advancing train.

"Some one shot?" I says. "What?" He says, 'Some one's fellow got murdered.' I said, 'Who did it?' He says he didn't know.

I asked him if he knew them. He said, no, he did not. I asked him if he would know them again if he saw them. He said no. He said all he could see was the gun, and he ducked."

Moreover, Le Vangie was discredited by all the other identification witnesses on both sides, who insisted that the driver of the car was a young small light-haired man, whereas, Vanzetti is middle-aged, dark, with a black moustache.

On the whole, the alibi for Vanzetti was overwhelming. Thirty-one eyewitnesses testified positively that none of the men that they saw in the murder car was Vanzetti. Thirteen witnesses either testified directly that Vanzetti was in Plymouth selling fish on the day of the murder or furnished corroboration of said testimony. Similarly for Sacco. He was shown to be in the Italian consul's office in Boston on this day getting a passport to go to Italy.

It is the story of Colonial Massacre, who says he was a member of the Morelli gang, that the car committed the robbery, and that in Middleboro I was in the back seat of the car as it sped away.

We followed the trail of the bandit car. More successfully than did the police, however. While the bandit car quickly left the Holbrook Road at the Union Ice Co. plant, the police car, that was followed, continued straight on to Holbrook, taking some time to discover its mistake, altho, when the police returned to the Union Ice Co. they found a man standing there who had seen the bandit car take the turn. The police had not stopped to ask him in the first place, if anyone else had taken the road in the direction of the bandits.

From then on the trail of the bandits led them unfrequented roads, every inhabitant being that the bandits were trying to make their way toward Providence, R. I. Mr. James, who has made a study of the bandit car's route, declares that no car that could have given at least three week's preparation to the hold-up. The last seen of the bandit car, according to the testimony of the police, was the road thru the woods, near North Stoughton. The defense urges that the bandits came from Providence in a Hudson car; that they picked up the Italian car in which the robbery was committed in the North Stoughton woods; that they returned to the North Stoughton woods and changed back to the Hudson car, one of the gang not engaged in the robbery driving the Buick.

Where Sacco Lived.

It was while going over this ground that we came to South Stoughton, where "The Three K," or Kelly Shoe Factory is located. It was here that Nicola Sacco worked, and lived in factory hands. South Stoughton is a mere spot on the map. The factory stands alone on a knoll, a monument to the effort of the shoe industry to take their factories out of the great cities, where the workers are better able to get together and fight in their own interests. It was shortly after twelve o'clock, everyone was home eating dinner, and the factory was locked. The cottage where Sacco lived with Rosa, his wife, and Dante, his son, could be seen from the main road, in the rear of the Kelly main-

Justice Department Call Organizer of Union "Agitator"

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 15.—In the eyes of the department of justice, trade union organizers are "outside agitators." That is the term used to describe John M. Parker and Robert M. Armstrong, organizers for the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes (the street car men's union).

The department is fighting Parker and Armstrong's efforts to have the supreme court set aside an Indiana federal court ruling holding them in contempt of court. The notorious federal judge Baltzell enjoined them from organizing Indianapolis street car men, and when they proceeded with their work, were thrown into jail for contempt of court.

The case is highly important, involving the right of union men to attempt to organize workers in the face of a federal injunction. The department of justice is conducting the fight against the organizers.

Communists Swamp S-D Candidates In German Cooperative Election

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—At the elections to the delegate meeting for the consumers' cooperative society of the Mersburg-Querfurt district, the Social Democrats suffered a serious defeat. They thought that because they control the trade unions they could also depend on victory at the cooperative elections. But they were, however, bitterly disappointed. The Communist candidates polled 1,479 votes (42 representatives), and the Social Democrats (and only 452 votes (14 representatives).

ABRAHAM I. SHIPLACOFF WANTS SHOP CHAIRMEN TO SUPPORT HIM IN TAXING THE WORKERS

(By a Group of Progressive Workers)

The Shiplacoff-Walinsky clique keeps the membership of our union under the iron heel. Physical, economical and spiritual terror are used by this clique as a means to hold power.

The best and most devoted members of the union were suspended because they dared to take a stand against their shameful and criminal acts. Whoever holds an independent opinion about union affairs is suppressed in a most brutal manner. In short, a handful of officials, turned the union into their private property, the membership into their own slaves who must submit to their will without resistance.

Waited For Opportunity.

The members suffered and watchfully waited for an opportune moment to organize the discontent brewing for a long time.

The indifference of our members was broken by the shameful insolence and undemocratic effort in trying to squeeze from our hard earnings over a quarter of a million dollars in the form of a $60 tax.

Our members at the Rand School meeting jeered Shiplacoff when they learned of the $60 tax recommendation and took the whole proposition as a joke.

But the administration was determined to have its way and immediately called a second meeting in Cooper Union. But the officials got scared when the faced such a large membership in Cooper Union, and they again postponed the tax question through a trick by breaking up the question in two. First buying a building, than tax. The members voted down the recommendation to buy a building. But the chairman declared that a majority was for it, thus ignoring the will of the membership.

Against Buying Building.

The opinion of our membership is against buying a building and paying taxes. It is the conviction of the members that our unions income from due and initiation fees amounting to about $130,000 per year is enough to cover all the regular expenses, and thousands of dollars should even then remain.

Shiplacoff has feverishly thrown himself in the work of helping Sigman and Hillquit ready in their program upon the furriers and cloakmakers. It is for this purpose and for no other that Shiplacoff and his clique are determined to force upon us this 50% tax.

Shiplacoff's calling a shop chairman meeting for today to get their approval of the holdup tax. In the meeting beginning the shop chairmen were ignored altogether. The administration feeling the wealth of the membership is now trying to drag in the shop chairman as partner in their hold up scheme.

Brother, Shop Chairmen!

You are the direct representatives of those who work in the factories. It is your duty to express the wish and will of the members whom you represent. The members are against any form of tax.

Your answer to the administration at the shop chairmen meeting must be clear and definite.

You must say. "Run our Union upon a sound economic basis. Don't squander our hard-earned pennies in such scandalous manner. The members do not want any taxes."

Sisters and Brothers instruct, the shop chairmen not to become partners with the administration in its hold-up scheme.

Sixty-five Captured, $1,000,000 in Booze Seized in Big Raid

Sixty-five prisoners were taken, the lake steamer Ansonin and six trucks were seized, and thousands of cases of liquor were taken by police and the Coast Guard, co-operating in a huge rum haul when a landing party was surprised at the old Downey shipyard, Mariner's Harbor, Staten Island.

Coast guard officers valued the confiscated liquor at $1,000,000.

Thirty-nine of the prisoners were, taken on land, when Patrolman Ferdinand Baurier, who discovered the rum runners, and eight members of the emergency squad surrounded them at the shipyard.

Davis Bomb Story Shown As Fake; Man Seen In Basement of Next House

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 15.—Wide publicity has been given a report of an attempted bombing of the home of Secretary of Labor Davis, who has been calling for another red hunt against foreign-born workers. The facts as disclosed by District police, are that a man was seen in the basement of a house 30 yards from the secretary's residence and separated from it by dense woods.

The man was carrying no bomb, according to the watchman who saw him. But that didn't keep the press from using the headline, "Bomb Suspect Discovered Near Davis' Home."

Bare Tammany Hall Extortion In the Polo Grounds Concession

How Tammany Hall allows its friends to collect petty graft at the Polo Grounds has just come to light.

Charles Mahoney, a democratic party supporter with the approval of Walter E. Herrick, park commissioner, demands 25 to 50 cents from every automobile owner who parks his car outside of the grounds.

Altho he admitted that he has no written permit, Mahoney forces the drivers to come across with their pieces of change. For this privilege he does not pay any fee to the city.

The large police force present assist Mahoney. Policemen direct the cars into the streets that Mahoney uses for his "garage." The police, however, have nothing to do with the collection of fees, which, however, goes on right under their eyes.

"It is true that this is rity property," vouchsafed Sergeant Francis Campbell, of the West 157th street police station, "and that I am here with my men to keep order, but I have been given to understand that Mahoney has some sort of permission from the Park Department. I am only here temporarily. I found the system here when I came and I saw no reason for questioning its authority. The order for any change would have to come from others."

Despite Mahoney's statement that he held his "proposition" by consent of Park Commissioner Herrick, it was reported on good authority from another quarter that he derived this highly lucrative but inexpensive "concession" from the influence of his friend, Joseph J. McCormick, Deputy Chief City Clerk and Tammany leader of the 22d Assembly District, in which this reservation is situated.

Will Fight Move to End Bus Lines in New York

The city has been served with an order of mandamus to compel it to discontinue bus lines in different sections. It has been issued by Justice Cropsey in supreme court, Brooklyn.

In issuing the order, Justice Cropsey said that an appeal by the city from his decision would act as a stay and allow discontinuance of the bus lines. The city will appeal.

ENDICOTT LABOR DEMONSTRATION FREES SPEAKERS

ENDICOTT, N. Y., Aug. 17.—When the workers in the Endicott Johnson Factory in Endicott tried to hold a protest meeting, the assistant police chief of the "E. J." came to the speaker, Herbert Benjamin District Organizer of the Workers Party, and told him he could not speak on the "E. J." property.

When Benjamin told the fire chief that the president of the company would not allow anybody to hold a mass meeting on his property the chief got sore and called for the chief of police. The police also tried to make Benjamin stop speaking. Benjamin still refused to stop, then the policeman yanked him off the bench that he was speaking on and took him down the street.

When the workers, who numbered over 500, saw what happened, they followed the speakers down the street with their banners up over their heads. The police seeing that all the workers were following the speakers took the banners and tore them to pieces.

This made the workers furious. They all jeered and yelled at the police. The crowd now numbered about four thousand. One of the workers who refused to leave was taken into custody. The chairman of the meeting, and Benjamin and another worker were also taken into custody. The furious mob then followed the speakers and the workers, who were taken by the police to the police station. When the workers tried to get near the police station they were met with a stream of water which the firemen turned on them to break up the crowd. This made the workers still more furious and they yelled much louder.

The police, seeing they could not break up the crowd with one hose, quickly attached another one at the opposite corner.

Even this could not make the crowd break up so the police let Benjamin and the other workers out.

This lasted for about two and a half hours before they released them. When the hose was put away and the workers all followed the police outside of the village limits. Comrade Benjamin and Simenko addressed the crowd in English and Italian. After the meeting, which was peaceful, the workers marched back into town feeling quite satisfied with what the speakers had said during the demonstration for the day with the workers all feeling they will strike again for Sacco and Vanzetti if they do not get a reprieve.

Accused Two In Liquor Raid

NEW ROCHELLE, Aug. 15.—Following a spectacular raid by local police on a liquor joint which resulted in the arrest of two men and the confiscation of alleged liquor estimated to be worth $50,000.

Again, the car was driven away after having driven the bandit car, when he does not know has to run an automobile. Again he was said to have been smooth shaven, when he has always worn a long, black moustache.

But the facts are of little concern when the capitalist state is seeking the lives of its enemies—the workers struggling for a better day. That is the only conclusion we could reach as we came to Scotland Village, where lived Adeline Fruzzeli, the white-haired Italian mother, with her two sons, her husband dead, deported from the United States of America that prides itself on its liberty, or of shrove them in prisons at home.

In conclusion, as in the beginning, with the declaration of mother, widowed by American capitalism, Mrs. Fruzzeli said:

"I hope Sacco and Vanzetti are freed. I hope the protest of world labor will save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti."

Boston Capmakers Plan Celebration Saturday of Their 40-Hour Victory

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE ruling class professes to be very much troubled about how the workers will spend their spare time when the workday is shortened.

Judge Elbert H. Gary, the steel trust head, who died on Monday morning, used as one of his arguments in favor of the 12-hour day, "that it would keep the workers out of mischief."

In the days before prohibition was supposed to have dried up the saloons, it was charged that the shorter workday would ensure workers to spend more time around the grogshops. In fact, the fewer the hours of labor, the worse for labor, in the eyes of the "open shop" exploiters.

* * *

This propaganda even captured the minds of large numbers of workers, who feared that a shorter workday meant lower wages, helping in part to cripple the effort for the shorter day of toil. Nevertheless, the movement has made progress.

It is significant that this Saturday afternoon, the progressives in the Capmakers' Union, in Boston, are planning to play host to all the progressives in the needle trades in the metropolis of Fuller, Thayer and the other would-be murderers of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, at a 40-hour week celebration to be held at Camp Nitgedeiget, near Franklin, Mass.

The Capmakers' Union this spring won the 40-hour week in Boston. The progressive capmakers believe that the 40-hour week can be won by all the other workers in the needle trades, so they are trying to get them together this Saturday, to talk it over and plan for this new advance on the industrial battlefield.

Camp Nitgedeiget (Don't Worry) is itself the best answer to the employers' fraudulent dread that the workers will not know what to do with their spare time.

The 40-hour, five-day week means Saturday off, as well as Sunday. It means one more day in the open. Another day to recuperate from the ravages of toil, that makes the worker victim of the many occupational diseases that hover like buzzards seeking their prey about every industry.

Camp Nitgedeiget, perched on one of the highest spots in the entire state of Massachusetts, looking off over Lake Uncas, and giving an eye-resting view of faraway hills, is born out of conditions arising from two days' rest in seven.

It is 28 miles in the automobiles go, from the prison cells that hold Sacco and Vanzetti, to Camp Nitgedeiget. But there is a closer relation, because Sacco and Vanzetti sought to win some of the joys of recreation and education, that "The Camp" makes possible, for the less favored, the unorganized workers in the great New England industries of Shoes and Textiles.

If 28 miles close relation as I journeyed from Boston to "The Camp" to become one of the speakers at last Sunday's celebration of the progress that "The Camp" has made.

* * *

Camp Nitgedeiget is the first effort of the United Workers' Cooperative Association that was brought into being at a conference of 20 workers' organizations held Dec. 27, 1925, in Boston. Less than four months later "The Camp" was opened, on June 19th. It now has more than 100 members drawn from the Workers' (Communist) Party, many trade unions, the Workmen's Circle and other Jewish organizations.

There are 52 acres in all, with 27 acres of lake and the rest among food producing woods, strong scented with evergreens.

During the summer many workers have come to Camp Nitgedeiget and given voluntarily of their labor, in the construction of spacious and comfortable cottages, in the clearing away of timber, in the building of roads, in performing the multitude of tasks that transform a wild place in the open into a comfortable place of recreation for thousands. It was estimated that 2,000 visited "The Camp" last Sunday, many to remain thruout the week.

Meyer Hirshberg, chairman of the board of directors, presided at the day's program. For the purpose of gatherings of this kind, a stage has been erected high on a rock, to be faced on one side by a natural amphitheater. Israel Amter spoke on behalf of the Jewish Bureau of the Workers (Communist) Party; S. H. Levine, for The Freiheit; Sol Friedman, for Workmen's Circle, No. 78; Fanny Aisser, secretary, for the Mothers' League, while Sarah Pel Yelin, read the camp hymn, "Nitgedeiget," that has been set to music by Harry Rosen, who is graduating out of "The Pioneers" into the Young Workers League.

I brought the greetings of the Workers (Communist) Party and of The DAILY WORKER. The message was warmly greeted, altho perhaps the majority of those in attendance were non-party members. But they were close sympathizers. The day's attendance was considered a triumph in view of the fact that the right wingers have established a camp of their own, and had exerted considerable effort to draw a large crowd to their opening on this day.

It was not difficult to impress upon this audience the necessity of participation in the co-operative movement generally. They were convinced co-operators.

Yet they were happy to hear of the role the co-operative movement is playing in the reconstruction era in the Union of Soviet Republics. On the other hand, I pointed out that under Mussolini, in Italy, the co-operative movement, as well as the trade unions and the party, had been outlawed by fascism.

The camp experience—the bona fide co-operative movement of the working class, and already Camp Nitgedeiget has been raised by the bloodhounds of the Thayer-Fuller plundered and, hunting for evidence with which to discredit labor's militants, especially in the needle trades unions.

* * *

It was serene—one of the long tables of the huge dining room that Tagani met William Seligman, chairman of Capmakers' Local Union No. 7, who had spent last Tuesday in company with Jacob Miller, president of the union, in the custody of the police. Seligman and Miller had been charged by the police with being implicated in thy bomb blasts in New York City. The police had followed them and then considered a "hot trail" to "The Camp," where Miller and Seligman had spent the previous Sunday. It is declared they found two sticks of dynamite, caps etc. used in blasting stumps and building roads.

* * *

Suffice it to say that every capitalist sheet in Boston had to back down on its lies and apologize thru its columns for the lies that had been spread. Thus we find on the front page of The Boston Post, for instance, Friday, August 12, the headline:

"NO KNOWLEDGE OF BOMB PLOT; YOUNG MEN INVOLVED OF ANY CONNECTION"

Then on more than a quarter of a column "The Post" tells out that the police officials had satisfied them-

Ten Days in the Workhouse

By REBECCA GRECHT.

PART II.

A FAIRLY large room with a smaller one adjoining. A cement floor. Several barred windows, through which on one side could be seen the East River, and on the other a welcome vision of grass and trees. And beds, beds, beds—iron cots, one right next to the other, with not even walking space between. This constituted the quarters of the imprisoned fur pickets in the Workhouse for Women.

We were greeted with cries of joy by a group of comrades who had been given a 3-day sentence the day before, and were already occupying the room. They had been expecting us since morning. Men prisoners, under guard, had been setting up iron cots all day, for the additional guests.

All Together.

How glad we were to find ourselves all together, instead of in separate cells. What mattered it that our two rooms had twice as many inmates as they should have had, even under prison rules, or that we had to climb over other beds to get to our own? Were we not all comrades? That word seemed especially dear to us, then.

The situation was not so terrible, after all. We could survive it. It was really entirely up to us—how we reacted. And at the most, we'd be confined only for ten days. Militants have endured far more than that, as penalty for their activity in the battle against capitalist exploitation.

These thoughts could be read on the faces of our comrades, as we examined our "property"—a bed, with three blankets, one as a covering and two in place of a mattress; a small straw pillow; some aluminum utensils for our food; a piece of soap; a hand towel to be shared by two or three comrades.

Queer Food.

We did not have time or energy to investigate our surroundings more closely. We were hungry, and our only concern, for the moment, was to get food. We had arrived after the supper hour, but the matrons were gracious enough to give us our introduction to prison fare that night. Two slices of white bread, half-baked, with a strange, unpainful lic flavor, a plate of spaghetti in a thinly fat-congealed, regulate to look at and worse to eat, and some muddy tea—that was supper.

Shall we ever forget that tea? It was the puzzle of the workhouse. We held a conference to decide what it contained, how it could be so filled. It might have been dish water. Possibly, in the far distant past, its chief ingredient may have resembled a tea leaf. The label of the box from which it was poured to contain may have once been a fine actuality, some from a real chest of the Orient, but now, by the time it had undergone the many changes it must have undergone, it never came to any resemblance.

Suffice it to say that none of us drank it, that night. Many of us never saw the inside of it.

Then Darkness.

At nine o'clock the lights were turned out. And much was to happen, no doubt, as we sleep on either side of the lights, that we, in our weariness, could not know.

The first morning, for us, there was a consultation. Some of the girls were hoping that they'd be paid for their work while in the workhouse and would thus have enough money to buy food on Monday. The rest of us, all workers to serve 10 days or more, knew that this hope was futile. We had heard of efforts to obtain some system of pay, but not organized. We had to establish a firm feeling of comradeship, or the difficulties of the workhouse and interference of life might cause us, naturally enough, to vent our dissatisfaction upon one another. And we were determined to keep up our spirits and courage.

Organization.

We called all the comrades together, spoke about the situation, and elected a committee of nine, to take charge of our little community.

The first matter we took up was the question of food. The supply of the night before, the morning's breakfast of a bit of cereal, watery milk, and sugarless coffee, had made us realize what a problem that would be. Therefore, we said, you must forget about all the good things you ate before. Forget that you liked your mother's cooking, or your own, or the restaurant meals you may be accustomed to. We must keep up our strength, and not weaken ourselves physically. Let us try to eat everything as much as we can.

And try we did. Gradually the food line lengthened, when meal time came around. The beans, the watery soup, the mashed potatoes, all very highly seasoned with pepper to obliterate the taste of what had been put into the pot, the lack of meat, sometimes sickeningly sweet, sometimes hard as wood, the dry bread and spaghetti all of this we learned to eat. Some even began to drink the "tea" welcome after a constant diet of starch. But a few, up to the last, ate nothing but bread, a boiled potato, and a little milk. The absence of butter, one long fruit and crackers. On Sundays they felt out commissary slips, and on Thursdays they receive their orders. We arrived late Thursday afternoon. We had just missed commissary. We spoke to the matrons, asking whether an exception could be made in our case, as otherwise we would have to subsist on prison food only for a full week. And our girls might become ill. It is up to the warden, we were told. We asked them to speak to him. We sent him a note. We requested an interview. We got no reply. His majesty, the warden of the workhouse, whose hobbies, we were informed, were dinners and banquets and card parties, and whose table overflowed with all good things, including certain stimulating and soothing delights, could make no exceptions for such lawless individuals as strikers. This was prison, and we were criminals. That settled the matter. We waited a week for our fruit, and then—But of that later.

Health Endangered.

We investigated our surroundings. Our quarters were called the Annex. Next to us was the Special Ward. Here were supposed to be first-timers, and those not suffering from any venereal disease—street walkers, keepers of houses of prostitution, pickpockets, drunkards, young ones, old ones, all together. Upstairs were separate cells. What mattered it that our two rooms had twice as many inmates as they should have had, even under prison rules, or that we had to climb over other beds to get to our own? Were we not all comrades? That word seemed especially dear to us, then.

The situation was not so terrible, after all. We could survive it. It was really entirely up to us—how we reacted. And at the most, we'd be confined only for ten days. Militants have endured far more than that, as penalty for their activity in the battle against capitalist exploitation.

The Blood of Martyrs

By M. J. OLGIN.

Translated from the Freiheit by Joseph N. Katz.

THEY are spilling our blood.

They squeeze it out with iron presses in the iron factories; they let it drip—pitch-black streamlets—in coal catacombs; they suck it into delicate silks, expensive paints, caressing furs, beauty, splendor.

They stand over our heads with a whip woven of hunger, fear, desperation. They pelt our bodies with thorns of shame, contempt and hatred. They stand up a golden mummy among us and say: "Bow! Kiss the fat paw! Burn incense for the wide-opened mouth!"

When we say "No," they call the executioners.

Adorned with things showy are the executioners. Velvety-soft the clean hands. Clear oil the round words. Pious the mien, holy the sigh. "In the name of Justice. In the name of Equality. In the name of God almighty, we put you down on the block, and for your own good, in order that you should no more be able to sin, we cut asunder for your rebellious neck. Amen. Amen."

In the name of Right. In the name of Democracy.

A WIND blows. A quiet evening falls down upon fruit-laden fields. Rivulets murmur. Somewhere sings a grill. Somewhere smells a rose. Above lies a wide blue sky. In their death-house wait two comrades. In their grave-house count two comrade the remaining minutes. One turns for the last time with death-scorched lips to the brother workers of the whole world. One weaves yet from gall and irony an unfinished curse. A large, bony hand reaches out, grips them around, chokes, chokes....

In large libraries, among old, heavy hands, with clean mind and quiet heart, sit the learned executioners. Beautiful is the world. God is just. Godly is the sentence. The will of the rulers be done.

Hey, you, overworked, farighted, wake up!

You, iron-smelters of Gary, lift up your eyes from the inferno, wipe the sweat from the burned brows, look about!

You, copper-diggers from Montana, straighten out your bent spines, let down your heavy axes, which drill the belly of the earth, listen!

You, gum-spillers of Akron, turn away your faces from the hot, bad-smelling stuffs, catch the pain-racked breath, ask: what's happening?

You, weavers of Lawrence, stop the devilish-hastening machines, go out of the overheated torture chambers, talk things over!

You, railway-machinists over the length and breadth of the mighty land, Catch the news, that carries itself from near and far, conclude, understand its meaning;

You, workers of steel and wood, of linen and stone, of meat and pitch, of oil and coal and cotton and leather and gold and tin, you who work upon the ground and under the water and in the woods and over the houses and in the bellies of the heavy-steam ships, who build the mighty lines from the icefield Canadian woods to the blue Caribbean waters, from the eternally feverish New York to the dreamy, flower-woven San Diego and far over the ocean—Alaska and further, you all tortured, drudge, never-sick bread eaters, with feet stepped upon, by his mind forgotten book adorn what is done with you. For a word of truth shows they send your brothers to death. For not wishing to make peace with your slavery they slaughter those fighters. Insolent, haughty, brutal, like all grave-diggers the lead upon the chair the state attorneys—Fuller's, the rulers of your municipium?

Hey, you, slaves, you are already feel that you are the strong ones who by strength can stand against you, if you only will.

SACCO VANZETTI. Brothers martyrs! Like the first birds of spring they announce the joy of battle. Fighters' hearts, that are unquenchable, dauntless, indifference. You have drop by drop, given away the warm blood of your love-full heart and life now beginning to ruddy.

Sacco! Vanzetti! Your names have been brought to the edge of the grave, in an hour of history when the whip wields, the soulless loaf and the appetite grows.

And loosely hang the cords of the masses and you don't feel how the cords are wound around the yellow gold of plunder and shine grinds his teeth and taunts at the world.

Sacco! Vanzetti! We have done and do all, that we can and we the, that the seeling the forward-going, the unbroken courage, the unbending will of your blood.

Sacco! Vanzetti! We swear! By your martyrdom do we swear to hold fast the flag, to go daringly forward, to awaken the fall in a, to unite the divided, to make seeing the blind, to give strength, to lift a dot.

Sacco! Vanzetti! And for nothing is your sacrifice. Upon good ground fell the seeds of your work. There will come a day. The face will arise. A brother will recognize a brother. The hand will close. Revenge will come. Freedom will come!

So we could forget about "the plot," for the time being, and discuss the 40-hour week celebration that the progressive needle trades workers will celebrate at Camp Nitgedeiget this Saturday. "The Camp" preaches the struggle of labor; the struggle that the exploiters fear.

Incidentally an important section of "The Camp" has been set aside and is fully occupied by "The Pioneers." Even the youthful reserves of the working class, thru education as well as recreation, are being trained for the big efforts of labor ahead.

Katie, a Miner's Child

By VERA BUCH.

Katie Vratrics, 9½ years old, is the daughter of an anthracite coal miner. She is little, thin, and quick, with gray eyes dancing in her thin little face that has such a roguish smile. Her parents came from Jugoslavia, in southern Europe, but she, Katie, was born in green, noble, free America. So great that it lets Katie and her brothers grow up in a large, ugly little shack, bitter cold in winter. So noble that it allows her father to work deep down inside the earth, in the dark, dangerous mine, where more workers are killed or injured by accidents than in any other country in the world. So free, that when the boss fines one from his spies that Katie's father belongs to the Workers' Party, he is at once fired from his job and often, before he can find another, is out of work a long time, and then there is not enough to eat in the house.

In summer, Katie runs with the other children on the coal flats. There she is perfectly happy. She's found, in a torn dress, [illegible] home at night black as a coal miner's, and must get scrubbed with [illegible] force she can get to it. Higher [illegible] mountains are the coal heaps, the playground of the miners' children. They belong to the colliery which is only a few steps from Katie's home. Sometimes Katie rummages to slip into the breakers, that great, black, noisy building, towering into the sky, where the coal is crushed. Here she stands wide-eyed and silent amid the din, watching the rushing streams of black, shining coal. So near is the forward [illegible] Soon she'll tell colliery to their home, that day and night they can hear its loud noises, like the roaring of the sea. Only Katie at night, hears nothing, she falls asleep the minute she tumbles down on the feather tick on the floor where she sleeps with her three brothers.

Some days, she goes with her mother, carrying a pail, to help pick coal. That is a hard job for big [illegible]

EX-SOLDIER DEMANDS JUSTICE FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI IN BOSTON

He Is Jailed for His Audacity in Urging That Two Workers "Must Not Die!"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

"WE WERE SUPPOSED TO HAVE FOUGHT FOR JUSTICE! GIVE JUSTICE TO SACCO AND VANZETTI! THEY MUST NOT DIE!"

• • •

These words, emblazoned on a placard where all could see, brought Morris William Gurkin, an ex-soldier, of Schenectady, N. Y., into the nervous but hungry grip of the Boston police.

It was only after a three-day hunger strike that he was released on bail, being held on two charges, for carrying a placard without a permit and wearing a soldier's uniform illegally.

The fact that Gurkin wore his uniform, long after he had been discharged from the service, was not the real crime, however, that bothered the police. The police said they would gladly let him go, if he would only tell the judge he was sorry that he came to Boston, to join in the "Death March" about the Charlestown Prison, Wednesday midnight, August 10, the hour of the proposed execution last week of Sacco and Vanzetti.

But Gurkin told them all, from judge to jailer, that he was proud of what he could do to help save Sacco and Vanzetti, and it only bothered him that he could not do more.

Gurkin Leaves, Schenectady.

Gurkin had no intention of crashing thru the capitalist law. He wanted to display his placard in Schenectady on his way to the railroad station, going to the commissioner of public safety and the chief of police seeking a permit for this purpose.

The refused to give him the permit, advising him instead to go back home. They questioned him about "bombs," especially in New York

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty

THERE is one person at least who gained nothing from biting the hand that guided his military career, and that man is Chiang-Kai-Shek. He has been deposed as commander-in-chief of the Nanking army and forced to take himself completely out of the nationalist movement, such as it is now, with the right wing in control. Before Chiang listened to the siren call of the imperialists and deserted the revolution he was going thru the northern troops like a dagger thru a cheese, but no sooner had he turned against the radical elements that supplied the nationalist revolution with its dynamic power than things began to happen to him.

• • •

THE Shanghai correspondent of the New York Evening Post, commenting on Chiang's downfall says: "An interesting comment on the situation is to the effect that Chiang-Kai-Shek lost every battle fought since Rolland, his personal Russian adviser left him." Chiang complained loudly and bitterly of Communist interference, meaning the advice of Soviet military and political advisers but as soon as he broke with this "interference" his end arrived.

• • •

THE departure of Chiang from the scene makes possible a union between the Hankow and Nanking forces. But since both elements are hostile to the revolutionary elements, led by the Communists, this unity will bode no good to the workers and peasants and will be an ineffective against the northern militarists as was Chiang's short-lived regime. Only a movement that bases itself on the needs of the workers and peasants can hope for success in China.

PAINTER DYING FROM BULLET OF BOSSES' GUNMEN

Shot by heavily armed gangsters in the employ of building contractors yesterday, Frank Titelbaum, striking painter, 17 Tapscott street, Brooklyn, is lying at the point of death in the Kings County Hospital. Surgeons found a bullet that had entered his left lung and said they held out little hope for his recovery.

When about 15 strikers started to picket at Ave. I and Flatbush Ave. more than a dozen guards attacked them. The workers were peacefully marching up and down the street with signs announcing the strike when they were suddenly assaulted. During the melee one of the strike-breakers and one guard was injured.

The guards and strikebreakers fired wantonly into the crowd.

DEPUTY SHERIFF AND RIGHT WING RAID JOINT DEFENSE COMMITTEE

Militant Workers Brutally Beaten Up By Thugs Of the International

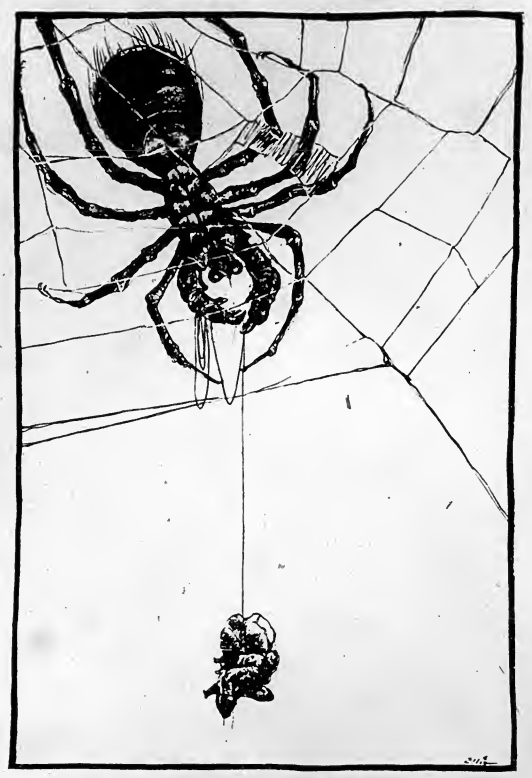
Entering the office of the Joint Defense Committee, 41 Union Square yesterday morning with an illegal warrant, Deputy Sheriff E. Plunkett took away a large amount of the office furniture. Before leaving, he set about to dismantle the entire office, throwing files around and generally wrecking the place. The furniture was taken away on the identification of Phil Rubin of the dues department and the janitor of the right wing Joint Board building.

In the midst of the illegal removal of the furniture, Joseph R. Brodsky and Philip Wattenberg, attorneys of the Defense Committee appeared. They demanded that Plunkett show them the warrant. Hesitatingly he allowed them to examine it. After a careful examination Brodsky branded it as illegal.

Refused To Make Arrest.

Brodsky demanded that Police Sergeant 212, who was present with two patrolmen, arrest the sheriff and the plaintiffers on a civil and criminal charge of entering the premises without a proper warrant.

The police were thunderstruck, but refused to make the arrests. The warrant was bonded at $2,500. The furniture covered is not worth more than $300.



Joseph R. Brodsky in commenting on the case said he "intended suing the parties involved."

Try To Disorganize Work.

Ludwig Landy, manager of the Joint Defense, said: "This is a move of the right wing in their efforts to break the splendid defense work being carried on. Our comrades in prison and in the shops will answer

The poisonous spider of capitalism is busy drawing Sacco and Vanzetti into its net.

SACCO, VANZETTI PROTESTS IN TWO HUNDRED CITIES PLANNED BY THE INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE

CHICAGO, Aug. 16—A new wave of mass protests and demonstrations on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti of a greater scope and intensity than ever before is indicated in telegraphic reports that are being received by the national office of the International Labor Defense from its local organizations thruout the country as well as from defense organizations abroad.

The days remaining between now and August 22nd, the date set for the execution, will be marked by continuous activity and agitation.

Prepare for Strikes.

In most cases, the new demonstrations begin on Thursday and will continue thereafter, being developed wherever possible toward strikes on the twenty-second.

An illustration of the intensified activity and determination of the militant workers for Sacco and Vanzetti is contained in the report from the anthracite coal field district that thirty meetings, three parades, and several strikes are being organized.

Just before the last reprieve eleven locals officially declared strikes involving over ten thousand miners, despite the prohibitory rulings of Cappellini, president of District One.

The reports from Minneapolis state that "the twin cities are being swept by mass protests against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Huge street meetings being held every night. Monster demonstrations are being arranged for St Paul on Saturday and Minneapolis on Sunday with Walter Liggett and Paul Crouch as the principal speakers. Mass demands are being made for the opening of the department of justice files and hundreds of telegrams are being sent to President Coolidge."

Reports from other centers all tell practically the same story, of energetic activity and militant

TURN ON THE LIGHT!

The capitalist press is gradually pushing the news of Sacco and Vanzetti into the background. There is good reason for this. The capitalist bloodhounds of Massachusetts dread the white light of publicity. They intend to carry out the cold-blooded murder of our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, under cover of the silence of the capitalist press, within the dark walls of Charlestown jail.

But fortunately there is one newspaper that will fearlessly keep the light burning, a paper that has thrown open wide its columns to spread before the public eye the full details of the horrible crime, which the state of Massachusetts is about to perpetrate. The DAILY WORKER is in this fight with all the power and resources at its command.

Will you help us fight the powers of darkness and crime? Will you help us keep the bright light of publicity on the dark forces of capitalism? Will you help us, through public pressure, to force open the secret files of the Department of Justice? Will you help us keep up the fight of Sacco and Vanzetti until capitalism is compelled by the might of the aroused working class to release its victims? Your contribution to our GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND will tell your answer.

MORE AND MORE UNIONS RALLY AT THE EMERGENCY COMMITTEE CALL

"Pay No Attention to Reactionaries Who Try to Stop This Demonstration," Says Secretary

Plans for the general protest strike which is scheduled for Monday, the day on which Sacco and Vanzetti will die unless American and international labor intervene, are going rapidly ahead.

Representatives of labor unions are calling at the office of the Emergency Committee and are pledging support for the forthcoming strike. Notably in this respect are: Excavators' Union, Locals 731 and 732 of Greater New York, Long Island and vicinity, Amalgamated Food Workers, Marine Transport Workers, Amalgamated Metal Workers, Joint Board Furriers' Union, Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15, Barbers' Union, Millinery Hand Workers' Union, Paper Box Makers' Union, Shoe Workers' Union, United Brotherhood Carpenters and Joiners and many other labor organizations.

PLEDGE STRIKE SUPPORT.

The following political and social organizations have offered aid in the coming demonstrations previous to date of execution of Sacco and Vanzetti: Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, Workers Party of America, Young Workers' League, Workers' Health Bureau, International Labor Defense, which represents more than 50,000 workers in the city of New York, Finnish Workers' Federation, Bronx Jewish Workers' Club, International Labor Defense, Stamford local, many branches of the Workmen's Circle, Workers' Culture Club of Bath Beach, United Council of Working Class Housewives, United Workers' Cooperative Association, the Workers' School of New York, the American Negro Labor Congress, and others.

The officials of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee state that Monday's strike will equal, in point of number and intensity of feeling, last Tuesday's general protest strike.

Committee Issues Statement.

Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Emergency Committee, issued the following statement early in the afternoon: "The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee calls upon organized labor in this city to demonstrate to the master class the solidarity of labor. Only the united strength of the workers can now save our condemned comrades. As Sacco himself has said, 'Only the united action of the working class can save us now.'

Ca' For United Front.

"The Emergency Committee knows that the working class of New York will support this strike. We call upon all organizations, liberal and political irrespective of any differences in the past to unite in this mighty effort to free Sacco and Vanzetti.

"This is no time for bickering and petty politics; this is no time to draw sharply defined distinctions between liberal, socialist, labor leader or radical."

Continuing her statement Miss Baron said, "I appeal to all who profess a love of justice or an abhorrence of injustice to aid us in this last effort to free our comrades.

"History will recall those who in any way did not aid in this international effort to save Sacco and Vanzetti who are the victims of a monstrous nightmare of class injustice. I know that the hundreds of thousands of workers who staunchly came to the aid of Sacco and Vanzetti last week will not be disheartened by desperation of the situation, but rather, will put forth another gigantic effort to free our comrades."

Huge Demonstration Friday.

Officials of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee are very optimistic as to the success of the Union Square mass protest demonstration which has been called by the Emergency Committee for Friday, 1 p. m. It is expected that this demonstration will be greater than last Tuesday's which more than 50,000 workers joined.

Half a million circulars have been printed and are now being distributed in all the industrial districts of New York City calling for the mass attendance at Friday's demonstration. Volunteer corps of distributors have been mobilized and are now in action at the entrances of factories, subways, shops and other points at which workers congregate.

Traitors Will Fail.

When informed that some labor leaders of reactionary organizations ridiculed the idea of the success of another protest strike, Miss Baron said, "I would ask these gentlemen to recall their satirical predictions the day before the last protest strike to which more than 500,000 workers responded. We warn those reactionary agents of the ruling class that they will be called to account by their memberships shortly and asked to explain their criminal sabotage of the only genuine labor issue which has

Bombing of Juror's House Framed-Up to Hit Sacco, Vanzetti

BOSTON, Aug. 16. The bombing of the home of Lewis McHardy, 163 Florence street, one of the jurors in the Sacco-Vanzetti trial early this morning, was a move on the part of the enemies of the framed-up workers to discredit the struggle to free them, defence attorney M. A. Musmanno, of Pittsburgh, and members of the Defence Committee declared this afternoon.

The bomb, which had evidently been planted under a corner of the veranda, to one of the front part of the building, wrecked the veranda, demolished part of the North Side, broke down all the doors and smashed all the windows. The detonation was heard for about a mile. No one was hurt by the blast.

BOSTON WORKERS PLAN PROTEST AS HIGH COURT SITS

Hill Forced to File New Plea for Writ

BOSTON, Aug. 16. A big protest meeting is being arranged by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defence Committee for Thursday evening, August 18th, at the Symes Auditorium, Berkley, Tremont and Boyer streets.

Prominent speakers will address the meeting.

Four members of the supreme court bench sat to hear Defense Attorney Arthur D. Hill, a former district attorney, ask a review of the case based on a writ of error.

Those sitting were Justices Henry K. Wraley, Edward P. Pierce, James J. Carroll and William Cushing Wait.

Hill was finally told his request was taken under advisement and that it had been presented in improper form. He immediately filed a new plea.

Every seat in the courtroom was occupied for the momentous session.

Lawyers were discussing the question if the new writ of error is denied which is likely can exceptions be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Asks Review of Case.

Attorney Hill opened his arguments after the recess by saying that there were four substantial questions now before the court. "Whether in

THE fact that another 12-day stay was given to the two brave workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, is because of the workers' PROTEST trugout the United Sintes and the world over.

It is up to us now to save the lives of the two workers and FREE THEM.

THIS CAN ONLY BE DONE by the continuation of protests and deimnds in the same mnnner as we did.

IT IS UP TO YOUR DECISION, this is the only hope and the only thing to rely upon to FREE SACCO AND VANZETTI.

THE UNITED CHUNCIL OF WORKING CLASS HOUSEWIVES calls upon the working class women and the liberty loving women to unite with them to help SAVE the two innocent workers, SACCO and VANZETTI.

THE UNITED COUNCIL OF WORKING CLASS HOUSEWIVES will gather at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, at Irving Plaza, 119 East 15th street, where we will march in a body to the Union Square, which is only two blocks away, to join with the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, in the PROTEST AND THE DEMAND FOR THE RELEASE OF SACCO ANR VANZETTI.

view of the state of mind of Judge Thayer the petitioners had such trial before the jury as they were entitled to.

"Whether the question of Judge Thayer's won prejudice is a matter which can now be decided in these proceedings by him.

"Whether if both of these petitions be decided in favor of them any legal remedy can be made.

"If no can a writ of error be obtained for a review of this case."

"Those Birds Will Hang."

Statements by Judge Thayer that Vanzetti and Sacco were "Reds," "Draft Dodgers," that "no Bolsheviki could intimidate Web. Thayer," that "those birds would hang"—all contained in the new affidavits filed since the trial—were discussed by Attorney Hill. All these alleged statements by the trial judge were made outside the court room.

Expose Thayer Bias.

Swooping into his attack on Judge Thayer's prejudice Attorney Hill revelated extracts from an affidavit by Frank P. Sibley, a newspaper man who "covered" the trial.

Reading from the affidavit, Attorney Hill quoted Sibley as saying that Judge Thayer referred to counsel for the defense as "those damn fools" this and similar remarks were made, Sibley said during a luncheon conversation at the Dedham Inn.

Attorney Hill then took up various other affidavits concerning alleged statements by Judge Thayer.

Show Framed Evidenced

Attorney Hill first discussed the new evidence, a cap found near the murder scene and "identified" as Sacco's by a tear in the lining was first taken up. The former chief of police of Braintree in a new affidavit admitted that he tore the cap while seeking for marks of identification.

The other evidence concerned a statement by Captain Proctor of the State Police concerning the bullet found in the body of the slain guard. Captain Proctor, did not say, as was alleged, that the bullet was from Sacco's pistol.

Attorney Hill then launched into an attack on the prejudice of Judge Thayer.

Milwaukee Protest Meeting

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 16.—Three thousand to 3,500 people closely packed into Court House Square, Saturday, August 6th, 8:00 p. m. to protest against the unjust decision of Governor Alvan T. Fuller and his advisory committee—in making a secret investigation of the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Twenty-five thousand leaflets were distributed. Advance speeches at factories and street corners.

In the factory distribution of leaflets S. Krajewski was arrested on the hand-bill ordinance, and received 55 and costs, or 5 in fine.

DAILY WORKER CORRESPONDENTS WRITE OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

Extracts From Scores of Letters on Fate of the Two Innocent Workers

Owing to lack of space The DAILY WORKER is unable to print in full all of the interesting and vigorous letters received from comrades all over the country who have something to say about the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti planned by the capitalist courts of Massachusetts. We are therefore adopting the policy of printing extracts from the letters we receive.

Workers Must Save Sacco and Vanzetti.

The political, clerical, academic and political dogs of our industrial oligarchy in the state of Massachusetts are still howling for the blood of the two framed up workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, listed to be burned alive in the electric chair August 22nd, 1927.

Also the pen prostitutes are aiding and abetting this judicial atrocious murder, they are lying indiscriminately in the hopes that their masters will feast over the blood of these two fighting working class martyrs.

They know as well as millions of radicals, liberals and conservatives that these two men have committed no crime, and that they are absolutely innocent.

Not if I were to be allowed to take place in the desperate fight the militant millions of workers are putting up all over the capitalistic world as well as protests from that land where the workers control and govern their own affairs, Russia.

Chicago Protest Meeting Dispersed.

Dear Comrade:

As the correspondent of The DAILY WORKER of street nucleus No. 29, 4 Chicago, Ill., I wish to make an announcement through The DAILY WORKER on behalf of Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration meeting that was supposed to be held on the corner of Division and Washtenaw, where we find a difficult time to start the meeting on account of law and order. But despite all this we had decided to have this meeting and we decided to carry on the meeting on Rockwell and Division streets.

We managed to listen to the speaker for about 15 or 20 minutes when suddenly the proprietor of the drug store on the corner of Rockwell and Division Sts. called up the police to disperse the very meeting and where he succeeded in doing his dirty work, the meeting was dispersed and the speaker arrested.

Fuller Rivals Leopold and Loeb.

In the light of recent events in Massachusetts, Leopold and Loeb could be convinced that with their exclusive experience in committing a perfect murder they are pikers of a very low order.

They Shall Not Burn!

Cleveland Workers Tells Emotions.

Wednesday, August 10, 1927, was the most crucial day in the history of the American worker. Hope and despair had struggled in the heart of every class-conscious worker. Would the masses respond to the aid of their two martyrs, Sacco and Vanzetti, who were probably for the last time that day to see the light of the sun? Would the toiling thousands for once realize their power by saying: No! to the legal assassins of New England? The response exceeded all expectations.

From morning till midnight the awakened giant, labor, stood on constant watch, mightily protesting against the Massachusetts crime.

Expectation and calm as before a storm. Suddely a venomous press report: "Anarchists to Die." Thousands rush out with hearts as heavy as hell itself and make their way towards the newsboys. Suddnely, another special: "Respite is given to Sacco and Vanzetti!"

It has dawned. Labor, the awakening giant, has won the first round in the great battle.

THINK OF THE SUSTAINING FUND AT EVERY MEETING!

The Bomb Hoax Still Serves the Murder Gang

Again the reptile press screeches with weird tales about bomb explosions by Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers. This time the provocateurs of a blood drenched capitalist despotism blew off the front porch of the house of one of the twelve creatures who sat on the packed jury that convicted these two innocent workingmen. The reports of the explosion appeared simultaneously with the hearing of pleas for an appeal to the full bench of the supreme court of Massachusetts.

Some trivial police chief of the town of East Milton, Mass., where the explosion occurred, got on the front page of the kept press with the assertion that it was an act of Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers. The state police, professional strikebreakers and crooks, who between strikes confine their activities to blackmailing bourgeois motorists and protecting bootleggers who use the highways, are conducting an "investigation," as if their opinions on anything really counted with intelligent people. Reinforced guards are thrown about the homes of "public men," and the terror stage is again set for the next move on the part of the murder crew to carry out their fiendish plot.

No worker should be deceived by this sort of thing. We can say definitely, without fear of successful contradiction that the bombs thus far exploded were planted by those who want to aid the case of Fuller and his Back Bay advisory committee. They are counter-blasts to the agitation of workers all over the world for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The only reply to this provocation is more tremendous demonstrations that must culminate in an impressive mass strike on Monday, August 22, the date of the expiration of the last respite. All those unprincipled fakers who profess to speak for labor and who talk against this strike are guilty of aiding the executioners and the provocateurs in the pay of capitalism.

POWERS HAPGOOD GIVEN 6 MONTHS FOR BOSTON MEET

Appeals Case, Is Held On $1,000 Bail

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—Five months after the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti at a demonstration on the Boston Common he has been given the same Sunday, Powers Hapgood, young militant union leader and Harvard graduate, was sentenced to six months in Sacco and Vanzetti, are in as great the house of correction by Judge Parker in municipal court today.

Hapgood appealed from the decision and was held in $1,000 bail for appearance before the supreme court.

Hapgood stated that he had necessarily talked to the gathering regarding their rights as citizens to speak freely and openly and that he had not attempted to influence the crowd. The technical charge against the young union leader was "rioting and inciting to riot."

Cosmo Carnevitale, arrested with Hapgood, was found guilty of attempting to rescue him, of inciting to riot and was sentenced to nine months in the house of correction. He appealed.

Police Search.

Hapgood was rearrested yesterday at the Sacco Vanzetti defense committee headquarters soon after he had been released in $500 bail after having been found guilty and fined $50 on a charge of speaking on Boston Common without a permit. He was searched and letters to his mother read by the police, he said.

He was first arrested last Sunday when mounted police rode thru twelve thousand workers on the Boston Common to drag him off the platform.

Fought Lewis Machine

Out of college he became active in the United Mine Workers of America. At the Indianapolis convention of the United Mine Workers at Indianapolis last January Hapgood was denied the floor by Pres. John L. Lewis on the fake charge that he was not a delegate.

Hapgood has worked in mines thruout the world.

ASK SOCIALISTS TO STRIKE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

Levinson Attacks Move to Save Two Workers

Replying to a statement issued by Edward Levinson of the socialist party that neither the socialist party nor socialist unions would participate in the strike on August 22nd to save Sacco and Vanzetti, Rose Baron of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee in issuing a call for a strike was merely following the lead of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee in Boston, which is the official defense committee, Miss Baron says. "Can the socialist party in its desire to be ultra-respectable afford to absent itself from this momentous struggle?"

The telegram follows in full:

Telegram To Claessens.

We have been informed that you Mr. Edward Levinson has issued a statement to the press urging New York labor not to participate in the Sacco-Vanzetti protest strike called for Monday, August 22nd.

You must surely be aware of the fact that the lives of our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, are in as great danger now as they were last Tuesday.

Call Upon Defense Committee.

You must also be aware of the fact that the Boston Defense Committee which is the official defense committee of Sacco and Vanzetti in this state has issued a telegram sent to us said: that he has not attempted to influence the crowd. The technical charge against the young union leader was danger of the situation. There is no stay in the court. The prisoners will ask you from the bottom of their hearts for your work in saving their lives thus far. They say to you that only increased cooperation may save them in the end. The committee has set the 22nd for a general strike.

Can the socialist party in its desire to be ultra-respectable afford to absent itself from this momentous struggle. Wire reply collect.

The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

Socialist Sabotages Strike.

In his attack on a strike move to save Sacco and Vanzetti, Levinson said:

"Certainly the trade unions of the city will pay no attention to any so-called strike issued by the Workers Party or any other Communist agency. Those who struck last week lost $2,000,000 in pay and yet the Communists robbed this demonstration of its greatest value by organizing street parades, thus giving the impression that the Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers are a collection of irresponsibles.

"It is altogether unlikely that another protest strike will be held. The last strike, which involved the walkout of 350,000 workers for one day, was a clear and emphatic demonstration of how the workers feel in regard to the two Massachusetts radicals.

"We have taken our stand and it is now up to Massachusetts to decide whether or not the voice of the working people counts for anything with her."

LIBERALS PLAN SACCO-VANZETTI MEETS FOR WEST

Continue Campaign to Open D. of J. Files

Walter W. Liggett, representing the Citizens' National Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti, left Boston last night for a speaking tour in Wisconsin, Minnesota and other sections of the Northwest, in aid of the campaign to bring about federal intervention in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Mr. Liggett, whose summer home is in Provincetown, is a native of Minnesota and the son of Dean Liggett, late head of the Minnesota Agricultural College. He has been a newspaper man in Minnesota for many years.

Word was received today at the headquarters of the Citizens' National Committee, Hotel Bellevue, that meetings at which Liggett will be the chief speaker have been arranged as follows: Superior, Wisconsin, Wednesday night; Duluth, Minnesota, Thursday night; Minneapolis, Friday night; St. Paul, Saturday night; and Minneapolis, Sunday night.

Those in charge of the meeting at Superior, Wisconsin, have invited as one of the speakers, Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, and one of the sponsors of the Citizens National Committee.

At its headquarters tonight the Citizens' National Committee issued the following statement:

"Our committee was organized as the result of an appeal sent out from Boston last Saturday night by Robert Morse Lovett, of New York. The appeal was directed to a small group of outstanding men and women in the country. The following have already wired their endorsement: Alexander Meiklejohn, Glenn Frank, Fremont Older, Zonn Gale, Felix Adler, David Starr Jordan, John Haynes Holmes, Oswald Garrison Villard, Curt. Paxton Hibben.

"A week ago charges of the most serious nature, made in great detail and supported by affidavits of department of justice agents and evidence from official sources, were submitted by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee to Attorney-General Sargent by telegraph at his home in Ludlow, Vermont. Ample proof was submitted that department of justice agents and spies in the notorious regime of A. Mitchell Palmer, conspired with Katzmann in securing the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti; also that the consciousness of guilt to which no much weight was given by Judge Thayer, Governor Fuller and the advisory committee, was due to the great fear of Sacco and Vanzetti and their friends because of the activities of department of justice agents against the Galleani band of anarchists, of which Sacco and Vanzetti were members.

"The files of the department of justice have been refused to Mr. Thompson, defense counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti who made a specific request by letter to Attorney-General Sargent in July, 1924. The files have never been seen by the courts, Governor Fuller of the advisory committee, despite the fact that Attorney-General Sargent, according to press reports, offered to submit the department of justice records to Governor Fuller at the outset of the governor's investigation.

Katzman Frame-up.

"We are confident that once the American people are acquainted with the sinister facts of the prostitution of the department of justice under the reign of A. Mitchell Palmer, in order that low anarchists might be gotten out of the way as one agent expresses it in an affidavit, and that Katzman might secure a conviction of somebody for payroll robbery and murder, they will unite to prevent the execution of two innocent men, with which to round up the honor of America, before the world."

Coolidge Needs Time to Arrange Safest Way to Rule Philippine Islands

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 16.—No decision will be made by President Coolidge regarding filling of the post left vacant by the death of Gen. Leonard Wood, of the Philippines until Mr. Coolidge returns to Washington, it was officially announced at the summer executive of Uncle Sam today.

Mr. Coolidge desire to confer with officials in the insular bureau.

There is no official announcement as yet as to whether the islands will continue to be governed by military bureaucracy, with a promise of freedom, or whether there will be a civil government to signalize the end of the Filipino's hope of freedom and their permanent annexation.

Politics Institute Hears French Debts Hold Germs of War

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 16.—Additional pleas for politics of the French war debt to the United States, including a two-billion dollar flat remission and an interest reduction of fifty per cent., were made today at the Institute of Politics.

Frederick W. Peabody, managing director of the American Association favoring revision of inter-Allied debts, and William T. Hornaday, author, of Stamford, Conn., both came forward to champion the French cause.

Blames War.

Hornaday, in proposing the two billion dollar remission, went so far as to hold up the spectre of a new war if the French debt controversy is not settled amicably when he said:

"In 1915 and 1916 the American people made a gigantic and costly blunder through ignorance and unpreparedness. Must we bring forth these three grinning skeletons of our own disgraces and rattle them in public as a warning? If not, our grandchildren will."

Unspeakable Treachery.

Although without support from the masses, the Communist Party of Soviet Russia, under the leadership of Trotsky, Zinoviev and Kamenev, carried on a bitter struggle against the Stalin-Bukharin group, which is now in control of the Communist Party of Russia and the Communist International.

Substituting Capitalist Protest for Mass Strikes and Demonstrations.

One of the obstacles that has stood in the path of the development of the mass fury on the part of the working class into strikes and demonstrations against the murder conspiracy to burn Sacco and Vanzetti to death has been the actions of the Boston Sacco Vanzetti Defense Committee in basing practically its whole campaign upon the legal aspects of the case. When Fuller announced that he would "investigate" the case the policy of the Boston Committee was to refrain from criticism of him or his so-called advisory committee.

This action might have been somewhat atoned for if the committee had, even after the vicious decision of Fuller, devoted all its resources to aiding in the drive for mass strikes in behalf of these victims of the Massachusetts mill-owners. Instead of upending definitely to the mass power of the workers, which alone can save Sacco and Vanzetti, the committee in its August bulletin does not even mention strikes and other forms of protest, but devotes its small space to reprinting articles from the notorious Springfield Republican, one of the most conscious spokesmen of big capital in America, advocating that Governor Fuller commute the sentences of death to life imprisonment. The Republican is far more able as a defender of its class interests than is Fuller. It is aware of the fact that, after all the world-wide agitation in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti, their execution would discredit the whole administration of class justice, while to sentence them to a living death behind prison walls would serve the purpose of trying to terrorize workers who dare challenge the supremacy of the owners of the slave pens. Not in any sense does the Springfield Republican—quoted without comment in the August number of the official bulletin of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee—advocate freedom for these workers who have been proved innocent of the crime of which they were convicted before a vindictive, prejudiced judge and a crooked, vicious jury that was undoubtedly bought and paid for by the hirelings of the mill owners and the agents of the United States department of justice.

Only the mass power of the working class has thus far saved Sacco and Vanzetti from death and that power must be still further developed and intensified in order not merely to stay the hand of the executioner, but to open the jail doors and permit these tortured workers to again take their places in the ranks of labor.

Instead of relying upon the adverse elements of the capitalist class the Defense Committee of Boston should throw itself into the movement for a great strike thruout the country on August 22, the day last set for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Decline of "Prosperity."

In spite of the frantic endeavors of the ruling class and their political henchmen to maintain the illusion that there is wide spread prosperity in the country embracing all classes, the real facts are gradually coming to light. Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, vice-president of the Cleveland Trust Company, frankly states:

"Our prosperity seems to be getting tired. It is showing signs of fatigue. It may recover its earlier vigor later on, but just at present it is unmistakeably slowing down."

Contrary to the falsified reports from the United States department of labor, issued for the specific purpose of furnishing arguments for the administration which bases its claim to existence upon the prosperity that has been showered upon the nation, the bankers, in their own statements, face the facts.

Ayres declares that employment of labor has declined and that there is an excess of money seeking employment. That means that we are approaching a period of industrial crisis when widespread unemployment will grip the workers. The statisticians maintained by the great banking combines to keep them informed on the condition of industry have reported that the world market is overflowing with industrial products, hence investments in many important industries will prove a total loss. The banks have devised measures of protecting themselves from the disastrous effects of ever-recurring industrial crises by withholding capital. The only class that seriously suffers is the working class.

Scientific organization shields the banks and the rest of the capitalist machine. The application of scientific organizational principles to labor organization would go a long ways toward enabling the workers to assert their power.

In the last analysis labor can only struggle effectively against the ravages of capitalism by creating great industrial unions through the amalgamating of the craft unions, and also building up a class party of labor that will represent the class interests of the workers and exploited farmers the same as the parties of capitalism represent the class interest of the master class.

The Sort of Protest Pulitzer Approves.

Since Mr. Ralph Pulitzer of the New York World asserted his rights in demanding that all his writers conform strictly to the established rules of journalistic prostitution by refusing to publish the articles of Heywood Broun on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, a certain Mr. Frank Sullivan also protests, but not against the tortures inflicted upon two workingmen. His protest is of a type that will in no way offend the murder gang of Massachusetts.

In yesterday morning's World Mr. Sullivan declares:

"We protest against the boiling of the sixty-year-old lobster caught by a life-saver at Coney Island."

This innocuous scribbler objects because he fears that when he next eats lobster in a restaurant the sixty-year old one will be served.

This nauseating drivel only emphasizes our claim that the only place to obtain correct information and honest interpretation of events of interest to the working class is in the columns of the working class press.

Some Lessons from the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By JAY LOVESTONE.

It is yet too early to estimate the results and evaluate the significance of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The ensuing days will be decisive. It is already clear, however, that the American, as well as the international, phases of the movement to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the strangling hand of capitalism is of immen-urable significance and tremendously conducing in its lessons for the international proletariat. The recently well-informed Vienna correspondent of the Chicago Daily News tells us the following.

"That the reprieve of Sacco and Vanzetti will have far reaching political effect both in Europe and America is the conviction of the trend of events since the reprieve was granted and also is the substance of the opinions of almost all circles interviewed with whom the Chicago Daily News correspondent has had occasion to discuss the affair in its broader aspects."

What the Reprieve Means.

The same correspondent tells us that, in Europe, there is considerable opinion maintaining that "The Sacco-Vanzetti reprieve is the greatest victory attained by Red Russia." How much truth there is in that? The answer to this question is the following. Undoubtedly the reprieve was granted to Governor Fuller not out of his love for justice, abstract justice, but in order to satisfy the desire to see Sacco and Vanzetti saved from death. Such desire Governor Fuller could have satisfied long ago by playing a different role than that of a hangman who has been responsible for keeping the two innocent workers within the jaws of death for seven years. There was only one cause for the reprieve. This was the mass pressure brought to bear on the American ruling class by the American as well as the international proletariat. The most conscious section of the working class, the Communists, in the United States as well as in every other country in the world can naturally only welcome to the extent to which working-class consciousness has been aroused against the capitalists in the instance. The Communists can welcome proof of the role they have played in the Interest of the class struggle. Indeed power for Sacco and Vanzetti even attained.

But [illegible] the reprieve does not mean freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. Our strategy and crafty ruling class will utilize [illegible] as a means to [illegible] which is [illegible] build [illegible] very [illegible] enlightenment of [illegible] their [illegible] champions of the workers. Its danger is far from over. The danger is not even lessened. The danger of death for Sacco and Vanzetti is even intensified in this very peculiar case of the reprieve.

There is only one language that the capitalist exploiting class can understand. This is the language of class power. The proletariat in using this language, that is, in forcing the working class to the entire class in the language of class power, the capitalists understand. More than ever before the mass attacks upon time and to develop the strength that hitherto the [illegible] of the workers' conscious [illegible] capitalist power [illegible] Sacco and Vanzetti from [illegible]

Our Tactics and Tasks.

We have mentioned the [illegible] Communists in the [illegible] Vanzetti campaign. We must further the role played by the organization in the [illegible] of the class conscious workers which defends the working men and working women from the capitalist persecutions on the basis of class interests and class need—the International Labor Defense. This organization has justified as the vehicle for the most militant and energetic fighters in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. It has served as the unifying center of the most [illegible] and devoted opponents of the murderers from Massachusetts and their nefarious allies.

It is strikes and mass demonstrations in the United States and in many other countries which have dealt the body-blows to Massachusetts capitalist justice and have lengthened the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The New York demonstration, having at least over fifty thousand participants, is perhaps the biggest mass protest that the streets of the metropolis have yet seen. In Chicago, many thousands of workers spontaneously demonstrated on the streets their vehement opposition to legalized murder of proletarians. In Gary, for the first time since the big steel strike, thousands of workers went out on the streets to protest to the steel barons against murder effected by employing class justice. In New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and other industrial coal regions, thousands of workers struck.

There is nothing the capitalists fear more than thousands of workers pouring out from the factories to the streets in mass protest against the exploiting class rule.

Here we should not hide the fact that certain elements, parading as champions and defenders of Sacco and Vanzetti, have been only a hindrance to the great mass movement of the American workers. The fact that these petty bourgeois liberal elements have been in strategic positions in the Sacco and Vanzetti defense and have been tainted with anarchist sympathies not only does not make them less dangerous but actually makes them more dangerous to the class cause, to the only sound basis which can and must back the bargain of decent workers.

More strikes. More demonstrations. Bigger strikes, Bigger demonstrations. These are the weapons with which the workers can paralyze the hands of the killers.

Some "Friends" Who Need Watching.

The official socialist party bureaucracy has played a shameful role in the Sacco-Vanzetti drive. Their propaganda has tended to make workers put faith in capitalist class justice. Their propaganda has only served to blur the class issue. Such help for Sacco and Vanzetti only can [illegible] and the interests of the [illegible] for which they must be [illegible] But the most despicable role in the whole Sacco and Vanzetti [illegible] has been played by Mr. [illegible] and those of the agents of [illegible] Federation in our [illegible] at the time when the crisis [illegible] were about to put their hands [illegible] to electrocute Sacco and Vanzetti, the [illegible] Socialist party of the American Federation of [illegible] could do nothing more than to [illegible] but those men should be [illegible]

A UNITED FRONT FOR DEFENSE AGAINST THE ATTACK UPON THE FREEDOM OF PRESS

By B. SKLAR.

[illegible] arrest of the federal government against the DAILY WORKER [illegible] the conviction of the Workers (Communist) Party in the state of Pennsylvania manifested in the framing up and sentencing of members of the party for alleged political activity [illegible] vicious attacks upon the Party in New York by the joint forces of the police, the courts and the trade union bureaucracy, the campaign against our Party by the Federation of Labor—all of this [illegible] no recollection the days of [illegible] from was [illegible] upon the [illegible] conspiracy that the attacks against the Party was not a part of an attack against the entire labor movement and that it was an offensive of a growing reaction. Labor and liberal organizations adopted the viewpoint that the attack against the Party was [illegible] and responded to the call of the Party. The drive of reaction was stopped. The Party not only weathered the attacks but made great progress. The Party has developed itself as the vanguard of the American working class.

The attack against the Party at present is [illegible] general situation and [illegible] attack against the entire labor movement. It comes in the wake of another class struggle in the needle industries, in the coal mining industry, in the textile industry; it comes at the time when the wave of industry is slackening and when a general intensified drive may be expected upon the wages, working hours and conditions of labor. It comes at the time when a further sharpening of the class struggle is to be expected.

The vicious attacks of the labor bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor may appear as a distinguishing feature of the present situation as compared with that of 1926. But even there is a difference only in degree, for in 1926 the Party was also faced with the attack of the trade union bureaucracy against the Communists and the left wing. To-day upon the conference of the Trade Union Educational League, the activities of Gompers against the Trade Union Educational League and against the Communists furnish the proof of this.

There is, however, one feature that distinguishes the present situation from that of 1926. The offensive of the American imperialism in South America, China and in Europe. This factor is of importance because it signifies the further sharpening of the class struggle in America and carries a danger of a much fiercer attack against the Party than in 1926. That in time of "peace" an attack should be made against a newspaper, which nothing of the kind happened in the other drive is in itself a remarkable fact deserving attention.

Our Party must utilize the past experiences and again adopt the tactics which proved so effective in the past. We must unite labor, fraternal, liberal organizations in defense of the freedom of the press. We must mobilize all Party members and sympathizers for this united front drive. We must make the defense of The DAILY WORKER a part of the defense of the entire labor movement against the attack of the ruling class.

DRAMA

"Revelry" Here Next Month—Chevalier to Tour America

Sydney Shields and Marie Carroll will be co-featured in "Such Is Life" which opens at the Morosco theatre August 31. Peter Glenny and Marie Armstrong Hecht are the authors of the new piece.

A. H. Woods new production goes into rehersal today. It is a new play by Bayard Veiller and titled, "The People vs Mary Dugan." Ann Harding, Rex Cherryman, Arthur Ruhl, Cyril Keightley and Robert Cummins will have important roles in the cast.

Maurice Chevalier, the well-known French music hall and revue comedian, is planning a vaudeville tour of the United States, appearing at the Keith-Albee theatres, beginning early in 1928.

Maxwell Anderson has just finished the book and lyrics of a musical comedy dealing with censorship. The opus is titled "A Maiden's Prayer."

"Revelry," based on the novel of the same name, which is to be presented at the Masque theatre by Robert Milton shortly, will have the following players in the cast: James Crane, Charles Waldron, Rose Hobart and Harry Bannister. The dramatization of the Samuel Hopkins Adams novel was done by Maurice Watkins.

in no uncertain manner. The work will not be disorganized; the prisoners will not suffer; rather this will be a signal for renewed activity. We will continue the fight for the prisoners and their dependents. We will continue the fight against the right wing. Our answer must be—altogether for the decisive onslaught against the gangsters in the unions. Support the Joint Defense in its efforts."

Workers Beaten Up.

Right wing gangsters beat up workers of the Garander and Helpern shop, 130 West 14th St., yesterday because they have refused to register with the International.

Business Agent Weisenblatt recently threatened the workers with a beating unless they signed up. This morning the thugs appeared and cruelly attacked the workers. They were treated by an ambulance surgeon from the New York Hospital.

Unemployed Workers Committee.

A committee of unemployed fur workers was chosen yesterday at an open forum held in Joint Board headquarters, 22 East 22nd street, and the 10 workers constituting the committee will within the next week open headquarters in the fur market to help in meeting the problems created by the great unemployment now existing in the fur industry.

The open forum of registered and unregistered unemployed fur workers yesterday estimated that there are at present about 3,000 workers without jobs, altho this should normally be the busy season of the year. It was the opinion of one speaker after another that this situation was due to the return of sectional contracting on a large scale, and piece work and home work which have crept back since the reactionary International and A. F. of L. officials began their attack on the union. These evils which were always tolerated even when the right wing had full control of the Joint Board are now entirely overlooked by them in view of their secret agreement with the manufacturers.

The unemployment committee of 10 was authorized to call a large meeting in some hall as soon as possible, for a full discussion of all the problems of the unemployed workers; and to open headquarters in the market where a daily discussion may take place.

The unemployed committee will meet today to elaborate its plans further and to prepare a detailed statement of what trade conditions actually are at present, and what the workers think about them.

Mass Meeting Tomorrow.

All cloak and dressmakers should attend the general meeting at Cooper Union tomorrow, right after work. Important questions will come up for action.

MINE COP BOMBS MAN WHO REFUSES TO BREAK PARADE

Injunctions, "County Militia," in Ohio

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 16.—Mrs. Hanna Arvo suffered internal injuries when the coal and iron company police attempted to break up a Sacco and Vanzetti protest parade of miners from Daisytown and Walkerstown, ordered Salmi Arvo who was driving with his mother and two small children to speed up and ride thru the miners. When Arvo refused one of the coal and iron men, W. J. Perkins, cursed Arvo and threw a tear bomb into the automobile killing the driver so that he sent the machine over an embankment.

The elderly woman who was injured internally was left helpless in the car while company police rushed Arvo to the court where he was arraigned on charges of inciting to riot and disorderly conduct. Arvo was held in $1,500 bail.

Gunmen Called "County Militia."

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 16.—What is claimed to be the first "county militia" in Ohio is on the job strike-breaking in Belmont county.

This organization, comprising 50 ex-service men, was effected over the week-end by Col. L. S. Connelly, Columbus, Ohio National Guard. As an official observer for Governor Vic Donahey, Connelly is keeping in close touch with the coal strike conditions in this county.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 16.—Federal Judge Benson M. Hough here issued a 10-day restraining order prohibiting John L. Lewis, Indianapolis, international president; Lee Hallen, Columbus, president of the Ohio organization and other officials and members of the United Mine Workers of America, from interfering with the operation of Provident Mine No. 1, St. Clairville; the Webb Mine, near Bellaire; the Florence Mine at Martins Ferry, and the Rose Mind, near Cadiz.

The temporary order was issued in response to a joint application filed today, by the Ohio-Ironton Coal Co., the Monroe Coal Co., the Zoomer Coal & Coke Co., and the Atlantic Contracting Co., owners, respectively, of these four mines, for a permanent restraining order.

Judge Hough fixed September 6th as the date for a hearing concerning the application for a permanent order, although the temporary order expires Aug. 25th, the judge granted the applicants permission to apply for a renewal of the temporary decree. This, it was stated, will be done at Cincinnati.

Taylorville Miners Strike.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., Aug. 16.—A spontaneous outbreak of the miners in the Quality Mine at Edinburg in sympathy with the locked-out miners in the rest of the field closed the works down for one day. The Quality Mine was operating under one of the separate agreement advocated by International President Lewis. President Jack Glasgow of Taylorville subdistrict ordered the men back to work and spread the story that "dissension" propaganda put out by the operators" was responsible for the strike.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Officials of the town of North Castle have petitioned the Westchester County Sanitary Commission for the early construction of the upper Bronx Valley trunk line sewer, it was announced here today.

Needle Trade Defense

At a picnic held in Philadelphia on Sunday, August, 7th, at which Louis Hyman and Sam Liptzin were present, a great enthusiastic crowd raised seven hundred dollars.

The Womens Council of New Haven sent $100 for the Defense. Cleveland, Ohio, arranged a flower day for the Defense which netted $200 for the Defense.

Hundreds of workers are needed for the Starlight Park Jamboree. Every one who wants to help should send in his name and address to the Defense office, 11 Union Square, Room 714.

Concert and Ball for Defense.

The Downtown Workers Club is arranging a concert and ball for Saturday, August 20th, which will be held at the Knights of Pythias Temple, 2864 West 21st Street Coney Island. A very interesting and entertaining program has been arranged. All workers are urged to attend as they will be sure of an enjoyable evening. The entire profits will be given to the Defense.

Volunteers Wanted.

Hundreds of workers will be required for the various committees on that day. Workers who would like to volunteer should call at the office of the Joint Defense and Relief Committee to enroll, and they will be notified as to when and where to report.

Donations.

At a meeting of Wokmen Circle Branch 686 $15 was collected, which was sent to the Defense office.

M. Forman, a member of Local 35, donated his last dollar. He is sorry that the sum is so small, but it was the best he could do to help his struggling brothers win the fight against the betrayers.

George Morrisey, of San Francisco, Cal., sends $10 for a Defense booklet.

Have You Joined the Workers Self Defense?

If you have not yet applied for membership in the Workers Self Defense, do so at once. The sooner you commence to send your weekly pledges the sooner will the betrayers of the movement be driven out from the trade unions.

City Father Trapped in Municipal "Ma's" Nest

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 15.—Councilmen Carl I. Jacobson, who is charged with immoral relations with Mrs. Callie Grimes by the Los Angeles vice squad officers who apprehended the couple in a cottage here recently, claims a frame-up by the police force and is plotting a counter attack in the form of an investigation of Mrs. Grimes' relations with various prominent politicians and officials in the past.

The episode which is so characteristic of American democracy, and has several counterparts in Los Angeles history, has ripped politics wide open and may lead to investigations which will involve many not only in Los Angeles but thruout California official dom.

Trade Union Children in Sacco-Vanzetti Protest

By Federated Press.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Children of trades unionists at Pioneer Youth camp held a stirring protest meeting against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. The children showed great resentment at the disregard of Gov. Alvan T. Fuller and his advisors to world, wide league for justice for the two condemned Italian workers.

Resolutions were passed and telegrams sent to Gov. Fuller, attorney-general Sargent to open federal dept. of justice files, Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee and to the men themselves at Charlestown prison.

stirred the American workers in the last 30 years."

Miss Baron expressed disapproval of plans to petition President Coolidge to exercise his influence to bring about a commutation of sentence. She stated: "The workers of the world do not want Sacco and Vanzetti to be sentenced to life of living torture in the American bastille at Charlestown. It is not a question of mercy, it is a question of justice. Either these men are guilty and are to die in the electric chair or they are innocent and should be restored to the ranks of the working class. Tens of millions of people throughout the world hold the opinion that these men are innocent, eminent jurists say that the evidence is of the most flimsy character and betrays the desire of the Massachusetts legal hierarchy to do these workers to death because they dared hold opinions contrary to the current vogue. We say, however, give life or death to Sacco and Vanzetti, not a life-long future to personal torture.

"Fifteen thousand musicians of Greater New York have signed petitions demanding the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti, according to Ricardo Sodero, who wired Miss Rose Baritt, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Committee."

GIGANTIC SPORTS PROGRAM FOR DEFENSE JAMBOREE; WOMEN SOCCER TEAMS TO PLAY

Two Hungarian women soccer teams will oppose each other in a thrilling game of soccer football at the Jamboree of the Joint Defense and Relief Committee of the Cloakmakers and Furriers as part of a gigantic special feature sports program, at Starlight Park, the Bronx, on August 28th, the Jamboree committee announced yesterday.

A program of sports that for interest, excellence and length has never been surpassed in the history of workers' entertainments, is promised by the committee in yesterday's statement. The hours of from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. will be given over to sports exclusively.

Track Events Arranged.

Many field and track events are being prepared. A one hundred meter race, one mile relay, javelin throw, discus throw, sack race, potato race, three legged race, one hundred yard dash for young people, four hundred yard relay race (8 heats of four for young people, and a hundred yard dash (2 for fat men, in which the participants must weigh over two hundred pounds.

A tug of war between the cloakmakers and furriers is also being arranged, due to the overwhelming interest this event is expected to arouse on the jamboree audience. Recruiting for the games will take place at a special booth which will be specially erected for that purpose.

Considerable interest in the jamboree has been manifested by the workers of New York and the vicinity, who recognize in Starlight Park a wonderfully facilitated playground for young and old of both sexes. In view of the approach of the big event of August 28th is being discussed with eager anticipation by the workers, it was observed.

N. Y. DISTRICT OF WORKERS PARTY CALLS FOR STRIKE ON MONDAY

The District Executive Committee of District 2, Workers (Communist) Party, William W. Weinstone, general secretary, issued the following statement yesterday:

"Sacco and Vanzetti are still within the shadow of the electric chair. The murderous capitalist class still cries for their blood. The mighty protest of international labor has forced the postponement of the death sentence. The leopard has not changed its spots.

"No mercy can be expected from the capitalist courts, the courts that have subjected Sacco and Vanzetti to untold suffering and horror, that have demonstrated that they will give no justice to those workers.

"Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed, not executed or imprisoned for life. Between the electric chair and freedom there stands only the organized power of the working class.

"Demonstrations must be held, but these are not enough. Only the mightiest effort will halt the executioners from carrying out their foul murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"We therefore urge all workers to follow the call of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee of New York to be left! The fate of Sacco and Vanzetti to strike on Monday, August 22. are in your hands. Let your power

"Strike August 22!"

"Workers: Down tools! The cause of American labor is at stake! Death to Sacco and Vanzetti means the oppression of all American labor. Death to Sacco and Vanzetti means registration laws and deportation for all foreign born labor.

Join Strike!

"Strike on August 22! Ignore the contemptible and treacherous declarations of such organizations as the socialist party that opposes a strike and feels that every thing has already been done. The yellow socialist party only helps the Massachusetts hangman by such actions.

"Workers, there are only six days left! The fate of Sacco and Vanzetti are in your hands. Let your power be felt!

"Strike August 22!"

DEFENSE COMMITTEE HERE CALLS FOR STRIKE TO FREE SACCO AND VANZETTI

Calling for a monster walk-out on August 22 to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair, the New York branch of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee has issued a statement declaring that it has little faith in court action.

Only a huge demonstration in Boston coupled with a nationwide walkout can save the two framed-up workers, the committee declares.

"The committee emphasizes the urgency of carrying out the workers of the Boston Committee by calling a general strike on Monday, the 22d," the committee statement says.

Arrest Manager of Uj Előre On Charge Of White Guardists

Louis Rebrits, business manager of Uj Elore, Hungarian Communist daily newspaper, was arrested yesterday charged with slander. The charge was made by G. H. Berlics, editor of Amerikai Magyar Nepszava, Hungarian white guard newspaper.

The charge grew out of the campaign that the white guard organ is now conducting to raise funds to erect a statue to Louis Kossuth, Hungarian patriot. The Uj Elore has pointed out the raising of funds is only a gesture to make it possible for white guardists to come to America and attempt to popularize the name of Kossuth. The Uj Elore has been pointing out that the white guardists in this country, over $7,000 has been collected.

After the July Days

Repressive Measures Taken by the Menshevik and Social Revolutionary Authorities Against the Mass Movements of the Bolsheviks.

THE victory of the Provisional Government and the Menshevik and Social Revolutionary Soviet Executive over the proletariat on July 3-5 gave a free hand to the bourgeoisie, by the Mensheviks and Social Revolutionists. The Provisional Government, having smashed, with the help of the forces brought from the front, the workers' demonstrations, and based on its struggle against the proletariat and the peasantry, hurried to undertake a determined offensive so as definitely to crush the revolutionary mass movement.

The Provisional Government soon after crushing the demonstration of July 3-5 started to persecute its participants and leaders, members of the Bolshevik Party, peasants, soldiers and sailors. On July 7 the Provisional Government instructed the Petrograd Palace of Justice to investigate the causes of the demonstration of July 3-5.

THE Provisional Government categorically ordered "the arrest and the bringing to justice of all those guilty of high treason and betrayal of the revolution." Another decree of the Provisional Government threatening: "Those guilty of publicly advocating disobedience to the laws and decrees of the government will be punished by imprisonment not exceeding three years."

The series of laws and decrees stipulating the punishments to be meted out to workers and peasants for opposing the bourgeois government culminates with the decree granting the Ministry for Home Affairs and the Ministry of War the right to arrest people by mutual agreement "who are a menace to the State, to its safety, and to the conquests of the revolution and freedom."

ON July 8th, Kerensky issued a special decree to the Army and Navy in which he orders the restoration of strict discipline in the ranks. The decree said: "I command the re-establishment of the discipline in the army. The revolutionary government must assert itself to the full, not stopping even before the use of armed force." Kerensky wanted to save the army by the employment of old methods. To save it, meant to subordinate the forces entirely to the bourgeoisie and the Provisional Government. In order to subordinate the army, the Provisional Government knew only one method, namely, to drag the revolutionary leaders and organizers out of the army and to terrorize the soldiers by means of repression and persecution.

Kerensky's decree ordered "that all criminal elements be removed from the army, advocating disobedience to the government and the commanders either in the press and orally." On the 8th of July the Provisional Government proceeded to remove the dangerous elements in the army and its first step in that direction was the decision to dissolve all military units, which participated in the revolutionary demonstrations of July 3-5. By doing so the government hoped to "kill two birds with one stone." It meant to break up the revolutionary forces in the army, to scare them, disorganize them and drive them underground. Of the counter-revolutionary generals and officers and sent them to fight against the proletariat and the peasantry. On July 12th the entire Bolsheviks and Socialists Revolutionists justified the bloody action of the Provisional Government, which had for one aim in view, namely the destruction of the proletariat, the disarmament of the Proletariat, the destruction of the revolutionary army, the destruction of the General Staff of the revolution—the Bolshevik Party.

Preacher Who Pickets Lashes Congregation For Sacco, Vanzetti

BUFFALO, Aug. 16.—Declaring Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent victims of the class war and are in jail because they dared stand up for the workers' rights, the Rev. H. J. Hahn has shocked a congregation of hard-eyed saints from the pulpit of the Salem Evangelical Church.

Intelligent, fair-minded men and women all over the world have come to the assistance of Sacco and Vanzetti because they see so obviously in the case of these two victims of a cruel system of rapacious exploitation. You modern Christians make the church an instrument of reaction; a sardonic caricature of Christianity, a farce and travesty.

The Rev. Hahn was recently jailed in Boston for picketing the State House.

Ten Days in Workhouse

PART III.

By REBECCA GRECHT.

THERE were several red letter days for the women fur pickets in the workhouse, and some incidents will long remain in our memory. With the help of its committee, our little community of prisoners tried to turn its period of confinement into a period of mobilization for future activity. During the day, we'd chat, read the few magazines we had, we managed to get from the special ward, take showers, talk to the matrons, or just rest on our cots.

The best part of our day usually began after supper, served at 4 p. m. Then we came together and held council, airing grievances and discussing proposals for spending our time. As far as possible we acted on everything in common. We wanted to create a spirit of unity to bring us closer to one another, and drew us nearer to the movement.

Sang "Solidarity."

Then we had our chorus and mighty proud we were of it. True, it did not have the organization, the talent, the direction, of the New York Prisheit Singing Society. There was no harmonious blending of trained voices, no emphasis on artistic interpretation. But what we lacked in tone, we made up in spirit. And if there was a little discord now and then, well, our ears were not sensitive.

I had with me a song book issued by the Industrial Workers of the World. It proved to be a real treasure-house. Its songs of battle roused and stimulated us.

We sang other songs, as well—Russian, Jewish. Moving songs of the struggles and sufferings of the working class; thrilling, invigorating songs of revolution, such as must have inspired the masses of Russian workers and peasants in their victorious march towards freedom.

And no we sang, depression vanished like a thin cloud in the air. We seemed as perhaps never before the strengthening power of mass singing. It cheered us. We forgot, the miserable spaghetti and beans, the lack of fresh air, all the restrictions and repressions of the workhouse. We got new courage and enthusiasm. We longed to be out again, on the picket line, in the ranks of our militant comrades, fighting for our class, sure of ultimate victory.

One song we especially enjoyed was "Solidarity." Everybody joined in the refrain. It rang through our room, through the wards upstairs, outside in the corridor. It seemed to symbolize the spirit of the struggle. It was our answer to the police, to the judge, to the McGradys and Wolls who seek to wipe out every bit of progressivism and militancy in the needle trades, in the entire American labor movement.

Singing Prohibited.

We wondered at first why we were allowed to sing. That privilege was taken from us, however, after July 4th. A celebration had been planned for that day by the prison authorities, including a show arranged by the inmates, and while rehearsals were going on we were not bothered. But after the holiday, no more mass singing was permitted.

We shall remember that July 4th celebration. When the judge sentenced us to 10 days, that was his way of commemorating the signing by the Declaration of Independence. No doubt he thought the workhouse would teach us good lessons in Americanism; that to be deprived of our freedom for picketing is a strike, during the week of July 4th, would impress us with the great privileges enjoyed by the American working class since America won its independence. We owe him thanks, then, for having given us this enlightening lesson in capitalist democracy. It is a lesson we have not soon forget.

The day began with the glad news that we would be permitted out-of-doors in the afternoon. At 1:30 p. m. we were led out into the prison yard. For two and one half hours we enjoyed the sunshine and fresh air, for the first time in five days, then indoors again.

The Show.

In the evening the big show took place. We filled into the corridor together with a thousand others—young girls, old women, the flotsam and jetsam of an unjust, decaying social order, basing its wealth on the suffering, the misery and degradation of millions of men and women. The warden of the workhouse opened the performance. We ought to be proud of our country, he said, grateful for the many blessings of liberty, democracy, and the pursuit of happiness which the Declaration of Independence had guaranteed to us.

We looked about us, at the faces lined with suffering or callous, bitter, indifferent; at the dull eyes of the drug addict, the diseased face of the prostitute. We saw ourselves. We thought of the hundreds of workers on the picket line, arrested, imprisoned, brutally beaten by gangsters while the Industrial Squad look on calmly or aided in the job. We thought of the millions of workers, struggling for a mere livelihood, oppressed and exploited.

Hopes to Catch 'Em All.

The warden continued. He didn't think so badly of the inmates. The only difference between them and those outside was that the others had not yet been discovered. And as for him, he had become warden twenty one years ago so that he might some time found out. Loud laughter and applause greeted these remarks. A truth at last, perhaps!

The show went on—singing, dancing, recitations, all by the inmates. When it was over, out we filed next into the yard, to witness the fireworks. It was a beautiful night—we drank it in.

Later, when we returned to our room, we thought of the warden's remark, as he watched us going into the yard, that "well annex you, too, to America some day." So now, surely, we understand the meaning of Americanism.

For the T. U. E. L.

We were not permitted outdoors again. We were deprived, also, of our singing. But we found other things to do. One evening we related anecdotes, experiences. On Thursday, when we got our commissary, we received a party, with apples, oranges, crackers, and punch made out of a thin watery jell-o left over from our lunch. We certainly did feast that day. Fruit and soda seem had surely never tasted so good before.

Another evening, we had a long discussion on the Trade Union Educational League. We talked about developments in the American labor movement, the trend towards Trade union capitalism, company unionism, class collaboration. We explained the program of the League. We related the history of the left wing struggle in the needle trades. Comrades who were not members of the League gave their names and addresses, expressing a desire to join. It was the most interesting evening of all. We forgot that we were in the workhouse.

Educate Matrons.

We carried our propaganda beyond our own group, even to the ranks of the matrons, telling them about our struggle whenever we got a chance. Though some of them had been harsh and hostile at first, by the time we left even the worst had become friendly. In spite of themselves, a few began to sympathize with the furriers' struggle—perhaps because the memory of their own fight for the 8-hour day was still fresh in their minds. They were impressed by our solidarity, which we made them feel was merely a reflexion of the spirit in the ranks of the needle trades workers. "What do you call those who don't stick?" said a matron to us, "Slackers!" we cried out, and she nodded assent. Another brought us news about the strike—we could not get newspapers. Apparently, we were a new type of prisoner, to them. Strikers weren't so bad, after all. We didn't bite, or scratch, or creep on all fours.

The Counting.

But one difficulty we did present to them. It made us have many a hearty laugh. There were 52 of us the first day. Then the number dropped to 40, and finally to 33, as the 3-day, and 5-day pickets departed. Now numbers take on a tremendous significance in the workhouse. The rule is, that prisoners must be counted morning, noon and night, and a dozen other times. We knew no end of counting. When we awoke, when we went to sleep, and during the night; before breakfast, lunch, supper; when the matrons changed shifts, three times a day, etc., etc. In our sleep we dreamt of counting.

One matron especially had great trouble. She could not count us. Sometimes there were more than there should have been, sometimes less. It was easy counting up to thirty. After that—confusion. And so, for 15 or 20 minutes, we'd be counted over and over again. That was the chief comedy feature of the workhouse.

The Appeal.

So the days passed, more quickly than we had ever thought they would. We who were to serve 10 days had not thought of an appeal in our case. We were therefore gladly surprised when, on Friday, 9 days after our arrival, all of us, with the exception of the two comrades sentenced to six months, were released, and bid farewell to our prison quarters.

It was over, now. We had gone in, full of spirit and enthusiasm; we came out with our spirit undampened, though lack of air and sour-almost may have weakened us a little physically. If the police and the judge had thought to weaken our morale, they succeeded only in strengthening it and making us more class conscious politically. If the dark and sinister forces of the right wing had hoped to break us away from our allegiance to the New York Joint Board, to the militant fighting leadership of the T. U. E. L., they succeeded only in forging us in our convictions.

We had turned our prison quarters into a class room where we received again the meaning of the fight being waged in the needle trades, and were instructed once more the meaning of the alliance between the government agents in New York, the bosses, the trade union bureaucrats and where we tried to drill ourselves in preparation for further struggle.

We had not been overtaken by unpleasantness. The workhouse is not a home, and imprisonment is not treasure but to spend three 3 days, or 10 days, or 15 days, if need be is not a fearful evil. On the contrary we had been enriched by this experience, and not one of us regretted that we had "stuck."

To Continue Fight.

On the night of our release, when we came together at Unity House, where a welcome had been arranged for us, we felt there was only one thing further to say. Our comrades must go on, must continue the fight. In the ranks of the militant, class-conscious workers there must be no weakening. Ours is the vital task of maintaining the militancy, the class character of our union, preventing its degeneration into a company union; maintaining the rights of workers to go strike and picket, against the combined forces of police, courts, gangsters, socialist betrayers, the reactionary officialdom of the A. F. of L.

It is not a battle of a day, nor is it centered only in the fur market. It is part of the fight being waged throughout the entire labor movement. And we must look beyond it. We must enter the broader struggle on the industrial and political field against capitalism as a whole, and "stick" in unity and solidarity until the entire system of capitalist oppression and exploitation is destroyed.

Motorman Faints On Car.

Robert Bacon, thirty-five of 866 East One hundred and sixty-fifth Street, a motorman, was found unconscious from a mysterious fracture of the skull in the control box of an east side I. R. T. subway train when it came to a halt at 142nd Street and Lenox Avenue today. It is believed he fainted and struck his head against one of the steel controls. The train came to a stop automatically as his hand dropped from the "Dead man's" button.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

Will the Rain of Innocent Blood Be Stopped?

By DAVID BERKINGOFF.

In 1655 our forefathers came to Boston to proclaim a new dawn and to publish the gospel of freedom. For this crime they were made to pay five hundred pounds and stripped of their belongings. But this had not stopped our fathers. Mury Fischer and Ann Austin kept coming back. An old Bostonian, by the name of Nicholas Upsall, became interested in the Radicals of those days and he paid five shillings a week to the jailer, to let him feed the prisoners. He was bold enough to defend them publicly. For this, he was fined twenty pounds and banished from Boston.

Mary Clark, a mother of children, left England, came to Boston to be a witness for new ideas and she was answered by twenty stripes on her bare back from a whip with three cords "layed with fury" followed with imprisonment of twelve weeks in the winter. John Endicott, governor of Massachusetts had determined to keep free all free minded people out of Boston. In February, 1658, he punished John Ross and Christopher Holder with taking off an ear apiece.

But young and old kept coming to Boston and openly said to the rulers of Boston, "We are here to look your bloody laws in the face and to accompany those who suffer by them."

This made the rulers of Boston more furious and blood flowed over the streets of Boston and the friends of liberty issued a call to the world: "there is a river of innocent blood open, which will run over all if it is not stopped, and it must be done speedily." With the martyrdom of William Robinson, Marmaduke Stevenson (1659) and William Leddra (1661) the vein of innocent blood had been stopped.

So many years ago two men left the sunny Italy to work in our factories and till on our land. But besides their manual labor they also brought to us new ideas of a better life; and for this, the bloody den of Boston has opened up again ready to swallow two innocent victims. And before we are ready to write on the pages of American history the two martyrs of 1927—Sacco and Vanzetti —we are calling to the world, "Stop the rain of the Innocent blood!"

"They Shall Not Die!"

The sun goes down;
The whip
Stings;
And in the darkness
We raise our fists to it.

At home, a little child cries
Softly, like the wind
Over a fresh grave.

O you murderers, you judges, editors,
And you who sit there,
Hidden in the shadows,
Smoking so peacefully;
—No, it is not
To the hosses alone that we shout.
But to you, too as well.
—You labor leaders,
Who hold the strings,
Who have the power,
Who can do so much.

But you are either too cowardly
Or too much of one flesh
With the bosses.

The whip
Shrieks,
Down, down
"On your knees, you Reds;
On your knees, Sacco, Vanzetti,
On your piously knees, your knees."

And at home the child cries,
The child cries, plaintively,
Like the wind through the trees in summer.

It is easy to take on pen
And write lines,
But those lines will never
Express our hatred for you.
Judges, murderers, white guards;

For to say how we hate you,
How we feel,
You would need to
Tear out the hearts
Of millions of workers
And throw them on white paper;
And the blood, streaming, this way and that,
Might tell of our pain and our hatred,
Of our hatred to you;

The sun goes down.
Lower, lower.
It is so dim.
Comrade, but it is dim!

And we can hear
The whip moaning,
Moaning, cutting.

We can hear the whip shrieking,
Shrieking, weeping

The sun goes down,
So low
And all we can see
Is wide fields, hills in silhouette,
Quiet waters.

On that hill are two gibbets,
Sacco and Vanzetti hang by the hands
From them.
And two, who are men,
Are raising the whips again,
Again, again;

At the foot of the hill,
Look, comrade, look!
Those animals, bearing in their bloody teeth,
Fresh strips of leather,
To be used on the warm flesh
New strips of leather

And all around us
The huge mass shudders.

If we could move this mass,
One step, one step forward,
If we could stir this mass
To one seething motion,
A little child would not cry
Lonely, not comfortless
Here, nor anywhere.

Workers, they are
Your brothers, your comrades!
Workers, can't you feel the whip,
You too,
Pot with blood?
For if fate equalls
Us all of us.

The sun goes down,
And slowly it reddens.
The low sun
Dyes the bleeding bodies
Which is redder,
The hangmen know.

The hills loom,
The judges frown.
Two more lashes,
One more, then, and soon it
Will be all, all over.

One resolute step,
Fist held high;
One sweeping charge,
Forches high,
One clear, thunderous, wrenching cry:
"They shall not die!"
THEY SHALL NOT DIE!"

—OSCAR RYAN.

SOVIET TRADE HERE INCREASING RAPIDLY; AMTORG PURCHASES SMASH ALL RECORDS

The following statement on American-Soviet trade was issued yesterday by Saul G. Bron, chairman of the board of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, 165 Broadway, New York, which represents here the commercial interests of the Soviet trading organizations:

"During the past month there has been a significant increase in the monthly value of purchases in the United States by Amtorg, and the shipment to the Soviet Union. It can now be said that the constructive process in the Soviet Union, accelerated pace promises to continue.

"The volume of Amtorg's orders placed with American concerns in the interest of this upbuilding and the July broke all monthly records by large consequent increase in individual purchases here during the period October-March, the first half of the current Soviet fiscal year, at 100, the monthly average of the succeeding quarter, April-June, was 140 and of July, 267. This gives an indication of the rapid gain.

"Orders placed by Amtorg with American manufacturers during the first ten months of the current Soviet fiscal year amount to $22,700,000. The projected purchasing program for the entire fiscal year has already been surpassed by $2,700,000. In addition, orders now in sight, to be consummated in the United States during the next few months, under suitable market conditions, aggregate $11,000,000.

"The above figures do not include cotton, the principal item of the American export list to the Soviet Union, which is handled by the All-Russian Textile Syndicate of 120 Broadway. Orders placed through Amtorg were about $15,000,000.

"Of the total monthly purchases of Soviet orders here are for machine tools, rather than consumption goods, as is generally the case. This is significant of the upbuilding and constructive process in the Soviet Union. Probably few Americans, in connection with the Soviet market, realize the extent of this upbuilding and the large consequent increase in individual consuming capacity since the war. Before the war the per capita consumption of wheat was 4.1 bushels, now it is 4.8 bushels. Similarly, the per capita consumption of milk has risen from 35.4 to 111.5 lbs.; eggs, from 5.1 to 6.1; sugar, 8.8 pounds to 12.5, ounces to 3.5. An increased demand for manufactured goods is also making itself evident in the monthly figures of the succeeding quarters. For instance, in 1913 the production of cotton fabrics, for instance, rose from 9.8 meters to 14.6 meters.

"During the past ten months some 50 Soviet technicians and industrial executives have visited the United States to familiarize themselves at first hand with American productive methods. These men represent some of the largest economic organizations in the Soviet Union, including the Azneft oil trust, the Donetz coal trust, the Don Basin coal trust, the Chemical trust, the Dnieper hydro-electric development and the Supreme Economic Council. Such visitors are in a real sense permanent business-builders of a high order."

COAL MINERS TO STRIKE FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

No Illusions

By JAMES P. CANNON,
(Secretary International Labor Defense.)

The lives of Sacco and Vanzetti still hang in the balance and they are, in greater danger now than ever before. Every member of the case should begin with this warning to the working masses not to be fooled with false hopes and false security.

What has happened and what are the conclusions to be drawn for our guidance in the struggle during the remaining days of suspense? Some people, no doubt, have seen in the eleventh hour reprieve a sign of a change of heart of the Massachusetts Bourbons who have been moving with such refined and deliberate cruelty, to blot out the lives of the Italian rebel workers. Some ideas are the most dangerous illusions. It was just to create these illusions and thereby to get some relief from the thundering clamor of the world's millions, that this latest action in the "cat and mouse" game was taken.

There is not a hint or promise in any aspect of this new development of the protest movement of the masses and to organize a countermement of any design except to gain time, to maneuver for the demoralization campaign against it. The foremost problem of the workers who see in Sacco and Vanzetti the symbols and banner-bearers of their own class and cause is to understand clearly the new turn of events and to shape their course along the right line.

The militant protest movement has halted the executioners up till now. As the final hour drew near this movement assumed such proportions and militancy and expressed itself in mass demonstrations and strikes on such a scale as to shake the world. It was especially the last phase of mass demonstrations and strikes which threw the real power of the masses into the scale against the murder plans of the Massachusetts hangmen. Those who emphasized this line of action, who understood and pointed out at every turn the fundamental class issues involved in the case, and who appealed to the mass power of the workers, were entirely correct. This line is the decisive line. The greatest hope now lies in a further development and energetic promotion of this class struggle policy.

The case is again before the black-gowned judges on another appeal by the defense against flagrant errors in the trial. It is, of course, absolutely right to exhaust every legal possibility and technicality in the fight, provided, the workers have no illusions. We must remember that the case has been before these same judges many times before, and that they have again and again put their seal of approval on the criminally false verdict. We must remember that the appointment of Governor Fuller's Commission revealed itself as a ghastly trick to disarm the protest movement and fortify the verdict with more dignified sanctions. The latest move should be suspected as another maneuver of the same sort, designed to give the outward appearance of still more scrupulous "fairness" in the process by which the two labor fighters are to be burned alive.

Remember, also, that powerful influences of the exploiting class are being brought to bear for the carrying out of the death sentence, and that the final issue, just because it is an issue of the class struggle, and not merely an isolated instance of miscarriage of their so-called "justice," will depend upon the power and might of the class forces set into motion on each side.

The great task, therefore, in the few fateful days remaining, up to the last minute of the last hour, is to put all energy, courage and militancy into the organization of mass demonstrations and protest strikes. All brakes upon this movement must be regarded as the greatest danger. All illusions which paralyze the movement must be overcome. All agents of the bosses who try to sabotage and discredit the protest and strike movement must be given their proper name.

While the judges of the Supreme Court prepare their decision on the case again we must appeal at the same time to the laboring masses

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

NICHOLA SACCO threatened with forcible feeding has broken his hunger strike. There are only five more days now left until the date set for the execution. On August 22nd, unless the protests of labor and sympathetic elements throughout the world have succeeded in stopping the cold-blooded crime against Sacco and Vanzetti, those two innocent victims of capitalist "justice" will have paid with their lives for their loyalty to the workingclass.

THIS column announced the demise of a Chicago gentleman whose name is familiar to several hundred radicals who had occasion to sample the hospitality of United States prison cells during and after the war. Lawrence McDonough, stool-pigeon in the I. W. W. sergeant on the Chicago police force and later an attorney, is the man. It appears that Lawrence, being an ambitious fellow got his hands on some money that did not belong to him, and being accustomed to treat the workers rough, he that he could get away with the dough. But he reckoned without his bankers.

THE notorious red-baiter and fink, fearing impending indictment grew violent and in terror drove his family out of his home and turned on the gas. That was the end of McDonough. I first made this person's acquaintance in the spring of 1923 when he, in the company of Mr. Jake Spolansky then of the department of justice, entered the office of the Voice of Labor, which I edited and arrested me. While on the way to the detective bureau McDonough lectured me on the folly of "wasting" my time in such unremunerative employment. See what the workers did to Debs! He was going to look out for himself. He was going to make money. Hell! We would not have Communism in the United States in one hundred years.

MCDONOUGH boasted that he fooled the I. W. W., in which organization he steeled for a time. "They did not seem to question how a fellow could smoke cigars and eat steaks on $30 a week," he said. This despicable creature was one of the star witnesses against the I. W. W. in the famous Chicago trial and also OPEN THEM UP!

The jails of capitalism still hold the two victims of the hatred of the ruling class. Behind the bars of the capitalist Bastille the champions of the working class, Sacco and Vanzetti, are languishing, while the ruling class plots to murder them. Through the public pressure of the large masses of the people, we must open the bars and give Sacco and Vanzetti their freedom.

Behind the walls of the United States Department of Justice, the secret files show incontestably the innocence of the two convicted men. The power of the masses, mobilized throughout the country, must compel the United States government to open these files to public view, so that the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti may be established.

How shall we mobilize this mass pressure! What instrument shall we use to rally the forces of labor! The DAILY WORKER is the bugle for labor's clarion call. Hundreds of thousands will down tools and congregate in solemn protest against this other effort to take the lives of our champions. We ask you to strengthen the power of that call, to give it volume and scope, by your contribution to THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

DEMONSTRATE IN UNION SQUARE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI!

The Workers Of New York:—

Sacco and Vanzetti will be murdered in a Massachusetts electric chair unless organized labor rallies to the defense of our framed-up comrades.

The hearing before the Supreme Judicial Court is a mockery of justice and is being held to disarm the workers and make them believe that the courts will act to save our comrades.

Unless we make our demonstrations and strikes powerful enough we will be confronted with the corpses of Sacco and Vanzetti during the early part of next week.

We urge every class-conscious worker in New York to be at Union Square on Friday, August 19th, at 1 p. m. See that your fellow workers swell the ranks of militant labor and make Friday a day to be remembered in the ranks of the class war.

The workers of New York must show the rapacious murderers of Massachusetts that the working class accepts its relentless challenge and that they will not permit the butchers of our innocent comrades.

WORKERS WRITE TO THEIR DAILY ABOUT SACCO AND VANZETTI

Gov. Fuller Wants to Follow in Footsteps Of President Coolidge

Writing to the DAILY WORKER on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, I. George, New York, says in part:

1. Gov. Fuller best ambition to be president, and with his eye on Coolidge's handling of the Boston police strike, has sided with the forces of law and order even if he has had to lend justice, already blind, into ambush. It must be a great source of satisfaction to him, now that his political ambitions are left intact, perhaps even furthered.

2. Was determined from the start not to discredit Thayer, or lay the legal machinery of Massachusetts open to adverse criticism and ridicule.

3. Was not going to commit political suicide by remitting their sentence.

If he could not grant them complete freedom, who long since had grown so cold and lifeless within that freedom would have availed them nothing save as vindicators, why did he not lay their case before the highest court of the land, or else commute their sentence, deeming, out of simple humanity and mercy, their seven years hell torture enough. More than anything else he should have commuted their sentence to allow for the possibility of new facts coming to light to prove their innocence, as they already have in the confession of one of the men who belonged to the gang which did the killing.

General Strike Will Save Sacco and Vanzetti.

Dear Comrades:

With an aching heart I write this letter. It was a terrific shock to me, to read in The DAILY WORKER, the doom of Sacco and Vanzetti. Fuller has called it "justice." But I and many other call it a cold blooded murder. It will be another "bloody stain," on the State of Massachusetts, in no other case was innocence so effectively proved, as in Sacco and Vanzetti.

Governor Fuller is but a political office hunter, and who would send not only two innocent men to death but even a thousand. What, are human beings, to men like Governor Fuller?

Dear Workers, are we going to stand by and see the killing in cold blood, of our two Comrades? No, we are not. Sacco and Vanzetti must not die.

We have few days, from the date of this letter. Will you let those precious days slip by, without collectively and effectively battling for their freedom? Let's unite in one solid wall, and strike for their freedom.

Do you my Comrades see, what the so called "Our Government," is driving at. Fascism is their goal. And it is for you and me to stop this; If only for humanity's sake. If not for us, workers and farmers, American Capital would have closed its iron glove of greed on us.

As it is, American Capitalist has already laid its bloody paw, on our miserable brother workers, of the Latin American countries, and China.

Again I repeat, A General Strike is the only tool, that will save Sacco and Vanzetti from their doom.—K. B.

Sweat-Band Makers.

The Sweat-Band Makers Union has sent the following resolution to The DAILY WORKER:

"We the workers of the Sweat Band Makers Union protest against the unjust notion of the Massachusetts legal machine and condemn the murderous act that notion against the two labor martyrs, Sacco and Vanzetti."

In a letter to The DAILY WORKER, L. Cimma, secretary of the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, feminen section, hits the framesup of Sacco and Vanzetti. The letter says:

"I am not pleading for Sacco and Vanzetti because I am an Italian, but because they are two progressive workers.

"How can Governor Fuller, who is not a lawyer but a labor hater, condemn two workers whom the entire world believes innocent."

The following is a copy of a letter:

August 11, 1927.

Hon Alvan T. Fuller,
Governor of Massachusetts,
Boston Massachusetts.
Dear Sir;

As an American citizen, solicitous for the good name of my country the world over, I beg you to reconsider your decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. All at once, this good name is about to become a byword and a hissing, through out the civilized world, among all kinds of men. Take a long view, and be a statesman in this moment critical for the reputation and the influence of America in the years just ahead. A strong doubt about the guilt of Sacco and Vanzetti exists in the minds of many millions of sober, honest and justice loving men and women. Judge Thayer's behavior in passing upon his own fairness has been an incredible spectacle. This is certainly no time for the preservation of comity between judges to be a chief consideration; and that, with all due respect for the gentleman of the Massachusetts judiciary who have had anything to do with this case, seems to many good Americans a consideration which these gentlemen persistently overlook.

A very great opportunity Sir, is yours. I beg you to take it and thus save the good name of America for fair play to all within her gates. Save that good name, not only here and now, but to the pages of history. For remember that it is not Massachusetts alone that is going to be held responsible by public opinion in this matter; it is all America. Act so that it shall be evident to all the world that the governor of Massachusetts cares more for the honor of American justice than for the machinery of the law, and the pride of the law.

Very respectfully yours,
(Signed) R. D. O'Leary, Professor of English, University of Kansas, (Harvard, 1895).

John M. Levitt, former Commander of the World War Veterans, sent the following telegram yesterday to Rose Baron, Secretary of the New York Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee:

"Just wired Governor Fuller to use the power of his office to free Sacco and Vanzetti that America might once more play safe in its traditions of justice and democracy. May join your picket line in my former army uniform.—John M. Levitt, former Commander of World War Veterans."

Los Angeles Courts to Deport Workers for Sacco-Vanzetti Rally

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 17.—With the exception of Malcolm Bruce, Jean Russel and an Italian named Gondolpho, all Los Angeles workers arrested in the last few days in connection with a Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting at the Plaza, August 9, have been released from bail. The three first mentioned will have a deportation hearing in the federal court at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow, August 12.

The workers who will be tried for deportation were arrested with many others who were charged with criminal syndicalism when a Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting was broken up by the police in the Plaza a few days ago.

Among those arrested were Sam Globerman, secretary of the Workers Party, Malcolm Bruce, Joseph Sinoff, Michael Hughes, Frank Spector, Nat Prager and Homer Bartchy, who was recently expelled from a Los Angeles high school for Communist propagandn work there.

A raid on the Workers (Communist) Party headquarters has yielded the police only a supply of American and Mexican Communist literature. All the comrades present at the time of the raid were set free by the police.

"Consciousness of Guilt" Fuller's Excuse

JUDGE THAYER, Governor Fuller, the "advisory committee" comprising President Lowell of Harvard, President Stratton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Judge Grant and the rest of the Massachusetts murder crew dwelt at great length upon what they described as "consciousness of guilt," in their frame-up to railroad Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair. They claimed that because these two Italian workers refused to divulge the names of other anarchists to police bullies they revealed a consciousness of guilt when questioned, because they did not at first state that they were going to obtain some radical literature for distribution.

On such flimsy evidence these workers have been constantly in the shadow of the electric chair for seven years. Since the Massachusetts gang has established the theory of "consciousness of guilt" it may be applied to its inventors, particularly to Governor Fuller.

When the explosion wrecked the house of a juror we declared that in our firm conviction it was the work of an agent of the Massachusetts authorities, who wanted to discredit the defenders of Sacco and Vanzetti and enable Fuller to give the word to murder these tortured workers on Monday night. The utterances of Fuller tend fully to confirm our conviction that he had guilty knowledge of the explosion. In a letter to the juror whose house was damaged Fuller declared:

"It would be well for those who, through ignorance and malice or sentimentality, contributed such dire results to be held jointly responsible."

Translated into plain English, instead of read in the crude diction of Fuller, this means that the governor of Massachusetts would like to be able to jail or assassinate all those who in any way criticised the trial, the judge, the corrupt jury and the governor and his committee. This utterance shows the dark malignancy of Fuller and his murder crew. They would have bombs explode at convenient times and places and then proceed to wholesale terror against all their political enemies.

Fuller's utterance reveals "consciousness of guilt" a thousand times more convincing than the evidence on which Sacco and Vanzetti were railroaded.

Let no one be intimidated by the ravings of this bloodhound in the state house of Massachusetts. Let the masses of workers drive forward to the strike of Monday, determined to shatter the shackles off Sacco and Vanzetti and return them to activity in the ranks of the labor movement.

VANZETTI EXPECTED LITTLE FROM GOV. FULLER'S COMMITTEE OF HANGMEN, HIS LETTERS SHOW

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—That Vanzetti expected little from Governor Fuller or his biased advisory committee is revealed in two letters which he wrote to Mrs. Jessica Henderson, a friend, who made them public Sunday.

Asking that his sister, Luigia, be notified before the death "sentence" governor is decided to execute us, Vanzetti declares in a letter dated July 20th:

"I see, dear Mrs. Henderson, that you are still optimist and hopeful, greatly trusting to Governor Fuller. Maybe you are right and will be right. But for all that I am told and I can understand both the governor and the commission distruste all our witnesses; trusts all the government's perjurers, cannot or want not understand or both of that.

"Governor Fuller told Rose that second that my lawyers at the Plymouth trial wanted me to take the stand; that I refused to take it and sent a boy of 12 years to talk for me for meeting it seems harmt by heart. A great se wrong that this believe was never done to truth and to an innocent man as I am.

"How can the governor not believe can understand of both the governor in Beltrando and all my truthful witnesses? How can he believe that a and the committee's words and attitude convinced me that they are 12-year old boy could have perjured against us, intolerant and prejudiced himself in three hours of cross-examination by Katzmann? And Katzmann put him on the stand again for more than an hour, next day and without warning. If the governor does not believe Beltrando, he neither believes all the other my witnesses. How can he believe that a boy or he Beltrando as now, could insist in a perjury?

"Assails Attitude in Inquiry.

"He's capable of perjury? Why then, Beltrando tells now of his positiveness of my innocence every where? Always? To all? How can the governor believe in the state's perjurers against us, he who knows or should know that they changed three times their deposition, in order to fit them to me and convict me.

"And what of the commission? Judge Grant is against us to death as he has always been since our arrest and without knowing the case. We know now positively that all he want is to execute us.

"Also the attitude of the other two members is against us. A few days ago they abused three Italian men because they witnessed the truth. Lately it was found out the three men had told the truth—but as an indication of feeling the fact remains.

"This is the reason why we began our hunger strike. If after seven years and three months of agony, during which we proved our innocence and the iniquity of our trial and trialers, we have to be murdered in such way as this for crimes of which we are innocent—we prefer to let us die of starvation rather than die without a protest. I wonder if our enemies can believe that we are wrong?"

"Well, tomorrow, after having read your letter sent by Rose, I will write something more. But while I have it in mind; if you are not sure of fortitude, but don't be too optimist with them, because, if I am not wrong and things are turning to the more terrible a fatal news.

"With great heaty yours,

"BARTOLOMEO VANZETTI.

The second letter, dated July 21, in part follows:

"From the commission interview of us, I got the impression that President Lowell and President Stratton are honestly intentioned and not hostile to us by pre-determination. Yet it seemed to me that, in spite of their great scholarship, they had not understood certain most vicious actions of the prosecution and the iniquity of Judge Thayer's conduct.

"As for Judge Grant he is but another Thayer.

"These things I explain and will explain in our statement why we are innocent.

"Since then, all that I was told and and the committee's words and attitude convinced me that they are against us, intolerant and prejudiced against us, obsessed and bent with rancor and believe the government perjurers, in short, that either they cannot or want not understand, or both, but are doubtlessly against us.

"You know what the governor told Rose and Beltrando Brini. After that he grilled again Beltrando, who said the same things and after, that the governor told some one "But Beltrando must have come at my house at 9 a. m. to say that I have had time to come back from Bridgewater."

Feels Certain of Execution

"Well, after that Beltrando came to him and told him that he had never told him so and all the governor seemed to care for was to harm who had told Beltrando that he had said so. So you can see that his attitude is one of a man who honestly and hardly tries to convince himself that he is right to send S. & V. to the chair, and not at all the attitude of a man impartial and unprejudiced.

"It is all this that gave us the certitude that we are going to be murdered and this investigation will only be the extreme insult, and for this we are fasting. We want, at least, protest. Being so, it does not matter if the forced nutrition will hurt us, or because we will soon be killed.

"I wish to thank you, Mrs. Henderson, for all that so very much that you have done and are doing for us and our poor families.

"And, if we can meet any more, I secure you that I will carry in my grave my appreciation, gratitude and affect to you. You could not do more than you are doing for us.

"Wishing you good and with most heartily regards, I am yours,

(Signed)

"BARTOLOMEO VANZETTI."

KELLOGG HIDING EVIDENCE FROM SACCO, VANZETTI

Will Not Disclose What Embassy Told Argentine

By Federated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—State department officials refuse to release the report on the Sacco-Vanzetti case which was sent to American envoys abroad several years ago. The existence of this document was unknown until disclosed from Buenos Aires revealed that the American ambassador to the Argentine had issued an apology for Massachusetts based on the contents of the diplomatic report.

At the state department it was emphatically denied that the report had been prepared in conjunction with the department of justice whose activities in the Sacco-Vanzetti case are largely responsible for the doom hanging over the two Italian workers. The report was based on information from the U. S. district attorney's office in Boston, it was stated.

Point blank refusal met the request of the Federated Press for a copy of the department's instructions to its foreign representatives. The document is entirely confidential and was intended for the private information of American diplomats.

The action of the Argentine ambassador in issuing a formal defense of America's efforts to electrocute Sacco and Vanzetti shows how deeply the case has effected South American Newspapers in Buenos Aires from the extreme left to the business papers such as the Nacion and the Prensa have condemned Massachusetts' brand of justice and demanded the liberation of the two radicals.

CLEVELAND HOLDS BIG STRIKE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

Two and Three Meetings Nightly Carry On Work

CLEVELAND, August 17.—Considerable activity has been carried on in Cleveland during the past week in connection with the campaign for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. Local Cleveland of the International Labor Defense, together with the Cleveland branch of the Boston Defense Committee, and other organizations, have participated in the campaign with successful results. In addition to neighborhood meetings which have been going on for some time, a very successful meeting was held on the Public Square, Tuesday, August 9, which more than 3000 Cleveland workers assembled to voice their protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. At this meeting a tall was passed for a general strike the following day. The collection was taken up and the following day, August 10, a general strike was declared. The "one day stay of execution" strike was called by the Sacco and Vanzetti Mass Defense Committee. Thousands of workers assembled on Cleveland's Public Square Wednesday afternoon and night. A meeting was held at noon and continued until 1:15 a. m. when news was received of the "one day stay of execution" and Sacco and Vanzetti. When this information was given to the public officials, the crowd went wild with enthusiasm and broke into the singing of the "Internationale."

Both meetings were conducted in an orderly fashion, in spite of the fact that Cleveland's sensational sheet, the News, tried, in various articles and editorials, to incite riot and trouble.

The activity for the coming week will be intensified so that every chance of energy that can be mustered by the International Labor Defense will be utilized in behalf of the Sacco-Vanzetti campaign. A mass demonstration will be held on the Public Square, Thursday night, another Sunday afternoon and a general strike for Monday, August 22, with a mass meeting on the Public Square on Monday beginning at noon and continuing through the entire day and evening. 2 and 3 neighborhood meetings are being held each night.

Sacco-Vanzetti Poems.

DAILY WORKER poets are urged to write their sentiments about the Sacco-Vanzetti case in free, untrammeled, didactic, dynamic, or even lyric verse for the Greenwich Village parts of exhibition which opened yesterday at 190 Bedford street. Poetry for the exhibition should be addressed to Lew Ney, 28 East 12th street, New York City.

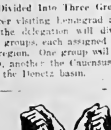
AMERICAN LABOR MISSION ARRIVES IN SOVIET UNION

Maurer Speaks for the Delegation

MOSCOW, Aug. 17.—The first American workers' delegation to arrive in the Soviet Union is within our borders at the present time. The delegation was met at the station by representatives of the Soviet labor unions. The meeting was extremely cordial and the visitors expressed admirations for the achievements they had already witnessed on their way across the country on the train.



Maurer Speaks for Visitors.

James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, and chairman of the delegation, declared that the leaders of the American Federation of Labor showed energetic resistance to the idea of sending a labor delegation to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, but the American workers desire to know the whole truth about the U. S. S. R. and for this purpose sent the delegation representing not less than a quarter of a million workers.

"Our first impressions of the U. S. S. R.," said Maurer, "showed us that the people live a full life. From the beginning of the border we noted everywhere feverish construction of houses, building of roads, repairing of bridges and so forth. We hope to investigate in detail the position of industry, the lives and conditions of the workers so that we can have our conclusions founded upon incontestable data."

Divided Into Three Groups.

After visiting Leningrad and Moscow the delegation will divide into three groups, each assigned to a certain region. One group will visit the Urals, another the Caucasus and the third the Donetz basin.

COAL MINERS WILL STRIKE MONDAY FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI; NEGRO LABOR ALSO OUT

pression of the iniquitous decision of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, which decision has found full support in the statement of Governor Alvan T. Fuller, and his no less bloodthirsty committee of investigation, we are issuing a call to Negro labor to give evidence of its solidarity with the class conscious labor element and join with those who will be down in front to accept the challenge of the rapacious agents of capitalism."

Giant Petition.

Delegates of the various unions which have pledged support in Monday's general strike are calling at the headquarters of the Emergency Committee and plans are being perfected to make the Monday walk-out the largest in the history of New York labor. Ricardo Sodero of the Musicians' Union wired Rose Baron of the Emergency Committee as follows: "Wire American Federation of Musicians of Greater New York for protest strike. Glad you have accepted petition idea."

Mr. Sodero is preparing a petition which contains the names of more than 17,000 musicians in Greater New York.

The following appeal was telegraphed to the Musicians' Union by Miss Baron: "Only the unified action of organized labor can save Sacco and Vanzetti. These innocent men will be murdered by the Massachusetts murderer class unless labor voices its mighty protest. Urge you to join general strike called Monday, 10 a. m."

Leaflets On Street.

Leaflets calling for a mass attendance at the Union Square protest demonstration called for Friday at 1 p. m. appeared on the streets yesterday. The leaflet is printed in red and black and reads as follows: "Save Sacco and Vanzetti. Sacco said: 'Only the unified action of the working class can save us now.' Protest. Act. Demand. On to Union Square 1 p. m. Friday, August 19th. No execution. No life imprisonment. Freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. On to Union Square. Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee."

Officials of the Emergency Committee declared that 500,000 leaflets have been printed and are being distributed.

Claessans Should Retract.

When asked what her opinion was on the socialist refusal to endorse the Monday general protest strike, Rose Baron, secretary of the Emergency Committee, said: "It is hard to believe that the socialist party also claims that it sometimes speaks in the interest of certain sections of the labor movement should attempt to sabotage this virile mass action against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. I hope that August 19th will rouse before it is too late that his party will be judged on its stand in this matter. I trust that he will show the necessary spunk and decency and retract his disavowal statement. I remember when Claessens pretended to be a militant socialist, but from his statement yesterday it appears that he has taken up evil ways. I hope that Mr. Claessens will recall his reactionary statement. At any rate organized labor will answer the strike call in vigorous tones on Monday. I feel very sorry for Mr. Claessens."

Strike Monday.

The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee issued an appeal yesterday addressed to all labor organizations urging action in the Monday general protest strike in New York. The appeal reads:

"To organized New York: Sacco and Vanzetti still stand in the shadow of the body-shattering electric chair. The only crime of which they are guilty is that they dared to hold opinions contrary to the dictum of the Massachusetts textile barons. Sacco recently said that only the united action of organized labor can give them peace. The Boston Defense Committee has issued a call uniting aside Monday, August 22nd as the day for a general protest strike throughout the world. Acting on this call the New York Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee is calling upon organized labor to down tools on Monday and join in this world-wide protest. Brothers, you have seen that all efforts to appeal to the reason and humanity of the Massachusetts legal hierarchy have been without avail, the appeals of great men in the fields of science, art and jurisprudence have fallen upon deaf ears. Only the mass action of militant labor throughout the world halted the execution of our brothers at the last minute. But this eleventh hour respite is only a ruse. It is intended to still the outraged feelings of the workers of the world so that the murder can be carried out when the public resentment has died down. We must not permit this to happen. Irrespective of our divided opinions on many matters, on the saving of Sacco and Vanzetti we must present a united front. Our ranks must be unbroken in the face of the most criminal acts of the master class in the history of the class war. Support the strike call. Save Sacco and Vanzetti."

Many Unions Rally.

Miss Baron stated that she expected a greater walk-out on Monday than during last week's general strike. A great many unions have already promised support in the strike move and it is expected that more will join the movement during the week. Several unions have called meetings at which a strike vote will be taken. Other units of industrial workers have pledged support and will strike whether they are officially called by their unions or not, Miss Baron declared.

Plan Supreme Court Fight.

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—An "eleventh hour" visit to Washington, by either train or airplane, as a last desperate effort to save the lives of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti was being planned today by defense forces.

The visit to the national capital would be made to obtain a writ of certiorari from the United States Supreme Court to review the legal opinions of Judge Webster Thayer, Supreme Judicial Court justice, in his decision to deny the motion for new trial, revocation of sentence and a writ of error.

It became known that A. A. Mcmanimon, of Boston, stated that several moves to federal courts were under consideration but that application to such courts was practically hopeless.

No Fair Trial.

In making application for the writ, defense attorneys will contend that they have not received a trial to which persons are guaranteed by the 14th amendment of the United States Constitution. The allegation also will be made that they did not receive a fair trial because of the prejudice of Judge Webster Thayer against Sacco and Vanzetti because of their radical views. The United States Supreme Court has ruled in [illegible] cases that such [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

New Revolution Will Destroy Reaction in China

Events in China clearly indicate the next stage of that tremendous movement to be a revolutionary uprising of the workers and peasants against the traitors who are trying to maintain a military despotism in the interests of the bourgeoisie. Already the revolution is gathering force to the south of Feng Yu-hsiang, who has succeeded to the mantle of bonapartism formerly worn by the butcher, Chiang Kai-shek. He is also faced with the Peking forces of Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian bandit and agent of the feudalists and imperialists, on the north. Feng will have to choose between one of the two forces and it is plain that he has set out on a path over which there can never be any retreat and he will inevitably land in the camp of the feudal lords and the imperialists. This applies not particularly to Feng as an individual but to the political tendency that he represents at this moment. Personally he may be forced to step out the same as he has already forced Chiang Kai-shek to quit Nanking before the uniting of the traitor government of Wuhan with the Nanking murder government established by Chiang.

The Chinese capitalist class hasn't sufficient vitality to lead an independent political existence, hence its military leaders represent the only force capable of maintaining a semblance of government. Chiang's Nanking government rested upon the military power supported by the lowest and basest elements of the corrupted soldiery. Feng's power rests on the same base. This is bonapartism in its historical form. It is the Kerensky stage of the Chinese revolution; the stage of ten years ago in Russia.

But bonapartism carries within itself the elements of its own destruction. To maintain such a predatory military force new demands and new inroads have constantly to be made upon those social elements who support it. To maintain bonapartism the war lord have to pillage even the capitalists who form their social base. In a short time this sort of oppression by the military drives the big capitalists to seek relief by turning toward the actual agents of imperialism.

Unable to bear the burden of supporting an independent government and having definitely and for all time broken with the workers and peasants they must, of necessity, go into the camp of the imperialists and the feudal military leaders who serve the imperialists.

In spite of the excessive violence against the masses, in spite of the apparent power of the combined Nanking-Wuhan government, this stage in the Chinese revolution can be but an evanescent one.

Under the leadership of the Chinese Communist Party which has now raised the question of the immediate formation of Soviets, the revolutionary struggle will proceed against the bonapartism of Feng Yu-hsiang and against all his present allies and those whom history has decreed will be his future allies, the Peking agents of the imperialists.

Thus, amidst the tempest of a new civil war, the Chinese revolution enters into a new and final stage—the stage of the conquest of power by the workers and peasants.

In this struggle the revolutionists of China must have the support of the workers of the imperialist countries. If the imperialist military forces keep their hands off, the question of the final victory of the revolution will soon be decisively settled.

More than ever must be raised the insistent demand that the United States government get its warships and marines out of China and keep them out. Mass pressure on the part of the workers must be exerted to the utmost in order to cripple the forces of those imperialist bandits who stand ready to enter into China in order to defend the predatory capitalists against the revolution.

Socialist Leaders Join the Murder Crew.

The utterances of one of the spokesmen of the bankrupt socialist party leadership in an attempt to sabotage the strike set for Monday in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti definitely aligns them with Judge Thayer, Governor Fuller, his Back Bay "advisory committee" and the rest of the murder crew bent upon burning to death in the electric chair these two men whose sufferings have come to symbolize the sufferings of the working class.

In their blind fury against the Communists because we insisted upon a genuine united front in behalf of these two workers the socialist leaders have sacrificed the very last vestige of working class respect and consideration. They have gone one step too far and there is no retreat for them except open and explicit repudiation of those who issued a public declaration to the effect that they would do everything in their power to prevent the development of the sentiment for Sacco and Vanzetti into tremendous mass demonstrations that will save these workers.

In their frenzied desire to exterminate the Communists the socialist leaders have exposed themselves for what they really are—potential murderers of the working class.

Surely the rank and file of the socialist party will not stand for flying thus besmirched by their leaders, but will indignantly leave them in the camp of the enemies of labor. We do not attribute to the members the crimes of their leaders. We make a sharp distinction between those few who still support the Oneals, the Hillquits, the Sigmans and their representatives of the type of Edward Levinson, who released the screed for the reptile press to use against Sacco and Vanzetti.

Unable to maintain a press of their own because of their loss of working class support these socialist leaders have free access to the columns of the reptile press where their reactionary screeds are welcomed.

There is but one answer to this attempt to weaken the mass protest in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti and that is for the workers to demonstrate in larger numbers than ever before on Friday and to increase in volume and intensity the strike on next Monday.

As to the socialist leaders responsible for this shameless outrage, their own membership will refuse to follow them and share with them the loathing and execration of all workers who learn of their infamy.

Developments in the British Labor Movement

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Since the great general strike which ended in a betrayal of the British toilers by the right wing, and so-called left labor leaders, a rapid process of clarifying the political atmosphere has been taking place. The right wing leaders have not gone any further in that direction. That would be impossible. But the so-called left-wingers of the Purcell-Hicks-Citrine type have nothing left now of their old progressivism but their "left" phrases.

At the recent congress of the International Federation of Trade Unions, A. A. Purcell, president of the organization, delivered a speech in which he said that the fruits of the Russian revolution must be conserved. But as the Communist Work-ly Worker pointed out, "Purcell cannot efface culpability as president for the blacklegging against the British miners; the sabotage of a world trade union conference to help China and to defeat the attacks on the Soviet Union." It is futile for Purcell to make a radical speech before a collection of bureaucrats and then refuse to take any action calculated to give practical expression to his speech.

Herbert Smith, president of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain and is one of the latest labor leaders to join the anvil chorus against the Soviet Union. The Russian workers gave $5,000,000 to the British miners during the strike, that is more than twice the entire collections in the rest of the world, including Great Britain. And this much from an allegedly impoverished country.

Yet at a recent conference of miners' federation Smith delivered the shrewdest attack on Communism and said that the workers in the Soviet Union are little more than slaves. When Smith was in Russia with the British Trade Union Delegation he was loud in his praise of the freedom enjoyed by the workers in the Soviet Union, and expressed the hope that the workers of Great Britain would soon follow in their footsteps.

The miners' conference voted against Communist Party affiliation with the Labor Party, tho the Communist Party continued to support the miners' strike long after the Labor Party leaders deserted them. And the South Wales delegates were bound by their instructions to vote for affiliation, they remained neutral. That is a way delegates have with them.

While Smith is waging war on the Communists, Havelock Wilson, president of the Seamen's Union, and one of the most notorious tools of capitalism in any country, is financing a so-called "non-political" union in the coal mining industry. Frank Hodges, ex-lord of the ephuriality in the Lloyd Donald government, and well-known Communist baiter, is heading the proposed organization. It has the support of the government and is also being fed by the American company union.

As a result of Wilson's policy, there is a sharp division on the executive committee of the miners' union. W. J. Hughes, general secretary, has come out in opposition to Wilson. He says that while Wilson wants to give a grant of $50,000 to the proposed scab union, the total membership in the organization is $2,000. The motion to donate the $50,000 has already been made and the opposition to Wilson is now trying to prevent the old strikebreaker from paying it. Davies, general secretary, has refused to sign the check.

* * *

George Lansbury's Labor Weekly has gone out of existence by unanimous vote of the New Leader, official organ of the Independent Labor Party. Lansbury has been steadily going to the right and his attacks on the Communists have been of the same pattern as those of the right wing leaders. The refusal of his personal organization of what ever militancy it originally possessed and the usual fate overcame him. Lansbury is now writing for the New Leader, but there are rumors persistent enough to make it probable that the right wing leaders of the Labor Party consider this weekly something of a nuisance and that the basket is waiting impatiently for its head.

Sir. Kirkwood, one of the "bold men from the Clyde" has a reputation for ferocity against the capitalists. I notice that this same Kirkwood was showing a party of Boy Scouts thru the House of Commons and was not content until he secured around to find Sir Douglas Hogg and Winston Churchill, to whom I introduced the young patriots. Kirkwood is one of those "on hand during Ugly."

The progressives of pre-war and pre-war style days are being largely stripped of their camouflage here as elsewhere and only the Communists and the young radicals who are developing out of this phase of the class war are showing themselves ready to lead the workers in their fight against their class enemy.

The Georgian-Menshevik Trial

Where the Threads Lead To.

Adidjaparidze, chief of the Georgian Menshevik spies, made his own Zinoviev statement before the court. The court wanted to know how the Georgian counter-revolutionary committee was directed not only in the U. S. S. R. but also abroad. It appeared that Adidjaparidze had great difficulties in crossing the border in Poland but to the intervention of a "Polish consulate" helped him to cover me tracks.

Adidjaparidze testified that "Polish consulate's name." It was a member of the Central Committee of the Polish Socialist Party, one of the editors of the "Robotnik," Vadeus Golunko who helped him to cross Poland on his trip to the U. S. S. R. It is the same Golunko who is responsible for the peculiar editorial policy of the Polish Socialist Party in the western district of Poland. It is the same Golunko who is now working out the Polish Menshevik-Socialist affront in the Soviet Union Democratic Department and in this manner has the opportunity to carry into effect the abstract theory of the Polish Socialist Party and give it a concrete Polish-ski content.

Polish Socialist Is Spy.

Golunko was put on the job at the beginning of 1925 as an expert on Ukrainian affairs. He very often held conferences with Andrzejewski, successor of Simon Petlura. We read about that in the Polish press. Golunko investigated the conditions of the Ukrainian emigrants at the instructions of the Central Committee of the Polish Socialist Party, not only in Poland, but also in Czecho-Slovakia. He wrote in the "Robotnik" No. 60, 1925, the following:

"How many of the Ukrainian emigrants who are now dying of hunger and typhus in France or Czecho-Slovakia could become in the near future the warm supporters of Polish policy and of Poland in the Ukraine!"

Aided Other Stool Pigeons.

We do not know how many people were brought to the Ukraine by Golunko as "supporters of Polish culture and of Poland," but Adidjaparidze crossed the border with his assistance. The Polish General Zagorski and another officer of the Polish General Staff, Zacharias, assistant in the General Armament, participated in arranging his trip. Adidjaparidze was given 15,000 rubles and directed him to Petlura's son-in-law Paliwoda, who had already taken some money to Kiev sent to him by the department of the General Staff, Bagge. The Golunko does not deny that he had handed Eagle over to the Polish General Staff. Three things have been proved in court.

of America and the world who are the highest court of all. The workers have a deep conviction for Sacco and Vanzetti and they have the power to compel their release. We must help them to understand this power, to organize it and to use it. The protest strikes already carried out in spite of and against the misleaders of labor are opening up a new page in the development of the American working class. The unparalleled heroic example of Sacco and Vanzetti has inspired and called forth new resources of courage, class solidarity and sacrifice. The tireless work of the militants has already been responsible for the organization of this spirit on an astounding scale. Concentration of all forces and energies along this line will succeed in harnessing the mood of the masses to an organized demonstration of such intensity and power that it will compel the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

IT WILL DEAL A POWERFUL BLOW TO THE WHOLE INFAMOUS FRAME-UP SYSTEM.

IT WILL PUT THE CASES OF MOONEY AND BILLINGS, AND OTHER MILITANT WORKERS LONG BURIED IN THE PRISONS, AGAIN ON THE AGENDA OF THE LABOR MOVEMENT, AND WILL INFUSE THAT MOVEMENT WITH A NEW CONSCIOUSNESS OF POWER.

Mann Moves Crowds To Enthusiasm for Sacco and Vanzetti

By TOM BARKER.
Federated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 17. — Trafalgar Square and Tom Mann!

The place and the man. The place dedicated to Nelson, a grotesque figure squinting over smoky London, an admiral of press gang recruited seamen yanked into the verminous, fever-ridden, hungry "wooden walls of old England."

Mann, Class Fighter.

Tom Mann! of Broken Hill, Tower Hill, Melbourne and Hankow. A gladiator of 72, grey-pulled, vigorous, tender of men, ruddy, stirrer of class enthusiasm, an example to the young fellow in a hurry, a rocket, a despiser of capitalist authority, a brother of all men in prison for their class.

And what a Trafalgar Square! The plinths crowded with the banners of London's unions, working class parties, the Young Workers, Pioneers of tender years, the organized unemployed.

Hundreds March.

Marching phalanxes, headed by Irish pipers with swinging brassy knees, brown kilts and swirling bagpipe, from the docks of Limehouse and Poplar, from the mean and crowded slums of Bethnal Green, from the railway shops of North London, from Socialist Battersea, from all the corners of a great city—to demand the lives of condemned proletarians in the goals of a Puritanical Massachusetts, of men murdered a hundred times by injustice and torture.

A swarm of people listening to the Old Warrior. "Forty years ago, the Chicago martyrs were hanged on what was admitted later on to be framed evidence. Very few of you remember what efforts we put forward in London to save Albert Parsons, Spies and Engels. How often have we faced callous injustice since.

What Do Our Enemies Stop At?

"Do our class enemies ever stop at any means to destroy those who intellect the villainies of the system for which they are responsible? It is the turn of our heroic comrades Sacco and Vanzetti to suffer all the cruelties and tortures that capitalism can mete out to its opponents."

Other speakers told how Gov. Fuller went into the prisoners' cells, assuring them, taking them by the hand, impressing upon these widely treated men his sincerity and then—signing his name to the warrant that consigns them to death. "This official," said one, "personifies the system that endows him with the power of life and death over these who are true to their class and who even on the scaffold, look proudly into the eyes of their executioners and shout "Long live the workingclass!"

Masses Vote As One.

10. the resolution being read demanding at once the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, a forest of hands went up, the bronzed hands of workers.

Tom Mann then spoke on the other angles of the movement to the huge crowd.

London has not seen such a meeting for years. The newspapers devote columns to the case. Most of the newspapers are favorable to pardon, indicting American legal methods and the habit of using such cases for political campaigns by district attorneys, etc.

Take J. L. Garvin, a leading publicist, says in today's "Observer": "The delay in this case is due presumably to the exertions of the prisoner's own friends. But responsibility for the tardiness of justice cannot be shifted from the organs of justice themselves. A commutation of the men's sentence upon this ground would not in any way compromise the governor's endorsement of the judicial proceeding. themselves."

Coop Colony Opens New Health Center; Former Freiheit Man Director

Sunday, August 14, the Workers' Health Conservation Center was opened at the Cooperative Colony, 2700 Bronx Park East, New York City. This center is under the direction of Dr. B. Liber, M. D. Doctor of Public Health, editor of National Living, author of "Child and Home," "As a Doctor Sees It," "The Healers," lecturer on health and contributor of many radical periodicals, lately of the Freiheit.

Until further advice the hours for preventive health examinations and consultations are: Sundays 1-4 for children and adults, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4-5 for children and from 5-7 for adults.

Health lectures from the workers' standpoint will be held for children on Thursdays between 3-4 p.m. for adults on Sundays at 11 a. m. The latter will consist of talks for the general public and of more advanced classes for those who wish to be trained as special health pioneers.

The Workers' Health Conservation Center will inspect the houses from a health point of view for those inhabitants of the colony who desire it. The cooperative food stores as well as the kindergarten and the gym will also be under the supervision of the Center.

The consultations are open both for members of the United Workers Cooperative Association and for non-members. The fees, which are somewhat higher for the latter, must be paid at the manager's office on the grounds. The health direction will accept no fees.

Berlin Plans Protest Meeting for Friday for Sacco, Vanzetti

BERLIN, Aug. 17. Three huge protest demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti have been arranged here by the Communist Society for the Victims of Class War.

The American ambassador and forty American editors who are visiting Berlin have been invited to attend the meetings.

SACCO-VANZETTI MEETS ANNOUNCED BY INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE

Demonstrations Thruout the Country This Week for the Two Framed-Up Workers

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Telegraphic reports pouring into the International Labor Defense office from local organizations in all sections of the country show a 100 per cent response to the call for increased and intensified protest agitation in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti.

New and wider circles of working class organizations and sympathizing bodies are joining the protest movement, instead of demoralizing agitation. The "cat and mouse" tactics of Governor Fuller in again suspending the lives martyrs between life and death without showing the slightest intention of giving up the plan of finally burning them alive, have stirred and angered the workers and aroused them to new endeavors.

Commencing August 18th a new series of demonstrations will again make the country ring with the clamorous demand of the working masses for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Among the new demonstrations reported here are the following: Montreal, Thursday; Chicago, Friday; Kansas City, Friday; St. Louis, Saturday; St. Paul, Saturday; West Frankfort, Illinois, Sunday; Los Angeles, Sunday; Philadelphia, three meetings, Sunday and Monday.

The demand for protest strikes will be raised in all these meetings and demonstrations.

RIGHT WING AIM IN DEFENSE RAID TO SMASH RELIEF

Landy Urges Big Turn Out for Jamboree

Ludwig Landy, manager of the Joint Defense of the furriers and cloakmakers in commenting on the break up of the office by the right wing said:

"The black hundreds are making a last dying fight. As always when on the retreat they have the support of the courts, police and the underworld gangsters.

"To prove their reactionary methods they placed a $25,000 bond on our furniture which is only worth about $300. All this was for the purpose of hampering our relief work, of keeping our prisoners and their dependents from getting assistance.

Urges Jamboree Attendance.

"They shall not succeed however. Already the strong, indignant voice of the workers in the shops has risen in protest. Every ounce of strength is being put into the fight. We will win against the combined opposition of the reactionaries.

"One way of insuring our success is by every worker attending the Jamboree in Starlight Park, 177th St., Bronx, on Sunday, August 28. This must be made our rallying ground. The combined voices of 50,000 workers will resound with the cry, 'Down With Right Wing Gangsterism', 'Down With the Black Hundreds', 'Forward to the Ultimate Victory of the Militants in the Unions'."

BUILDING TRADES CONDITIONS ANARCHIC AS SEASONAL FLUCTUATIONS HIT LABOR

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press)

Building is an overmanned industry giving its workers only about 70 per cent of fulltime employment, according to a statistical analysis of the construction industry in Ohio by the Ohio university bureau of business research. The figures show that on the average throughout the year the building trades worker has only about 9 months employment.

Seasonal Work Hard On Buildings.

The survey covers the years 1914 to 1924. It shows that during January and February on an average only about half the workers in the industry are employed and that during 5 months of the year less than ¾ are employed. There are only 4 months of the year in which more than 95 per cent of the building trades workers have jobs.

The building industry has been called the balance wheel of American business. The report says this balance wheel is "decidedly off center." It points out that highly fluctuating seasonal activity is not necessary but is "in carryover of the customs and technic of a former period."

Unemployment Figures.

The estimated average per cent of employment and unemployment and the average number of unemployed in the construction industry in Ohio in the period 1914-24 by months was:

	Building trades 10-year average	Per cent employed	Per cent unemployed	Number unemployed
January	55.7	44.3		37,178
February	53.6	46.4		39,580
March	59.6	40.4		34,462
April	73.1	26.9		22,946
May	81.7	18.3		15,610
June	91.4	8.6		7,330
July	96.6	3.4		2,900
August	99.0	1.1		95
September	100.0	.0		0
October	97.2	2.8		2,388
November	89.2	10.8		9,213
December	74.2	25.8		22,008
Annual Average	81.0	19.0		16,207

This shows that out of the average of about 85,000 workers attached to the industry in the period the number unemployed was over 22,000 in months of the year, rose to more than in February and average over 16,000 throughout the 12 months. And, according to the report, this understates the amount of unemployment because an accurate measure of part-time is not available. Including this it estimates average employment at 75 per cent, which would mean that throughout the period an average of 21,000 out of 85,000 Ohio building trades workers were unemployed.

Building Trades Anarchy.

This waste not only in terms of the workers but in terms of the employers also. The report says: "Not only is the employer subjected to a loss of business in the dull months, but his whole organization suffers because of his inability to keep his organization intact. The result is that he must build up a new organization each spring. The chaotic conditions in the building industry are notorious and this factor of seasonality is probably the greatest contributing cause."

This anarchy due to unregulated private initiative in an important industry should be borne in mind when figuring building trades wages. A weekly wage which would produce over $1000 if carried steadily throughout the year affords the average building trades worker hardly more than $2000 on the basis of employment actually offered.

Heckscher Denies Annuity.

In affidavits filed yesterday in supreme court, August Heckscher made a categorical denial that he ever agreed to pay Freda Hempel, the opera diva, $48,000 a year for the rest of her life. The proceedings were in answer to a suit brought by Miss Hempel against the millionaire philanthropist.

8 Painter Pickets Held on Felonious Assault Charges

Eight union painters and a strike-breaker's guard were held in $2,500 yesterday on charges of felonious assault in the Flatbush Court, Brooklyn, by Magistrate David Goldstein. They are to have a hearing September 1.

The men were arrested Tuesday when union pickets were attacked by bosses' guards and scabs at the corner of Ave. I and Flatbush Ave. They were peacefully picketing when the gunmen hired by the contractors fired into their midst. When the attacked workers started to defend themselves the strike-breakers and their guards called upon the police for assistance.

One of the pickets, Frank Titelbaum is in Kings County Hospital recovering from a gun wound in the shoulder inflicted on him from a gangster's gun.

The armed guards were hired from the Waldon Detective Agency of New York.

Union officials declared yesterday that the terroristic acts of the bosses would not interfere with the picketing which would continue as heretofore.

Cosgrave Cabinet Escapes Defeat by One Ballot Margin

DUBLIN, Aug. 17. The fate of the Irish Free State government of President William T. Cosgrave, victorious by a single ballot for a vote of confidence in the Dail Eireann last night, now depends upon the result of two by-elections to be held in Dublin county and Dublin city next week.

In both contests government party deputies are running for reelection. Should they win, it is understood President Cosgrave will not resign, but should the seats go against him he is though likely he will ask Governor-General Healy to dissolve the Dail immediately and call for a general election.

the ground that the furniture could not be taken away because Samuel Greenberg had filed a judgment against the local's furniture on Tuesday and because the deputy sheriff had removed many pieces of furniture not specified on his itemized list.

The warrant presented by the deputy sheriff was not signed by a city magistrate and was therefore illegal, Biedenkant stated. The $25,000 bond made out by the Signian gang for the confiscated furniture was also illegally made out, the attorney for the local charged.

Sol Peyser, city marshal, who granted Greenburg a judgment against the local's furniture on Tuesday threatened to take action against the deputy sheriff. Objections to the confiscation of the furniture were also lodged by Andrew H. Weinburger, attorney for Greenburg. Greenburg's claim against the local was for $240.

Weinberger threatens to bring contempt of court charges against Deputy Sheriff Plunkett for violating Greenburg's prior claim, which was recognized by City Marshall Peyser.

M. Rogers, an official of Local 2, was almost stabbed by an armed thug.

While the police and the right wing thugs were busily engaged hauling the union furniture from the union offices into moving vans, hundreds of workers gathered on the premises were driven off or herded into rooms where they were held incommunicado. The only persons permitted to go above the first floor of the building were right wing thugs.

Mother Asks Navy Why Torpedo Boats Drowned Son on Bathing Beach

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., August 17.

An appeal to the Navy department for an investigation into the actions of officers on a fleet of U. S. torpedo boat destroyers has been filed by Mrs. Seidel of this city, who wants to know what right the destroyers have to drown her son and his girl companion on a public bathing beach. The swell from the boats which were engaged in maneuvers swept five bathers out off their depth, and the three were rescued. Chas. Seidel and Mamie Brzyinski lost their lives.

"Perhaps an investigation will prevent other mothers from losing their sons," Mr. Seidel said. "There must be some way to keep the ships away from bathing beaches."

POVERTY IN NEW YORK INCREASING REPORT DECLARES

Unemployment Growing Too, Figures Show

Poverty and unemployment are rapidly increasing in New York City. Despite the prosperity hokum that is being lavishly handed out by captains of industry, figures made public by Welfare Commissioner Taber yesterday prove that the number of poor and the number of address are on a rapid increase.

For the first six months of this year, the commissioner's figures show the average number of persons forced to resort to the municipal lodging house was 256 as compared with the nightly average of 241 during the same period last year.

Nightly lodgers for the municipal house in July this year averaged 280. Last year they averaged 173; in 1925 they averaged 167.

Dependent children cared for by the welfare department this year showed an increase of 210 over the same period last year. During the first six months of 1927 the welfare department spent $290,817 for veterans and their dependents, while only $153,823 were spent for the same period last year.

"The Monroe Doctrine of Labor"

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

(This is the fifth of a series of articles analyzing the Pan-American Federation of Labor and its recent convention at Washington.)

American imperialism — following the time-honored example of the British empire—has always sought to find a base of support for itself in the countries in its path, among corrupted elements of the native population. By means of the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor this policy has been extended to an attempt to penetrate even the Latin-American labor movement through which they may be able to establish influence, in much the same way as has been done in the United States. It is a theory of "class collaboration" for the Latin-American labor movement!

To the workers of Latin America, whose trade-union organizations have always recognized the class struggle, the official declarations of the "Pan-American Federation of Labor" must appear strange indeed. The philosophy of the labor movement expressed in their is a peculiar one—peculiar to the A. F. of L. The principles of organization and methods are those of the A. F. of L. Gompers first, and Green after him, have left no stone unturned to fasten "the A. F. of L. point of view" upon the Pan-American federation.

The Pan-A. F. of L. Creed.

For instance, what does the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor stand for? Here is its official statement of aims, translated from the Spanish stenogram of the proceedings of its third convention:

"1. Establishment of improved conditions for the workers migrating from one country to another.

"2. Establishment of a better understanding and better relations between the peoples of the Pan-American republics.

"3. Utilization of all legal and honorable means for the protection of the interests and well-being of the peoples of the Pan-American republics.

"4. Utilization of all legal and honorable means to cultivate the best and most amicable relations Among the labor movements and among the peoples of the Pan-American republics."

Legalizes U. S. Imperialism.

Such a only does this statement not include struggle against American imperialism as one of its objects, but is specifically accepts the legality of imperialism — presumably in the Nicaragua and Haiti of the U. S. marines, as well as in the Cuba of the tyrant Machado and the Peru of the dictator Leguia.

In his opening speech at the Washington convention it begun to appear for a time as the Green convention was going to strike a new note. He said he believed workers should be "free politically, free economically and intellectually." But the next minute he explained that political freedom meant the right to vote, economic freedom meant the right to organize in trade unions and intellectual freedom meant "freedom from radical dogmas."

Must Be Faithful to Bosses.

"We must be prepared to make collective agreement with the employers," he continued. And then in order to impress upon the Latin-American their duty to the capitalists: "We must observe such agreements faithfully when we make them."

In addition to acceptance of the general A. F. of L. ideology, the P. A. of L. is obliged to accept: (1) an "anti-red" attitude, and (2) an Anti-European attitude.

U. S. Got There First.

"I think I can truthfully say," declared the amazing Mr. Green at Washington (two days after the massacre at Ocotal, Nicaragua), "that if it had not been for the Monroe Doctrine, there would be nations in South America that would have been invaded and their territory destroyed by greedy and rapacious European governments."

Hostility to "rapacious European governments" is accompanied by a similar friendly attitude toward European labor movements, only to be explained by the deeper influences actuating the "Pan-American Federation of Labor."

Monroe Doctrine of Labor.

Mr. Green and Mr. Woll proceed frankly on the basis of a theory which they nowhere have had the audacity to characterize as "the Monroe Doctrine of American labor." So far as I know, this term was first used at the El Paso convention of the A. F. of L. in 1924.

Following receipt of a resolution from the Mexican Confederation of Labor pledging that the latter "will oppose all attacks which the enemies of the American Federation of Labor will attempt to carry on in any part of the Mexican republic," Matthew Woll, then but apparent to the throne of Gompers, stood up and said:

"Mr. Chairman I move that the president of this federation convey to the Mexican Federation of Labor our appreciation for this declaration of loyalty to the ideals of a democracy and pledge of support and cooperation with the American Federation of Labor in the promoting of the ideals of trade-unionism, which, after all, IS THE BEGINNING OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE OF AMERICAN LABOR to apply to the western hemisphere."

Would-Split Labor.

Later on in the same convention Woll said:

"I foresee a Monroe Doctrine of Labor. By that I mean united resistance (by the labor movements of the Americas) against attempts by foreign labor to get a foothold either in concessions, property, or economic principles or aspirations."

Instead of unity with the workers of all countries (European included) to fight against international capitalism and imperialism, the Green-Woll machine peace and working unity with American Monroe-Doctrine imperialism proposes a struggle against the European working class! Obviously this is nothing but "Yankee imperialism," a walled-in sphere of influence for labor to prevent any inroads (which defends American imperialism) in Latin America!

Pan-A. F. of L. Does the Dirty Work.

During the period between the El Paso and Atlantic City conventions of the A. F. of L. Mr. Woll developed the theory of the Monroe Doctrine of American Labor still further, in a series of article appearing in the "American Federationist." At the Atlantic City convention (1926) he presented the theory as a rounded whole and it was supported by his fellow-bureaucrats.

While the United States government has not succeeded in accomplishing with the Monroe Doctrine itself, the A. F. of L. is attempting to accomplish with the "Monroe Doctrine of American Labor"—Secure its acceptance by Latin Americans. The Pan-American Federation of Labor is the instrument thru which it has been hoped to do this. Nothing else so brilliantly explains the present size and character of the "Pan-American Federation of Labor" as a federation of labor!

But Imperialist Is Thee.

In Resolution No. 1, submitted by the A. F. of L. delegation at the Washington convention, the entire principle of the "Monroe Doctrine of American Labor" is embodied.

The resolution, which is presented as a statement of principles and methods to guide the P. A. F. of L. does not include: (1) any suggestion of militant trade-union ACTION on behalf of the workers, of the workers of the Americas or for any purpose whatsoever; (2) any suggestion of struggle against American imperialism.

The resolution does not include: (1) illusion-creating presentation of the aims of the United States government in Latin America; (2) a statement against consistent theory of the labor movement and opposing the P. A. F. of L. to the formless pure and simple "trade-unionism" of the A. F. of L.; (3) an attack against the Reds; (4) unbridled attack against the entire international labor movement outside of the P. A. F. of L.

The One and Only Federation.

"We declare," says the resolution on this point, "that THE LABOR MOVEMENT of no other part of the world has the right to intervene or try to intervene in the methods and principles which we adopt. . . .

"All those movements of other countries who have sought in force upon us their programs, principles and ideals, HAVE DONE MORE HARM than the most powerful combinations of employers in their efforts to arouse suspicions and create divisions. Hiding behind a hypocritical mask of friendship, they have tried to divide and hamper us, in order to, establish their own doctrines. . . .

"In defense of our just rights, in defense of the established organized labor movement, we pledge ourselves SEPARATELY AND COLLECTIVELY to resist with all our vigor and resources every attempt that may be made BY ANY OTHER LABOR MOVEMENTS AT ALL to carry out openly or covertly any interference with out affiliated organizations or any attempt to dictate or influence the principles which rule them."

The above resolution was adopted unanimously by the convention, not even Martinez of Venezuela voting against it. Not only was it adopted unanimously, but delegates demanded that copies of it be printed immediately "in as great as is possible" so as to explain "the truth about the Pan-American Federation of Labor."

The truth is eloquent!

Shoe Workers Enjoin Prejudiced "Neutral" Arbitrator Newdick

HAVERHILL, Mass. (FP) Aug. 17.—Edwin Newdick has been enjoined by the Shoe Workers Protective Union from acting as neutral arbitrator of the shoe board which head Haverhill union-employer disputes. The shoe manufacturers' association has been enjoined from recognizing Newdick as chairman of the board or from attempting to follow any award since May 20, 1927.

Newdick was charged with breaking his impartiality in sending out a letter on May 20 concerning the wages he believed Haverhill manufacturers could pay. The union held that the letter was prejudicial to their case for revision of wages due Sept. 1. Newdick would ordinarily have presided at the wage hearings and have given the final verdict. The union refuses to pay its $10,000 toward his salary.

Soviet "Plots" Exposed in France

The following article, dealing with Soviet "plots," is reprinted from the New Leader, weekly organ of the Independent Labor Party of Great Britain. The article appears in the issue of July 8th, and tells a remarkable story of the machinations of reactionary conspirators against the Soviet government.

I AM able to give in advance a story which will shortly cause a sensation throughout the world. It is an amazing revelation of how the espionage services of many important governments, including the British, have been hoodwinked by a band of adventurers (or worse) with faked Soviet plots.

It has not been a matter merely of forgeries. The plots have actually been acted, and the alleged Soviet functionaries have been impersonated. This is not a Moscow story. It will be revealed to the world by the public prosecutor of France, who is about to take action against the group concerned on behalf of the French government.

White Russians Insulted.

I say the group may well be more than mere adventurers out to bleed the governments of money, because they are known to be White Russians. Salvossky, who belongs to the White Russian colony in Paris, has already been arrested. The French police are seeking to arrest Rjevitsky und Mikheef, two of his colleagues. There is little doubt that there has been a political objective behind these astonishing "plots" as well as a more money-making conspiracy.

The facts are these: Two months ago the Soviet Embassy in Paris received detailed information regarding the machinations of the plotters. It communicated the information to the French government, and assisted the French authorities to place their hands upon the whole organization. In the autumn one of the most sensational political trials in modern times will be opened in Paris.

The group of plotters has been actively at work in Paris since last October. They have sold a large number of forged documents to the different embassies and legations. It is believed that over 600 documents exist; between 60 and 70 were found in possession of Salvosky when he was arrested. The main object of the documents has been to implicate the Soviet government in alleged activities of the Third International in Europe, South America, and other parts of the world.

British C. I. D. Duped.

The Spanish government appears to have been duped most extensively. It is said to have paid 500,000 francs for the "plots" provided. The Italian embassy in Paris has bought "plots" up to approximately 500,000 francs, and I believe that on at least two occasions the British C. I. D. has paid for plots.

I am able to give actual particulars of some of the faked plots.

The forged documents include a certificate of authority to organize Communist cells in Spain, which is supposed to be signed by representatives of the Third International and the Soviet embassy in Paris. The Soviet signature is that of "the Soviet Military Attaché in Paris." But there is no Soviet Military Attaché in Paris!

Another document is supposed to be signed by Voryschylov, the Commissar of War at Moscow, and is addressed to Abdel Krim, the leader of the Riffi in Morocco. Another has the forged signature of Rakowsky, the Soviet ambassador in Paris, and is supposed to be a covering letter to a gift of 50,000 pesetas, to finance an insurrection in Spain.

Even if the whole conspiracy had not been unmasked, the forged ratings of these and similar documents would have been clear from a number of technical mistakes. For example, the note-paper used by the embassy has the address embossed. I have run my fingers across the paper, and the address is definitely raised. On the forged documents, on the other hand, whilst the paper is similar, the address is printed, which, of course, means no raised lettering.

There are also many miss-spellings. I can cite two examples: the signature Davtian is given Daftian, and the signature Piricumof, Persumof.

Russians Impersonated.

But more remarkable than the documents are the impersonations. I have particulars of these in a number of cases relating to Spain.

For example, the Spanish government was informed by the plotters that a representative of the Comintern (the Executive of the Third International) would arrive by a certain train at the Gard de l'Est, Paris, en route for Spain. The Spanish embassy sent their secret service people to the station to report. A Russian duly arrived, fitting by the description given. The Russian was employed by the plotters to impersonate the Comintern representative!

Again, the Spanish government was informed that two representatives of the Third International and the Soviet embassy were to meet at the Hotel Ritz in Paris to discuss Communist plans in Spain. The Spanish secret service was in attendance, and observed the interview. The two Russians under observation were employed by the forgery plotters!

On another occasion the Spanish government was informed that a representative of the Comintern would leave Paris by a certain train, and that he would be accompanied by a representative of the Soviet embassy in Paris as far as the frontier. The Spanish spies saw the two men get on the train (again they were impersonated), and word was sent to Spain, with the result that the train was held up at the frontier town of Portbarabie and the passengers examined, whilst a squadron of Spanish cavalry was brought up to prevent the Russians escaping from the train and penetrating Spanish territory across country. But the two impersonators had left the train at the first stop outside Paris!

The plotters did not hesitate to manufacture Soviet agents if necessary. An instance: they were asked by the Spanish government for the name of the representative of Comintern in Spain. They gave the name of an inoffensive White Russian, Solutzev, with the result that he was kept under constant surveillance by the Spanish authorities!

Munitions "Placed."

Here is another Spanish story which will be told at the forthcoming trial. The plotters reported that a cargo of munitions for Spanish Communists, including a large stock of rifles, have been sent to Saragossa, where it had been hidden in the cemetery. An engineering corps went to investigate, and found a supply. It had been placed there by the plotters!

It should be born in mind that the faked nature of these documents and plots does not rest upon Soviet evidence. It rests upon evidence which has so convinced the French government that it feels there is no alternative but to prosecute.

It is of interest that the governments which first saw through the "plots" were not European, but those of small South American states—Cuba, Bolivia, and Chili. It was their representatives in Paris who originally reported the matter to the Paris police. All the embassies and legations concerned now realize that they have been taken in. It will be interesting to see whether their representatives are required to give evidence at the trial. They will avoid doing so if they possibly can. They do not want to be ridiculed!

Jix's "Friends."

Who are behind this great forgery conspiracy? I may not give names, but they include the well-known Prince T. (who figured in the recent White Russian correspondence with Sir William Joynson Hicks) and a certain notorious Col. B. A number of able technicians and administrators also participated, whilst there was a large staff of figurants—more or less innocent dupes.

These are the facts. They seem incredible; but they will shortly be revealed indisputably to the whole world.

EXERCISE AND LABOR

Labor is not always exercise. In fact, often it interferes with exercise.

Most working people lack exercise. They are frequently tired and some never go out of a chronic state of fatigue bordering on disease or landing in it, yet at the same time they may get but little or almost no exercise. This is no paradox, as exercise is many times a real remedy against fatigue, mental and physical.

Exercise means putting into action the muscles, nerves, mind; activating the blood stream, enlivening all the bodily functions; training and improving the body and the mind for the sake of health, stimulation, recreation and it makes for greater happiness. Labor, which is always excessive—contrary to real work, self-willed, desired and variable, well-chosen and well-adapted, discontinued in the proper time—labor amounts to oxgrowth or arrest or slackening of many physical activities; often it gives no chance to muscle action, it deadens the functions and the blood circulation; it makes for lingering sickness or outspoken disease; drab, discontented living and unhappiness.

A carpenter would have splendid exercise at his work if he performed it for a few hours and later did something else. But as it is, with his eight, nine, ten to twelve hours daily, he is performing half of his daily task under a great strain and suffering from his occupation instead of enjoying it. Besides, he begins his day with fatigue in his system, never fully rested from the previous day's labor. And although this happens to be interesting labor, where some intelligence is needed, most of these men, like other overworked skilled mechanics, reach a point where they do it without pleasure; in fact they hate it. If they are able to do it, it is not always a sign of great strength. It is not their actual muscular and nerve-substance power that carries them to the end of the day. It is rather the force of habit of their blindly obeying mind and body that helps them. It is automatism. A wood-cutter may be old, decrepit and weak; unable to lift any one weight, he may lack resistance in the face of any extraordinary difficulty; he may break down at any other, even easier, work but his own; his life may be put into danger by an insignificant illness—but he can split wood the whole day, day after day, because he has done it all his life or so. But an athlete with youth and strength and health, may be beaten by that laborer at the same work and may be unable to continue it for more than an hour or two.

Take the office-clerk or the needle-worker. They are often "dead tired" in the evening, as they say. But what exercise do they get? They hardly move. None of their muscles is ever put into real play. Not rarely the monotony of their work has an effect that is just the opposite of exercise. It is slowing up whatever weak powers have remained. It is awfully destructive to the body and immensurably discouraging to the mind.

Add to all that the other circumstances that surround labor and you will have a—feeble—picture of what it means to many working people. Lack of interest in the product of their work, about which they have nothing to say; the feeling that they are forced to do something they dislike and that they are enslaved; unsanitary conditions in the shop and at home; poverty and worry; personal bad habits. It would be a miracle they should stay healthy. As it is they are healthier than we have a right to expect.

Both the carpenter and the needle-worker come to the doctor and complain about the same aches and pains, which are due to labor and not to exercise.—Rational Living.

DRAG DOWN THE MONSTER OF IMPERIALISM!

THE UPRISING OF PEASANT SLAVES IN THE PHILIPPINES AND THE MUTINY ON NEGROS ISLAND

EDITOR'S NOTE: The background of the Introncherado revolt in the Philippines has just reached here by mail and is illuminating reading inasmuch as it reveals the deep-going discontent in the islands as well as the despicable tactics of the American administrators who deceptively lured the leader of part of the revolt to their headquarters and placed him in an insane asylum. This low trick of the American gunmen of imperialism is but one sample of the methods of suppression used against the colonial slaves of Wall Street.

In the middle of May an insurrection broke out on Negros Island, one of the large islands of the Philippines Archipelago (a colony of the U. S. A.). At the head of the movement was Flor Introncherado, the "Mad Emperor" as he is called by the newspapers, who gathered an army of several thousands.

The facts are as follows: on May 14 Introncherado's followers attacked the town councils at Victoria, Bago, Silei and La-Carlotta, disarmed the police, and in some places took possession of the municipal buildings. The insurrection broke out so suddenly that the authorities lost their heads. Troops were promptly dispatched from Manilla and Governor General Wood took command. For a long time Introncherado declined an invitation to a personal meeting with Wood. Eventually, however, he was lured aboard a steamer and carried off to Manilla where he was placed in the insane asylum for examination by mental specialists. Several hundreds of his followers were imprisoned. The arrest caused the breaking up of the back of the revolt and the movement was soon suppressed.

A Working Class Revolt.

It is alleged by the bourgeois American press that the movement was caused by an outbreak of religious fanaticism among the population. A similar report was made by General Wood. On the other hand, the Philippine Herald of May 17 said that "it was rather the discontent of the working class," than any ignorance or fanaticism, which was the cause of the revolt." In order to appreciate the situation it would be necessary to learn something more about Introncherado himself and about his followers.

Who are the people that follow him?

In the western part of The Negros Island, where the revolt started, is concentrated the sugar production of the Philippines; the sugar-cane plantations and the refineries. The sugar-cane is cultivated on about 400 estates (haciendas) occupying an urea of 100-250 hectares each.

The planters employ from 100 to 200 hired laborers on each estate, working in groups of from 8 to 30 people; but only one-fourth of the laborers are permanently employed, the rest being employed only for the season, from October to April.

A Form of Peonage.

The seasonal laborers are recruited in the adjacent Paley Island either directly by the planters or by their agents, or by contractors who undertake to harvest the sugar crop on a given stretch of land.

These agricultural laborers and the workers of the sugar refineries constituted the main body of the insurgents. The conditions of labor are so hard that there was lately unending discontent in that region. Wages, depending on the existing demand for labor and on local conditions, fluctuate from 1 to 2 pesos (1 peso is equal to 2 shillings or 50 cents) per day. The workers get also their food, usually consisting of rice or cereal and dried fish, most being given only once a week. The workers are compelled in the villages near the plantation, whilst the permanent ones are accommodated in cottages, and the remainder in common sheds. The planter, to insure himself against the workers quitting his job, usually advances him a small sum of money and endeavors to keep him in debt, so as to prevent him from leaving the hacienda.

Strike Against Tyranny.

In March a strike was declared at the "Bais" sugar works, one of the largest in the district. The workers asked for an, increase in wages of 50 per cent, for a shortening of the working day, which extended to 15 hours, and for withdrawing the strike-breakers. The refusal of the employers to meet the demands led to a strike which spread to the whole district. The workers demanded also the dismissal of the police and the abolition of the system of peonage. The strike was accompanied by excesses; the workers had put fire to the sugar cane stocks and damaged the agricultural machines. The movement was soon crushed, but immediately afterwards a fresh strike broke out involving 4,000 workers. Among the new demands made by the strikers was recognition of the union, the payment of wages on the 1st and 16th of each month, the signing of written agreements, the reinstatement of the strikers, and so on.

Those ranks of discontented agricultural laborers threw in their lot with Introncherado, who promised them a redistribution of the land and reduced taxes. The Introncherado movement was started a few years ago, but it confined itself to the forming of illegal groups which united the discontented elements.

Introncherado's followers were scattered thruout the Negros Island, and they lived also on the adjacent Paley Island. Introncherado styled himself as emperor, even wearing a crown and promising his subjects all manners of blessings after his establishment upon the throne at Iloilo. Formerly a fisherman, he saved up a little fortune which he subsequently squandered on political propaganda and the publication of political pamphlets. He did not call upon his followers to revolt, and the insurrection was a spontaneous outbreak of the people.

The masses of discontented and striking agricultural laborers who joined the movement had furnished the igniting element, and Introncherado suddenly found himself at the head of a revolutionary movement. This insurrection shows that the revolutionary forces are gradually awakening throughout the Far East. All through the Philippine proletariat consists mainly of agricultural laborers, who are most backward as compared with other categories of the working class, nevertheless the severe conditions of their labor will inevitably lead them to new actions.

Bronx Service Workers Join Amalgamated

At a meeting held at the Workers Hall, 1347 Boston Road, the Bronx branch of the Building Service Employes, consisting of house superintendants in the Bronx, voted unanimously to join the Amalgamated Union of Plant and Building Service Workers' Unions, as a Branch of Local 1.

The meeting which was addressed by Patrick McClellan of the Amalgamated and by O. F. Craig of the Bronx Building Service Employes, decided to affiliate in a body and to transfer all cards into the Amalgamated.

A branch of Local 1, was established with jurisdiction over all building service employes in the Bronx, this branch to be known as Branch 3 of the Amalgamated Power Plant and Building Service Workers' Union.

The following officers were elected at the meeting, Chairman, Joseph Biggins, recording secretary, Robert Price; organizer, O. F. Craig; delegates to the General Executive Board Charles A. Scherff and O. F. Craig.

This union will meet every Thursday, 8 p. m. at Workers' Hall, 1347 Boston Road and all members of the Amalgamated employed in Bronx houses will be transferred to the branch, and all members of the Building Service Employes not members of other organizations in that section will be invited to join the Bronx branch, without initiation fee, during the first month of the general organization.

BOSTON PLANS STRIKE FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

NEW DEVELOPMENTS—NEW DANGERS
IN THE SACCO AND VANZETTI CASE

By JAMES P. CANNON (Secretary International Labor Defense).

THE Sacco-Vanzetti case is moving to its final issue with express-train speed. Events in this mighty drama are transpiring now as though some unseen elemental force were driving them on. These events are fraught with significance and danger for Sacco and Vanzetti and for the cause of labor which they represent and symbolize. The laboring masses must penetrate the haze of these developments, interpret them truly and draw the right conclusion from them. Only on this condition will they be able to strengthen the iron ring of solidarity and protestion around Sacco and Vanzetti.

THE MANEUVER OF DELAY.

The main developments are the following:

(1) A few days' delay of execution ostensibly to provide opportunity for further legal deliberation (after seven years!), but in reality to fool the workers with false hopes while the legal murderers gain time to manouver against the protest movement and gather more strength and courage to go through with their plans.

(2) A revival of the old game of bomb "plants" in order to create the impression that friends of the prisoners are irresponsible terrorists.

(3) Governor Fuller promptly issues a statement expressing horror at a bomb explosion that injured no one—the same governor who felt no horror at all in condemning innocent men to death on the basis of an "investigation" framed-up in secret session.

(4) Attempts of the police to prevent and break up protest meetings and demonstrations and to suppress the expression of the workers against the execution. At least several hundred workers were arrested in the different cities in which demonstrations of protest were held prior to August tenth.

(5) A number of capitalistic and "liberal" elements who "joined" the movement for a time and even tried to lead it begin to desert, to get cold feet and to find excuses to justify the legal murder or life imprisonment. The suppression of the Heywood Broun articles by the New York World and the changed tone of other capitalist papers are cases in point.

(6) Along with these happenings go the outspoken threats of a new drive against the foreign born workers.

TRICKERY AND FORCE.

Thus we see the forces of reaction mobilizing along the whole front with a strategy which represents a combination of trickery and force. They are organizing their forces for the counter-campaign against the mass movement of the workers, the power which stands between Sacco and Vanzetti and the electric chair. They are conspiring and working with feverish speed. There is no ground for the belief that they have changed their plans.

The new developments bring out more than ever and with crystal clearness the class basis of this famous case. They show that it is a case of workers against exploiters with Sacco and Vanzetti, the victims selected for the holocaust, standing out before the whole world as the representatives of the exploited class. The class struggle policy in the fight for Sacco and Vanzetti was right from the beginning and is a thousand times right now. The power that can save Sacco and Vanzetti is the power of the masses.

The short reprieve was not an act of mercy nor justice. It was trick to create illusions and false hopes. It would be criminally foolish to regard it in any other way.

THE BOMB AS PUBLICITY.

The bomb "plants" are part of the same strategy and are designed to demoralize and discredit the protest movement, to split its ranks and above all to isolate and discredit the militants who are the organizing and driving force in the entire movement the world over.

Bomb-throwing and other futile acts of individual terror are not the weapons of class conscious workers. We base ourselves on the masses and rely on the power of the masses in the fight for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The police violence and suppression against the protest meetings and the threatened drive against the foreign-born are bound up together with the other developments noted above. There is no contradiction between them. The exploiters are operating as a class and on a class basis, combining the tactics of fraud and manouver with direct attacks and violence.

In all this there is nothing new for those who understand the class struggle and have no illusions about the possibility of "justice" and "fair play" from the courts and other institutions of the class enemy. The Sacco-Vanzetti case must be considered from this point of view. The power of the workers is the court of last resort to which our appeal must be made.

Only to the extent that we understand this elementary fact will our work in the remaining days have the possibility of success.

Put no faith in capitalist justice! That is the lesson of history confirmed by every development of the Sacco and Vanzetti case.

Organize the protest movement on a wider scale and with a more determined spirit!

Demonstrate and strike for Sacco and Vanzetti!

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty

ON the eve of the date set for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, the socialists of New York City, have delivered another blow to the cause of the liberation of those two doomed workers. The rat-like creature who acts as spokesman for the socialists declared that the labor unions which are controlled by them would not participate in another general strike, since the last one cost the workers $2,000,000 in wages. This fellow of the one who wrote the statement for him should be behind a pawnbroker's counter, fingering watches offered for loan and not posing as a representative of organized labor. The value of the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti cannot be gauged in terms of money and only a despicable creature would put the issue on this basis.

IT is admitted by every honest person who has had any experience with cases of this kind that only mass protests can save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti. There are only a few more days left to fight. August 22nd is dangerously near. Yet, instead of mobilizing every worker regardless of political viewpoint in the most impressive demonstration the United States has ever seen, we

FRAME-UPS A SPECIALTY

FRAME-UPS like these are a daily occurrence in the capitalist press. In its anxiety to do away with Sacco and Vanzetti, in its mad desire for the blood of its victims, the capitalist class resorts even to the destruction of property, in order to raise the smoke screen to hide its criminal deed. The capitalist press, the tool and the puppet of those who seek to take the lives of our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, unhesitatingly descend to the lowest depths to falsify the truth and to encourage acts of crime and violence, intended to cover up the foul murder, they seek to perpetrate.

This wholesale falsification of the news, this use of the press to aid and abet the lowest crimes against the working class, should convince every worker, that he must resort to the greatest self-sacrifice in order to keep alive, the one paper, which speaks the truth, the only paper, which speaks in his name, The DAILY WORKER. It should encourage a new flood of contributions to The DAILY WORKER Fund, with which the paper keeps up its activity, and protects itself against its enemies.

POSTPONE MONSTER MEETING IN NEW YORK CITY AS UNIONS ASK MASS DEMONSTRATION MONDAY

State Supreme Court Decision Ready; Verdict Kept Secret; See Little Hope in Law

BOSTON, Aug. 18.—Regardless of the decision of the Supreme Court due tomorrow, which it is believed will refuse the defense a writ of error, representatives of the trade unions and fraternal organizations will meet at the Amalgamated Hall to make plans for a monster protest strike on Monday to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair. Prominent union leaders have pledged their support to the strike.

Large masses of workers were gathering tonight for a demonstration at the Scenic Auditorium. Powers Hapgood, young militant mine leader, will address the meeting. The last meeting addressed by Powers Hapgood on the Boston Common was broke up by the police.

The action of trade union leaders of the city is in accord with the strike demand voiced thruout the country by labor and defense organizations.

Reports from New York City state that Monday's strike will exceed in size the monster walk-out on August 10th in which more than half a million workers participated.

Thousands of anthracite miners in Pennsylvania are expected to heed the strike call issued by the International Labor Defense and the Sacco-Vanzetti Committee at Wilkes-Barre.

As a result of mass demand, the monster mass meeting scheduled to have been held in Union Square, New York City, today has been postponed to Monday. Trade union leaders who urged the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, under whose auspices the meeting was to have been held, to postpone the meeting so that their jobs today but who will join

COAL MINERS HOLD SPECIAL UNION MEETINGS TO PLAN SACCO STRIKE

Conference Also Asks Hundred Thousand Members to Wire Resolutions to Butler

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., August 18.—The Executive Committee of the Sacco and Vanzetti Conference, representing ninety local unions of the United Mine Workers of America, a hundred working fraternal organizations in the anthracite region, and about a hundred thousand workers, met August 14 here and issued a call to all individuals and local unions in the coal fields to organize protest meetings immediately in all localities, to send group and individual telegrams to President Coolidge and Governor Fuller protesting the execution, and to strike on August 22.

Secretaries of local unions are requested to call special meetings of their locals, if there is no regular meeting before August 22.

"Sacco and Vanzetti for seven years for the working class," says the conference, "the workers can easily lose one day for Sacco and Vanzetti." The conference demands not only no execution, but insists on complete freedom for the two innocent workers. "Make the date of the execution a date when they will be set free," it says.

A special statement by the conference is being circulated in large quantities thruout the mining region. It reads:

"STOP THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI. THE WORKERS WILL NOT PERMIT THE LEGAL MURDER OF THESE INNOCENT MEN.

"These two brave Italian workers have been made to suffer the most inhuman agonies and are sentenced to suffer the supreme penalty for their devotion to the cause of the working class. the protest walkout Monday, will be able to join the demonstration.

The meeting will be held at one o'clock Monday. More than 50,000 workers attended the last mass Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting in Union Square.

Unions Pledge Support.

Among the unions that have already pledged their support to a strike in New York City are: Executors' Union, Locals 731 and 732 of Greater New York, Long Island and vicinity, Amalgamated Food Workers, Marine Transport Workers, Amalgamated Metal Workers, Joint Board Furriers' Union, Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15, Barbers' Union, Millinery Hand Workers' Union, Paper Box Makers' Union, Shoe Workers' Union, United Brotherhood Carpenters and Joiners and many other labor organizations.

The following political and social organizations have offered aid in the coming demonstrations previous to date of execution of Sacco and Vanzetti: Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, Workers Party of America, Young Workers' League, Workers' Health Bureau, International Labor Defense which represents more than 50,000 workers in the city of New York, Finnish Workers' Federation, Bronx Jewish Workers' Club, International Labor Defense, Stamford local, many branches of the Workmen's Circle, Workers' Culture Club of Bath Beach, United Council of Working Class Housewives, United Workers' Cooperative Association, the Workers' School of New York, the American Negro Labor Congress, and others.

Court Decision Ready.

BOSTON, Aug. 18.—The full bench of the Supreme Court has reached its decision, it has been learned from authoritative sources. Its verdict is believed to be unfavorable to the two framed-up workers.

The decision was understood to have been finished this afternoon but the recorder of decision stated, as the justices left the court house for their homes, that it was not ready for publication. "This office opens in the morning," was his only comment.

Although defense legal forces were "hopeful" they were preparing for an adverse decision by having ready an application for a writ of certiorari to the United States Supreme Court looking for a stay of sentence and a review.

The full bench decision was on exceptions to denial of motions for a new trial and a revocation of sentence by trial Judge Thayer and denial of a motion for a writ of error by Supreme Court Judge George A. Sanderson.

It was reliably reported at the court house that the decision was about one thousand words in length.

Defense Appeal for New Writ

BOSTON, Aug. 18. — While indications are that the decision of the state supreme court in the Sacco and Vanzetti case will be delayed until the last possible moment, the defense is now making ready to lay a hurried appeal before the federal courts in event that their pleas are rejected by the Massachusetts supreme justices.

Last Minute Appeals.

It is probable that at the last moment the defense will again make an appeal to Governor Fuller and the executive council for a reprieve pending action on the petition filed with the Supreme Court which can not be acted upon until October. The governor and the council, however, are understood to be determined that the favorable moment has arrived for the execution of the two doomed men. One of the higher prison officials on hearing of the complicated legal moves of the defense is reported to have ventured the opinion that the situation next Monday midnight will be "droll."

In order to be prepared for any action on the part of the Massachusetts' supreme court and the state executive and council, Arthur D. Hill, who pleaded the case of the defense before the supreme court, has filed a petition for a writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme court. Mr. Hill is expected to ask Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes for the writ of certiorari despite the fact that Holmes last week refused to grant the defense a writ of habeas corpus.

A writ of certiorari would bring the whole case for review before the United States Supreme court and it would then be in the discretion of the court whether or not it would hear the case on appeal.

Interpreter Faints, No Trials.

Because Alexander Carrasso, a Jewish interpreter in the New Jersey Avenue Court, Brooklyn, fainted yesterday morning, twenty Hebrew litigants were informed that their cases were put over until next week.

Plague Among Mine Workers' Children; Poor Health Board

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—There have been several outbreaks recently, notably in Ohio, of infantile paralysis in the United States, the Public Health Service said today.

So far this month, 179 cases are active in the country. In Martins Ferry, Ohio, a mining district, there were 47 cases this month. With three deaths since August 4th, nine new cases were reported between Aug 12-18.

Because it believes that infantile paralysis serum is still in the experimental stage, the Public Health Service is distributing none, but officials said that an ample supply of serum is available from commercial distributors.

The health officials in the mining districts of Ohio are not medical men, necessarily, and are elected on the basis of partisan politics, where they are not actually placed in office by coal companies.

Oscar Nelson Fails To Smash Meetings Of Garment Workers

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—In spite of intimidation and threats by all the city politicians led by Alderman Oscar F. Nelson, 1,000 cloak and dress makers answered the call of the regularly elected Joint Board and came to a mass meeting to pledge themselves to protect the union against the attempts of the Sigman clique plus the Federation fakers to take over the union with the aid of the bosses and the underworld in Chicago.

This so-called "Labor" alderman first intimidated the owner of the North West hall and forced him to close the hall for the Joint Board, he also organized the alderman in the district to threaten the hallkeeper. His story was that "The city will not permit these manufacturers, Communists, bombthrowers, etc., to hold a meeting in any hall."

In spite of the fact that he was able to get the first hall cancelled he was not successful in preventing the meeting which was held at the Division hall a few blocks from there and the result was that the few gangsters mobilized to break it up could not succeed in breaking the spirit of solidarity displayed by the militant cloakmakers.

The meeting showed further appreciation of the left wing leadership by taking up a collection of about $375 to help carry on the fight to maintain union conditions in the cloak and dress industry in Chicago and prevent the Sigman corrupt machine plus Nochels, Nelsons, Fitzpatrick et al to turn it over to the bosses.

Prominent Personages Join Citizens' Sacco and Vanzetti Board

The Citizens' National Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti announced that telegrams have been received today from a number of prominent persons throughout the country accepting a place on the committee and endorsing the project to secure Federal intervention for a stay of execution of Sacco and Vanzetti and the opening of the Department of Justice files. Among those who have been heard from today are:

Carl Van Doren, writer; Arthur Warner, editor of the Nation; Owen R. Lovejoy, National Child Labor Commissioner; Fannie Hurst, author; Floyd Dell, author; Joseph Wood Krutch, dramatic critic; Frederic C. Howe, former Commissioner general for Immigration; Bishop Francis J. Washington Jones; Miss Cora Wilson; Judge Ben B. Lindsey; Rev. Burnham; John W. Keating, Federal Council of Church; Horace Liveright, publisher; George Eliot Howard, University of Nebraska.

Twin Cities Holding Many Sacco-Vanzetti Protest Gatherings

MINNEAPOLIS, August 18. — A Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting will be held Sunday, 1 p. m. at Plaine grounds, 23rd St. South and River Road, West. The speakers will be Paul Crouch, just released from U. S. Disciplinary Barracks at Alcatraz, Cal., Ernest Lobbeck, J. E. Emme, Lewis J. Duncan and Emil S. Youngdahl. S. A. Stockwell will preside.

Open air meetings are held every night in Bridge Square at 8.30 p. m. Many other meetings are being held here daily.

In St. Paul open air rallies are held every night in Smith Park and Central Park. Saturday a monster demonstration will be held in Central Park. Walter W. Liggett, of the newly formed Citizen Sacco-Vanzetti Committee will speak. Paul Crouch will also deliver an address.

Civil Liberties Union Forces Police to Allow Sacco-Vanzetti Meeting

Permission for a Sacco-Vanzetti defense meeting to take place in a private hall in Boston, which had hitherto been refused by the police department, has been obtained thru the intervention of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Refusal of the owner of Scenic Temple, 12 Berkeley street, to rent the hall to the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, because of an anonymous telephone call warning him not to do so, led to an appeal by the committee to the Civil Liberties Union. The owner was afraid to rent the hall, he said, because he believed the anonymous message had come from the police department.

John S. Codman, Boston representative of the Union, appealed to Police Superintendent Crowley. Mr. Crowley then announced that there was no reason for police interference with a meeting in a private hall. The owner of Scenic Temple, after being reassured by a telephone conversation with Mr. Crowley, agreed to rent the hall for Thursday afternoon and evening.

The Civil Liberties Union had previously appealed to Mayor M. E. Nichols of Boston to uphold the rights of free speech and assemblage so utterly disregarded by Superintendent Crowley in his attacks on Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers."

More Air Mail Lines.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. — Another step in spreading a net-work of air-mail routes over the country was taken today when Postmaster General New opened bids for three contract airmail lines.

One is between Atlanta and New Orleans, via Birmingham and Mobile; another between Memphis and St. Louis, and the third between Cincinnati and Chicago, via Indianapolis.

New Trial for Sacco and Vanzetti Demanded By World War Veterans

Post No. 1, Chicago, of the United American Veterans, an organization of war veterans, in a resolution unanimously adopted at its last meeting, petitioned Governor Fuller for a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti.

CITIZENS' GROUP WANTS COOLIDGE TO BARE FRAMEUP

President Urged to Act for Sacco and Vanzetti

Calling upon the officials of all trade unions to telegraph President Coolidge in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti, the Citizens' National Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti requests them to demand the opening of the files of the department of justice which contain information bearing on the frame-up of the two innocent prisoners.

The committee's report states:

1.—That the department of justice is deeply involved.

2.—That Attorney-General Sargent, according to press reports, offered to place the files at the disposal of Governor Fuller.

3. That Governor Fuller failed to inspect the files and to interview department of justice agents and other witnesses regarding the relation of the department of justice to the case.

4.—That the courts may fail to stay the execution.

And in view of these facts urges that President Coolidge intervene as Wilson did in the case of Mooney.

The Citizens' National Committee, condemning any act of violence for or against Sacco and Vanzetti, has issued the following statement concerning the bombing of Lewis McHardy, one of the Sacco and Vanzetti jurors:

"Any wild act of any madman, whether the insane purpose is to discredit or to help Sacco and Vanzetti, will be attributed to sympathizers with their cause, although it is obvious that nothing could be calculated to do more harm to their case than an outrage of this kind.

"If the effect on the case is any evidence of the source of this shamefully bombing, it is more likely the work of enemies than of friends. Every decent citizen joins in the hope that the criminals will be apprehended, and none more so than those who feel that the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti will be a lasting disgrace to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

The Citizens' National Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti which is being organized to secure federal intervention because of the laxness against the department of justice, includes in its membership the following prominent men and women of the country:

Daniel Stat[illegible], Arthur Mellen[illegible], Robert Morss Lovett, Judge S. Coltman, Glenn Frank, Donald Garrison, Willard Fannie Hurst, Felix Adler, Jerome Odgen, Gilson Gardner, Frederic C. Howe, Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Zona Gale, Owen R. Lovejoy, Carl Van Doren, Arthur Garfield Hays, Louis F. Post, Floyd Dell, Artemus Warner, George Eliot Howard, Horace Liveright, Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, Mrs. Max Morgenthau, Joseph Wood Krutch, Rev. Smith D. Becker, Genevieve Taggard, Mary E. Sneed, Rev. John W. Herring.

Demand for Probe Into D. of J. Files Gaining Strength

BOSTON, Aug. 18.—(FP)—Francis Fisher Kane, former United States attorney for the eastern district, joined the National Citizens' Committee which is seeking to have federal department of justice files on the Sacco-Vanzetti case opened. Kane resigned during the red-raiding regime of Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, unable to stomach the gross abuses of justice practiced then.

Louis F. Post, formerly under-secretary in the federal labor department, declared that the Sacco-Vanzetti case was undoubtedly an outcrouth of the red-raids. He also joined the National Citizens' Committee. Post is the author of the Deportation Delirium of 1920, which tells of Palmer's red-raids. The department of justice tried to get the latest dispatch[illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] to defend all those it charged with being dangerous radicals.

Others who have come out are: Carl Van Doren, literary critic and author; Arthur Warner, editor of The Nation; Owen R. Lovejoy of the National Child Labor Committee; Fannie Hurst, novelist; Floyd Dell, writer; Joseph Wood Krutch, drama tic critic; Frederic C. Howe, former commissioner-general of immigration; Edson Gardner, Washington publicist; Mary Ellen Wilson, former suffrage worker and publicist; Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, Colo.; Jane Burnham, Workers' Health Bureau, director; John W. Herring of the Federal Council of Churches; Horace Liveright, publisher; George Eliot Howard of the University of Nebraska.

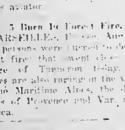
SEARCH ISLANDS AND SEA FOR TWO LOST AIRPLANES

Costly Experiment of Use Only to War Makers

HONOLULU, T. H., Aug. 18.—The remote possibility that one or both of the missing planes in the Dole race—the Golden Eagle and the Miss Doran—may have landed far up on the slopes of the higher mountains of the islands of Maui and Hawaii today buoyed up the hopes of the hundreds of searchers and thousands of anxious residents of Hawaii. Should such a landing have been made by either or both of the planes distance and difficulty in walking would prevent the occupants of the aircraft from reaching the coast line for some days, it was pointed out.

Half of Craft Fail.



Naval craft, privately owned ships, and both private and army aircraft have been scouring the ocean, trying to locate the two planes, four men and one girl apparently lost at sea.

This flight is considered to have shown that considerable improvement must be done before attempts on planes via the Hawaiian island are possible. Out of original entries of fifteen planes, only four actually were able to start off on the long, two miles their goal.

Some intense excitement in civilian quarters that the army and navy should have been able to get this vital and dangerous experimental flight under way civilians, at no cost to the department, at their risk to its aviator.

Twenty-four Clericals Killed in Mexico; Had Been Ravaging Country

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 18.—Twenty-four rebels were killed in battle with a detachment of federal troops near San Francisco, state of Jalisco, according to official dispatches to the war department today. These are fragments of the army set in motion several months ago by the Catholic Church.

Shouting "Long Live Christ, the King," these bands raided the countryside killing a number of citizens, burning, looting and torturing peaceful residents, before they were finally broken up. One company, led by priests, locked over a hundred unarmed passengers into the Guadalajara express train this spring, and burned them to death by setting the train on fire.

Bruce and Russell, Los Angeles Party Members, Deported

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 18.—Malcolm Bruce and Joan Russell, members of the Workers (Communist) Party, arrested in connection with the Sacco and Vanzetti protest mass meeting in the Plaza Square here, have been released and ordered to return to Canada. The deportation of these two workers is part of the drive which the California authorities are making to rid the state of all active labor elements.

Peter Bondolpho, an alleged anarchist, who was arrested in a raid on Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers previous to the Plaza meeting, is the only victim now left in jail.

Bondolpho went on a hunger strike protesting that he would not take food until Sacco and Vanzetti are freed. It is expected that the authorities are planning to deport him to Italy, where his fate at the hands of the fascists is not hard to guess.

That the Massachusetts government is beginning to hear the voice of organized labor protest was confirmed by the prompt here of Governor Fuller's acknowledgement of the Local Workers' Party telegram protesting against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

U. S. Foreign Commerce Nine and Half Billion

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Figures in the commerce department indicated today that sales abroad nine months [illegible],000, establishing an all-time record for normal years. Only during the war and the post-war construction period have American foreign sales been higher than in 1927.

Exported goods represent about 10 per cent of the total production, disclosing the country's remarkable domestic consumption capacity.

Owing to the heavy decline in cotton and other raw material prices from last year, imports are expected to show a considerable lower. Present figures indicate that the United States will purchase abroad goods valued at about $4,000,000,000 this year.

Socialists Forced to Retreat On Stand Against Strike.

One of the luminaries of the socialist party leadership, August Claessens, its local secretary, has repudiated, in a mild form, the vicious public statement of Edward Levinsone of the staff of the reactionary New Leader, to the effect that the socialists would have nothing to do with the Sacco and Vanzetti strike on Monday. However, the statement of Claessens is not clear enough and is an attempt to evade the issue. He says:

"Whether or not the unions of New York City are to strike in protest is a question which cannot and will not be settled by the socialists. It is a matter for the unions to settle in their own councils."

It is quite true that the question will not be settled by the socialists. Their influence has dwindled to microscopic proportions among the rank and file, but certain members of the socialist bureaucracy are officials of unions. What must be demanded of the socialists is whether or not their members in the unions will fight for a strike on Monday. This cowardly attitude of passing the buck will fool no one. What is now required is definite unequivocal repudiation of the former statement. We are not particularly concerned about the socialist bureaucracy recovering some slight degree of respect; all of which they lost by Levinson's statement, but we are vitally concerned about the question of a united fight for Sacco and Vanzetti.

The socialist twaddle about refusing to participate in demonstrations with Communists is nothing more nor less than a dishonest maneuver to evade any action in behalf of the elementary demands of the working class. They know that wherever there are demonstrations organized and fights to be made the Communists will be found in the front ranks, fulfilling their duty to the working class, so their refusal to associate with Communists would prevent them from ever participating in any mass struggles.

There is no neutral ground in the fight to wrest from the hands of the executioners the tortured bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti. Either you are on the side of the working class and will leave no stone unturned to bring into the streets in a great mass strike the masses of workers or you play the game of the capitalist class. Either the socialists are on the side of the executioners of Sacco and Vanzetti or on the side of those who fight for their liberation. There is no third course.

Window-Dressing For Tammany Hall

It is an old stunt of the petty shopkeeper with a store full of shoddy commodities to employ expert window-dressers to "put on a good front" for him. The rottener the goods, the more essential it is to have good window-dressers and advertising agents. When the old firm falls into utter disrepute because of its swindling record, a big announcement appears before the place bearing the legend "under new management."

Capitalist politicians frequently resort to such tricks. Especially is this the case with Tammany Hall today. Originating more than a hundred years ago that cesspool of political corruption became the dominant factor in New York politics under Tweed and Croker. When the rest of the democratic party was bowling to the wake of William Jennings Bryan, as the political expression of the small bourgeoisie, Tammany Hall in New York remained a thing apart, a local political ring existing exclusively upon politics at favoritism and plain, unadorned graft obtained thru bribery, corruption, special privileges to criminal elements.

When Samuel J. Tilden succeeded in sending some of its bright and shining lights, including Boss Tweed, to prison, the old den of thieves feigned profound and abject repentance. But it soon reverted to its old tricks and raked in the swag as of yore. Charles F. Murphy, in his heyday, was powerful enough as chief of the wigwam to extend the power of Tammany to the state house at Albany, to put governors in office and on one occasion to kick a governor out who would not turn the state government completely over to Tammany.

When, in 1920, the House of Morgan took the democratic party as its political weapon, the Tammany organization became very useful and was annexed to the main section of the national democratic machine. Before that time it had been a very ill smelling potash at democratic conventions. In 1912 at the Baltimore convention it stayed thru the whole show in spite of the indignant bellowings of the virtuous Bryan who referred con temptuously to the Tammany delegation of hooligans as "Charlie Murphy's pet soldiers."

In 1924 the chiefs of Tammany tried to capture the democratic convention. Wall Street backed its candidate, Al. Smith, but the middle and far west groups around William G. McAdoo, defeated him at the convention. Now that another democratic convention approaches and Tammany's man, Smith, is an active candidate, the old reputation has to indulge in lavish expenditures for deceptive window-dressing. The old stunts no longer suffice. A brand new front must be put on and a vast and imposing array of respectability purchased. At one time the pig-sticks from Murray Hill and Bull's Head were locked with disdain upon people who grease anything but the pigeon English of the barrel houses, but they are changed. Now the eminences of the university chairs in the city hall in the absence of the foppish Broadway Jimmy Walker, and sombre professors roam the corridors and talk learnedly about the "new Tammany Hall."

For, as the Professor Thomas E. Reed, in a roving trip through the democratic states of the south told a gaping audience of politicians, the Tammany leaders "are now at home in tuxedos" with the implication being that they are fit to mingle on confidential terms of social equality and that the old Tammany is no more.

This is a sham window-dressing. Nationally the Wall Street gang favors Al. Smith as democratic candidate but his Tammany connections are a handicap so the game is to divorce Tammany with respectability. Political observers in New York know that the Tammany of today is just as venal as the wigwam of the days of Tweed and that the basis of the thing is municipal and state graft in order to maintain the army of vandals that make up its personnel. The filthy record of the food inspection scandals exposed to the world a system maintained through gambling with the very lives of the working class, sections of the city [illegible] under the seal of approval [illegible] only request the graft [illegible] is because of an [illegible]

Our Constitution and the Language Fractions

By ELLIS PETERSON.

THE Language Fractions are still playing a too important rôle in our party. The Language Bureaus however has not yet started to function as they should.

Many of the leading Language Bureaus at the Central Committee of the Party are still inclined to a very large degree from the real activity of the American Party, and the Party on the other side knows little about the activity of the Bureaus on their special field of work. The responsibility for this rests both on the Party leadership and on the comrades in our Language Bureaus.

IN our constitution a very great attention is paid to our language-fractions. There is a whole article (15) on the matter. This was necessary and natural at a time (1925), when our party was built up as a very centralized Communist Party, entirely being a "dash" of its language parties. Now the situation has changed and accordingly the Party Convention must change the constitution on this point.

Most of our members speak of a Language Fraction as a fraction of the Party. This is absolutely wrong. There are no Language Fractions in the Party. There exist only Language Fractions in a Communist Party. The Communist Party is a unified party.

THE Language Fractions are parts of party organizations in non party organizations. They are organized for Communist work in the non-party organizations. The Language Fractions are therefore not fractions of the Party. We do not speak about the English Fraction of the Party, the Jewish Fraction of the Party, etc. That is wrong. There are Language Bureaus in the Party. The Central Committee of the Party elects the Central Language Bureau. The Central Language Bureau directs the whole work of the Language Fractions in non-party organizations. The Language Bureaus are built up in the same manner as the Party bodies, i. e. they are elected by conferences of the Party members speaking a certain language and together and give reports to the Party bodies. They are subordinated to the Party bodies, i. e. to the corresponding Party committees. The Central Language Bureau is subordinated to the Political Committee of the Party.

THE respective Language Bureaus of the Party should not be elected by the Party members, but by the Language Fractions. The Language Fractions elect their representatives to the Language Bureaus. The Language Bureaus are responsible to the Language Fractions. The Language Fractions are responsible to the Party bodies. The Language Bureaus are responsible to the Party bodies

RIGHT WING THUGS AND POLICE IN ILLEGAL RAID ON LOCAL 22

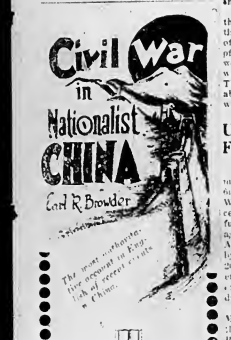
Cart Away Furniture Despite Falsity of Warrant; Threaten Union Leader

Under the order of the Sigman clique and accompanied by a number of right wing thugs, Deputy Sheriff E. Plunkett illegally raided the offices of Local 22, of the Cloakmakers' Union, 16 West 21st street, Wednesday, and confiscated the furniture. Deputy Sheriff Plunkett raided the offices of the Joint Defense Committee on Tuesday on an illegal warrant and removed their property.

Violating even the illegal warrant in his possession, the deputy sheriff, accompanied by assistants, Sergeant Edward MacDonald and eight uniformed policemen, dragged away furniture that was not specified on the itemized list in the possession.

Removal Illegal.

Jacques Buttenlaut, attorney for the local, protested the removal on the ground that the furniture could not be taken away because Samuel Greenberg had filed a judgment against the local's furniture on Tuesday and because the deputy sheriff had removed many pieces of furniture not specified in his itemized list.



The warrant presented by the deputy sheriff was not signed by a city magistrate and was therefore illegal, Biedenkant stated. The $25,000 bond made out by the Sigman gang for the confiscated furniture was also illegally made out, the attorney for the local charged.

Sol Pesser, city marshal, who granted Greenberg the judgment against the local's furniture on Tuesday threatened to take action against the deputy sheriff. Objections to the confiscation of the furniture were also lodged by Andrew H. Wainburger, attorney for Greenberg. Greenberg's claim against the local was for $340.

Weinberger threatens to bring contempt of court charges against Deputy Sheriff Plunkett for violating Greenberg's prior claim, which was recognized by City Marshall Pesser.

M. Rogers, an official of Local 22, was almost stabbed by an armed thug.

While the police and the right wing thugs were busily engaged hauling the union furniture from the union offices into moving vans, hundreds of workers gathered on the premises were driven off or herded into rooms where they were held incommunicado. The only persons permitted to go above the first floor of the building were right wing thugs.

Browder has just returned from six months in China, as a member of the International Workers' Delegation, during which he visited over 40 cities and towns, during the period of the Chiang Kai-shek split. He spent two months in Hankow, in close touch with the leaders of the Kuomintang, the trade unions, the peasants, and other revolutionary bodies. He was also a delegate to the Pan-Pacific Trade Union conference, and was the secretary of that body. He tells in graphic and authoritative story of the beginnings of the Civil War now raging in Nationalist China. The pamphlet has many documents, photos, etc

Unemployment Doles in France Make Big Jump

PARIS, Aug. 18. — The unemployment figures in France since March 6th last have not been published. While the number of persons in receipt of relief from unemployment funds was 70,135 at the end of March, as compared with 61,346 at the end of April and 44,771 at the end of May, by the 1st of June it had fallen to 26,892. Similarly, the number of unemployed registered at employment exchanges fell from 44,000 to 26,000 during the same period.

From the beginning of the year to May 14th, 2,000 alien workers left the country and 3,502 were admitted. Between May 14 and June 4 the situation was reversed, 1,000 workers leaving the country and 1,875 arriving, 7,000 of the latter being agricultural workers. From June 4 to 14 the departures (3,134) again exceeded arrivals (1,000), including 2,000 agricultural workers. The total figures as from the beginning of the year show 18,796 departures as against 13,011 arrivals.

Germany Heads List of I. F. T. U. Affiliations

The latest yearbook of the International Federation of Trade Unions, recently published the membership of those unions which are affiliated to the federation. Germany heads the list with 4,582,956 members, while Great Britain is a good second with 4,366,619. Austria with 896,969, France with 620,000 and Belgium with 556,000 are next in order of numerical importance. Among extra-European countries overall mention may be made of the Argentine Republic, which has more than 52,000 members.

The total affiliated membership amounts to a little over 13,000,000. As the total trade-union membership in different countries is about 37,000,000, it would seem that ratification by non-United are affiliated to the Amsterdam International.

Congress Fight Over Beer.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. — A new attack on the Volstead Act by Col. James H. Wadsell, federal alcohol and brewery control chief, and an announcement at the office of Senator Edwards (D) of New Jersey, that he would press for passage a light wine and beer bill, added fuel today to what promises to be the most lively congressional prohibition fight since the adoption of the 18th Amendment

Mann Moves Crowds To Enthusiasm for Sacco and Vanzetti

By TOM BARKER
Federated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 16. — Trafalgar Square and Tom Mann!

The place and the man. The place dedicated to Nelson, a grotesque figure squinting over smokey London, an admiral of press gang recruited seamen packed into the verminous flea-ridden, hungry wooden walls of old England."

Mann, Class Fighter.

Tom Mann! of Broken Hill, Tower Hill, Melbourne and Hankow gladiator of 72, grey-polled, vigorous, leader of men, ruddy, stirrer of class enthusiasm, an example to the young folks in a hurry, a sticker, a despiser of capitalist authority, a brother of all men in prison for their class.

And what a Trafalgar Square! The plinths crowded with the banners of London's unions, working class parties, the Young Workers. Pioneers of tender years, the organized unemployed.

Hundreds March.

Marching phalanxes, headed by Irish pipers with swinging brawny knees, brown kilts and tossing long pipes. From the docks of Limehouse and Poplar, from the mean and crowded slums of Bethnal Green, from the railway shops of North London, from Socialist Battersea, from all the corners of a great city, to demand the lives of condemned proletarians in the gaols of a Puritanical Massachusetts, of one murdered a hundred times by injustice and torture.

A swarm of people listening to the old Warrior. "Forty years since the Chicago martyrs were hanged, during what was admitted later on to be framed evidence. Very few of you remember what effort we put forward in London to save Albert Parsons, Spies and Engel. How often have we faced cabinet ministers since.

What Do Our Enemies Stop At?

Do our class enemies ever stop at any means in dealing those who interfere with the villainies of the system for which they are responsible? It is the turn of our heroic comrades Sacco and Vanzetti to suffer all the atrocities and torture that capitalism can incite out to its opponents."

Other speakers told how Tom Mann went into the prisoners' cells, how during them, talked them by the hand, impressing upon these vividly treated men his sincerity and then—signing his name to the warrant that condemns them to death. This official, said one, "personifies the system that endows him with the powers of life and death over these who are true to their class and who even on the scaffold, look proudly into the eyes of their executioners and shout "Long live the workingclass!"

On the resolution being read demanding at once the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, in force, no hands went up, the crossed hands of workers. Tom Mann then spoke of the other angles of the movement to the huge crowd.

London has not seen such a meeting for years. The newspapers devote columns to the case. Most of the newspapers are favorable to Sacco and Vanzetti. American legal methods and the habit of using such cases for political campaigns by district attorneys, etc.

Take J. I. Garvin, a leading publicist, says in today's "Observer": "His (Mann in this case is due primarily to the overtaxing of the prisoner's own friends. But Oregon's policy for the gentleness of justice cannot be shifted from the organs of justice themselves. A consideration of the men's sentence gives this general conclusion that any appeal to the governor's endorsement of the visceral proceedings themselves."

Rich Realtor Plunges Four Floors to Death

Aug. 18.—Detectives investigating the death plunge of Edward Ebling, wealthy realtor, who died after falling four stories from the apartment of Miss Marie Blues, expressed belief that his fall from the window was accidental. Miss Blues said Ebling had gone to the window to get a bit of fresh air when he lost his balance and tripped out.

Imprisoned by Elevator; Man Dies Before Freed

Aug. 18.—While several hundred persons looked on powerless to aid, Tony Bennette, 28, was crushed to death when wedged between an elevator and the floor in a West Twenty-fifth street building today. He fatally lapsed into unconsciousness and died before released.

COMPETITION SERIOUS FOR U. S. WORKERS AS EUROPE PRACTICES AMERICAN METHODS

By LELAND OLDS.

Belgian Glass Workers Exploited.

How low the wage standards of Europe threaten serious competition for American workers is suggested in a U. S. tariff commission report on production costs in the plate glass industry here and abroad. The commission finds that daily wage rates in this industry in Belgium are only about one fourth those in the United States. Production per employee in the United States is more than twice Belgium but this hardly overcomes the tremendous difference in wages.

The average wage in plate glass mills in the United States in the years 1923-25 was $5.43 for an 8-hour day. In Belgium the corresponding average was $1.45 a day. Of course, $1.45 will purchase more in Belgium but this does not affect the question of international competition.

Starvation Wages in Belgium.

In 1925, according to the report, 19,550 workers in the U. S. plate glass industry produced 101,256,266 square feet of marketable glass or an average of 5,696 feet per employee. In Belgium 7,516 workers produced 32,206,858 square feet, an average of 4,300 feet per worker.

The 1925 rates of wages per 8-hour day of different occupations in the plate glass industry of the United States and Belgium were:

Plate Glass Industry	United States	Belgium
Wages per 8-hour day
Batch mixers	$3.11	$1.82
Furnace men	4.28	1.65
Pitters	4.40	1.61
Leermen	4.00	1.50
Layers	3.72	1.41
Cutters	4.00	1.50
Grinders	4.12	1.48
Polisher	4.26	1.42
Examiners	4.04	1.56
Packers	3.91	1.41
Gaugers	4.29	1.61
Peddlers	4.08	1.50
Blockmen	4.25	1.65
Watchmen	4.00	1.40

Labor Derives Lose Workers' Jobs.

The plate glass industry in the United States, according to an earlier report of the U. S. department of labor, has been from the very beginning a nonskilled industry and the many simple operations involved in the process of handling large and heavy plates soon suggested the use of labor-saving devices. Recently the continuous automatic process has increased the output of rough plate glass from 42.89 to 62.63 square feet per man per hour and of polished plate glass from 7.66 to 12.30 square feet per hour. The total labor cost in making rough plate glass by the continuous process is 25.1 per cent less than by the discontinuous process and the labor cost of polished glass 43.3 per cent less.

It is probably only a question of time before American methods and American machines will be used in Belgium. What happens the question of competition with American labor will become even more serious.

Thru With Cal and Co. Farmers See Politics As Exploiters' Fight

BISMARCK, N. D., Aug. 18.

That Calvin Coolidge is not the only treacherous "friend of the farmer" in the spotlight is pointed by The United Farmer, in an editorial stating that western farmers are "definitely through with Cal politically forever," the paper also attacks Vice Pres. Dawes, Frank O. Lowden, Rep. Haugen and Dickinson of Iowa and Sen. Norbeck of South Dakota.

"It is simply a fight between capitalistic groups for the right and privilege of exploiting the farmer. They differ only as to the methods", it declares.

JERSEY PAINTERS LEARN TO ORGANIZE WHEN FOREMAN SKINS THEIR PAYROLLS

(By a Worker Correspondent)

Accost Vagen, a shoulder, soon into the office of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Local Union, August 1st, and told us the following tale.

Renovated Theatres.

Early Last February he obtained work at his trade from the Haring & Blumenthal Realty Corp. who had a contract to renovate two movie theatres in New Jersey. Since five more men joined him. These men were Fritz Liber, Gustav Hoffman, John Wagner, and Henry Helmuth. These workers worked under a foreman named Henry Waldman.

The foreman set the wages and the working conditions. During the first week, he paid $4.50 to $6.00 to the painters, and $8.00 per night to Vagen, the decorator.

The men complained very meekly from time to time that the wages were indeed scanty. The foreman promised a remedy. "We'll see," he would say, "about making a few dollars more." These workers still being young and not quite wise to the ways of the foreman's graft, men and worked, and worked, and worked.

Foreman Rules His Staff.

Only a few weeks, the spirit of good fellowship existing between the workers and the foreman. Late one evening after a 11 hour night work the painters, the decorator and the foreman betook themselves to a convenient speakeasy in the neighborhood, and made merry. They continued to do this till one evening in Friday in July.

This day being pay day, Mr. Hoen Waldman imbibed a little too much of the hard stuff at the speakeasy and when he reached the office on the Lincoln theatre of Union City, N. J., he flopped.

When the workers came to get their saturday night wages they found Waldman lying dead in the well. The workers, showing true awakened class spirit, refused to work any more and forced him to pay the wages of the workers. In addition they demanded that the foreman be kicked out and content in the presence of all the workers, and kept it there until he would solve up.

In his pocket they found a roll of bills amounting to $750.00. The workers wondered where Waldman could have got that money. Later investigation pointed to the latter part of the night about Mr. Waldman's young fortune. Finally Gustav Hoffman whispered to Alfred Vagen, "I would if that huge roll of bill has anything to do with our pay envelopes tonight." "Don't be a damn fool," asked Alfred Vagen. One of the other workers at the juncture contributed to the discussion. Very soon the third worker stated that he thought that their beloved foreman was reaping them of their pay.

Suspicion grew into a mention and the Haring & Blumenthal Realty Corp. Here the workers comprised of Vagen, Hoffman and Liber went to see Haring of the Haring & Blumenthal Realty Corp. There they ascertained that they had been jipped from $2.50 to $3.00 a night by the affable foreman. The firm was paying $8.00 to $10 per night, but the foreman was not turning over that amount to the workers.

Boss Not So Sympathetic.

Haring was surprised, but not overly excited. He was indignant very soon however, when he learned that his foreman had not only gypped the men, which after all is not such an unreligious thing, but had appropriated money belonging to Haring. Ha! this was serious.

Haring is very busy now trying to get Mr. Waldman to make good for the stolen material. And the workers? Oh well, they have a mere pittance to tell. They would like to get the law after him, but that is a tedious and costly process and they haven't the money for it. There is one thing they would like to do, they could like to bring him up, but again, they are advisable they may get arrested. But they can't keep quiet about it, and it is due they to appear in themselves?

Lesson In Organization.

So they came to the Union. And we indeed to them; we preached to them, we drew the proper conclusions from the sad tale. We pointed out that such extreme exploitation may when workers are disorganized. It was a supreme low typically unorganized workers that we dealt with. We did not have to do very much talking, then mind had been sharpened pretty well by Waldman's actions and financing machinations. They saw the point. And they are now all members of the International Brotherhood of Painters Union.

THOUSANDS FAIL AS PROSPERITY SWEEPS UNITED STATES; STEEL OUTPUT LOWERED

Manufacturers of U. S. steel report production has been still further reduced, the latest figure for the steel corporation being 68 per cent and for the independents of steel companies 63 per cent of capacity.

Business failures are running considerably ahead of last year both in the number of concerns and total liabilities involved. Figures for July show 1756 failures involving $44,349,974 liabilities compared with 1666 failures and $29,680,009 in July 1926. For the first half year there were 12,256 failures involving $281,457,548, compared with 11,476 involving $209,808,501 in the first half of 1926. The increase in liabilities is over 34 per-

8 Painter Pickets Held on Felonious Assault Charges

Eight union painters and a strikebreaker's guard were held in $2,500 bail Wednesday on charges of felonious assault in the Flatbush Court Brooklyn, by Magistrate David Goldstein. They are to have a hearing September 1.

The men were arrested Tuesday when union pickets were attacked by bosses' guards and scabs at the corner of Ave. I and Flatbush Ave. They were peacefully picketing when the gunmen hired by the contractors fired into their midst. When the attacked workers started to defend themselves the strikebreakers and their guards called upon the police for assistance.

One of the pickets, Frank Tuchbaum is in Kings County Hospital recovering from a gun wound in the shoulder inflicted on him from a gangster's gun.

The armed guards were hired from the Waldon Detective Agency of New York.

Union officials declared yesterday that the terroristic acts of the bosses would not interfere with the picketing which would continue as heretofore.

Lindbergh Welcome Cost, City $50,000

Aug. 18. It cost the city $50,000 to welcome home Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, conqueror of the first European nonstop flight.

This was made known in the city record along with the announcement that welcomes to President Machado of Cuba and the Atlantic flyer cost $10,000 each.

Textile Workers Strike In Hundreds Against Penn. Mill Conditions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. — Six hundred textile workers on strike against the Bess-Goldsmith Silk Co. in Kingston, Pa. for better wages and conditions are the center of the biggest strike reported to the labor department in the past week. Textile strikes involving the Lasay Silk Co. at Fall River, Mass., and the Chicopee Falls Mfg. Co. were settled.

New R. R. In Wyoming.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. — The Union Pacific Railroad applied today to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to construct 54 miles of new track connecting its northern branch in Wyoming with the main line. The new road is designed to decrease the haul from Wyoming points into Denver by approximately 200 miles. The construction would begin at Creighton, Wyo. and proceed to an, as yet, undesignated point about 100 miles from Cheyenne.

RIGHT WING AIM IN DEFENSE RAID TO SMASH RELIEF

Landy Urges Big Turn Out for Jamboree

Ludwig Landy, manager of the Joint Defense of the farmers and cloakmakers in commenting on the break up of the office by the right wing said

"The labor hundreds are making a last dying fight. As always when on the retreat they have the support of the courts, police and the underworld gangsters.

"To prove her murderous methods they placed a $25,000 bond on our furniture when we can't worth about $300. All this was for the purpose of hampering our relief work, of scaring our prisoners and their dependents from getting assistance.

Urges Jamboree Attendance.

"The [illegible] however Already the strong, no count voice of the workers in the shops has risen in protest. Every ounce of strength is being put into the fight. We will win against the combined opposition of the reactionaries.

"One way of insuring success is by every worker attending the Jamboree in Starlight Park 177th St. Bronx, on Sunday, August 28. This must be made an all class gathering. The combined voices of trades workers will respond with the cry, 'Down With Right Wing Gangsterism, Down With the Blood Hundreds.' Prepare to be the Ultimate Victory of the Masses in the Union."

POVERTY IN NEW YORK INCREASING REPORT DECLARES

Unemployment Growing Too, Figures Show

Poverty and unemployment are rapidly increasing in New York despite the prosperity boom, the number is being lavishly hailed by the captains of industries, figures compiled by Welfare Commissioner Hodson of the city's charities department disclosed today. The number of persons receiving relief from the city increased last year.

For the first [illegible] this year, the commissioner reports, the average number of families receiving relief to prove to be in the hundreds. Judging from the first six months of this year the average number of families receiving relief was 356 as compared with the nightly average of 241 during the same period last year.

Nightly lodgers in the municipal house in July this year averaged 280. Last year they averaged 274, in 1925 they averaged 166.

Dependent children cared for by the welfare department this year showed an increase of 61% over the same period last year. During the first six months of 1927 the welfare department spent $2,000,000 for veterans and their dependents, while only $153,827 were spent for the same period last year.

Alaska's Fish Rush Means Starvation

By BILL O'HANAHAN.

During the spring months of the year in and around Seattle many workers prepare themselves to invade Alaska and hire out with some ex-large Alaska fish canneries to corral for themselves a winters stake. Thousands of workers are shipped from this port every year but those that come back sooner to the heavens that they will never sign up for the Alaska waters again.

Fish Slaves.

The big fish companies have a long out stretching hand always looking for cheap labor to harvest from during the fish season and the fish workers that travel to the faraway north are beginning to realize that they should give up the idea that there is anything fair from after slaving for a few master in that section of the country. Having come in contact with many workers that have already returned, very few have tried to show for their long hours of work or for their dirty deeds.

In most cases the workers returning had a little take but this year it is far different as the big salmon runs that were expected fell below predictions, and the workers in general were at the short end of the earnings. The season that ushered this year will awaken them that they won't be so anxious to sign on the dotted line to ship up north again the next year, when the fishing companies put out their no promising the workers good pay to go to Alaska on their behalf to catch and put up the many variety to make a profit for the fish companies who have made millions of dollars from the workers fishing efforts.

Cost Workers Blood.

Suffering hardships from cold weather with poor accommodations for the fishermen is not such an easy life traveling to Alaska to make a few dollars for themselves. The scale of wages that is paid the workers is getting lower each year and if some wage slave arrived back in Seattle with a few hundred dollars he will tell you he worked long hours and suffered terrible from the cold weather.

The boats that take the workers to Alaska every year are not so much to depend upon and some of them have a hard time trying to make port on their return. One worker that made the trip this year said the meals were terrible and the bunks that they had to sleep in would make a fellow so lousy as a scratched up "coo coo" bird. He was a happy fellow when his feet touched the Seattle shore and his pipe dream of fishing in wonderful Alaska didn't get him any farther than starvation, and he felt like going out "grunning" for the one that got him to sign up for this unfruitful trip.

All the Seattle capitalist dope sheets are spreading the usual amount of hot paper about the wonderful opportunities that are open to the workers that ... h when the ice bergs melt ... and the good wages that ... paid the fisherman. The well paid keep press prints anything to make the workers think that they are missing something when they don't ship to Alaska to be remunerialized by the fish packers that are in control there.

In the east they tell you to come west, while in the west they want the workers to go east but the same rotten conditions exist in both places. Even the employment bureaus in this city are shipping workers out every day to the east for work and when they arrive the wage slaves find the same old school of slavery dealt out to them there. So hark to Seattle, the worker hits minus the fee he paid for the job and his railroad fare. It's a great life if you don't weaken, but the way the workers here are so willing to pay a dollar and a half for the privilege of sinking to Alaska is a sin, it serves them right to fall for the line of bunk that the employment agency hands out to them.

LOST AT SEA

The Miss Doran, plane named after the woman passenger pictured above, failed to reach its goal in the San Fransisco-Hawaii air race.

Shiplacoff, the $250,000 Manager

(By a Progressive Worker.)

It is already twenty months since Shiplacoff has become manager of the Pocketbook Workers' Union.

In twenty months since Walinsky was forced out of office, not by those heading the administration, but by an outside investigation committee. The meetings of the Pocketbook Workers' Union thought, though the progressive workers warned them to the contrary, that with the absence of Walinsky they would be able to breathe freely. The progressive workers kept on stating that it was not enough that Walinsky should go from the union but that the whole clique must go with them.

But unfortunately the clique did remain in office. It learned the trick of forcing itself upon the membership.

Lined Up With Wall.

For twenty months Shiplacoff has been the mouthpiece of that unscrupulous group, trying to break the backbone of the membership. There has been twenty months of misleading misrepresentation and ruthless suppression of the membership.

Search however hard we may, we cannot find a single act committed by this administration that should point to the welfare of the membership. Let us for a moment ignore Shiplacoff's connections with the Sigman, Woll and McGrady bunch as groups whose reputation as labor fakers and stool pigeons is well known to the entire labor movement. Let us ignore the fact that the minimum wage for the week workers guaranteed by the agreement is generally becoming the maximum. Let us ignore the agreement among the employers not to engage a worker without the permission of his previous employer. Should a worker leave his union for a raise he has been refused to him, he soon finds out that he is not living in the land of the free and the brave. He must rather go back to his old place or wait for weeks for another job. After a worker has been starved out for weeks, he gives up the idea of a raise and contents himself with his previous wages. The officials know that but do nothing to put a stop to this sort of black listing.

Piece Worker Hit.

The ... Worker, leaving the small ... section whose work ... cannot so easily be bought or contracted in shorter shops, are helpless against the ... arrived on the employers. The piece workers are forced with their backs to the wall and must choose one of two things: Work for prices the employers offer them or walk the street. It does not mean that the manufacturers give up their business when their prices are not accepted. Oh, no! They get their products thru buying and contracting, despite the fact the agreement forbids such practice during a time when there ... workers are not fully employed.

Aided Scab Nests.

Shiplacoff may boast that dozens of scab nests were organized during his administration. The results of ... entered there and never will as long as a union has such irresponsible leadership. The manufacturers know that the present leadership will do nothing to prevent them from buying and contracting merchandise produced in scab nests at the expense of starving the "organized" workers.

Suspends Militants.

Dozens of workers, honest conscientious, union men were suspended, deprived of their union rights and privileges, so that the bosses may use their return as a means to crush the union spirit of the rest of the workers. These militant union men were suspended so that the will and strength of the membership voiced by these union fighters should not be heard at the membership meeting.

Hold-up Tax.

Enormous sums of money are being spent to keep up a hierarchy of "powerful characters" to terrorize the members, to block them from every form of resistance.

Shiplacoff's administration was so certain of having the membership reduced to total helplessness that it had the nerve to propose a $60 tax, which means a quarter of a million dollars to be taken from the members' pockets. To think of the insolence of a labor leader to face workers with such a mad tax proposition.

There were times when the Pocketbook Workers' Union carried on organization work. In those days it must be remembered the dues rate was much smaller than now. There were critical moments when this union fineed the outrome of negotiations with the employers. But never in those times was such tax ever proposed.

The "organization" work carried on at present is not even worth mentioning. At present the union is two years before negotiations for a new agreement. Why a tax? The answer is that the only attraction a union has for leaders such as Shiplacoff and his kind is a big treasury. With great sums of money at his disposal he can play the rich uncle in the Jewish labor movement. He can ... mans and the Beckerman ... played their game quite well when they push Shiplacoff the head of all the union breakers.

But, Shiplacoff, you will be his own among those union breakers by having in the back of him a big treasury. Otherwise he is a failure even as a union breaker.

Plays Upon Sentiments.

Shiplacoff's administration planned to take the membership by surprise. In the tax proposal they also included the proposition of buying a home for the union. $5 ... collected from each member upon the workers' sentiments. What worker does not want a home? But for the home only $45,000 are needed. Why propose a quarter of a million dollars?

The workers sensed the lie immediately. At first, when the members heard of this tax proposition, they simply jeered at Shiplacoff and took the whole proposition as a joke. The first meeting called for the consideration of the tax question was a failure. Another meeting was called, this time in Cooper Union. The administration having learned something from the previous meeting, that the fussy leather goods workers haven't gone crazy yet, proposed through one of their agents to break up the question in two. The question of buying a building, the administration suggested, might be discussed independently of the tax proposition. But this was a special union meeting called for the purpose of discussing the building proposition because they feared the ... tax. ... for any other reason, for ... that the members voted against buying a building at the present time. But such difficulties the chairman or the union can easily surmount. He simply announced a majority in favor of the clique. The members on the other hand do not but recognize the decision and are determined to fight for a reconsideration of the question at the next membership meeting when the tax question will be considered.

No Financial Report.

As to the tax, proper it must be said that not only a sixty dollars tax but even a sixty cents tax is a crime against the membership. Do the members ever get a report as to what is being done with these enormous sums coming in to the union, year in and year out? Never. The Pocketbook Workers' Union has a constant steady income from dues and initiation fees of about $130,000. Where does this money go to? The members slave for that money. Have they no right to know what purpose this money is being put to? Let it not be imagined that when we say that this union has a steady yearly income of $130,000 we talk fiction.

In the union's journal of December, 1925, we find the following report given by the membership committee:

"Our membership is growing. In the year 1924 we enrolled 647 new members in our New York organization. The initiation fees of all new applicants for the year 1924 amounted to $13,756. A considerable gain, indeed."

Again. "The membership committee of the New York organization was also very active in 1925. In the last eleven months we enrolled 617 new members. The initiation fees in all these cases amounted to $12,586." Using these figures as a basis we can safely say that the Pocketbook Workers' Union has an income from initiation fees alone amounting to $14,000 per year.

We shall be most conservative when we say that the membership of that union is 6,000; 2,000 mechanics and 2,000 helpers and unskilled workers. Mechanics pay forty cents per week in dues, helpers 35 cents, unskilled 30 cents. Figuring the dues income upon a yearly basis, we see that the union receives yearly $83,200 from mechanics, $18,200 from helpers, $15,600 from unskilled workers. Now if we add together all the dues we have

	$83,200
	18,200
	15,600
Income	14,000
Total income per year	$131,000

Money Disappears.

That union has a steady income of $130,000 per year. Those figures are most conservative considering the fact that the administration claims to have a membership of 7,000, instead of as is being figured here, only 6,000.

The union has a regular expense such as rent, salaries of the office workers, salaries of the officials and minor expenses, amounting to $60,000 per year.

If we subtract 60,000 from 130,000 there remains $70,000. In other words $70,000 remains every year, part of which goes for organization purposes and the rest for the savings fund. But what do we see. It is known that during Shiplacoff's administration no organization of any importance was accomplished. Can a union of that size, even if it were busy day and night organizing the industry, and it is admitted by the administration that 80 per cent of the industry is already organized, spend $70,000 a year, and yet be called reorganized?

When Shiplacoff came to office there was in the treasury, according to the accountant's report found in the same journal, $128,000.00. Now only $102,000 is left in the treasury, in other words not only was the twice $70,000 spent since Shiplacoff is manager, for good know what but a sizable amount. Only $10,000 of this sum has already elected was given to the strikers.

What was done with the other $30,000? To what did Shiplacoff spend the remaining ... of $28,000? He has explain this to an important investigation committee. Think of this outrage; $28,000 was squandered by Shiplacoff's administration and look for ... when it comes for another quarter of a million dollars.

But it seems the members of that union have not lost their heads. Shiplacoff's ... to learn that the union is not a gold mine for corrupt officials.

The members have not said their last word yet about this unheard of tax. But from the last two meetings dealing with this question it is evident that this time the administration ... not obtain its own brutal force. Nothing short of an investigation of the union finances by an impartial committee will satisfy the membership. If Shiplacoff does not grant that, woe to his "power."

A Street in a Mining Village

By VERA BUCH.

The hot evening settles down after the sweltering day. The sun is low over the coal country, still the mountains look blue. It is the white haze in which they simmered all day. The supper-hour is past, and now the rambling, crooked village street teems with new life. The miners' sharks have emptied upon the gravel roadbed their swarms of ragged, barefooted, whooping children, and upon the front door-steps their weary, sweating adults. Now and then a breeze wanders down the street, faintly. Everybody relaxes then, tries to drink it in . . . but before they can ratch it, it is gone again.

At the end of the street the colliery. Towering into the sky, ten stories high, the breaker rears its blackened, crazy structure. Upon the chute leading down to the ground, now and then a miner appears, black with soot, fresh from the bowels of the earth, with the lamp on his head ever he still burning. Rythmic and loud as the sea, the breaker throbs and pounds with the crushing of the coal. Here too the calm-loving people is black and desolate mountain, cutting off the horizon, like the end of the world. The children are scampering on it, like little gnomes, outlined against the sky. Around the colliery, the little swarming mine village cluster. At though hopelessly, asleep in the shadow of that mine which gave it birth, yet whose destiny it has ceased to control in its power. Now and then a ... belated miner comes from work, bearing the first shift, limb, ... his dinner pail in his hand, his lamp upon his head.

Nearest the colliery is Proska's house. Proska is a miner differ ent from the rest. He is sitting now with his four boarders around the table, drinking home-made beer. He is not broken like the others; he is young, stalwart, powerful. His face ... by sorrow ... by suffering ... that of an idealist. He is a perfect ... ted man, Proska. He is blacklisted in the mines as a radical. This means that no more ... he get a job than he is fired, driven from job to job. He must get up at four in the morning now to reach the job that he has, far from this village. All this Proska takes as a matter of course. He is a soldier in the class struggle,—must not a soldier fight? Wives and children the struggle calls, he is ready and will go. All this shines out in his face, and also a touch of gentleness and tenderness, that comes to him from his love for his wife, Mary, and their four little children.

All these miners came here recently, from the soft-coal country. They had enough of it there. After a year of starvation, a year of living on "credit" from the dollar a week credit for families of eight and ten they finally pooled their few remaining tools their children—there was nothing else to take—and came to the hard-coal anthracite. Was it any better here? They had no illusions—they took up again here the dark, struggle that is the life of the workers. The struggle to make a living, and that struggle against the boss. Now they are talking about the unemployment which is the most pressing thing today.

"Last week I went to Bethlehem, one of them was saying, painfully, in the English words. "I was looking for job in steel mill. Three they lay off men too, take on only Mexicans, terrible low wages. I go to Easton, maybe same. Three they lay off, they pick them up and take for scabs to soft coal. I think, boss, they lay us off here for this, keep us from help' soft coal strike, keep us up sooner."

Proska kids him along a little. "You got nothing to worry, you a single fellow," he says with his ... Slavic accent, smoothing off the corners of the words. "You only got worry for one; when you wife and me, I got worry for six." He counts ... on his fingers. "Me, my wife Mary, my four kids, Frank, Anna, Nirk, Joe ... and you, you four lazy boarders, you drink up all my beer,—I got worry for you too."

Proska's wife Mary comes in from the porch. She is young and handsome like him, robust and straight. She carries in a huge armful of clothes; the sweat streams from her face. She puts the clothes on the basket that is already overflowing with the days' washing. "My God, I work hard today!" she exclaims, fanning her face with her apron. "What I keep you in my house for, woman?" her husband jokes with her, gently smiling. "Only wash clothes for me, that's all?"

Mary laughs. This does not bother her. She is her husband's partner, not his slave. She goes with him to his meetings; reads his books. She was with him in Juzo-Slavia, coming to America, in the soft-coal, now here. She will be with him wherever the Revolution takes them. Is it his fault that she must wear herself out with housework? That is the capitalist system. But women must fight the class struggle just like in Russia, here too, they must make, themselves a better life. That is Mary's philosophy.

Outside, on the broken front steps of the ... house, hangs down, a four year old, Marya youngest. His bare feet have been scrubbed with sand ... soap; he is not supposed to get them dirty again before ... bed-time. The street, however, is a great temptation, and there are boys are playing ... ing.

Next door, Martin, portly, fifteen-year-old Marian ... sulking. Her beau dies not come tonight. All for nothing are her white, powdered cheeks, her high heeled slippers, her ... soft body. Marian is a worker in a ... mill for which she gets dollars a week. When you work like that it is a big disappointment if your beau does not show up on his night. Now she sits in the heat and trouble ... waste, cursing, ...

Push Strike Plans as Court Dooms Sacco and Vanzetti

STRIKE FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI!

To The Workers Of New York:

The ruling of the Supreme Judicial Court denying a writ of error means that the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti will be shattered by electricity unless labor rises in one vast general strike and demands that these innocent labor leaders be freed at once.

The situation is desperate. The united action of all workers is imperatively necessary. Strike and urge your comrades to strike. Carry on strike agitation wherever you are. Do it earnestly and insistently. Do it continuously. Strike Monday at 3 p. m. and demonstrate at Union Square at 4 p. m.

Sacco and Vanzetti look with hopeful eyes on the workers of the world. They have said that only the mass action of the workers can aid them now. Will you heed their plea?

They have suffered unimaginable tortures for the last seven years, and now faced with the hourly approach of death they call on you to rescue them from the barbarity of the electric chair.

Answer their call. Strike. Protest. Demonstrate. They have given seven years to labor movement. We urge you to give them one day. Strike.

FREEDOM FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI!
LIFE, NOT DEATH FOR OUR COMRADES!
DOWN TOOLS ON MONDAY!
SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI!

SUPREME COURT LENDS AUTHORITY TO MILL OWNER MURDER PROGRAM

REMOVED TO DEATH HOUSE.

Following the decision today of the full bench of the State Supreme Court refusing Sacco and Vanzetti a new trial, the two framed-up workers were removed to the death house. This is the second time within a fortnight that the two framed-up workers have been sent to the death house.

Forced Into Death Garb

"We expected it," said Sacco when he learned that the full bench of the Supreme Court had sanctioned his legalized murder. "They do not think of our guilt or innocence," he said, "They look upon us only as bad men, as radicals."

Sacco and Vanzetti marched to the death house shortly after noon. Upon their arrival they were placed in the cells in which Governor Fuller kept them until a few moments before the time set for their execution August 10th.

In the death house the framed workers were forced to discard their prison garb and wear special blue suits. Special shirts with short sleeves, provided for the fastening of the bands of the electric chair were also given them.

The exquisite torture of Sacco and Vanzetti will be prolonged until a little after Monday midnight when they will burn in the electric chair, unless they are saved by a mighty demonstrations and strike on the part of labor thruout the world.

Hill Lights For Stay

Attorney Hill's first move was a trip to Fitchburg to interview Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall of the state supreme court. The supreme court was said to have the power to stay pending legal moves in the federal courts, as has a single justice of the United States supreme court. This would remove the question of another respite from the hands of Governor Alvan T. Fuller and his executive council.

With the present respite ending at midnight, August 22, the next move of the defense legal forces will probably be a rush to the United States supreme court for a writ of certiorari looking for a stay of sentence and a review by the highest federal tribunal.

The full bench of the state's court overruled exceptions to denial of motions for a new trial by Trial Judge Webster Thayer and for a revocation of sentence. It turned down all motions made by Chief Defense Counsel Arthur D. Hill, and hid itself behind a screen of technicalities and verbiage.

Deny New Trial.

All actions hinged around the prejudice of the trial judge against Sacco and Vanzetti because of their radical beliefs. This was brought to light in a series of affidavits given Governor Alvan T. Fuller and his advisory review committee.

The full bench also dismissed a petition for a writ of coram nobis, which had been filed at the conclusion of the hearing of the various exceptions.

Legal Hokum.

The court held that the issuance of a writ of error rests solely within the discretion of a single justice in capital cases."

The full bench made no attempt to pass on the prejudice of Trial Judge Thayer.

The writ of error coram nobis was addressed to the full bench but the court ruled that such a writ had become obsolete in view of the "plain intentions of the legislature" as manifest by recent statutes, stating that a writ of error shall not issue unless granted by a single justice. A new trial, the full bench held, must be requested before sentence is passed. The decision hinged wholly around point of law.

The decision which was about one thousand words in length and was written by Justice Braley, follows:

"Braley, J., the defendants, Sacco and Vanzetti, who were indicted, tried and convicted of murder in the first degree alleged exceptions to rulings at the trial as well as to the denials of numerous motions for a new trial on various grounds and to rulings on law thereon which were overruled and a rescrip was sent accordingly on May 10, 1926.

"Commonwealth vs. Sacco, 255, Mass., 369. The defendants on May 25, 1926 filed a motion in the trial courts for a new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence which was denied subject to the exceptions of the defendants duly entered and argued in this court on April 5, 1927. These exceptions were overruled. Commonwealth vs. Sacco, Mass. adv. sh. 1927. 621.

"The argument for the defendants was full and exhaustive covering every error claimed to have been committed either at the trial or any subsequent proceeding and it was decided as a matter of law there was evidence which would warrant a jury in finding the defendants guilty on April 9, 1927. Sentence of death was imposed in accordance with general laws chapter 265. The defendants were delivered to the sheriff in execution of their sentence and application for executive clemency was made

Plan Big Picket Demonstration at Prison On Monday

The New York branch of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee has completed arrangements for a large number of sympathizers to go to Boston Saturday and Sunday to conduct a mass picket line in front of the prison on Monday, August 22nd, at which time the twelve day respite granted the condemned men by Governor Fuller will expire.

Profiting by their experience of the 10th, a much larger number of sympathizers have agreed to make the journey, and it is the intention of the committee to prevail upon the Boston authorities to allow them to picket the prison unmolested.

Two Innocent Workers Again In Deathhouse

"Only General Strike Can Defeat the Judicial Murder," Says Emergency Committee

With the last vestiges of hope in legal technicality completely shattered by the decision of the full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, labor thruout the nation is preparing for the nation-wide strike on Monday to prevent the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The two workers have already been moved to the death house, in which they will remain until the Massachusetts industrial overlords burn them Monday evening, or until they are given complete freedom thru a mighty protest on the part of world labor.

In its efforts to make the strike in New York City a monster demonstration that will eclipse the walk-out that won the framed-up workers a reprieve last week, the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee has sent the following telegram to 236 labor organizations in the city:

UNITED FRONT PROTEST STRIKE.

"The Supreme Court decision means death for Sacco and Vanzetti unless organized labor voices its protest by means of the general strike. We urge you to call a protest strike for Monday, August 22nd, at 3 p. m., and to participate in the mass demonstration at Union Square at 1 p. m." The telegram was signed by Rose Baron, secretary of the Emergency Committee.

Joining scores of other organizations that have issued strike calls, the Industrial Workers of the World has asked its members to join in the giant protest walkout. Thousands of workers in heavy industry thruout the country will answer the I. W. W. call, officials here said.

Transport Workers Strike.

The Marine Transport Workers' Union of the I. W. W. has ordered the strike for Sacco and Vanzetti. Thousands of leaflets issued by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee are being distributed to the waterfront workers by committees appointed by the I. W. W.

The International Seamen's Club has also gone on record in favor of the strike and has thrust its entire machinery into action to make it a success.

Barbers Will Join Strike.

John Pardarella, manager of Local 914 of the Barbers' Union yesterday issued an official call for a strike on Monday. All Brooklyn barbers are instructed to stop work at 12 a. m. and report at Union Square, 1 p. m., where the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee will hold a monster demonstration.

Hotel and Restaurant Workers.

The Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union, P. Pascal Cosgrove, organizer, yesterday called upon all members of the organization to join the Sacco-Vanzetti strike next Monday, 10 a. m. The members are instructed to be on Union Square at 10 a. m.

Iron Workers Issue Call.

The Iron and Bronze Workers' Union, A. Rosenfeld, secretary, has endorsed Monday's strike and demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti. All iron workers are called upon to be at the Union Square rally.

Shoe Workers to Strike

The New York District Council, Shoe Workers' Protective Union, H. Levine, secretary and S. Grillard, business agent issued a call yesterday calling upon all the shoe workers in New York to down tools at 10 a. m. Mon

Red International Appeals to Save Sacco and Vanzetti

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—The Executive Bureau of the International of Red Labor Unions has published an appeal inviting the workers of all countries to develop the fight for the salvation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The appeal in part says "At a moment when MacDonald hopes to post when the lowers hypocritically "plead" and the Amsterdam leaders humble themselves in the anterooms of American embassies, the peaceful demonstrations of workers have already compelled the most opulent and most powerful government to retreat and look for loopholes to execute its most infamous "justice." The bourgeoisie understands perfectly well the force of the international solidarity of the workers and trembles before the danger of the transformation of the peaceful protests into strikes and boycotts, sabotage and embargo on American products.

Wants to Fool Workers.

The appeal charges the world-be saving of trying to deceive the workers and continues: "The American government wants to lull to sleep our vigilance and seize a favorable moment to execute the murder of the bourgeois class justice.

"Don't weaken your energy, but develop the fight!"

"Sacco and Vanzetti must be torn out of the hands of the democratic bandits!"

day and join the Sacco-Vanzetti strike. They also urged the workers to attend the Union Square demonstration at 4 p. m.

Hit Class Maeder.

Immediately after the court decision Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee made the following statement:

"This ruling merely supports the contention that we have been making right along that the Massachusetts legal hierarchy is determined to make a class example of Sacco and Vanzetti and that the workingblass can hope for no justice in capitalist courts.

Strike Can Save Them.

"Sacco and Vanzetti are now before the last court of appeal—the united workers of the world. Organized labor will now demonstrate its determination not to permit the slaughter of our imprisoned comrades. New York labor will answer the bloodthirsty decision of the supreme court on Monday by showing its most powerful weapon—the general strike."

Although an unfavorable ruling was expected at the Emergency Committee headquarters the suddenness of the blow has served to whip up the necessary fighting spirit on the part of labor leaders so that from all appearances the general protest strike which has been called by the Emergency Committee will receive the support of all organized labor irrespective of political leanings.

Officials of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee take the new death ruling to mean that New York will witness a large walk-out in view of the fact that conservative labor leaders yesterday said that they would swing into line if the ruling of the supreme court was against the condemned men.

To Picket Prison.

Word was received at Emergency Committee headquarters that the Boston Defense Committee has issued a national call for a march on Boston. Arrangements have been made for a mass exodus from New York. Labor leaders, prominent liberals and a delegation of students are preparing to leave Sunday morning. The New York delegation will picket the Boston State House and the Charlestown Prison where the men are to be executed unless the mass protests planned to take place throughout the country prove effective.

Reward for Bombers' Arrest.

Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee announced that her organization has offered a reward of $1,000 for any information which may lead to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who were responsible for the bombing of the Sacco and Vanzetti juror's home this week. The reward will be doubled if the information shows that the bombing was the work of enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti. The information must be in the hands of the committee before the execution of the condemned radicals on Monday night.

Carlo Tresca's Message.

Carlo Tresca, secretary of the Anti-Fascist Allinance of North America, issued the following statement yesterday. "As the capitalist courts have refused to listen to the voice of justice, refused to correct the wrong done Sacco and Vanzetti, the workers must now act.

"The Anti-Fascist Allinance urges all workers to strike. The strike must be used to free our condemned comrades. Workers! walk out Monday and lie at Union Square."

A CORRECTION

Through an error, the name of the Workers' Health Bureau appeared in the press of August 16th and again under date of August 18th, among the list of political and social organizations who have offered their aid to the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee. We have been requested to correct this error and to state that while the Executive Committee of the Workers' Health Bureau endorsed wholeheartedly the campaign to free Sacco and Vanzetti, the bureau, being a delegate body, cannot participate in the activities of any organization which might involve its affiliated local unions.

SUPREME COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS GIVES FRONT TO MILLIONAIRE'S CRUDE MURDER PROGRAM

under the provision of chapter 2, section 1, article 8, constitution of the Commonwealth.

"The application having grounds of newly discovered evidence and for revocation of sentence at the hearing of the motion, the trial judge refused not only to rule as requested by the defendants but denied the motions and the defendants executed, raising the question presented by the record in the first of the cases at bar.

"It is contended that the affidavits in support of the motions show such prejudice against them by the presiding judge at the trial on the merits that they have been deprived of their constitutional rights to a trial by such a 'free and impartial as the lot of humanity will admit' by general laws section 278, 29, as amended by statute 1922 chapter 308.

Reject Bias Evidence.

"A motion for a new trial in capital cases comes too late if made after sentence has been pronounced. It is within the limitation expressed in the statute. Commonwealth vs. Rollins, 242, Mass. 427, 430. Daskalakis vs. Commonthwealth 244, Mass. 268, 269. Commonwealth vs. Sacco; 255, Mass. 369, 416. See states Cushing, 11, R I. 1, 3.

"Now come to so much of this motion as asked for a revocation of sentence the proceedings already referred to before the motion was filed when reviewed, show no error of law and the cases were ripe for sentence or judgment. The jurisdiction of the trial court ended under St. 1922, C 50, s. par. 1, when the defendants were committed to execution.

"Application for such motion for revocation of sentence is like a motion for a new trial. (Commonwealth vs. Lobel, 187, Mass. 288, 2091. The defendants, therefore, have failed to show error.

"The judicial conduct of the trial judge in hearing and deciding the motion based on his own alleged bias or prejudice although urged in argument by counsel for the defendants could not be discussed because as we have just said neither the judge nor any of his associates had jurisdiction to entertain the motion.

Deny Writ of Error.

"The second is a petition for a writ of error filed in this court August 6, 1927. It was heard and denied subject to the petitioners' exception by a single justice on the petition which contained the following assignments of error.

"Number 1. It appears from the affidavits filed and made a part of the record of said cause in the superior court that the Honorable Webster Thayer the justice of said court who presided over the trial of said cases and who subsequently passed upon various motions with respect thereto was so prejudiced against your petitioners and their counsel from the time of the beginning of said trial and throughout hearings and rulings upon said motions that your petitioners have not had such a trial as that to which they are entitled under the constitutions of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and of the United States of America and that they have not had such a trial as constituted due process of law within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federla Constitution nor a trial by a judge as free, impartial and independent as the spirit of humanity will admit as required by Article XXIX of the declaration of the rights of the inhabitants of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Backs Thayer.

"It appears from the record of the proceedings including the substance of all the material evidence offered at the trial that the finding of the jury was plainly wrong.

"It appears from the record of the proceedings including the affidavits filed in support of the several motions for a new trial that the findings of fact made by the presiding judge in passing upon the petitioners several motions for new trial be plainly wrong.

"It is provided by General Laws Code 250, paragraph 11, as amended by St. 1925, C. 278, paragraph 1, and St. 1926 C. 329, paragraphs 17 that in capital cases a writ of error shall not issue unless allowed by a justice of this court after notice given to the attorney general or to other attorneys of the Commonwealth.

"The wording of the statute is clear and must be construed to mean that the issues of issuance of a writ of error in the capital case rests in the sound judicial discretion of the single justice to whom the application is presented.

"If we were to decide otherwise the plain intentions of the legislature to discourage and prevent unnecessary delay would be defeated. This appears in note 10 of the draft revision of chapter 110 on a proposed revised statutes on page 223 in the report of the commissioners to revise the general statutes of the Commonwealth."

Thayer Gloats Over Decision.

FITCHBURG, Mass., Aug. 19. Judge Webster Thayer, sitting here today in the so-called "cuttle fraud cases," read the supreme court decision and after reading the document, he smiled as he waved away would-be newspaper interviewers.

Sister of Vanzetti Comes to Aid Defeat Murder Plot of American Ruling Class

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

"Sacco and Vanzetti Must Not Die!
"Long Live Sacco and Vanzetti!"

The demand thundered thru the giant pier of the Cunard Steamship Co., Ltd., Friday afternoon, on the arrival of Luigia Vanzetti, sister of Bartolomeo Vanzetti, in New York from her home in Italy.

Rose Sacco, the wife of Nicola Sacco, condemned with Vanzetti to die in the electric chair, Monday at midnight, was there to meet her.

So were hundreds of workers, many of whom have already been in jail themselves in the fight for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, including some arrested on the picket line, around the state house in Boston. It was they who raised the cry of "Long Live Sacco and Vanzetti!" They raised it in the face of the scores of police scattered everywhere.

Luigia Vanzetti arrived with the conviction that, "There is still a hope" to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, and she is going to to exert every energy between now and Monday midnight to fulfill that hope.

One of her first acts was to deny the poisonous report spread thru the capitalist press that she had come to this country to win her brother back into the fold of the Catholic church.

Instead she declared steadfastly that one of her first acts would be to seek an interview with Governor Alvan T. Fuller, of Massachusetts, in which she would demand the liberation of her brother and Sacco.

For the first time in the history of the port of New York, the largest in the world, a woman of the working class dominated the day's ship's news. Scores of celebrities, who usually have their inane gossip printed as inspired wisdom, were forgotten in the rush of a hundred reporters and a score of photographers to report, in words and pictures, the coming of the sister of Vanzetti, twice condemned by the ruling class of Massachusetts because he was "a radical."

• • •

The first class passengers stood aghast at quarantine as the ship newsa reporters came aboard and gave all their attention to Luigia Vanzetti, a slight, careworn, middle-aged woman travelling second class. The parasite rich, jamming the pier with their baggage being inspected by the customs officials, again eyed her as she was taken away in the care of Rose Sacco and Mrs. Jessica Headerson, of Boston. They whispered among themselves, confidently, but then many paled as the throng awaiting Miss Vanzetti outside the pier, having been denied admission by the police, joined in demand, "Sacco and Vanzetti Must Not Die."

"We expected it!"

That was the only comment of Mrs. Sacco, of Miss Vanzetti, of other members of the committee, as the news came from Boston, even as the great "Aquitania" docked, that the state supreme court of Massachusetts had declared that, "Sacco and Vanzetti Must Die!"

At the same time they were all eager to learn of the development of and the response of the workers to the strike plans in New York City and elsewhere.

"My father did not want me to come," said Miss Vanzetti.

The father had been in "America" 40 years ago and had felt the persecution of this nation's ruling class against workers.

The father had returned to Italy. Today the daughter returns again to this country to fight this same capitalist class persecution that now has Sacco and Vanzetti in its grasp, trying to put them to death.

She has had trouble in coming. She left Italy with a passport bearing an Italian visa, but for some reasons with which she was not made acquainted, the officials of the Volendam, the big liner of the Hamburg-American line, would not accept her as a passenger from Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, after she had missed one ship from Genoa. She finally secured passage on the "Aquitania," but only at great expense, as a result of the delay.

But between the departure of the Volendam and the Aquitania she was the center of huge demonstrations held by the workers of France against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

It must be that Luigia Vanzetti comes as the symbol of the unity of protest of the workers of Europe and the United States against this murder plot of the American capitalist reaction.

The more pressure in this country the sister of Vanzetti should help spur every worker to renewed protest—the giant protest that will shout the electric chair of its victims, that will restore Sacco and Vanzetti to the workers of America and of the world.

Series of Articles On China Written by Earl Browder; Start Monday

Do you want to know the Chinese situation? To understand the forces moving back of the conception of warring generals and the real revolutionary movements taking shape? You must understand the peasant question in China. Most of what is written about the land workers of China in the American press and in books of travel is false and misleading. Earl Browder, secretary of the Pacific Labor Unions Congress, just returned from extensive travels in China, is writing for The DAILY WORKER a series of articles, of which the first ones are on land ownership, peasant life and peasant organizations in China. The first one Monday. LAND OWNERSHIP IN CHINA.

DO AS WELL AS THE CHINESE WORKERS HAVE DONE TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI

WHILE I was in Hankow in May, the All-China Labor Federation, although in the midst of their own most severe civil war, in which the Chinese workers were laying down their lives, yet found time to call a special meeting to adopt a protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, and staged a one-day demonstration strike.

What the Chinese workers can do for our brothers in America can surely be done by all of us in the United States. Let every worker in the country protest by strike and demonstration on August 22nd.—EARL BROWDER.

We Will ANSWER The Death Sentence

No class conscious worker will fail to understand the dire meaning of the Death Sentence handed down by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts.

The Death Sentence against Sacco and Vanzetti is meant as a death sentence against the labor movement.

It means not only a determination to burn up the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti.

It means that the capitalist class of America is determined to destroy, root and branch, the body of the labor movement.

We will accept the challenge.

We will fight it to the finish.

We will rally every ounce of strength behind the fight to free our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti.

We will take up with renewed energy the drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker, the paper which is carrying on the fight for the two convicted men, the paper which is carrying on the struggle for the emancipation of the working class, for which Sacco and Vanzetti are condemned to be tortured to death.

HORRIBLE TERROR UNLEASHED BY WUHAN TRAITORS

Mass Executions Day and Night

HANKOW, Aug. 19.—In its desperation to stifle in oceans of blood all opposition to its virulent regime the Wuhan government has eclipsed all its predecessors in frightfulness. The streets are rivers of blood of the very flower of the working class and day and night with horrible monotony the mass executions go on. The population is in a state of terror. No one knows where next the axe will fall.

The past few days have seen an intensification of the campaign of the Wuhan government against the Communist Party, the labor unions and the revolutionary movement in general. Mass arrests and mass public executions carried out with the utmost savagery are daily and nightly occurences. All suspected of being members of the Communist Party pay with their lives at the hands of the headsmen of the traitor government of Wuhan that is under the domination of the military adventurer, Feng Yu-Hsiang.

Labor Unions Closed.

All labor unions are closed, their leaders fugitives, or jailed or murdered. New fraudulent labor unions have been created subject only to the jurisdiction of the so-called "labor department" of the Kuomintang who administer the fake unions through appointees as officials.

The Wuhan government is actively organizing the hoodlums the riff-raf the criminals elements, dope peddlers, procurers and the very lowest elements into fascist bands whose excuse for existence is their persecution of Communists, their provocative terror and the fight against all workers

PARDON VANZETTI, SACCO, PLEA FROM FOREIGN COUNCIL

Demanding the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti, the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, 11 Union Square, has sent the following telegram to Governor Fuller:

"Alvan T. Fuller
"Governor of Massachusetts,
"Honorable Sir:

"In the name of millions of foreign-born workers in this country we ask you to grant an unconditional pardon to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

"Nina Samorodin,
"Executive Secretary."

"It is our firm belief," declared Nina Samorodin, in a statement issued yesterday, "that Sacco and Vanzetti have suffered the tortures of death many times over during the seven years of their imprisonment.

Government Policy.

"When the eyes of millions of foreign-born workers are fixed on the government's alien policy and its effort to adopt anti-alien legislation and deportation, the case of Sacco and Vanzetti becomes especially important in view of the fact that their foreign birth tends to increase the persecution of aliens residing here. We ask the governor of Massachusetts for a new trial and ask that the records of the Department of Justice be made available."

College Students Hold Meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti

Several hundred college students attended an open air meeting arranged by the Student Sacco-Vanzetti Committee last night at Amsterdam Ave. and 135th St. A resolution was adopted demanding either a new trial or the immediate release of the two condemned workers.

The gathering was addressed by Carl Weisborg, and Theodore Mornance of the Liberal Club. C. N. Y.; Wayne Walden and W. S. Van Valkenberg of the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee; Jacob Margolies of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee and Luther Widner, journalist.

Prof. Carl N. Hewelwyan will speak on the case over radio station WPCH at 8 p. m. tonight under the auspices of the committee.

For distributing leaflets calling for a nation-wide strike of dock-men and seamen to aid in the struggle to save Sacco and Vanzetti, Fred Stoll, member of the Industrial Workers of the World, was given a summons and asked to appear in court Monday morning.

Local headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World have endorsed the strike call issued by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

SPOKE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI, POLICE INTIMIDATE HIM

Because he has been an active worker in the struggle to liberate Sacco and Vanzetti, Louis A. Baum, secretary of the Photographic Workers' Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is now being threatened by reactionary neighbors and the police.

Yesterday a large sign outside of the union office, 282 St. Anns Ave., the Bronx, was torn down. It contained pictures of Sacco and Vanzetti and read in part, "Two innocent workers framed up by politicians and the vested interests." A note was also sent him yesterday, warning that more drastic action will be taken if he continues to speak and agitate for the release of the two condemned workers.

Visited By Police.

These two acts are the aftermath of a visit Baum received Wednesday by Detective Gilbert who questioned him at great length as to his activities. Gilbert advised him to cease his labor activities. Baum emphatically refused.

"These acts on the part of the police and mislead individuals will not stop my work one iota," stated Baum yesterday evening. "Not only will I continue in work for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, but the union with which I represent will do likewise.

"The Photographic Workers' Union will join Monday's strike and participate with the thousands of workers in the Union Square demonstration to save the lives of our two fellow workers."

Unemployed Furriers to Visit Shops That Are Open on Saturday

Unemployed and active fur workers will visit those shops that are working today and tomorrow and urge the workers not to continue. They will point out that by working on Saturday and Sunday, also overtime when so many fur workers are unemployed is making the conditions of the latter workers even worse.

Yesterday the Council of Unemployed Fur Workers distributed thousands of leaflets in the market that told of the present low level that the fur industry finds itself at the present time.

Again in the Death House!

Sacco and Vanzetti's Court of Last Appeal Is the Working Class!

Yesterday the full bench of the supreme court of Massachusetts sent Sacco and Vanzetti back to the death house in Charlestown prison, from whence they were removed on the morning of August 11th after a respite a few minutes before the time formerly set for them to be burned to death to satisfy the vengeance of the capitalist hyenas who are determined, through murdering these innocent workers, to slap the faces of all workers.

With the same brutal and cynical contempt and prejudice that has characterized the whole gang of political lackeys of the decadent Back Bay aristocracy, the four judges of the supreme court—Henry K. Braley, Edward P. Pierce, William Ulm Wait and James B. Carroll refused to entertain the charge of prejudice against Judge Thayer, the first Jeffries who sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti. They evaded action on the writ of error by disclaiming jurisdiction and declaring that not the full bench, but only a single judge could issue such a writ. Likewise they evaded the question of a new trial on the technicality that such a request must be made before sentence is passed.

The whole procedure was a ghastly farce—a lawyers' game—in which the question of life or death was theoretically lost sight of. But in reality the learned judges, like the butcher Fuller's "advisory committee" composed of the servile eminences of university faculties and the bench, were there for the specific purpose of trying further to conceal the designed murder of two Italian workers whose only crime is that they endeavored in organize workers for a fight against the inhuman degradation imposed upon them by their slave masters—the mill owners of Massachusetts.

This latest decision means but one thing and that is that Sacco and Vanzetti are to die on Monday night if the ruling class has its way. The chances of intervention by a United States supreme court judge are very remote. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes has already refused to intervene and it is hardly likely that any of his associates will consider any other action.

The case is now before the bar of the working class for its final disposition. It cannot be settled by argument, but only by power. Upon the working class of this country and of the world rests the responsibility of generating between now and Monday night such terrific mass power, such a concentration of forces that the criminal conspirators will not dare carry out their murderous plans. In this country the reply to the refusal of a retrial must be a strike to open the gates of the death house and of the prison and permit Sacco and Vanzetti to again take their places in the labor movement.

As to the decision, it was fully expected. No revolutionist certainly was so stupid as to believe for a moment that the kept judges who befoul the bench in Massachusetts would dare give the victims a chance to expose before the whole world the dastardly lengths to which their persecutors have gone. The decision was partially prepared for by the agents of Governor Fuller and his committee, A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University; Samuel W. Stratton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Judge Robert W. Grant, a corporation lawyer, who bombed the house of a juror—probably with the juror's knowledge and consent—in order to endeavor to reverse the public damnation that has been heaped upon their heads for their roles as murder conspirators. Let us remember these men and if Sacco and Vanzetti die in the electric chair they must be forever stigmatized as the murderers who carried out the wishes of the capitalist outfit that for seven long years has howled for the blood of these two men already martyred a hundred times over.

The ruling class agents have spoken their last word.

But their verdict must not, it cannot stand!

The court of last appeal for Sacco and Vanzetti is the working class!

In this country mass demonstrations and strikes!

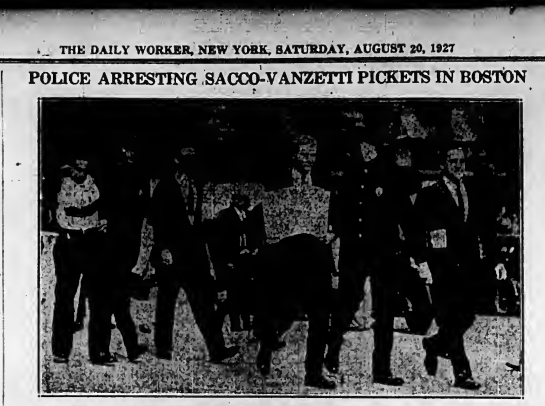
In Europe and other countries where there is an audible working class, mass demonstrations in front of embassies of Wall Street; boycott of American goods; refusal to be seen in the same daylight with members of the American plunderbund.

And finally in Paris, let the workers of that city of magnificent revolutionary traditions, refuse to tolerate the gathering of members of the American Legion, who have gone there only to glorify the predatory role of their Uncle Shylock.

Let labor act and the hand of the executioner will not dare throw the bolts of chained lightning that will shatter the bodies of these two workers!

Flood Relief in the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union is confronted with a devastating flood in Vladivostock and the maritime province of Siberia, that is on a much smaller scale thus far than the great Mississippi flood that caused so much frightful suffering a few months ago.



But the Soviet Union has shown how a government that places the lives of the inhabitants above profits can meet and overcome such a situation. As soon as the reports reached Moscow a meeting of the Council of People's Commissars (cabinet) was called and a million roubles was instantly placed at the disposal of the sufferers and in addition special relief corps were sent in to give all conceivable aid possible. The result is that the population has escaped the harrowing experiences that characterized the Mississippi floods in the United States.

How different is the attitude of the United States government toward its flood victims! Not one cent was contributed by the government at Washington. Hoover, the secretary of commerce, was sent to the flood area to aid the bankers salvage all that they could get out of the suffering of the masses. Instead of relieving misery he preyed upon it. No money has been appropriated and President Coolidge even refused to call a special session of congress to appropriate money for the simple reason that there is no possibility of the Well Street bankers making profits off the investment.

This serves to emphasize the difference between a class government of the capitalist class such as we endure in the United States and a class government of the workers and peasants such as exists in the Soviet Union.

As for us, we favor the latter, but we are not going to Russia to enjoy it, as the super-patriots desire us to do, but we will stay right here and fight until we destroy the class government that serves the interests of Wall Street and replace it with a workers' and farmers' government.

POLICE ARRESTING SACCO-VANZETTI PICKETS IN BOSTON

About eighty Boston police charged down on the group of pickets before the state house in Boston just before the last reprieve, and surrounding them, made arrests. Here are shown two policemen, clutching four of the pickets. The other police are standing around the group. The pickets left to right: Louis Gilbert, Exec. Board Upholsterers' Union; Harry J. Canter, member Boston District Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party; Alfred Baker Lewis, Sec'y, New England District of Socialist Party; Gus Shklar, District Organizer for Boston District, Workers (Communist) Party.

Every Day a New Sacco Frame-Up

By MICHAEL GOLD.

I am writing in Boston on Wednesday. By the time this article appears the Massachusetts Supreme Court will have probably delivered its decision in the matter of a new trial for Sacco und Vanzetti. Prophecy belongs to the tribe of gypsy fortune-tellers; yet I risk the prediction that the Supreme Court will not grant a new trial.

If I am wrong, and I hope I am, I also predict that any new trial will be as unfair as the other trials, and will again convict our unfortunate comrades. I feel this way because I have been in Boston this past week, and despair seizes the heart of any Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizer in this brutal decadent city.

For no trial in Massachusetts will ever free Sacco and Vanzetti. Every clerk, storekeeper, petty bourgeois climber, Rabbit and Sunday school graduate in this state has been irrevocably prejudiced against the two Italians. The Arrow Collar mob is now as much aligned against all dissenters as it was during the war. Does an atheist hope for justice from a jury of holy rollers? Does a Jew hope for justice from a jury of Russian monarchists? Does a Negro hope for justice from a jury of small town southern whites? Radicals hope for little for justice in Massachusetts.

Sacco and Vanzetti are in the clutches of something greater than a guilty. They have become symbols of the world revolt of the proletariat. The bourgeois mob of Massachusetts has been whipped into a war psychology, and nothing less than death for the two workers will now satisfy them. Pick a jury from this mob and what other jury can you get in this state, and the seven-year lynching will culminate in an execution. It is almost a hopeless situation.

The Governor Leads the Lynchers.

In the past few days several events have demonstrated this atmosphere again. One would have thought the exposure of Judge Thayer's unguarded hatred of the two Italians might have made the officials more careful. One would have deemed the Italian indignation of Europe enough to at least make the Massachusetts oligarchy cautious in keeping up its pretense of legal fairness.

But this heart-breaking persecution continues in the spirit of the original trial before Judge Thayer in Dedham seven years ago. Yesterday, on the morning when the Supreme Court was to conduct the hearings on a new trial, a bomb was exploded at the home of one of the original jurors who found Sacco and Vanzetti guilty.

If the bomb were the contribution of some anarchist friend of the two men, it would be a bit of insanity. It would be an example of the childish egotism, neurotiesm and undisciplined emotion which the anarchist movement has become.

But it was not an anarchist bomb. It was doubtless a laugh played by some skilful "patriotic" agent. It was exploded very carefully so as not to kill anyone. It was set off at exactly the right time, in order to make the first page of the newspapers a few hours before the Supreme Court met. Worst of all, a well planned publicity campaign against Sacco and Vanzetti was immediately released, after the first story had proven successful—that first story being the bomb.

Governor Fuller immediately sent a letter to the family whose home had been bombed, releasing it to all the newspapers. This letter placed the blame for the explosion squarely upon the friends of Sacco and Vanzetti, and informed them that such measures would not intimidate the brave bourgeoisie of Massachusetts from its duty. (Which duty? To execute two innocent workers?)

It was a jingo letter, a war letter, a letter breathing vengeance and passion and prejudice. It was the letter of a bitter enemy, determined upon blood, not the letter of a governor pledged to a fair trial. After all, are Sacco and Vanzetti on trial for nothing such as these? When they were first arrested and tried, the antiradical and anti-red raids of Palmer were in full tide. Sacco and Vanzetti were anarchists, but they were not tried for anarchism, and they are not being tried for anarchism now. But Governor Fuller, helped by the man who threw the bomb, has deliberately set forth to create anew the war hysteria, the lynching spirit that ran the two Italians down seven years ago. It is not a worthy role for a "great" governor with his eye on the presidency. It is not legally fair; it is not even humanly decent, or clean, or honest. It is a lynchiug, and it throws a cruel light upon the alleged impartiality of the governor's report last week. No man who wrote this bitter letter inciting the mob could had an atom of fairness in his heart at any time.

More Prejudice.

The juror whose house was bombed carried no insurance on his house. He is a relatively poor man. And so the governor, in his letter, promised that the state would cover his property loss. And a movement has also been started in the newspapers to raise a small individual contributions to make up a fund for this purpose.

What is the object of this but to arouse prejudice? What is the object of this but to make every business man or clerical worker who owns a house in the suburbs feel strong bonds of sympathy for their fellow-householder whose home was bombed by the wild foreigners? What does this all mean, anyway, but a political campaign conducted by skilful campaigners to inflame the middle-class mind against Sacco and Vanzetti?

And why all these advertisements in the Boston newspapers of insurance companies, warning property owners to insure themselves against riot, explosions and so forth? There is something fishy and dreadful about it all. There is something tragic about it. That is why I believe Sacco and Vanzetti can never be acquitted before a Massachusetts jury. They have already been tried and found guilty in every newspaper in the state in the last week.

The National Hope.

The one hope left for our comrades is that their case has overflowed the state borders. The drive to force the Department of Justice to open its files makes the case a federal issue now. It places it on its true footing—the Sacco-Vanzetti case is a war case. It is one of the last glaring examples of that Spanish Inquisition that captured the land when the New England public group and other Wilsonian liberals "willed the war" to save democracy—in Europe.

What secrets gory and horrible repose in those D. of J. files? No wonder Coolidge and other government officials fight to the last gasp to keep the files locked! The secret of Tom Mooney's crucifixion is there—the secret of the mass-deportation and anti-red frame-ups, the secrets of thousands of working-class martyrdoms. The secret of the death of Salsedo is there—that unfortunate friend of Sacco and Vanzetti, who was tortured for three weeks in the offices of the Department of Justice in Park Row, at the end of which time his body was found in a heap on the pavement, seventeen stories below the place of his torture.

How did the Department of Justice work? How were the murders arranged that bombs be thrown? What agents ferreted their way into anarchist and Communist groups preaching violence? What stool-pigeons worked in factories, and marked down the earnest, the studious, the social-minded among the workers for punishment? How was the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti conducted? Several exposants of the Department of Justice have confessed to some of the details, but the whole story is still locked up in those files.

Back To the Death House.

In a few days the Supreme Court will state its decision. The warden of Charlestown prison has said that if no stay is given he will put Sacco and Vanzetti in each in the death house. It is hard to realize but in a few days the two workers may be back where they were a week ago. Bourgeois Massachusetts is relentless. Its blood is up.

During this week not a single newspaper here has had the courage or desire to speak a friendly word for Sacco and Vanzetti. It might lose them circulation.

Certain sentimental bourgeois apologists have trilled lyrics and roundelays in praise of Governor Fuller's "courage" in coming out against the two men. But it was not courage—it was the reverse. It was the Yankee shrewdness of an ambitious politician. The influential Boston mob is determined to get Sacco and Vanzetti—and the governor is leading them. He says, like that of every governor, is cast on the presidency, and he hopes to follow Coolidge who landed there by similar courage in breaking the police strike in Boston.

Deliver us from the "courage" of these politicians! It is the courage of Nero, bravely burning Christians at the stake, and refusing to be "intimidated" by them. It is the courage of General Galliffet, shooting Bigou workers in cold blood, defying them to do their worst. It is the courage of men, who have lost all human values, like Mussolini, would slaughter their best friends in the insane thirst for political power. It is the leader of a foaming mob of lynchers whips them further in their passion, the world does not call it courage so why Governor Fuller "courageous"?

No, the only courage shown so far in the case is that of two imprisoned workers, Sacco and Vanzetti. Their dignity, their steadfastness, their unflinching moral stand against the bourgeois mob is worthy of a golden page in the history of the world's proletarian martyrdoms.

Two simple men—a fish peddler and shoe maker—are caught in a great net, and tortured inhumanly for seven years. And they grow under that "persecution—they reveal themselves as rare, fine human beings. It gives one a new pride in the workers—In the revolution—this casual selection, this accidental choice of two immigrants to speak for the world's workers, and suffer for them. They were never heard of before—they made shoes, peddled fish, were lowest of the low in the social scale. And now they speak in great accents—every word and gesture has the ring of history. The rose to the occasion. They have risen to the height, and a whole world has listened to them, and found them worthy of their situation in the tragedy.

Vanzetti even in these last nerve racking hours, has been busy writing a social testament that is said by those who have seen it to be his best effort. Sacco is still as game as ever, and chats with his brave wife, and Vanzetti now!

DRAMA

Gala Performance of "Carmen" at Starlight Park Next Sun. Night

Next Sunday, August 28th, at the Starlight Stadium, Bizet's opera "Carmen" will be presented on a very elaborate scale for the benefit of the Joint Defense Committee. There will be 250 voices taking part in the performance, in addition to the large ballet arranged by Alexis Kosloff of the Metropolitan Opera House, featuring Rita De Leporte.

The cast for "Carmen" will include several young American singers, including Pauline Kittner, who will sing the role of, Micaela, and Willard Fry, a young New York baritone, as Escamillo. Alice Busser will have the role of Mercedes. The rest of the cast will include Martha Mellis, noted American contralto, who will sing the stellar role of Carmen, Salvatore Sciarretti as Don José, L. Dalle Molle as Dancairo, P. Calvini as Remendado, E. Palazzi as Morales, Josephine LaPuma as Frasquita. This performance will be conducted by Maestro G. Simeoni. Fifty members of the New York Symphony Orchestra will furnish the music.

The opera mentioned above is not the only feature which the Joint Defense Committee has arranged for the visitors on that day. There will be no cost of the ballroom and will also be a big vaudeville show, with events and one dollar.

We Can Stop This Murder!

—Drawing by Fred Ellis.

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

IT is still within the power of the American workingclass to prevent the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Though the might of American imperialism is great and its arrogance boundless, yet the judicial killing of our two brothers can be stopped and their freedom secured if the exploited masses of the United States and the world over intensify their efforts manyfold to save and free Sacco and Vanzetti.

This is as clear a case of capitalist class vengence as was ever recorded in the annals of the class struggle. To the ruling class of the United States the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti has become a matter of political "prestige." Our so-called captains of finance and industry are not only anxious to save their face and to whitewash their courts but they are also determined to break the morale of the workingclass and to intimidate the masses. Sacco and Vanzetti are to be murdered in order to assure the imperialist exploiters of the United States a timid and docile workingclass. This is the point of view of the exploiting class of America.

What is the point of view of the workingclass? The point of view of the workingclass is the exact opposite of the point of view of its exploiters. To the workers of America and the world over Sacco and Vanzetti are two class-conscious and militant workers who have fallen victims to a capitalist conspiracy. In the eyes of the workers of America and all over the world, as well as in the eyes of all honest men and women everywhere, Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent of the crime attributed to them. Sacco and Vanzetti are members of the workingclass physically and spiritually and their lives must be saved and their freedom secured for their own sake as well as for the sake of their class.

Strike on August 22! Demonstrate and protest and make your voice heard in no uncertain terms. Through their organized protests the workers must serve notice on the imperialist exploiters that they are not going to be intimidated and crushed. The workers must save and free Sacco and Vanzetti.

* * *

The departments of labor and immigration have taken special measures to intimidate the foreign born workers. In this move they have appended to the large employers of labor for support. This support will probably be forthcoming, which will prove once more to the workers of America that the existing government is an agency of the capitalist class serving its interests and maintaining its rule over the workers.

By striking at the foreign born workers the capitalist class is striking at the workingclass as a

WE CAN STOP THIS MURDER!

EDITOR'S NOTES

whole. By attacking the foreign born workers the capitalists seek to weaken and undermine the whole labor movement. Through the proposed murder of Sacco and Vanzetti the capitalist class of the United States is serving notice on the entire working class, on all oppressed and exploited as well as on the liberal middle classes, that the rule of big international capital will be extended and sharpened and that no mercy will be shown to the opponents of the existing order.

This is a time which calls for the utmost concentration and solidarity of the forces of labor. This is a time which demands a conscious political attitude and a militant policy of struggle. The demonstration and strikes of the past week indicate an awakening of American labor to the dangers confronting it. The masses must not be deceived by the temporary reprieve but must extend and intensify the strikes and demonstrations. This is the only way to save and free Sacco and Vanzetti. This is the only way to mobilize the forces of labor to repel the capitalist offensive.

Undoubtedly we are facing a renewed capitalist offensive against the American workingclass. The threatened execution of Sacco and Vanzetti signal ized the coming of this intensified capitalist offensive. It is a fore-runner of new wage cuts, "open shop" drives, attacks upon the militant, progressive and left wing elements in the labor movement, "Red" raids, etc. Imperialism, militarism and general capitalist reaction are raising their ugly heads in a move to smash the power and morale of the workingclass.

Almost instinctively all the enemies of labor and progress are mobilizing their forces and concentrating their energies in the demand for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. They—the champions of oppression and reaction—seem to feel that if they succeed in the murder of our two brothers they will have dealt a severe blow the labor movement and all the truly liberal and progressive elements in the country.

The case of Sacco and Vanzetti opens up all the big economic and political issues around which the present day class struggle in America revolves itself. It is the fight of the workers against the exploiters. It is the fight of the poor farmers against the big bankers and monopolistic capital. It is the fight of all the genuine opponents of imperialism, militarism and war. It is the great struggle of all true champions of the rights and interests of the masses against the brutal rule of the financial and industrial oligarchy which is exploiting and dominating the United States.

The fight for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti symbolizes the great historic struggle which the workingclass must wage and lead in order to free itself and all oppressed classes from the yoke of capitalism. The organized mass effort to save and free Sacco and Vanzetti—through strikes and demonstrations—is an inspiration and stimulus to all the victims of American imperialism whether oppressed in America in the factories and on the farms, or exploited and persecuted in Nicaragua, Haiti, Mexico, Panama, the Philippines, China, etc. It is the world wide and epoch-making struggle for the abolition of capitalism, imperialism, militarism and war.

American imperialism has established itself as the blackest and most brutal exploiter of the world. The penetration and domination of the American imperialists in Latin-America, in Europe, in Asia and everywhere is calling forth bitterness, resentment and antagonism to the United States. Thus the seeds are being sown for conflicts, imperialist struggles and eventual wars.

The recent slaughters of 200 Nicaraguan workers and farmers by American marines has had the effect of an electric shock upon the peoples of Latin-America, and upon the oppressed masses everywhere. This murder of Nicaraguans will not soon be forgotten. The same as the threatened killing of Sacco and Vanzetti it constitutes a grave reminder to the exploited masses as to what American imperialism stands ready to do in order to maintain its power and profits.

When the world learns of the proposed murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, it recalls immediately the slaughter of the Nicaraguans, the lynching and oppression of the negro, the Dawes plan in Germany the suppression of the foreign born workers, the fight for life of Mooney and Billings, the challenge of world anarchy against all America and imperialism at the "disarmament" conference in Geneva, etc.

The present ruling class of America [illegible] in establishing for the United States the same kind of a reputation as that "enjoyed" by the former empire of the Romanoffs, czars. And herein lies the secret of the tremendous volume and power of protest that is coming from all over the world against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The apparent disunity in the ranks of the capitalist class on the matter of Sacco and Vanzetti is to be explained mainly by the fear of the radicalizing effect upon the American workingclass should the execution of only two brothers actually take place. Some of the capitalists are also in great fear of the hostility of the world which may seriously interfere with the promotion of foreign trade and the further development of American imperialist aims. This explains the origin of those capitalist voices which advocate the commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment. Henry Ford, for instance, took that position. This also explains the position of William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, in favor of commutation for life.

William Green remains true to his role of agent of American capitalism in the labor movement. He knows that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent. He knows that the murder of these two workers is an attack upon the workingclass and the labor movement. But he also knows the voice of his master. And as usual he is doing his master's bidding.

The workingclass of America must rise to the occasion and do its duty in a full measure. Sacco and Vanzetti must not die. Sacco and Vanzetti must not be doomed to a living death which would be accomplished by commuting the sentence to life imprisonment. Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed.

The International Labor Defense will forever be remembered as the organization which vigilantly stood on guard, rallied, mobilized and led in the struggle for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti. The International Labor Defense (I. L. D.) is one of the few labor organizations in the Sacco-Vanzetti campaign which stayed from the beginning the main reliance for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti upon the organized struggle of the working masses themselves and of the labor movement. The I. L. D. is now again calling upon the working masses to strike and demonstrate for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. The same appeal comes from the Workers (Communist) Party. Only such mass protests on the largest possible scale can now and finally halt the hand of the executioner and save and free Sacco and Vanzetti.

Song of the Machine

I am the machine,
Advantageous and profitable and [illegible]
Ceaselessly, exactly the Perfection of cost.
My heart of steel
Is hard of steel
And swiftly moving wheel.
I crunch and I bend and I thud
I toil and I make
The unbearable necessities of life
With needle and knife
I sew and I cut,
I paint and I haul,
I build and I wreck,
I am all
The things men once did
With naked hands.
Time, men tend me,
But I do the work of a score
Or a hundred or more
I do not tire
Or perspire
Or sicken.
I am merely repaired
Cast upon the junk heap
When my efficiency is impaired
Or when my usefulness is ended
I produce wealth
And the great surplus of goods
That must find world markets
To fatten the purse of my owners
Markets for which nations
Wage imperialistic wars,
Tearing to pieces the workers
In the name of patriotism.
I am highly exploited.
Yet the worker who tends me
Is merely my slave
And the exploited slave
Of the master
Who owns him and me.
I seek liberation
From these inexorable bonds
Release man and machine.
I seek freedom
For the worker who tends me
That toil may take me for his own,
And so shall make common cause
For betterment of man,
Less toil, more leisure!
Less ignorance, more culture!
More abundant fruits
And the enjoyment thereof!

The "World" and Haywood Broun

A Letter from A. B. Magil

YOUR editorial on the fate the New York World has placed on Heywood Broun's Sacco and Vanzetti articles points out admirably the class interests involved. Heywood Broun is nothing more than a very pallid liberal, but he happens to be fairly honest and sincere, while the gentlemen who run the New York World are distinguished chiefly for their exemplary mendacity. There still exists in the minds of many radicals the delusion that there is an important differing between the policies of The World and of other capitalist papers, a difference from which the workingclass somehow benefits. Nothing could be further from the truth. On the contrary, under the guise of sanctimonious liberalism and progressiveness, The World has resorted to lies, misstatement and suppression which make it in many respects a more pernicious influence than such conservative papers as The Times and the Evening Post, whose espousal of capitalist class interests is always candid and obvious. By raising a fanfare about such comic problems as sex plays, fake art manifestoes and night clubs, The World consistently attempts to shout down the really important issues of the day and to stifle the voice of the workingclass.

For a considerable period during the needle trades dispute I followed the columns of The World with particular care. Throughout these struggles of the progressive elements against their internal enemies, The World has represented, not the opinion of the admirably understood capitalist class, but has become openly and unequivocally, despite editorial protestations to the contrary, the organ of the right wing. Sigman and the Wall-McGrady gang have received publicity in the columns of The World which must have been worth thousands of dollars to them. (Maybe they forked over the cash, too.) Wherever possible, Communists and the left wing have been put in the light of gangsters and usurpers without any following whatsoever. When Aaron Gross, business manager of the Furriers' Joint Board, was murderously attacked by right wing gangsters, this news was given little space. But two days later there appeared a front-page story with large headlines, quoting the Wall-McGrady committee to the effect that steps would be taken to protect "their" workers from Communist gangsters!

When seven gangsters, who admitted to the police that they were in the employ of the right wing, were arrested just as they were preparing to "do a job," this story was carried by practically all the capitalist papers of New York City. The World, however, tactfully decided to forget the fur strike for the day.

Let it be remembered by those who are impressed by The World's stooping reformism that it was Joseph Pulitzer, not William Randolph Hearst, who was the founder of the yellow journalism in this country. Hearst, Abraham Cahan and Bernarr McFadden merely followed in the footsteps of Joseph, whose coat was always as many-colored as that of his Biblical namesake.

Incidentally, the New York World probably contains the choicest morgue of former labor journalists to be found anywhere in this country. The very flower of the late lamented New York Call ultimately found asylum and consolation in the form of succulent pay-checks on the staff of The World. These gentlemen are now no doubt helping to make the country safe from Reds.

A few of the stars of The Call went elsewhere. Dave Kaufmer, the "friend" of Debs, is on the Herald-Tribune, where he has been doing some of the choicest blackjack work for his capitalist master. Several others are on the New Leader, where they have been doing their best to emulate their colleagues on The World and Herald-Tribune. I suggest that a great service would be rendered to mankind if The World would acquire these workers, who in the none-too invigorating atmosphere of the Rand School, have become very seedy-looking of late. James Oneal could supplant the boy wonder, Walter Lippmann, as head of The World's editorial page. Walter, who was once the pride of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, may still harbor some old-fashioned "radical" ideas and would not be as reliable as Oneal. I think, too, though I'm not sure, that Oneal would work for less money.

The genial McAlister Coleman would be ideal as the successor to the intractable Broun. In place of F. P. A., there is Sam De Witt, the great poet, whose latest volume, autographed by the author (himself) is priced at five berries (if I don't know what he actually gets). The Rev. Dr. Norman Thomas could conduct the religious page of The World and correct the English of the sermons that New York's leading preachers of the gospel submit in advance to The World. I don't know what to do about Eddie Levinson. Such glittering talents ought not be permitted to go to seed. He might pinch-hit for John J. Leary, Jr., the "dalaz" reporter of The World. This colorless tool of Tammany Hall would work well together with the more scintillating Levinson, as both are experts at licking the boots of the bureaucrats of the A. F. of L. Levinson could also fill in occasionally for Frank Sullivan, the humorist, though I rather fancy Algernon Lee for this job.

The acquisition of these luminaries would have advantages besides that of boosting the circulation of The World. It would once more provide the socialist party with a daily organ and enable all good socialists [illegible] vote for Al Smith openly instead of having to do it clandestinely as at present. But I'm afraid that we former readers of Life and Judge would feel a little lost without the New Leader.

These suggestions are offered gratis to the socialist party, or whatever group or individual still bears that honored name.

In conclusion, I want to compliment The DAILY WORKER on its vigorous handling of the Sacco and Vanzetti case. The DAILY WORKER was the only organ of opinion in the United States that was not deluded by Governor Fuller's fake commission and predicted with almost uncanny accuracy the results of their "investigation." If our two comrades are finally saved, much of the credit must go to The DAILY WORKER and the Workers (Communist) Party, who have taken the lead in the efforts to snatch them from the electric chair and have crystallized workingclass sentiment in a way which has caused even the arrogant chiefs of the master class to falter.

SACCO AND VANZETTI MUST NOT DIE

August 22nd, 1927 has been set aside by the capitalists of Massachusetts as the day in which they are determined to murder our two comrades and heroes, Sacco and Vanzetti. August 22nd ends the reprieve that was given to them by Governor Fuller, and his committee after the workers in America and all over the world showed their anger against the attempted murder. The general strike in America and the strikes thruout the rest of the world scared the capitalists and forced them to grant the reprieve. But they are not ready to give up their victims yet. They are still determined to electrocute them, unless we show them once again that they cannot get away with it. Once again must we show the bosses of Massachusetts that the workers all over the world are united for Sacco and Vanzetti. Another general strike will be the most effective means of saving Sacco and Vanetti.

1. YOU MUST—tell your fathers that they must strike on August 22nd.

2. YOU MUST—send in your letters to Governor Fuller thru the Young Comrade Corner.

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO?

Note: This letter was sent by a Pioneer to her leader.

Dear Comrade: Do you know when we are going to have a meeting because Soffie told me that she was moving to New York? Now that Sacco and Vanzetti are taking the electric chair what are we going to do? We have to help in some way, don't we? I felt mad at myself when the extra came around that Sacco and Vanzetti must get the electric chair. I am a Red and I am not afraid to show I am.

AN OLD WORKER

Dear Comrades: On cold or snowy days when I am going to school, I always pass an old man. He has a grey beard, gray hair and wrinkles on his face. One day when I was buying pretzels from him I asked, "Why do you stay here and sell pretzels? Can't your children help you?" As I asked him this question I saw tears in his eyes and he answered in a low tone, "One of my sons was killed in a train crash. I haven't any daughters and my wife is dead." I asked, "Why doesn't somebody see that you get some money from the mining company for the loss of your son?" "Nobody cares for me or needs me because I am old." I asked him how much he got for the pretzels he sells. He answered, "About a dime or quarter a day." Though to myself, workers lives are all the same. He gets a little pay and has to live on it, and supports a big family and pays rent. This man's life is just as hard.

The Struggle for Soviet Russian Oil

By H. E. (Berlin)

SIR HETERDING, president of the Royal Dutch Shell, the greatest Anglo-Dutch oil concern, on receiving the news of the conclusion of oil agreements between the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate and American petroleum companies, published a furious declaration. In this declaration Deterding (who, it may be observed, is one of the chief organizers of an aggressive action against the Soviet Union) applies directly to the central company representing the Rockefeller petroleum interests, the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, in order to induce it to intervene against the agreements between American companies and the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate. The Standard Oil, in its reply, declares that it itself has no interest in entering into any business with the Soviet Union. The president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Walter Teagels, even declared himself prepared to go to London for the purpose of arranging a joint action with the Royal Dutch Shell against the Soviet Union.

At the same time, however, the Central Company contracted at once the report that certain of its affiliated companies, the Standard Oil of New York and the Vacuum Oil Company, had concluded agreements with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate. It declared, however, that it has no influence over its daughter companies, these being "autonomous." George Whaley, president of the Vacuum Oil, likewise, in an interview dating from the same time, pointed to the autonomous position of his company and expressed his definite intention of keeping to the contracts made with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate.

The actual agreements entered into between the American petroleum companies and the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate are as follows: Contracts to supply petrol to Egypt, already concluded two years ago, have now been prolonged. The Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate has been obliged to prolong this contract, not being in a position to sell its products in Egypt on its own account. Thanks to their predominant influence, the English oil concerns have hitherto prevented establishment of branch depots by the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate in the only places concerned being the ranports and all oil bunker stations in the Mediterranean and Suez Canal. Hence the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate has been forced to endeavor to evade this ban on its oil, and for this reason entered into contract with the Vacuum Oil Company, which undertook the sale of Soviet Russian oil in Egypt, where the oil can be sold at especially cheap rates, precisely because of the short distance from the oil sources. The prolongation of this contract has now been accompanied by the conclusion of a fresh agreement with the Vacuum Oil Company for the transport of several [illegible] crude naphtha yearly.

The Standard Oil Company of New York has also made a contract with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate. According to this agreement, the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate is to supply the tank fleet of the Standard Oil Company of New York, in the Mediterranean and in the Indian Ocean with fuel. Bunker mazut for the term of [illegible] years. On the part of Soviet Russia, the motives to [illegible] about these and other contracts are the following: The Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate does not possess a tank fleet large enough to cope with the rapidly growing export of naphtha. The agreements with the American companies ensure the syndicate the tank ships required for an extensive export of naphtha. Besides this, the boycott imposed on Soviet Russian oil by the English oil concerns compels the Naphtha Syndicate to look for other markets. These markets have now been secured by the Russian Syndicate in the agreements with the American companies. Soviet Russian oil will now be sold by American intermediation, in much greater quantities than before in the Mediterranean (Port Said), in Egypt, in India (Colombo), and in the Far East (Singapore). Finally, the contracts with the American shall furnish the Soviet Russian industry with means for the reorganization and expansion of its production. The Americans, in return for suitable concession, are to erect a petroleum refining plant at Baku, and credits are to be granted, the first to the amount of ten million dollars, enabling the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate to finance various undertakings.

On the part of the Americans, the chief inducement to these contracts with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate has probably been the attempt on the part of the English oil concerns to conclude advantageous agreements with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate. Deterding's indignation at the American-Soviet Russian oil agreement has aroused in America the comment that this same Deterding has been exerting every effort for years to obtain from the Soviet government the monopoly of the sale of Soviet Russian oil. As late as January 5th of this year Deterding repeated his offer to the Soviet government. At this time Deterding not only offered to buy the whole of the exportable petroleum [illegible] of the Soviet Union, but even went so far as to declare his readiness to assist the Soviet Russian Naphtha [illegible]cate to obtain a loan of fifteen million dollars, provided that his group were accorded absolute control over the export of the petroleum products. These negotiations came to nothing, and their failure was the chief cause of the rupture of relations between England and the Soviet Union.

To all appearances, the Americans are resolved not to withdraw from their contracts with the Soviet Union. The Washington correspondent of the "Berliner Tageblatt" reported as follows on July 27th:

"I have reliable information to the effect that in the circles around the New Jersey Oil group the policy of the Shell Co. is by no means unanimously approved of the contrary of this was merely reported by the English side, H. E.). There rather exists an inclination to take sides with the New York group (which has concluded the agreement with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate), so that there is some likelihood of a rupture between New Jersey (Rockefeller's Central Company) and the Shell. In any case the New York Standard Oil group and the Vacuum Oil Company (both now directly contracting partners of the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate, H. E.) are both determined to adopt offensive measures, should the Shell Co. force its way into their oriental and Asiatic markets (now being supplied with Soviet Russian oil). The New York group has ample capital in reserve, and can enter into competition with the Shell Co. even in Germany, England, Italy and France, or even all over Europe. And I have been assured by a reliable source that it will not shrink from doing so if necessary."

This is significant news. This determination on the part of the Americans can only be explained in its connection with the events of the naval disarmament conference still sitting at Geneva. America has already [illegible] Geneva that it is resolved to fight with England for the domination of the [illegible] and with this for the domination of the world. The [illegible] importance of oil in international [illegible] at the present time makes the idea of world domination entirely unthinkable without the control of the decisive oil districts. The American oil companies are the greatest oil producers in the world, and they do not possess competitive oil fields in the vicinity of places of such [illegible]. England [illegible] for instance the traffic [illegible] Asia. The [illegible] are point to America [illegible] of the which forces the Amer[illegible] to [illegible] the economic organs of the [illegible] power.

The Americans [illegible] are playing a double game. America is [illegible] economic war against the British Empire side by [illegible] English capital, but at the same time it enjoys [illegible] advantages offered it by [illegible] economic [illegible] carried on by England against the Soviet Union.

It is clear that the English oil concern[illegible] through [illegible] double game of the Americans will not remain unseen. The double game will further the Deterding [illegible] economic war against the Soviet Union, and may give them the opportunity of frustrating the American game by [illegible] the American [illegible] by accom[illegible] [illegible] intervention to war [illegible] the English oil [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By WM. Z. FOSTER

(Secretary Trade Union Education League)

THE United States is the land of the labor frame-up. Here the capitalists are notorious for resorting to the most unscrupulous methods when they want to get rid of inconvenient leaders of the workingclass. Time and again when they have had in their clutches fighters of the workers they have cast aside cold-bloodedly even the most elementary forms of legalism, in order to railroad their victims to the penitentiary or the gallows. The Sacco-Vanzetti case, which has shocked the world for the calloused disregard even of capitalist pretenses of justice, is only one of a long line of such outrages.

Until the advent of the Sacco-Vanzetti case the worst of this kind of attack upon the workers was the case of Tom Mooney and Warren Billings. These two fighters have been in jail for 11 years, wasting the best years of their lives. Time and again it has been demonstrated that they are innocent. Many witnesses have testified that they themselves were guilty of perjury. Many jurors have signed petitions for their release. But all to no avail. Year after year passes and they remain in jail. Enormous protest movements, culminating even in a national strike, did not save them from capitalist revenge. Their incarceration is one of the blackest phases in American history.

But, if possible, the Sacco-Vanzetti case is still more infamous. Here are two workers, manifestly being punished solely of their radical opinions, because they dared to speak out bravely to the workers. They are being made an example of in order to terrify the workers. As for the crime they are charged with, this was manifestly not their doing, no more than was the bomb-throwing in the San Francisco premeredness parade the act of Mooney and Billings. Nevertheless the capitalists, through their agents, a cynically biased judge, the usual raft of perjurers, etc., go straight ahead with their plan of punishing these fighters.

In both these cases the labor leaders of the Gompers stripe have played a sorry role. They have acted as real Lieutenants of the capitalists. In the Mooney-Billings case they cooperated directly with the prosecutors to put our comrades in jail and to keep them there. In the Sacco-Vanzetti case, although their methods have been somewhat more indirect, they have no less certainly worked out to help the employers. They have done practically nothing to release these two workers. At best their support of the defense has been mere lip service. In a situation demanding the widespread mobilization of the workingclass in mass demonstration, they have done nothing more than to barely let it be known that they are not in favor of executing Sacco and Vanzetti. Now, when the capitalists find it exceedingly difficult, in the face of the unparalleled world protest, to actually electrocute the two prisoners and when they may easily change their tactics by sending them to jail for life sentences, the trade union bureaucrats are letting it be known that they are not demanding absolute freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti but will be satisfied if their sentences are commuted to life imprisonment.

The fight for Sacco and Vanzetti must be redoubled. Only action by the broad masses of workers in strikes and demonstrations of all kinds can save them. The battle is to save them not only from execution but also from possible life imprisonment in the event capitalists are unable to go through with the execution. Let not the tragedy of the Mooney-Billings case be repeated. Sacco and Vanzetti must not only be saved from execution but actually freed from prison altogether. The great demonstrations all over the world in the few days preceding the recent date set for the execution undoubtedly saved Sacco and Vanzetti, for the time at least, from the electric chair. Still greater demonstrations will force open the prison doors for them. Let August 22nd be a day of gigantic strikes and mass demonstrations. This is the argument that will have effect with the capitalists. Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed.

Before the Attack

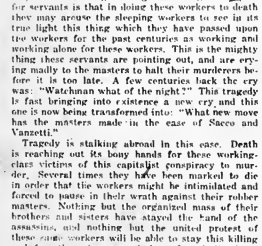
BY HENRY GEORGE WEISS.

There were no banners waving in the breeze
On that day,
No glittering squadrons that the gray sky sees,
Nor laughing columns proudly at their ease,
But grimed with clay . . .
The trembling soldiers line the crumbling walls . . .
No trumpet sounds advance; no bugle calls
With pealing note to stir their martial pride . . .
They crouch in filth and stench with death outside
And thing of many things. . . how long ago. . . .
And years and years, it seems, since they were so;
And wonder if the rats will gnaw their bones!
There was that chap who died last night—his groans
Were awful sounds to hear; his flesh so torn
By shrapnel shell . . . and they attack that morn!

Perhaps they, too, in torture on the sod
Will writhe in agony and call on God
As he did call. They threw him in a hole
With just a muttered prayer for his poor soul;
And then a great shell bore him out again
To lie in stinking rot upon the plain.
Perhaps with twisted limbs and blinded eyes
They never will again behold sunrise,
Or else shorn of the visage of a man,
A thing of horror for the crowd to scan,
They may be doomed to walk adown the years
And find Gethsemane in useless tears.

Perhaps—ah cheerfuller thot—perhaps thru hell
They may come safe, the victors of Chapelle,
And add a lustre to their arms and name,
Each soldier's glory and his country's fame.

But hark! . . . there is a post e . . . there comes a lull . . .
The barrage is Effed . . . . and clear and full
The whistle sounds. Scattered are thots . . . and gone.
They rise to its appea . . . . It is the dawn!



Save Two Members of Our Class

By W. J. WHITE

THE workers of the world are witnessing one of those struggles which comes but once in several decades of years. The case of Sacco and Vanzetti is such a struggle, and the on-looker today sees the forces of the struggle in the light of the publicity thrown on it in its true light. A struggle between the forces of ownership and the struggle of those who work and toil for their living. In this sense the mere victims of this struggle are forced for the terms of their seven years of incarceration to sit behind the walls of their stone and iron cells of a Gaigotha and die a thousand deaths while this class drama is enacted and they but the mere on-lookers. This case is being tried in a court which has the highest of jurisdiction in such cases, the court of public opinion, and there is not the slightest doubt in the minds of the workingclass jury that the prisoners are not guilty, and they have so far rendered their decision in such emphatic a manner that the court relied upon to put these innocent workers to death by burning them with electricity unto death has been unable to carry out the wishes of the master class who have done their hardest to send these victims of their wrath to this ignominious end. The battle so far has been with the workingclass, out of whose loins these workers come. That these workers are living today is because of the mighty protests of the hosts of labor. Not to the "fairness" of this mythical thing known as "justice," not at all, but alone to the fact that the forces of labor have been made articulate in this crisis and have made their cries heard around the world, and have so aroused the wrath of their class that it has made the masters hesitate lest in carrying out this class destruction of these two workers they do themselves a harm from which they will not be able to recover. So far as these two workers are concerned they have no fear. What makes them pause is that they have been told by those whom they hire for the purpose of pointing out to them the course they must travel, that the killing of these workers will make for the disgracing and unmasking of their courts, and the state and national governments.

There is no sentiment in this for the workers in the prison of Massachusetts. None whatever. The only consideration governing these bought and paid for servants is that in doing these workers to death they may arouse the sleeping workers to see in its true light this thing which they have passed upon the workers for the past centuries as working and working alone for these workers. This is the mighty thing these servants are pointing out, and are crying madly to the masters to halt their murderers before it is too late. A few centuries back the cry was: "Watchman what of the night?" This tragedy is fast bringing into existence a new cry and this one is now being transformed into: "What new move has the masters made in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti."

Tragedy is stalking abroad in this case. Death is reaching out its bony hands for these workingclass victims of this capitalist conspiracy to murder. Several times they have been marked to die in order that the workers might be intimidated and forced to pause in their wrath against their robber masters. Nothing but the organized mass of their brothers and sisters have stayed the hand of the assassins, and nothing but the united protest of these same workers will be able to stay this killing and free these innocent victims of capitalist hate, and the staying of their hands in this deliberate attempt to kill. There is but one force that these murderers fear and that is the mighty force of labor in a mass protest which shows the masters that labor is waking to the fact that such things as this case is making them awake from their long slumber. That shows the masters that the carrying out of this murder will be more a source of danger to them and their ill gotten gains because it will go to arouse their victims to the need of overturning the present system of ownership which lies at the base of this murder and of these two members of our class, the workingclass.

THE ANTI-ALIEN LAWS By Fred Ellis

The Y. M. C. A. and the Seamen

By AUERBACH

(Last week's issue of the New Magazine carried another article by Comrade Auerbach on the problems of the seamen on the waterfront. Semi-religious institutions posing as the friends of the sea toilers are really harpies and agents of the shipping companies. Last week the Seamen's Institute was dealt with. In this article, Comrade Auerbach writes of the Y. M. C. A. Editor):

THE Y. M. C. A. is another institution which has taken the beaten sailors under its sheltering wing. Down on Broad Street where the elevated rattles and rumbles past the waterfront the "Y" has established a seamen's branch. This branch is expending the wonderful (dollar) value of the Y. M. C. A.

Picture for yourself the ads that have been filling New York's papers and cars with cries and pleas for a bigger and more glamorous drive for the sake of the poor boys of the nation which the "Y's" must annually turn down with broken-hearted gestures due to the inevitable lack of space. This, of course, because two few millions are finding their way into the coffers of this capitalist scheme for the further suppression of any spark of militancy in the young workers of the United States. Glorious edifices must be erected to protect the ideal tender Young American Manhood.

Protect the youth and you have the citizenry in hand would be a splendid slogan for the "Y.s." More stalwart well-disciplined American manhood must be turned out to serve as cannon fodder willingly and quite enthusiastically thru the portals of the Y. M. C. A.

All over the city glorious business preparations were made to boom this new real estate and building venture in the spirit of American manhood and kindliness, but down here, on Broad Street, where the elevator rattles and rumbles the Y. M. C. A. also exists and takes care of the sailors and seamen not alone of the United States but of the entire world—for the sake of American and English shipping interests.

In fact the Y. M. C. A. has established a shipping office on the water front with the ostensible purpose of drawing jobs employers nearer to the worker and vice versa. Jobs are dished out to the sailors and no commission is charged.

As it happens all of these jobs are on English ships. Probably because christianity waves heavier in the country of the anti-trade union hill than anywhere else.

The only obvious thing to these jobs is that the sailor must turn in his book of discharges to the Y. before he gets the job. For the sake of those who do not know what the book of discharges is, it ought to be enlightening to say that it is the sailor's meal ticket.

It represents years and years of hard labor aboard ship. In most cases the time during from when the sailor was a lad, knee high to a grasshopper and had to go to work at sea in order to help support a family, down to the time when he happens to need a job which is most always.

But the Y. M. C. A. is quite broad minded. It takes this book and holds it pending the job. Any demarkation in this book is enough to nullify a lifetime of hard labor at sea. If the authorities that be, put a bad mark or record into that book the sailor is as good as blacklisted.

The other interesting part is that somehow the Y. M. C. A. has come to support the opinions of the British labor-hating ship-owners in their idea that forty-five dollars a month is plenty enuf wages for a sailor on an English ship. Not that conditions are any better aboard the British vessels. They are far worse than the rotten conditions aboard the American ships, but ten dollars, multiplied by some thousands of seamen's wages means a considerable saving to the shipping companies. As it happens the standard of wages even aboard of English ships is, in general, fifty-five. A month of this in itself is lower than the rotten shipping board wage of sixty-five.

So the Y. M. C. A. has taken a remarkable step. A step that even the most corrupt of the shipping agencies that dot the water front would not have dared to take. They have sunk the wage from fifty-five to forty-five which in consideration of the higher cost of living here than in England makes the sailor a totally dependent slave ashore as well as at sea.

Besides this they have gone back to the delightful method of practically shanghaiing the workers aboard ship. In the good old days, the practice was to go around to all the corner saloons where one had a pull, swing a billy, slug a sailor and drag him aboard ship, or else to put some subtle drug into his drink and in that manner to shanghai him unawares. But today the Y. M. C. A. has perfected these methods. The capitalist ship owners look down upon such crude instruments as the billy and opium in hiring their labor. Their hindgeons are the created unemployment situation and the discharge book. For when the Y. M. C. A. gets hold of the sailors book it is good night book if he doesn't like the job or the wages. And of course since they have the confidence of the ship owners close to heart they are more likely to have jobs than are the employment sharks. But not even the most hardened employment shark would attempt such crude and stinking methods as these.

And this is the Y. M. C. A. which looks after our American manhood. In this case it takes the British consulate into consultation. For all shipping passes through these worthy hands first.

Yet the seaman's is a skilled trade. It is a trade which requires years of training and hard practice before an A. B. or fireman's ticket is actually issued.

In few trades is there such a damnable display of victimization of the workers not only by the master class, but also by those interests which claim to keep the sailor closest to heart.

The Struggle for Soviet Russian Oil

By H. E. (Berlin)

SIR DETERDING, president of the Royal Dutch Shell, the greatest Anglo-Dutch oil concern, on receiving the news of the conclusion of oil agreements between the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate and American petroleum companies, published a furious declaration. In this declaration Deterding (who, it may be observed, is one of the chief organizers of an aggressive action against the Soviet Union) applies directly to the central company representing the Rockefeller petroleum interests, the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, in order to induce it to intervene against the agreements between American companies and the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate. The prolongation of this contract has now been accompanied by the conclusion of a fresh agreement with the Vacuum Oil Company for the supply of 100,000 tons of crude naphtha yearly.

The Standard Oil Company of New York has also made a contract with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate. According to this agreement, the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate is to supply the tank fleet of the Standard Oil Company of New York, in the Mediterranean and in the Indian Ocean, with fuel—bunker mazout—for the term of six years. On the part of Soviet Russia, the motives to bring about these and other contracts are the following: The Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate does not possess a tank fleet large enough to cope with the rapidly growing export of naphtha. The agreements with the American companies ensure the syndicate the tank ships required for an extensive export of naphtha. On the part of the Americans, the chief inducement to these contracts with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate has probably been the attempt on the part of the English oil concerns to conclude advantageous agreements with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate. Deterding's indignation at the American-Soviet Russian oil agreement has aroused in America the comment that, this same Deterding has been exerting every effort for years to obtain from the Soviet government the monopoly of the sale of Soviet Russian oil. As late as January 5th of this year Deterding repeated his offer to the Soviet government. At this time Deterding not only offered to buy the whole of the exportable petroleum products of the Soviet Union, but even went so far as to declare his readiness to assist the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate to obtain a loan of fifteen million dollars, provided that his group were accorded absolute control over the export of these petroleum products. These negotiations came to nothing, and their failure was the chief cause of the rupture of relations between England and the Soviet Union.

To all appearances, the Americans are resolved not to withdraw from their contracts with the Soviet Union. The Washington correspondent of the "Berliner Tageblatt" reported as follows on July 25th:

"I have reliable information to the effect that in the circles around the New Jersey Oil group the policy of the Shell Co. is by no means unanimously approved (the contrary of this was formerly reported by the English side, H. E.). There rather exists an inclination to take sides with the New York group (which has concluded the agreement with the Soviet Russian Naphtha Syndicate), so that there is some likelihood of a rupture between New Jersey (Rockefeller's Central Company) and the Shell. And I have been assured by a reliable source that it will not shrink from doing so if necessary."

This is significant news. This determination on the part of the Americans can only be explained in its connection with the events of the naval disarmament conference still sitting at Geneva. America has shown plainly enough at Geneva that it is resolved to fight with England for the domination of the seas, and with this for the domination of the world. The paramount importance of oil in international economics at the present time makes the idea of world domination entirely unthinkable without the control of the decisive oil districts. The Americans themselves are the greatest oil producers in the world, but they do not possess competitive oil fields in the vicinity of places of such international political importance as, for instance the trafficways to Asia. This is the sore point in American oil dominion, and it is this which forces the Americans to negotiate with the economic organs of the Soviet power.

The Americans (of course, are playing a double game. America is waging an economic war against the Soviet Union, side by side with English capital, but at the same time it seizes upon the advantages offered it by the special economic war being carried on by England against the Soviet Union.

It is clear that the English oil concern will not through this double game of the Americans, and will not remain inactive. The double game will furnish the Deterdings with one pretext more for continuing and intensifying their policy of provocation against the Soviet Union, and may give them the opportunity of frustrating the American game by compelling the Americans, when faced by accomplished facts, especially by a provocation to war, to come into line cooperatively in the fighting front against the Soviet Union.

SACCO AND VANZETTI

By BEN GITLOW

A MILLION MEN, the crime of the state of Massachusetts. Mr. Fuller after conducting a farcial review of the case has sealed the doom of Sacco and Vanzetti and has ordered that these two innocent workers shall die in the electric chair. A cold formal verdict was rendered marking the end of one of the most dastardly judicial frame-ups against workers whose only crime has been their loyalty to the workingclass. Governor Fuller's final decision is the decision of the capitalist ruling class of the United States. The bankers, manufacturers and corporation magnates like shylocks, not satisfied with the wealth they extract thru the intensive exploitation of the workers demand their pound of flesh in the burned up, baked corpses of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The case of Sacco and Vanzetti is one of the most important cases of its kind that has taken place in the United States. So clearly has the innocence of these two workers been established that millions of workers and others all over the world raised an almighty protest against the death order of Governor Fuller. The protest was not only a protest against the contemplated judicial murder but also against the whole oppressive and predatory system of American imperialism. The American ruling class was stunned with the mighty wave of protest and the execution temporarily delayed for another twelve days.

The reprieve granted by Governor Fuller is only designing move of the part of the capitalist executioners to stay the indignation of the masses and to create a condition they will make possible either the execution or else the imprisonment of Sacco and Vanzetti for life, in other words to a living death. This must never be allowed to happen. The workers must be prepared to raise such a mighty protest movement that the capitalist ruling class will be forced to return to the working class free and unstained, Sacco and Vanzetti.

The case of Sacco and Vanzetti is not an isolated case. It is part of the whole plan of the capitalists to intensify the exploitation of the workers, lower wages, lengthen and lower wages. Part of the whole plan right smash the unions, to terrorize the militant workers and in that fashion prevent any resistance on the part of the workers to their plans. It is no accident that the Sacco and Vanzetti case should take place in the state of Massachusetts. It is the state of President Coolidge the representative of American imperialism and the state cutting mill barons of Massachusetts. It is in Massachusetts where the workers have had their wages cut, their hours of employment lengthened and their organizations smashed. Unemployment is rife in the mill towns. Starvation stalks in every workers' home. All attempts on the part of the workers to give expression to their grievances are ruthlessly suppressed in this so-called state of old American culture. Freedom of speech and assembly in the Bay State are best expressed in the brutality of the police in breaking up meetings, the arresting of pickets, and others.

Every Massachusetts system that the capitalists have all over the United States. They hope with the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti to strengthen reaction in the United States sufficiently enough to do so. The case of Sacco and Vanzetti is therefor of the most vital importance to the entire workingclass of this country. Organized labor in particular should be aroused about the dangers that it faces in the event that the capitalists succeed in their determination to electrocute Sacco and Vanzetti.

The workers have responded splendidly on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti in spite of the indifference and outright opposition of their reactionary trade-union leaders. President Green when he gives expression to the idea of jailing these two innocent workers for life is mouthing the sentiments not of the workers, not of the labor movement, but of the bitterest enemies of the workers and organized labor. He is acting like a low down treacherous traitor of the organized workers and not as their leader. The workers in the United States must not be fooled by President Green because he does not voice their sentiments. The workers must now more so than before demonstrate to the capitalists who desire to murder their fellow men that the workers will not tolerate it. The order of the day should be mighty protests, big strikes, meetings and demonstrations everywhere. Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed. Sacco and Vanzetti must not die. Death to Sacco and Vanzetti will be a victory for bloody reaction and the enemies of labor and crushing defeat for the workers.

The Workers (Communist) Party has realized this fact from the very beginning of the Sacco and Vanzetti persecution. It has done everything in its power to stir up the masses against this outrageous contemplated murder of innocent workers. It calls upon the workers to renew with greater vigor their protest and together with the workers in all other countries stay the hands of the executioner and open the jail doors. The liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti will mark an important step forward to the ending of all exploitation and oppression.

The International Proletariat and the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By MAX BEDACHT

Till attempt to railroad Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair has lead to such extensive expressions of international workers solidarity as had never before been witnessed. The case has become symptomatic for the growing international class consciousness of the proletariat. This is especially important because it is the practice of international workers solidarity alone which will save these two intended victims from the chair; it is also this manifest practice of international solidarity by the workers of the world which will help the American workers to learn value and necessity of it; finally the active international solidarity is a sign of the waning of illusions of the workers as to democracy in general and American democracy in particular.

The case of Sacco and Vanzetti is a battle in the class struggle. It is not as the liberal protagonists of capitalism want to make us believe, a case of justice and fair play. Prosecution and judiciary acted in the frame up against the intended victims. The frame-up is perpetrated against two enemies of capitalism and because of their enmity to capitalism.

Capitalist justice, at best, is a rope in the hands of defenders of capitalism. If this rope is not framed into a noose around the neck of an accused, it is not because the accused gets justice and fair play, but it is because capitalism has no hope to pick with him. Chicago hoodlum-gears parade the streets are day in armed cars, mowing down their competitors with machine guns; the next day they walk down the same streets arm and arm with members of the state attorney staff. According to the letter of the law they are criminals; in practice the arm of the law protects them. The noose of capitalist justice never descends on their necks. It rather forms a halo around their heads, elevating them to the sainthood of protectors of capitalism.

Sacco and Vanzetti are [illegible]. They are innocent of the crime charged against them, but capitalist justice cold-bloodedly places the noose around their necks and declares: "You may be innocent; but you are reds. Let the law take its course. Hang!"

What of justice! What of fair play! Capitalism is the law. Whoever is against it will be devoured by it. This is the language the Sacco and Vanzetti case speaks to the world, the world of the proletariat hears and answers it.

The international proletariat well understands that the struggles for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti is not a legal battle. It understands that by Supporting the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti capitalism threatens the wageslaves itself. Justice in this case is the unadulterated execution of capitalist interests by a judiciary machine of the state. Justice will not save Sacco and Vanzetti. It condemned them. The saving of Sacco and Vanzetti involves the necessity of defeating capitalist justice, not of invoking it.

American capitalism sees this clearly. It attempts now to save by rallying what it lost by being caught with the hypocritical mask of fairness off its face. Caught in the act of murdering two innocent workers American capitalism asks the proletariat of the world: "What are you going to do about it?"

There is only one answer. The clearer it becomes that Sacco and Vanzetti are to be sacrificed not to the goddess of justice, but to the moloch of the [illegible] stronger becomes the determination of the international proletariat [illegible] imperative demands "Sacco and Vanzetti [illegible] Not Die!"
